THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

[Of]fice of Publication, (Courier Building,)

ISSUED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

No. 27 Central Street (Up Stairs.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1856. VOLUME 2.—NUMBER 21.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

Published by Believers in the Speedy Coming of Jesus Christ.

J. Varney, Printer, . . 27 Central St.

[Terms] of Subscription to be PAID in ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months,	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months,	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months,	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months,	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	14,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	18,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brs. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside and direct to Eld. Jonas Merriam, Editor of the World's Crisis, Lowell, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publications write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write for the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelop.

For The Crisis.

Notes on a Sermon preached in Templeton, Oct. 21, 1855, by Eld. Plummer.

Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John 4: 1.

The Apostle John was called the loving disciple; and he manifests, in his writings, great love to his brethren, the church, whom he calls, "beloved" He would, if possible, so instruct them into the knowledge of truth, that they might be guarded against impositions, deceptions, false prophets and false spirits. He says, therefore, believe not every spirit; but try the spirits, whether they are of God. A very important injunction in every age of the Church, but perhaps never more so than at present. While he advises the Church to try the spirits, we might inquire, by what rule are they to be tried? If we look about ourselves for a rule to do it, we can find none but the Bible. The Scriptures are an unerring, infallible rule; on them we can depend, and by them we can try the spirits. It is given to us as a rule. That is the object of its presentation to the Church and world; and I am bold to say, there is no other rule; no other guide to which we may adhere. It is the word of God.

We have a standard of weights and measures, and it is necessary that it should be so, that all weights and measures may be brought and sealed, being required by law, that they may be just weights and measures. We have a standard for coins, that the true, may be known from the counterfeit. If it is important to have these things so; how much more important it is, to have a standard to try the spirits. God has given it; it is his word. It is to tell what is true, from the counterfeit. We cannot think too much of the Bible; it is the word of God.

Says one, we do not know about that. You may not know; but I think I know—for myself, to my own satisfaction, that that book, (holding up the Bible) is the word of God. I know that a sweet fountain sends forth sweet water; a good tree bears good fruit. We know the Bible to be good, because it inculcates those principles which are correct, and applicable to mankind in every situation in life. There is not a thing forbidden in that book, which would benefit us to possess. There are statements contained in it, which I have proved. "God hath exalted Jesus with His right hand, to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins." Again, the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins. I know that is true; for I have proved it. I was once in sin, deeply guilty, miserable, poor, blind and naked. I came according to the directions given in the book, and sought pardon, and God for Christ's sake, forgave my sins.

Says one, That is your experience, it is good for you, but it is nothing to me. You may come in the same way, and find the same, and I trust many of you have.

The Bible never grows old. It gives life and understanding, and the man who reads it most, loves it the best. The man who gives himself to the study of the Scriptures, will never tire of it. Take all the books in the world, and you cannot make them thus interesting. You read them once, and throw them aside. But why is it so? what makes it so different from other books? The reason is, because it reveals to us things in the future, of the world to come.

This book is the standard, and every prophet who speaks, we may bring to the word, and see whether his words be true or false. "If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." We are exposed to deception on every hand; but there is no necessity for being deceived. There are false prophets in the world, but there is no necessity of being deceived; and if a man looks out for himself as in worldly matters, he will be saved. Many people place too much dependence upon the ministers to do their preaching and praying for them.—That will not answer. You cannot go to heaven by proxy. If we ever go to heaven, it is only by faith in the Son of God The Book says, "Be not deceived."—Hence, it is important that we heed the injunction.

This Book is an unerring guide. Says one, "I go for the Spirit. But what kind of a Spirit do you go for? The man who follows the Spirit without the Word, will most surely be led wrong. But why do you go for the Spirit? "Because it makes me feel well." There are a great many good feelings in the world. A man may feel well under any exhilerating influence. It will not answer for us to rest upon our feelings; the true Spirit is just according to the Bible in its teachings.—This Book was given by inspiration of God. Those men who wrote it were inspired by God. Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. If you and I have the Spirit of God, it will agree with that word. "My words, (says Christ,) they are spirit, and they are life." We cannot think too much of the Bible. Take down that good old Book from your dusty shelves; make yourselves conversant with its teachings; turn it over; examine it for yourselves, prayerfully and carefully; it will guide you in the path of duty; guide you to heaven and glory. No man who will thus do, but will find the kingdom of God in the end. Need then any man mistake his way while he can have the Bible in his hands? God has made the price of them very cheap, so none need be destitute of one. For 62 1 2 cents, we can purchase a good book, with large print, to read when old; and smaller ones at a much less cost.

A brother of mine, after his conversion to God, loved the Bible very much. He obtained a small one, for which he made a cover, and carried it in his pocket to his daily labor. He made it his constant study for many years, and made some proficiency in knowledge; yet at the close of his life, regretted that he had read and studied it so little.

Try the spirits; that which agrees with the word, receive; but whatever does not, cast it from you.

We propose to mention a few of the false spirits which are in the world.

First. There is in the world, a spirit of slumber, which amounts to a carelessness, thoughtlessness and indifference to the things which make for our own good and peace.

The world as a world, may be said to be asleep. There is an indifference among the people of the world, that, so far as their souls are concerned, are asleep to their interests; and the Church is approximating to the same state. Slumber is not sleep. E. g. A woman may have been kept from sleep in taking care of her sick child; while the child sleeps, she slumbers, but the first moan of the child will cause her to awake. There is a manifest spirit of indifference in the churches of all denominations, a disposition to slumber. We have reason to fear that God will send upon us the spirit of slumber, so that we shall fall asleep, and be in a state of danger, and not know it. This is a bad spirit. Our souls and the interests of God's cause demand our close attention. We should be wide awake to the interests pertaining to [illegible] does not become us to [illegible] we profess better things; we should make the greater effort, when we feel this spirit creeping upon us, like the man who has a great day's work to do, but does not feel like doing it. He will drive it from him by entering into his labor with determination. So should we; and should apply ourselves to the Lord, that our spirits may be stirred within us.

This spirit is not only in the Church at large, but to a great extent, among the people who believe the end is nigh. They believe the things are so; but do not feel their weight. How little influence the coming of that awful day has upon our lives! Why is it? Because the spirit of slumber is upon us. It is a bad spirit, and there is danger of loosing our souls by yielding to its influence. Bring the thing to the test, and it will be easily proved.

Secondly. There is a spirit called a haughty spirit, in the world, which pervades society both political and religious.

The Gospel will produce in a man's mind, a feeling to have a strict regard for the least of God's creatures.

We are all alike dependant in the world. The rich man is as much dependant upon God, as myself, being a poor man. The man that looks down upon you or me, with a haughty spirit, has not the spirit of the Bible. It is a wicked, corrupt spirit, and will bring destruction upon him that possesses it. God beholds the proud afar off. The day is coming "that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud; yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." That is truth; and this destruction will come. Look over among the Churches of our day, where the rich congregate. There are many whom they do not know, only at the communion table. They meet them in the streets, but do not see them. "This is for a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation."—

Why is it they will thus pass through the streets, and not know their poor brethren? It will do for them to come to the same table, and partake the same bread, but it will not do to recognize them in the streets. The reason is, they are possessed of this haughty spirit. It is not right to hold the Lord's poor at a distance.—This spirit is increasing in the Church. Their pride is seen in their dress, in their gait, and oh how lofty their eyes! You can see them everywhere; but it is not the Spirit of God. "Pride, goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." You see a man lifted up with pride, destruction is before him. It is a dangerous position, to be possessed of this haughty spirit, this pride which is said to be the first-born child of the Devil. Do not be proud. You have nothing to be proud of. You cannot name the first thing of which you should be proud. If you look well, you ought not to be proud of it; for your countenance may soon be changed, and you laid away. We do not like to have the dead in our sight.—Said Abraham to the children of Heth, "Give me a possession of a burying place, that I may bury my dead out of my sight." There are diseases which will produce death in six hours, and the flesh of the victims will drop from their bones.

Shall a man thus mortal, be proud? God forbid! It does not become us to be proud. The Bible therefore is true; and if its truth get hold of a man, it will bring him down into the dust.

The king or queen of England, if they would possess the spirit of God, must come down into the dust, and associate with you and me, if we possess the same spirit.

The book that breathes such a spirit, must be a very good book. All the requisitions of the Gospel consist in submission: It is submission to God, to His truth, to all that is reasonable and right.—If we can overcome this haughty spirit, and every other false spirit, then the Lord God will walk and dwell in us, and be the spring of every motive.

Thirdly. Another spirit in the world is the spirit of party. It is an evil spirit.—It manifests itself in political matters, and is increasing upon us We have four or five candidates for Governor at the present time. A few designing men take it upon themselves to take the lead. They have the spirit of slumber, and want to lord it over their fellows; if they cannot be leaders in one party, they will get up another; and in consequence nothing can be attended to as it should be. When one party gets into office, the great object with them seems to be, to carry their party points. The main part of legislation is to accomplish these designs. The precious people, they will talk about, but when they get into office, what do they care for them? This spirit is in the Church too, which accounts for the variety of denominations in the land. They have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. Such zeal is not for the glory of God, or the good of man. Those actuated by it, only desire to bring about their own selfish ends. There is the Methodist Zion, the Baptist Zion, the Presbyterian Zion, and so on; while God has but one Zion, the Holy Hill. Some people say and think that these denominational differences are for the best good of the whole; but I do not believe in it. A man may as well be without conversion, as to be converted to a party. But get a man converted to God, and it is worth the while, for good will be accomplished.—There is a great deal of zeal which proves to be, not for God but for party. I have seen the evil of this for a great while, and have endeavored to do what I could to remove it. I do not know that I have any sect to which I wish to bring you; I profess to be on the old ground, the Bible; the good old way, the way the fathers trod; the way of peace, of life and salvation. I do not want you to be converted to me, you would look too much like me; but I want you to be converted to the word of God, the Bible, it will do you good. I do not want you to believe anything because I say it, but because it is truth. I make no claim upon any man otherwise than the Gospel makes its claims; and if I am a preacher of the Gospel, and make the demand in the name of the Lord, then if you hear it, it is well; but if you reject it, beware!—You ought to know whether I preach the truth or not.

This party spirit is very rife, in the world. Divisions are being multiplied without number. In a little village, where all the people might go to one meeting they go to two or three.

A man passing through a small village, sees three meeting-houses, and says to a boy he saw there, "These people are very religious here; as they have so many places of worship" Says the boy, "that is no reason at all."

If I go for my party, I shall be popular with them, and can live as I please. Did the Savior do so? Did he teach His disciples to inquire, what will the people like? What will please them? How different His teachings. He says, "If they call the Master of the house, Beelzebub, how much more, his household."

If a man preaches for party, he is out of his place. The true minister of the Gospel, will preach it for God's sake, and for the good of the souls of men, and not for money. God never designed men to preach the Gospel for a livelihood.

Almost all ministers will go where they have the loudest call. They never leave 500 dollars salary for 300. The preaching of the Gospel is not to be made a trade of; but the true minister of Christ, will preach it, whether men hear or forbear. The woe is upon him, and he preaches, not expecting his reward here. But the Church has a duty to perform; for the word teaches that they that preach the Gospel, shall live of the Gospel. This party spirit, therefore, engenders a great many evils. If all were on the old platform of Christianity, then these evils and this disposition to speculate upon the Gospel, would be cast aside to a great extent. We will deplore that this spirit of party is so much in the world; and it remains for us to see that it does not fall upon ourselves.

4th. There is another spirit in the world; it is a worldly spirit. This spirit seems to prevail everywhere. A love of this present evil world; a love of the fashions, maxims, riches, honors and pleasures of the world. Jesus taught us differently from this. This spirit must be guarded against, or it will drown our souls in destruction. Hearken! Says Jesus, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world; for if (it comes close,) if any man (no matter who he may be,) love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Again; Jesus said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon;" "for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." If your treasure is here, your heart will be here; but if you have laid up your treasure in heaven, your heart will be there. We should therefore understand this. No man can justify himself in loving the world in any sense. If he labors, the object should not be to get rich; but he should labor to have to give to them that need, and not to leave for his posterity who will spend it in half the time it took to accumulate it. Solomon says he knows not whether it shall be for a wise man or a fool.

Men who have been of any use in society have made themselves. Love not the world, nor set your hearts upon its interests; for the fashion of the world passeth away. We are not to love the things that are in the world, that are given us for our comfort, and satisfy us for a time.—This spirit pervades society. How few there are that can give their attention to the things of God, because the things of the world demand so much of their attention. I hope we shall all be saved from this evil spirit, for the world passeth away.

5th. The Bible mentions a spirit of divination, of necromancy, pretending to have communication with the dead.—This spirit has always been in the world, is now, and will increase. It is one of the signs of the last days. It is a spirit of evil. It is a thing that God has forbidden in His word, and woe to the man that is carried away under the influence of a spirit that God has forbidden. Says one, "where are these things forbidden in the Bible?" Deut. 18: 10-12. "There shall not be found among you any that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all these things are an abomination to the Lord; and because of these abominations, the Lord thy God doth drive out the Canaanites from before thee." It was the prevalence of this spirit among them that caused their overthrow. You cannot fix an epithet upon this spirit, that is bad enough.—It is dark as darkness itself; and black as hell; it is evil, and only evil, and that continually; and whoever is carried away by it, is on the way to hell. It carries people away from the word of God; makes them think that the word of God is good for nothing; that they have got something beyond it. Many of these spirits do not tell the truth. Now, my hearers, I do not desire to say much upon this subject, and it does not require much. God has given us enough in His word, to give us a knowledge of what is in the future, without consulting with familiar spirits; and for myself I would give more for five words in this book, than for all that the spirits of demons have spoken since the first man died.

Says one, They do wonderful things! Yes, and the magicians of Egypt did.—They could do almost every thing that Aaron and Moses could do. There was one thing they could not do; they could not create lice; they were out-done.—How they performed those things, I could not say; but it was by the help of some false spirit. There is a false power in the world, a false spirit; the Devil, who deceived Adam and Eve in the garden. It behooves you and me to be looking out for ourselves. It is the work of darkness, and almost all they do, is done in the night. But we want to see for ourselves. If there is a circle near, we must go and see how it is done. Be careful! It is witchcraft. Keep out of the way of temptation. It would be presumption for me to pray God to keep me from temptation, and then go in the way of it. He has promised to keep the man who keeps His commandments; but if he goes in this way, he goes from the influence of God. Trust in the Lord, and He will keep you in the right way, and be your strength and support. He will and must do it, because He has promised; He cannot deny himself; He is bound by His promise.

The man who complies with the conditions of His promises, can boldly come to the Lord, and claim the blessings promised.

We come now to consider 6th, The Spirit of God; the spirit of life, of submission, of holiness; the good spirit. "If any man have not the Spirit of God, he is none of his." The Spirit of God, we must have. Do you think that God will divide the house with evil spirits?—As Bunyan describes it in his "Holy war," when the house was in possession of Diabolus, Immanuel took his departure, but when Diabolus left, Immanuel took possession. We must be decided in this matter, we must not be like the sailor, who when in a storm which was likely to be their ruin, went on one side of the ship, and prayed to God, and then went to the other, and prayed to the Devil. When asked, why he did so? he answered, "because he did not know into whose hands he should fall." The word says, My son give me thine heart; and the heart must be given up without reserve.

The Spirit of Christ is breathed forth in the Gospel. Sinners, believe, and find of a truth, that it has the effect to purify your hearts and make them ready for the possession of the King, who will come in and dwell there. O may we know the delight of having the Spirit of God in us; that He dwells in us, and is the spring of every motion. How blessed, to know that the Spirit of God, witnesseth with our spirit that we are children of God.

It is good for a man, to know his own spirit; to know that he loves the truth, the Church, the duties of religion; longs to possess the Spirit of the living God.—This will make a man humble, and devoted to the service of God, and ready to do sinners good. He will have the spirit our Lord manifested when on earth. He was holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners. If we have the Spirit of God, it will lead us to be thus. A man with this spirit, cannot associate with liars, thieves and drunkards, nor with party influences; but he will be purely for God. I will not say more, otherwise than to urge these considerations upon your hearts. There are thousands of spirits in the world, but they will all come under these general heads.

I want to urge upon you the necessity of having the Spirit of God; the good spirit. If we are not members of the true Church of Christ, what Church do we belong to? If we are not in the way to heaven, what way are we in? We must judge of these matters for ourselves. We are not to be selfish, but it is the duty of every man to save his own soul, as every man must stand for himself, at the bar of God.

A man's character is not always according to the profession he makes. You may judge me to be a good man, and you may judge wrong; I may be a hypocrite. A man's character, is determined by his acts; and God knows the whole matter, and is Judge himself. Since the Bible gives us so many admonitions, we should be careful.

Some of us are growing old; our time must soon end; it becomes you and me to know that we are in possession of the good spirit. But because we are old, we are not the only ones exposed to death.—Middle-aged men die; young men and children die. We are constantly exposed to death. In our place a few days ago, a man was binding a load of boards, and while fastening the chain under the cart, the cattle started, the load went over him, and destroyed his life.

A woman was killed by falling down stairs; her scalp being taken off.

A fire was in the place [illegible] burnt to death. The cars [illegible] throwing the cars off the [illegible] press man was crushed to death in an awful manner; another was still more dreadfully mangled; while another lived till night, then died. Who knows what a day may bring forth? We need constantly to know where we are, whose we are, and what our prospects for eternity. We need a religion that will support us when we come to stop in a moment. We may die immediately, or in a more lingering manner; but the last day will come.—And then will come the day of God, the day of retribution, the day of Christ, the day of rewards and punishment, when every man shall receive the due reward for his deeds, whether they be good or bad. Get ready for every thing, know that you have the abiding Spirit of God, and are safe. God is your keeper, and if you walk in the spirit, and trust in Him, you are safe.

May God help us all to live and walk in the practical spirit of the Gospel, and be saved in the day of Jesus Christ.—Amen.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, JAN. 3, 1856.

Question.

Br. Merriam, will you inform your readers whether the last verse of Job 14th ought not to be placed before v. 21? I do not see how his flesh upon him can have pain and his soul mourn after his countenance is changed and he sent to the grave. A few words on this last verse in connection with the previous vs. might be of servise to your readers.

Reply.

This chapter of Job expresses, in the most absolute and emphatic manner conceivable, the perfect nonentity of man subsequently to his decease. He even draws the contrast between man and a fallen tree, showing that the condition of man after death was far less favorable to a continued existence than that of a tree after it was felled to the earth; for it might possibly be that the roots of the tree would germinate, and thus its existence be perpetuated. But for man there was no such hope of surviving the shock that would prostrate him to the earth.—"But man dieth, and wasteth away, yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" This significant interrogation which implies most emphatically that he is not to be found, Job answers in the following manner: "As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; So man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."

The comparison here presented is most striking and expressive. As the waters of a flood are evaporated and not to be found, "so man lieth down, (not the body or cage, or covering of the man proper,) but MAN in all the departments of his being—the man proper—" lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."

He then proceeds thus: "O that thou woudst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee thou wilt have a desire to the work of thy hands."

Again: "Thou destroyest the hope of man. Thou prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth: thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away. His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. But his flesh upon him shall mourn." Vs. 19–22.—The sentiment expressed in v. 21, "His sons come to honor, &c., is so diametrically opposite to the commonly received opinions of our day, that it is indeed wonderful how any person can profess to take the Scripture for his guide, and then believe in ghosts or apparitions of departed men, appearing to give directions in regard to their estates, or any thing else concerning their posterity, of whose condition the Bible positively declares them to be utterly ignorant.

The last v. of this chapter, whatever it may have reference to, or wherever it should have been placed, it is certain can have no allusion to man in a disembodied state, for it says: "this FLESH UPOU HIM shall have pain," therefore it was man in his physical frame of which he speaks.

If any furthur proof be needed that the theology of our day is at varience with Scripture in reference to this chapter, it will be found in the following remarks and admissions of Albert Barnes, one of the most able and popular Commentators of our age. He remarks on the 7th v. thus:

"The feeling of Job here is, that when man was removed from the earth, he was removed finally; that there was no hope of his revisiting it again, and that he could not be employed in the dark abode of departed spirits in the cheerful and happy manner in which he might be in this world of light. This idea is expressed, also, in a most tender manner by the Psalmist:

Wilt thou show wonders to the dead?
Shall the dead arise and praise thee?
Shall thy loving-kindness be declared in the grave?
Or thy faithfulness in destruction?
Shall thy wonders be known in the dark?
And thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness? Ps. 88: 9–11.

And the same feelings were evinced by Hezekiah, the pious king of Israel:

For Sheol cannot praise thee?
Death cannot celebrate thee;
They that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth.
The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day;
The father to the children shall make known thy faithfulness.
Isa. 38: 18–19.

All these gloomy and desponding views arose from the imperfect conception which they had of the future world. It was to them a world of dense and gloomy shades—a world of night—of conscious existence indeed—but still far away from light, and from the comforts which men enjoyed on the earth. We are to remember that the revelations then made were very few and obscure; and we should deem it a matter of inestimable favor that we have a better hope, and have far more just and clear views of the employments of the future world. Yet probably our views of that world, with all the light which we have, are much farther from the reality than the views of the patriarchs were from those which we are permitted to cherish. Such as they are, however, they are fitted to elevate and cheer the soul. We shall not, indeed, live again on the earth, but we shall enter a world of light and glory, compared with which all that is glorious here shall fade away. Not far distant is that blessed world; and in our trials we may look to it not with dread, as Job did to the land of shades, but with triumph and joy."

On the 22nd, v. he says:

"The soul that is within him shall be sad; that is, in the land of shades. So Virgil, speaking of the death of Lausus, says:

'Tum vita per auras
Concessit mœsta ad manes, corpusque reliquit *

The idea of Job is, that it would leave all the comforts of this life; it would be separate from family and friends; it would go lonely and sad to the land of shades and of night. Job dreaded it. He loved life; and in the future world, as it was presented to his view, there was nothing to charm and attract. There he expected to wander in darkness and sadness; and from that gloomy world he expected to return no more forever. Eichorn, however, has rendered this verse so as to give a different signification which may perhaps be the true one.

'Nur uber sich ist er betrubt
Nur sich betrauert er.

'His troubles pertain only, to himself; his grief relates to himself alone.

According to this, the idea is that he must bear all his sorrows alone, and for himself. He is cut off from the living, and is not permitted to share in the joys and sorrows of his posterity, nor they in his. He has no knowledge of any thing that pertains to them, nor do they participate in his griefs. What a flood of light and joy would have been poured on his soul by the Christian hope, and by the revelation of the truth that there is a world of perfect light and joy for the righteous—in heaven! And what thanks do we owe to the Great Author of our religion—to him who is "the Resurrection and the Life"—that we are permitted to look upon the grave with hearts full of peace and joy."

It is indeed surprising that this learned Commentator, with all the candor and excellent traits of his character, should refer to the heathen philosophy of Virgil to illustrate the subject, and present the ideas of Job in striking contrast with the theology of the present day. The teaching of Scripture then, according to this Commentary, is far behind the teachings of modern theologians. It is certainly quite an admission that while Job, and David, and Hezekiah represent the dead as in a dark, gloomy, comfortless abode, the writers of our age represent them as in a place of light, joy and glory. The Bible presents it as a region of night, while modern theology presents it as a realm of everlasting day. A more striking contrast could not be drawn. Thus this Commentator assumes the responsibility of teaching that the word of God is "imperfect," and not only fallible, but absolutely FALSE; yea, EXCEEDINGLY ERRONEOUS in its instruction. And all this from one who holds to plenary inspiration—all this from one who believes the Bible to be the word of God.

It is admitted that the truths of God's economy were not, all at once, developed; there was a gradual unfolding of the plan of Infinite grace; but these developments would all harmonize, and never conflict with each other. But when, on the other hand, expositors of Scripture take the ground that the first instructions given in the word of God were imperfect, and that the waters of this fountain-head were diluted with an abundance of error, it annuls the very idea of inspiration, and reduces the sacred word of God to a level with fallible men; nay, far below the teaching of modern theological writers.—Nothing can present to my mind more clearly the false position of the great mass of the Church in respect to these things, than this candid admission of so prominent and estimable an Author as Albert Barnes, that the theology of the 19th century stands out in bold contrast—in DIRECT OPPOSITION even, to the theology of Scripture. "Either make the tree good, and its fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and its fruit corrupt." Either let us make the Bible our standard, and discard human theology; or else make human theology the standard, and discard the Scripture as a rule of faith.

* Then the soul departed sad through the air to the shades, and left the body.

Br. Campbell's Works.

We hope our Brn. who wish to read on the subjects presented in Br. Z. Campbell's works, will send in their orders, as they present the argument in a plain, clear, and forcible light, such as cannot fail to interest and instruct the enquirer after truth.

☞ We would thank our friends if, when they send in money for new subscribers, they will just mention that theyarenew subscribers. This will save us the trouble of examining our books to ascertain whether their names are on or not.

Please be particular in every ease to name the STATE in which they reside.

☞ We have on hand a quantity of number 18 of the Crisis, which we struck off for free circulation. If our Brn. can make good use of them for procuring subscribers or otherwise, let them send in their orders for all they wish.

For The Crisis.

My Ride and Reverie.

By W. S Campbell.

I had just arisen from reading the dreamy lucubrations of Prof. Hare—in that lecture reported in the New York Tribune. It is a matter of astonishment that Prof. H. whose conversion has made so much excitement among the necromancers has nothing more important and direct to present in attestation of the truth of Spiritualism, than his plodding journey after this "will of the wisp." The Tribune called its most brilliant extracts from the Professor's book "rose water sentimentalism," adding, "if such namby pamby views are to be taken of the future, it would prefer the old Hebrew doctrine of good in this life." We might inform even the Tribune in its eminence, that the Hebrews believed in good in the future—a life by the resurrection of the dead.

The lecture failed to show that the table tippings result from any other cause than electricity, or that communications are given by any other agent than clairvoyance. Indeed, some of his own assertions proved directly the reverse of his position. The French Mesmerizers go beyond him by a long distance, and his Spiritiscope to boot.

A conversion, indeed, the case of the Professor! who, it appears, denied a future life before he was made to "seek unto familiar spirits,"—swallowed up in divination—a mire deeper than the previous mud—a change from the blackness of darkness to the darkness of blackness. Yet there is some honor for out-spoken infidelity that Rapology cannot claim.

The steam formed a pure, snowy cloud above the sombre and the bright, in that splendid machine—like truth and love leaving a beclouded world. It rolls up its aerial pathway—the short cry "aboard"—to my brother I mechanically accent farewell—we are started. I gather up the thought-reins for a bit of gloomy revery, as we roll slowly on from the "Garden City"—its broad prairie ending—streets less distinct in the dim distance—we are soon upon the dead-level prairie, and away—away over its smooth face like the lightnings running. To the marsh we roll in raging haste—how wide and well adapted to the iron track work the West demanded! Into our panorama, then rushes the lake; whose waters of green, deep, deep green, present so striking a picture—bounded by a beach of its own creation—its long line of breakers mischievously sporting till some woe-work comes to hand. The wind mourning over the surface of its current for good or evil—and for evil and death, how folly! Alas! troubled water, to how many poor victims of the storm-blast hast thou given a silent, cold, dark, grave-berth!—Cold is now thy aspect, heavy lowers thy frown. The black cloud from the far-off city hangs a fitting garment upon thy dark bosom. A few only of the white-winged barks of summer are there, for the hoarse breath of winter—the tumultuous wrath of sky and water have driven those into a safe haven, which have not been overwhelmed in the war of elements, and buried under the surges of ruin and woe—thou rollest onward in thy fury.

The future arose; which, impenetrable to human wisdom, offers to men its dubious and mysterious fields of exploration—appalling the senses—bewildering the emotions under a heavy cloud of darkness. An untracked, pathless desert is before him. Yet dark as it appears, light is there!—Barren as it may be, still pregnant with events. Blind as man is, he has an eye. The light prophetic shines over the dismal regions of time; and the history of this ambitious and mutable world is, in clear drawn lines, depicted in the inspired sketch-book. We have visions too. It is the faith-sight. Man does not wander in darkness, and grope his way on, like the infidel; who denies inspiration—whose soul-light is the dim and misty exhalations of his own brain—whose future is a blank land, draped in the dark and terrible conception of non-existence. Nay! A vision, the inner heart enjoys, of things divine for the world-to come life. Destiny in her grandest truths is brought home, is embraced, in the ample trust.

A long time, I looked again, upon the mocking Lake—beautiful, but imperious; cold, yet bland—delightful and deceitful—inviting to life, still fraught with death.—Came afterward to a broken tract of sand, sand, knoll and ridge—hummack and hollow—covered with oak, ashamed of its acorn-bed. Still on we sped. Came then, a relief to my vexed and languid spirit—pines and ponds—and line of sand hills, on the Lake side—wide marshes on the other—the swamp, the deep, darksome forest—immense trees of many years growth. I began to commune with those old familiar friends, I enjoyed it, but the whistle sounded—the cry, N. A. and S. crossing, started me up, and out into the thick woods.

In a dark place, gleaming—the lights as if an angelic torch-bearer had flung the glare of a new-born dispensation, o'er the retiring grief-scenes of earth; the light that the passing by of the present, is determined—and the inauguration of a future being, a divine truth. Here springs the hope of immortality. Here arises on the Christian's chart the lands of a recovered continent—its head-lands and hill-tops, all smiling invitation to the sea-tossed mariner. Its shores and vales all redolent with unsullied, undying life. Life in pureness—in its goodness, its greatness, its heaven. That future too, is unto believing hope a world of gorgeous being. In the world ye shall have tribulation—There are "those who have come up, out of great tribulation and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." "And white robes were given them, and they had palms in their hands. And they are like unto the angels of God."

O Pilgrim! the blisful future is just before—in all its light and love!

Who will doubt? Along the river brink—only, the cloud obscures the land—beyond, reign ever—shining suns. The toilsome journey will soon close, and the travel-wear will be over. The down-trodden still groan—the despot-ruled nations struggle on in vain. The war clarion sounds—ths battle hosts gather—glory-crowned exploits, and gloom-covered actions of desperation, call our attention; mingle in light and dark shades. The present closes in all the horrors of political ruin, announced and appropriate—rolled on itself in blackness. The future comes—a world of life—the kingdom of God—a flood of truth, light, glory.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

By H. Pratt.

No. 4.

Having shown that salvation through faith to all men was the fulfilling of the promise to Abraham, ("In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed,") we now proceed to notice the promise of the ensign recorded in Isa. 11: 10.

Now an ensign, as an object, is the flag or standard of a regiment; as a person, it is the name given to the one who bears the flag. When this standard is raised, it virtually offers protection to all who will rally around it, all who will seek unto it. Hence all who join the Allies—all who will come to their standard, secure their protection, and are thus saved from their enemies. Now the Lord has promised an ensign for us, and when this ensign shall be lifted up according to this prophecy in the 11th of Isa., it is for Jew and Gentile too. It is a "new way" by which we can insure ourselves from the enemy of all righteousness.

The promise reads thus: "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse which shall stand for an ensign of the people, to it shall the Gentiles SEEK, and His rest shall be glorious." That this refers to Christ all will admit. Now has He stood for "an ensign to the people?" Is there an opportunity for us Gentiles to seek unto this ensign (the Lord) and find protection? If so this prophecy has been fulfilled. If not, and Christ is this ensign, then there is no opportunity for us Gentiles to seek out Christ, and consequently we are without hope and without God in the world.

But that this is not the fact, and that we have such an ensign to seek unto and find protection and eternal salvation beneath His banner, Paul in his letter to the Romans declares, and the fact that Gentiles and Jews are, and have been for eighteen hundred years, seeking Christ, rallying around this standard, clearly proves.

Here then I will introduce Paul's testimony to settle this most important subject in connection with the prophecy, which, may the Lord grant, we may comprehend and understand, and thus be the means of benefiting others.

Isa. 11: 10. "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious."

Rom. 15: 8 12. "Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers: And that the Gentiles might glorify God for His mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name. And again he saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles with his people. And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him, all ye people.—And again Esaias saith, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust."

May the Lord help us to seek out this ensign now, and in that "glorious" rest share with the redeemed ones forever, Amen.

Yours, H. Pratt.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. J. Hale.

Collingsville, Ct.
Dec. 23d, 1855.

1st Pet 5: 14. "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus, Amen."

The writer of this book was by occupation a fisherman; but was early called by our Savior, who, forseeing the fortitude he would exercise in preaching the Gospel, honored him with the name of Peter, which signifies a rock or stone. In proportion as the Christians of the first age multiplied, their sufferings became more general and severe, in consequence of which the Apostles considered themselves as especially called upon to comfort and encourage them. With this view, it seems Peter wrote this first Epistle to the Christians in Pontus and the neighboring provinces in Asia, in which he shows it is the duty of Christians to be willing to suffer for their religion, and suggests a variety of motives to induce them to suffer cheerfully. He also urges them to conduct themselves in a harmless manner, and be exemplary in every virtue; and that they may know how to conduct themselves on every occasion, he gave them specific directions relative to the most important duties both in civil and social life, and closes the Epistle as we have quoted above.

We find that all the apostles are constantly guarding the Church against jealousies, contentions, disputations, or strife of any kind, and are always urging professors to put on the whole array of Christian graces. And Paul in the 13th chap. of his first Epistle to the Corinthians points to charity as the foundation of the whole beautiful, sublime and majestic structure. Verse 2d, he says: "And though I have the gift of prophecy; and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." Through all the teachings of this great Apostle he is constantly holding up to our view the necessity of this crowning virtue. We are not all constituted alike, cannot all see alike; therefore we may glorify God by a diversity of operations, and yet all be actuated by the same spirit.

Brn. and Srs., although we are differently constituted, and are not all calculated to labor in the same part of the service of our Lord and Master, yet let us all be doing our Master's business. "For by one spirit we are all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles; whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one spirit:" therefore let us be careful to guard against our own besetting sins, and put on charity.

Let us also have faith, hope and a perfect knowledge of the truth, as it is in Christ Jesus.

It seems there was always a want of charity in the Christian Church, else why did the sacred writers urge it so strongly; and if there was a necessity of urging it so strongly in the days of the Apostles, it seems to me there is tenfold more necessity of it now when all the elements of war, and all the spirits of darkness are let louse and seem to be trying their utmost endeavors, knowing that their time is short. And if Peter found it necessary to urge on the primitive Christians, that they should greet one another with a kiss of charity, if it was necessary that the early Christians should be thus careful to preserve the unity and Christian fellowship, is it any less so now, when sin and all its accompanying train of evil have almost universal sway. Elect, be not deceived, for soon your Savior will call you home. But the day of ruin; yes, the day of irrecoverable ruin to the ungodly, draws near.

Wm J. Hale.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. John Gibson.

Houghtonville, Vt.,
Dec. 25th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I do feel exceeding glad of the blessed privilege of reading the World's Crisis from week to week, for it is truly cheering in these perilous times to read the comforting epistles of the Brn. and Srs. of like precious faith. Many think it strange that Advent believers will still hold on after they have been disappointed so many times, and ask, why will you not give it up, and come back? My answer is, I can see nothing but infidelity in that direction, but the crown is ahead; yes—glory be to God—by the eye of faith, I see, a little from this that glorious kingdom of God which will be under the whole heaven, and given to the saints of the Most High, who are to "possess it forever, even forever and ever."

It was a great disappointment to me to pass by the time when I supposed the 1335 days, or years would end, and to see good old Daniel in his lot; but this is no barrier in the way, to going forward while I see in every direction the signs of the coming of the Lord, that are given by the Prophets, Jesus Christ, and the Apostles.

I will refer to some of them. Dan. 2: 44; Jer. 25: 30–38. I would ask those who will take the trouble to read that chapter, and then contemplate on the present state of all the nations of the earth, if he does not see some signs of their taking a hearty draught of that "cup of God's fury?" Does it not appear that the Lord has "a controversy with the nations?" Again: read Joel 3: 9, and onward. Is not this, too, now having a complete fulfilment? Jesus Christ says, recorded in Luke 21: 25–28; "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming upon the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory" Are not all these signs in the past, except those that are in process of fulfiment?

Paul tells us of quite a number of events that would transpire in the last days.—Read the 3d ch. of 2d Tim, and then see if all these traits of character are not now taking place before our eyes. Also, 1 Tim. 4: 1. He says, "some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." Oh! how lamentable it is, to see those who were once good Bible Christians, depart from the Bible faith, and associate with those seducing spirits, which are the working of Satan, with power and signs and lying wonders; but so it is. And as Jesus says, "because iniquity abounds, the love of many shall wax cold; but those that endure to the end shall be saved."

O Brn. and Srs., how many of us will endure to the end? When the Lord comes will He find faith on the earth? I never felt more like persevering than now.

John Gibson.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. J. T. Ongley.

Syracuse, Dec. 26th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I have felt desirous for some time to write a few lines to you, and for the encouragement of the scattered flock. I would say, fear not though trials severe thicken on every hand, Your God will surely come, even God with a recompence; he will come and save us, if we trust in Him.

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick; But when the desire cometh, it is a tree of Life." O joyful hope! Long-looked-for, by the good of all ages. Soon the last child of God by faith, will be numbered, and the manifestation of the sons of God will appear, although some of the lively stones designed for that spiritual Temple have proved themselves worthy, and therefore are laid by until the last stone is squared.

Glory to God—the resurrection of them will soon take place, and then all creation pres man was crushed to death in an awful manner; another was still more dreadfully mangled; while another lived till night, then died. Who knows what a day may bring forth? We need constantly to know where we are, whose we are, and what our prospects for eternity. We need a religion that will support us when we come to stop in a moment. We may die immediately, or in a more lingering manner; but the last day will come.—And then will come the day of God, the day of retribution, the day of Christ, the day of rewards and punishment, when every man shall receive the due reward for his deeds, whether they be good or bad. Get ready for every thing, know that you have the abiding Spirit of God, and are safe. God is your keeper, and if you walk in the spirit, and trust in Him, you are safe.

May God help us all to live and walk in the practical spirit of the Gospel, and be saved in the day of Jesus Christ.—Amen.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, JAN. 3, 1856.

Question.

Br. Merriam, will you inform your readers whether the last verse of Job 14th ought not to be placed before v. 21? I do not see how his flesh upon him can have pain and his soul mourn after his countenance is changed and he sent to the grave. A few words on this last verse in connection with the previous vs. might be of servise to your readers.

Reply.

This chapter of Job expresses, in the most absolute and emphatic manner conceivable, the perfect nonentity of man subsequently to his decease. He even draws the contrast between man and a fallen tree, showing that the condition of man after death was far less favorable to a continued existence than that of a tree after it was felled to the earth; for it might possibly be that the roots of the tree would germinate, and thus its existence be perpetuated. But for man there was no such hope of surviving the shock that would prostrate him to the earth.—"But man dieth, and wasteth away, yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" This significant interrogation which implies most emphatically that he is not to be found, Job answers in the following manner: "As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; So man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."

The comparison here presented is most striking and expressive. As the waters of a flood are evaporated and not to be found, "so man lieth down, (not the body or cage, or covering of the man proper,) but MAN in all the departments of his being—the man proper—"lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."

He then proceeds thus: "O that thou woudst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee thou wilt have a desire to the work of thy hands."

Again: "Thou destroyest the hope of man. Thou prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth: thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away. His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. But his flesh upon him shall mourn." Vs. 19–22.—The sentiment expressed in v. 21, "His sons come to honor, &c., is so diametrically opposite to the commonly received opinions of our day, that it is indeed wonderful how any person can profess to take the Scripture for his guide, and then believe in ghosts or apparitions of departed men, appearing to give directions in regard to their estates, or any thing else concerning their posterity, of whose condition the Bible positively declares them to be utterly ignorant.

The last v. of this chapter, whatever it may have reference to, or wherever it should have been placed, it is certain can have no allusion to man in a disembodied state for it says "this FLESH UPOU HIM shall have pain," therefore it was man in his physical frame of which he speaks.

If any further proof be needed that the theology of our day is at varience with Scripture in reference to this chapter, it will be found in the following remarks and admissions of Albert Barnes, one of the most able and popular Commentators of our age. He remarks on the 7th v. thus:

"The feeling of Job here is, that when man was removed from the earth, he was removed finally; that there was no hope of his revisiting it again, and that he could not be employed in the dark abode of departed spirits in the cheerful and happy manner in which he might be in this world of light. This idea is expressed, also, in a most tender manner by the Psalmist:

Wilt thou show wonders to the dead?
Shall the dead arise and praise thee?
Shall thy loving-kindness be declared in the grave?
Or thy faithfulness in destruction?
Shall thy wonders be known in the dark?
And thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness? Ps. 88: 9–11.

And the same feelings were evinced by Hezekiah, the pious king of Israel:

For Sheol cannot praise thee?
Death cannot celebrate thee;
They that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth.
The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day;
The father to the children shall make known thy faithfulness.
Isa. 38: 18–19.

All these gloomy and desponding views arose from the imperfect conception which they had of the future world. It was to them a world of dense and gloomy shades—a world of night—of conscious existence indeed—but still far away from light, and from the comforts which men enjoyed on the earth. We are to remember that the revelations then made were very few and obscure; and we should deem it a matter of inestimable favor that we have a better hope, and have far more just and clear views of the employments of the future world. Yet probably our views of that world, with all the light which we have, are much farther from the reality than the views of the patriarchs were from those which we are permitted to cherish. Such as they are, however, they are fitted to elevate and cheer the soul. We shall not, indeed, live again on the earth, but we shall enter a world of light and glory, compared with which all that is glorious here shall fade away. Not far distant is that blessed world; and in our trials we may look to it not with dread, as Job did to the land of shades, but with triumph and joy."

On the 22nd, v. he says:

"The soul that is within him shall be sad; that is, in the land of shades. So Virgil, speaking of the death of Lausus, says:

'Tum vita per auras
Concessit mæsta ad manes, corpusque reliquit *

The idea of Job is, that it would leave all the comforts of this life; it would be separate from family and friends; it would go lonely and sad to the land of shades and of night Job dreaded it. He loved life; and in the future world, as it was presented to his view, there was nothing to charm and attract. There he expected to wander in darkness and sadness; and from that gloomy world he expected to return no more forever. Eichorn, however, has rendered this verse so as to give a different signification which may perhaps be the true one.

'Nur uber sich ist er betrubt
Nur sich betrauert er.

'His troubles pertain only, to himself; his grief relates to himself alone.

According to this, the idea is that he must bear all his sorrows alone, and for himself He is cut off from the living, and is not permitted to share in the joys and sorrows of his posterity, nor they in his He has no knowledge of any thing that pertains to them, nor do they participate in his griefs. What a flood of light and joy would have been poured on his soul by the Christian hope, and by the revelation of the truth that there is a world of perfect light and joy for the righteous—in heaven! And what thanks do we owe to the Great Author of our religion—to him who is "the Resurrection and the Life"—that we are permitted to look upon the grave with hearts full of peace and joy."

It is indeed surprising that this learned Commentator, with all the candor and excellent traits of his character, should refer to the heathen philosophy of Virgil to illustrate the subject, and present the ideas of Job in striking contrast with the theology of the present day. The teaching of Scripture then, according to this Commentary, is far behind the teachings of modern theologians. It is certainly quite an admission that while Job, and David, and Hezekiah represent the dead as in a dark, gloomy, comfortless abode, the writers of our age represent them as in a place of light, joy and glory. The Bible presents it as a region of night, while modern theology presents it as a realm of everlasting day. A more striking contrast could not be drawn. Thus this Commentator assumes the responsibility of teaching that the word of God is "imperfect," and not only fallible, but absolutely FALSE; yea, EXCEEDINGLY ERRONEOUS in its instruction. And all this from one who holds to plenary inspiration—all this from one who believes the Bible to be the word of God.

It is admitted that the truths of God's economy were not, all at once, developed; there was a gradual unfolding of the plan of Infinite grace; but these developments would all harmonize, and never conflict with each other. But when, on the other hand, expositors of Scripture take the ground that the first instructions given in the word of God were imperfect, and that the waters of this fountain-head were diluted with an abundance of error, it annuls the very idea of inspiration, and reduces the sacred word of God to a level with fallible men; nay, far below the teaching of modern theological writers.—Nothing can present to my mind more clearly the false position of the great mass of the Church in respect to these things, than this candid admission of so prominent and estimable an Author as Albert Barnes, that the theology of the 19th century stands out in bold contrast—in DIRECT OPPOSITION even, to the theology of Scripture. "Either make the tree good, and its fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and its fruit corrupt." Either let us make the Bible our standard, and discard human theology; or else make human theology the standard, and discard the Scripture as a rule of faith.

* Then the soul departed sad through the air to the shades, and left the body.

Br. Campbell's Works.

We hope our Brn. who wish to read on the subjects presented in Br. Z. Campbell's works, will send in their orders, as they present the argument in a plain, clear, and forcible light, such as cannot fail to interest and instruct the enquirer after truth.

☞ We would thank our friends if, when they send in money for new subscribers, they will just mention that theyarenew subscribers. This will save us the trouble of examining our books to ascertain whether their names are on or not.

Please be particular in every ease to name the STATE in which they reside.

☞ We have on hand a quantity of number 18 of the Crisis, which we struck off for free circulation. If our Brn. can make good use of them for procuring subscribers or otherwise, let them send in their orders for all they wish.

For The Crisis.

My Ride and Reverie.

By W. S Campbell.

I had just arisen from reading the dreamy lucubrations of Prof. Hare—in that lecture reported in the New York Tribune. It is a matter of astonishment that Prof. H. whose conversion has made so much excitement among the necromancers has nothing more important and direct to present in attestation of the truth of Spiritualism, than his plodding journey after this "will of the wisp." The Tribune called its most brilliant extracts from the Professor's book "rose water sentimentalism," adding, "if such namby pamby views are to be taken of the future, it would prefer the old Hebrew doctrine of good in this life." We might inform even the Tribune in its eminence, that the Hebrews believed in good in the future—a life by the resurrection of the dead.

The lecture failed to show that the table tippings result from any other cause than electricity, or that communications are given by any other agent than clairvoyance. Indeed, some of his own assertions proved directly the reverse of his position. The French Mesmerizers go beyond him by a long distance, and his Spiritiscope to boot.

A conversion, indeed, the case of the Professor! who, it appears, denied a future life before he was made to "seek unto familiar spirits,"—swallowed up in divination—a mire deeper than the previous mud—a change from the blackness of darkness to the darkness of blackness. Yet there is some honor for out-spoken infidelity that Rapology cannot claim.

The steam formed a pure, snowy cloud above the sombre and the bright, in that splendid machine—like truth and love leaving a beclouded world. It rolls up its aerial pathway—the short cry "aboard"—to my brother I mechanically accent farewell—we are started. I gather up the thought-reins for a bit of gloomy revery, as we roll slowly on from the "Garden City"—its broad prairie ending—streets less distinct in the dim distance—we are soon upon the dead-level prairie, and away—away over its smooth face like the lightnings running. To the marsh we roll in raging haste—how wide and well adapted to the iron track work the West demanded! Into our panorama, then rushes the lake; whose waters of green, deep, deep green, present so striking a picture—bounded by a beach of its own creation—its long line of breakers mischievously sporting till some woework comes to hand. The wind mourning over the surface of its current for good or evil—and for evil and death, how folly! Alas! troubled water, to how many poor victims of the storm-blast hast thou given a silent, cold, dark, grave-berth!—Cold is now thy aspect, heavy lowers thy frown. The black cloud from the far-off city hangs a fitting garment upon thy dark bosom. A few only of the white-winged barks of summer are there, for the hoarse breath of winter—the tumultuous wrath of sky and water have driven those into a safe haven, which have not been overwhelmed in the war of elements, and buried under the surges of ruin and woe—thou rollest onward in thy fury.

The future arose; which, impenetrable to human wisdom, offers to men its dubious and mysterious fields of exploration—appalling the senses—bewildering the emotions under a heavy cloud of darkness. An untracked, pathless desert is before him. Yet dark as it appears, light is there!—Barren as it may be, still pregnant with events. Blind as man is, he has an eye. The light prophetic shines over the dismal regions of time; and the history of this ambitious and mutable world is, in clear drawn lines, depicted in the inspired sketch-book. We have visions too. It is the faith-sight. Man does not wander in darkness, and grope his way on, like the infidel; who denies inspiration—whose soul-light is the dim and misty exhalations of his own brain—whose future is a blank land, draped in the dark and terrible conception of non-existence. Nay! A vision, the inner heart enjoys, of things divine for the world-to come life. Destiny in her grandest truths is brought home, is embraced, in the ample trust.

A long time, I looked again, upon the mocking Lake—beautiful, but imperious; cold, yet bland—delightful and deceitful—inviting to life, still fraught with death.—Came afterward to a broken tract of sand, sand, knoll and ridge—hummack and hollow—covered with oak, ashamed of its acorn-bed. Still on we sped. Came then, a relief to my vexed and languid spirit—pines and ponds—and line of sand hills, on the Lake side—wide marshes on the other—the swamp, the deep, darksome forest—immense trees of many years growth. I began to commune with those old familiar friends, I enjoyed it, but the whistle sounded—the cry, N. A. and S. crossing, started me up, and out into the thick woods.

In a dark place, gleaming—the lights as if an angelic torch-bearer had flung the glare of a new-born dispensation, o'er the retiring grief-scenes of earth; the light that the passing by of the present, is determined—and the inauguration of a future being, a divine truth. Here springs the hope of immortality. Here arises on the Christian's chart the lands of a recovered continent—its head-lands and hill-tops, all smiling invitation to the sea-tossed mariner. Its shores and vales all redolent with unsullied, undying life. Life in pureness—in its goodness, its greatness, its heaven. That future too, is unto believing hope a world of gorgeous being. In the world ye shall have tribulation—There are "those who have come up, out of great tribulation and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." "And white robes were given them, and they had palms in their hands. And they are like unto the angels of God."

O Pilgrim! the blisful future is just before—in all its light and love!

Who will doubt? Along the river brink—only, the cloud obscures the land—beyond, reign ever—shining suns. The toilsome journey will soon close, and the travel-wear will be over. The down-trodden still groan—the despot-ruled nations struggle on in vain. The war clarion sounds—the battle hosts gather—glory-crowned exploits, and gloom-covered actions of desperation, call our attention; mingle in light and dark shades. The present closes in all the horrors of political ruin, announced and appropriate—rolled on itself in blackness. The future comes—a world of life—the kingdom of God—a flood of truth, light, glory.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

By H. Pratt.

No. 4.

Having shown that salvation through faith to all men was the fulfilling of the promise to Abraham, ("In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed,") we now proceed to notice the promise of the ensign recorded in Isa. 11: 10.

Now an ensign, as an object, is the flag or standard of a regiment; as a person, it is the name given to the one who bears the flag. When this standard is raised, it virtually offers protection to all who will rally around it, all who will seek unto it. Hence all who join the Allies—all who will come to their standard, secure their protection, and are thus saved from their enemies. Now the Lord has promised an ensign for us, and when this ensign shall be lifted up according to this prophecy in the 11th of Isa., it is for Jew and Gentile too. It is a "new way" by which we can insure ourselves from the enemy of all righteousness.

The promise reads thus: "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse which shall stand for an ensign of the people, to it shall the Gentiles SEEK, and His rest shall be glorious." That this refers to Christ all will admit. Now has He stood for "an ensign to the people?" Is there an opportunity for us Gentiles to seek unto this ensign (the Lord) and find protection? If so this prophecy has been fulfilled. If not, and Christ is this ensign, then there is no opportunity for us Gentiles to seek out Christ, and consequently we are without hope and without God in the world.

But that this is not the fact, and that we have such an ensign to seek unto and find protection and eternal salvation beneath His banner, Paul in his letter to the Romans declares, and the fact that Gentiles and Jews are, and have been for eighteen hundred years, seeking Christ, rallying around this standard, clearly proves.

Here then I will introduce Paul's testimony to settle this most important subject in connection with the prophecy, which, may the Lord grant, we may comprehend and understand, and thus be the means of benefiting others.

Isa. 11: 10. "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious."

Rom. 15: 8 12. "Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers: And that the Gentiles might glorify God for His mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name. And again he saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles with his people. And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him, all ye people.—And again Esaias saith, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust."

May the Lord help us to seek out this ensign now, and in that "glorious" rest share with the redeemed ones forever, Amen.

Yours, H. Pratt.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. J. Hale.

Collingsville, Ct.
Dec. 23d, 1855.

1st Pet 5: 14. "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus, Amen."

The writer of this book was by occupation a fisherman; but was early called by our Savior, who, forseeing the fortitude he would exercise in preaching the Gospel, honored him with the name of Peter, which signifies a rock or stone. In proportion as the Christians of the first age multiplied, their sufferings became more general and severe, in consequence of which the Apostles considered themselves as especially called upon to comfort and encourage them. With this view, it seems Peter wrote this first Epistle to the Christians in Pontus and the neighboring provinces in Asia, in which he shows it is the duty of Christians to be willing to suffer for their religion, and suggests a variety of motives to induce them to suffer cheerfully. He also urges them to conduct themselves in a harmless manner, and be exemplary in every virtue; and that they may know how to conduct themselves on every occasion, he gave them specific directions relative to the most important duties both in civil and social life, and closes the Epistle as we have quoted above.

We find that all the apostles are constantly guarding the Church against jealousies, contentions, disputations, or strife of any kind, and are always urging professors to put on the whole array of Christian graces. And Paul in the 13th chap. of his first Epistle to the Corinthians points to charity as the foundation of the whole beautiful, sublime and majestic structure. Verse 2d, he says: "And though I have the gift of prophecy; and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." Through all the teachings of this great Apostle he is constantly holding up to our view the necessity of this crowning virtue. We are not all constituted alike, cannot all see alike; therefore we may glorify God by a diversity of operations, and yet all be actuated by the same spirit.

Brn. and Srs., although we are differently constituted, and are not all calculated to labor in the same part of the service of our Lord and Master, yet let us all be doing our Master's business. "For by one spirit we are all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles; whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one spirit:" therefore let us be careful to guard against our own besetting sins, and put on charity.

Let us also have faith, hope and a perfect knowledge of the truth, as it is in Christ Jesus.

It seems there was always a want of charity in the Christian Church, else why did the sacred writers urge it so strongly; and if there was a necessity of urging it so strongly in the days of the Apostles, it seems to me there is tenfold more necessity of it now when all the elements of war, and all the spirits of darkness are let loose and seem to be trying their utmost endeavors, knowing that their time is short. And if Peter found it necessary to urge on the primitive Christians, that they should greet one another with a kiss of charity, if it was necessary that the early Christians should be thus careful to preserve unity and Christian fellowship, is it any less so now, when sin and all its accompanying train of evil have almost universal sway. Elect, be not deceived, for soon your Savior will call you home. But the day of ruin; yes, the day of irrecoverable ruin to the ungodly, draws near.

Wm J. Hale.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. John Gibson.

Houghtonville, Vt.,
Dec. 25th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I do feel exceeding glad of the blessed privilege of reading the World's Crisis from week to week, for it is truly cheering in these perilous times to read the comforting epistles of the Brn. and Srs. of like precious faith. Many think it strange that Advent believers will still hold on after they have been disappointed so many times, and ask, why will you not give it up, and come back? My answer is, I can see nothing but infidelity in that direction, but the crown is ahead; yes—glory be to God—by the eye of faith, I see, a little from this that glorious kingdom of God which will be under the whole heaven, and given to the saints of the Most High, who are to "possess it forever, even forever and ever."

It was a great disappointment to me to pass by the time when I supposed the 1335 days, or years would end, and to see good old Daniel in his lot; but this is no barrier in the way, to going forward while I see in every direction the signs of the coming of the Lord, that are given by the Prophets, Jesus Christ, and His Apostles.

I will refer to some of them. Dan. 2: 44; Jer. 25: 30–38. I would ask those who will take the trouble to read the chapter, and then contemplate on the present state of all the nations of the earth, if he does not see some signs of their taking a hearty draught of that "cup of God's fury?" Does it not appear that the Lord has "a controversy with the nations?" Again: read Joel 3: 9, and onward. Is not this, too, now having a complete fulfilment? Jesus Christ says, recorded in Luke 21: 25–28; "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming upon the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory" Are not all these signs in the past, except those that are in process of fulfiment?

Paul tells us of quite a number of events that would transpire in the last days.—Read the 3d ch. of 2d Tim, and then see if all these traits of character are not now taking place before our eyes. Also, 1 Tim. 4: 1. He says, "some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." Oh! how lamentable it is, to see those who were once good Bible Christians, depart from the Bible faith, and associate with those seducing spirits, which are the working of Satan, with power and signs and lying wonders; but so it is. And as Jesus says, "because iniquity abounds, the love of many shall wax cold; but those that endure to the end shall be saved."

O Brn. and Srs., how many of us will endure to the end? When the Lord comes will He find faith on the earth? I never felt more like persevering than now.

John Gibson.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. J. T. Ongley.

Syracuse, Dec. 26th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I have felt desirous for some time to write a few lines to you, and for the encouragement of the scattered flock. I would say, fear not though trials severe thicken on every hand. Your God will surely come, even God with a recompence; he will come and save us, if we trust in Him.

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick; But when the desire cometh, it is a tree of Life." O joyful hope! Long-looked-for, by the good of all ages. Soon the last child of God by faith, will be numbered, and the manifestation of the sons of God will appear, although some of the lively stones designed for that spiritual Temple have proved themselves worthy, and therefore are laid by until the last stone is squared.

Glory to God—the resurrection of them will soon take place, and then all creation will rejoice together. "Amen, even so come, Lord Jesus," is the cry of the writer of this, as well as of the beloved Apostle. The promise still holds good. "If the vision tarry, wait for it; for it will surely come." With the Poet I can say,

"By foes I'm despised, and by friends am forsaken;
My hope is deferred and sick is my heart,
Though oft disappointed and sometimes mistaken,
Yet from my dear Jesus I near will depart."

Hold on a little longer, dear Brn. and Srs., "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him." Again; "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit on my Throne, even as I have overcome and am set down with my Father on his Throne." Remember what He suffered to gain the right to reign over the kingdom under the whole heaven. He became poor for our sakes, that we may become rich. See what men of this world will do to gain its empty honors! what a difference in the Glory, Honor, &c., promised to the child of God by faith, (viz.) by a patient continuance in well doing, we gain the same, and immortality, eternal life and an eternal dwelling place, in a Kingdom where the saints will no more say they are sick. Cheer up; the signs thicken on every hand, soon the Beast and his army will fall, the rightful Heir to the throne will take the Kingdom and reign in Righteousness.— Shall we be there? Brn., this is the oft repeated cry of your Br.

There are a few in this place that are determined to go through, by the assistance of the Grace of God. Our meetings are rather on the increase. We are poor as to this world's goods, but strong in faith, and we have quite a number that are anxious to see the Crisis, at its weekly visits, though I have not been able to take it for the last part of the last quarter.

Let us do what we can to help scatter the truth, and finally may we meet in the Kingdom of God.

Yours in hope, JOHN T. ONGLEY.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. Sheldon.

SPRINGFIELD, Dec. 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—We are still in a world of tribulation, and like Paul, we are "still in peril among false brethren!"— But wolves in sheep's clothing, who would be lords over God's heritage, cannot always hide their malice against the "little ones," behind a curtain of sanctimony.— The Judge standeth at the door, and will soon cut off those who "grudge one against another," and seek the ruin of the flock for self gratification. God knows that I am heart sick of papacy among Adventists. "Let brotherly love continue," and brotherly kindness elate our hearts, "esteeming others better than ourselves," rather than be filled with a mulish spirit.

I am still striving for the kingdom of God. Love to the saints scattered abroad.

Yours truly, W. SHELDON.

For the Crisis.

Taken from the Portland Eastern Argus, Dec. 24th, 1855.

Cling to the Mighty One.

Cling to the Mighty One,	Ps. 89 : 19
Cling in thy grief;	Heb. 12 : 11.
Cling to the Holy One,	Heb. 1 : 12.
He gives relief;	Ps. 116 : 9.
Cling to the Gracious One,	Ps. 116 : 5.
Cling in thy pain;	Ps. 55 : 4.
Cling to the Faithful One,	1 Thess. 5 : 24.
He will sustain.	Ps. 28 : 8
Cling to the Living One,	Heb. 7 : 25.
Cling in thy woe;	Ps. 86 : 7.
Cling to the Loving One,	1 John 4 : 16.
Through all below;	Rom. 8 : 38, 39
Cling to the Pardoning One,	Isa. 4 : 7.
He speaketh peace;	John 14 : 27.
Cling to the Healing One,	Exod. 15 : 26.
Anguish shall cease.	Ps. 147 : 3.
Cling to the Bleeding One,	1 John 1 : 7.
Cling to His side;	John 20 : 27.
Cling to the Risen One,	Rom. 6 : 9.
In Him abide;	John 15 : 4.
Cling to the Coming One,	Rev. 22 : 20.
Hope shall arise;	Titus 2 : 13.
Cling to the Reigning One,	Ps. 97 : 1.
Joy lights thine eyes.	Ps. 16 : 11.

Exciting News from Kansas—More Outrages by the Missouri Ruffians. St Louis, Dec. 28. The Lexington (Missouri) Herald of the 22d says: On the 15th, the Free State Constitution of the Topeka Convention, was voted for, when a collision occurred at Leavenworth between the pro and anti-slavery parties. The ballot boxes were destroyed by the mob, voting stopped, and an anti-slavery man's house burned. A person charged with the last outrage was arrested and lodged in jail; his friends broke open the jail, rescued the prisoner, and then burnt down the building. Great excitement existed and both sides had sent for assistance.

Chicago, Dec. 31 A letter from Westport, dated the 18th, states that on election day the border Missourians mobbed various voting places on the Missouri river, and at several points would not allow the polls to be opened. A large mob destroyed the ballot box at Leavenworth, and maltreated the judges of election.

From China. Dates from Hong Kong are to Sept. 15.

An army of Imperialists 40,000 strong was defeated by the rebels near Canton, on the 28th of August Subsequently another army of Imperialists 10,000 strong, was defeated by the rebel chief with an army of 3000 women.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE PACIFIC.

The steamship Pacific, Capt. Nye, from Liverpool, 15th ult., arrived at New York Dec. 28.

Respecting the prospects of peace, there is a mass of crude and contradictory statements, but made on such feeble grounds that they have ceased to influence even the Bourse. Meanwhile, preparations for a continuation of the war do not at all appear to slacken.

The English parliament opens on the 31st of January.

Considerable misunderstanding is said to exist between Lord Palmerston and his colleagues. Lords Palmerston and Panmure continue to urge the war, while the remainder of the cabinet are desirous of embracing the present opportunity of concluding a peace, and to their peace views the Emperor Napoleon is said to incline. Lord Palmerston is said to hold the threat of a dissolution of Parliament over the heads of his colleagues.

The city of Kars has at length fallen into the hands of the Russians. The particulars are not yet received, but it is believed that the garrison were compelled to surrender through famine; their numbers did not exceed 8,000 men, and they were so much reduced in strength as to be incapable of cutting their way through the enemy's ranks.

Omar Pacha was near Kutais which the Russians held with considerable force.

In the Crimea, the Russians had attacked the extremity of the French lines with about 3000, but after an hour's sharp fighting withdrew.

The Russian government has opened a new loan of fifty millions of roubles, 5 per cent. at Berlin, Hamburg and Holland.

The prospects for the speedy establishment of peaceful relations with Russia appear to be rather more doubtful; no progress being apparent in the negotiations at present.

Correspondence from the seat of war states that the Russians on the Northern side of Sebastopol continue to pour a very heavy fire of artillery against the southern side.

The allies replying but little. Their engineers continuing their work within the town.

The British army is said to be over supplied with equipments now.

English writers admit that the Russian army is well supplied for winter, having large supplies at Simpheropol and Davenkoi.

Eleven Russian Infantry Divisions are now in the Crimea, two having gone north. Prince Gortschakoff has extensively fortified the Tchougar road by batteries.

The Russians were concentrating their forces at Batchi Serai and Simpheropol.

The allies had fortified Kinburn, and consider it equal to any attack that can possibly be made.

The French lines at Kamiesch were nearly completed on a magnificent scale.

St. Petersburg advices say that a vast train of sleighs had entered the Crimea by the Perekop road with provisions, stores, &c. Also that the allies have 26 batteries ready to attack the northern forts, and 360 guns in position on Tchernaya.

Most of the allied fleet had passed Elsinore, homeward bound.

Russia has negotiated a new loan of fifty millions roubles at 82, with 5 per cent. interest, one third to be issued at Hamburg, another in Berlin and another at Amsterdam.

The whole of the Baltic fleet has now returned home.

The following is the latest news from the East:

Marseilles, Dec. 12. The Ganges steam packet is just arrived, with dates from Constantinople of the 3d. The English squadron had arrived at Constantinople. The English cavalry, and that of the Anglo-Ottoman contingent, had also arrived, and were to winter in the neighborhood of the Turkish capital.

The accounts from the Crimea are to the 30th ult. All military operations were suspended. The troops are still engaged in demolishing Sebastopol, and in constructing shelter for themselves out of the ruins.

The Russians were removing from their lines of defense, and concentrating their troops at Bakshi-Serai and at Simpheropol. The corps of the Belbec had also been reduced.

The accounts from Kertch, Eupatoria, and from Kinburn, contain nothing new. The Russians as well as the Allies were preparing their winter quarters.

A money panic is announced to have commenced in Russia. At Moscow and other places the bank notes are refused.

It is stated to be the intention of the Russian Government to effect the immediate emancipation of the serfs of the whole empire.

The Emperor is said to be favorable to the measure, and the land-owning aristocracy who have been sounded offered no opposition.

Since the snow has been covered with a crust of ice, enormous trains of sleds, six miles long, have entered the Crimea by Perekop and the Spit of Arabat, loaded with provisions for the use of the Russian army.

"The English dock yards and arsenals, as well as private ship yards, are at work with the greatest activity. No less than five more line-of battle ships will be completed by the spring, carrying from 131 guns to 80. There will also be 180 gun and mortar boats finished. Armaments of other kinds and destructives of all sorts are being produced with fabulous profusion. Men are rapidly enlisting and volunteering into the line, and there is not one small sign of abatement in the progress of war, except at its seat, figuratively and literally; for there it has squatted, to move, I suppose, some day. In France the preparations are proceeding as actively; and though it is reported the Emperor is inclined for peace, there is no proof of it in the enormous construction of material of war and the incessant dispatch of troops to the East; in the mission of Gen. Canrobert to Sweden and Denmark; in any or all of those acts which hitherto have indicated a desire to prosecute the war with vigor."

In regard to affairs in Russia, we have the following:

"The Paris Constitutionnel has a correspondence from St. Petersburg, which is certainly worth glancing at. The writer relates that, in the Russian capital at this moment are absolutely sitting and functioning two State Councils of a diametrically opposite tendency. One provoked into existence, inspired and presided over by Count Nesselrode, and having peace for its avowed and well defined aim; and the other composed of various generals, and presided over by the Czar himself, and whose object, if it be not the litteral prosecution of the war as a political necessity and doctrine, pre-accepted and carried out, is, at all events, the best possible organization of the war in detail. This council has, it seems, among its members, the three Grand Dukes, brothers of the Emperor, and the Generals in Chief Gortschakoff, Berg, Grabbe, Severs, Rudiger and Paniuntin, with the Admirals Sitkje. Nowossilsky, Mikoff, and all the disposable aides-de-camp generals."

The French and the English in Turkey. After the "four points" have been adjusted by the Allies and Russia, there will, it is apprehended, be a fifth, and very troublesome point, to be settled by the Allies themselves in relation to the occupancy of Turkish territory. It has been repeatedly mentioned that the French appear to be making arrangements for the accommodation of soldiers in Turkey, particularly in and near Constantinople, which indicate an expectation that their stay may be somewhat prolonged in the territory of the Sultan. And this state of things, it would seem, has not escaped the observation of the Turks. There is, too, as may be learned from hints of correspondents from the seat of war, no inconsiderable degree of ill feeling between the French and English soldiers This has been specially noticeable since the grand assault on Sebastopol, in which the French were victorious at the Malakoff, while the English were terribly repulsed at the Redan. Such has been the state of feeling between the two armies, in consequence of these opposite results in their respective attacks, that summary punishment of French soldiers has been inflicted or permitted in several instances by the French commander-in-chief, for taunting the English with their failure at the Redan. In one instance, an English sentinel shot down a French soldier for an insult of this kind; and though the sentinel was immediately surrendered to the French, he was liberated at once, on the ground of justifiable provocation. Such has been the state of irritation on this subject, that Pellissier has been compelled to interdict all reference to the subject by his soldiers, under severe pains—we believe of death.

These things show but too clearly the state of feeling between the two armies, so far as the soldiery are concerned. The feeling between the officers, though more carefully guarded and concealed, is evidently not altogether different from what exists between the common soldiers. Added to this, the difficulties which may be apprehended in connection with the final settlement of accounts between the two governments, at the close of the great contest, and there is but too much reason to fear that the declaration of peace between Russia and the Allies may be the signal for serious controversy, if not actual hostility between the French and English.

Our thoughts have been turned into this channel by reading a letter from Constantinople, dated the 26th ult., published in the New York Commercial Advertiser, apparently from an American ship-master employed in the Black Sea in the transport service of the Allies. He says:—[Boston Traveller

"The occupation of Turkey, particularly Constantinople and the vicinity of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles, by the Allies is so complete that the Turks feel very uneasy. They find themselves in a bad predicament. Their would-be friends are worse than enemies. They have become fully aware of their inferiority, but do not at all relish the manner in which they are treated.

"The unfriendly feeling between the French and English here has also been the cause of great uneasiness to them. For in the case of rupture between them, both parties would refuse to relinquish their foothold. France would not go, and England, bull dog like, would strive to hold on as long as France."

Letter from Kossuth published in the Independent.

In Kossuth's last letter to the Independent he alludes to the character of Francis Joseph of Austria as being most vile and infamous, and then referring to the complacency of the Pope and of the English government in respect to his course, he remarks:

* * * * *

Such is political morality and religion in this, our old world. There you have the condition of Europe, which Popes and Emperors think to perpetuate; and some amongst you there on the other side of the waters—even amongst you some there are—who think themselves wise men, because they doubt that an immense revolution draws nigh, as the world has never yet seen the like. Well, let them doubt; but you men of America, who can trace the finger of God in the events of history; you I would ask, Do you not fear that from the effect of passivity on your part, the evil is allowed to grow and grow—do you not fear that the volcanic eruption if delayed from want of early assistance will be such, must be such, as to shake every foundation of every structure, even that which men call the structure of the Christian religion? Protestant powers have no morality, Protestant nations have neither faith nor charity; and Roman Catholic Christianism—why, look to Francis Joseph and the Concordat. Calculate the eternal laws of creation, eternal, unswerving in the moral, alike as in the physical world; and you may safely sit down, and write a prophecy on many a future event, quite as sure as if you were writing a record of past events. Woe! thrice woe to Jerusalem!

* *

What I the most dread is the fatal power which Francis Joseph by this shameful capitulation conceded to Roman priestcraft over the soul and mind of the youth, all public and private instruction being placed under the control and direction of the Bishops, together with the power to prohibit any book they dislike; and to watch that every science, philosophy, history, all shall be taught in conformity with the doctrines of the Papal Church, the same which condemned Galileo on the pretext of a Jews' myth. This is terrible indeed. If this system is allowed to work ten years, the least of the evils that must happen will be to see the rising generation thrown back by a whole century behind the general standard of enlightenment of our age.

* * * * *

Fraternal assistance is the more urgent now, as the civil power being by the fatal Concordat degraded into a mere executioner of the dictates of Popery, there can be not the slightest doubt about it, that no further indulgence can be anticipated with regard to the suppression of those numerous Protestant schools, which from poverty resulting from the emaciated condition of the country, have been found beyond the appointed time unable to answer the conditions which a tyrannical government has prescribed for their public existence. The protestants of Hungary, unless the country soon reconquers its freedom and independence, will have severe trials to undergo anyhow, in consequence of the recently concluded Concordat. The first article of this internal convention secures to Popery, all the privileges which, not by the laws of the country, but by its own canonical ordinances it claims to enjoy. The 16th article pledges the civil power throughout the empire, to execute the sentences of, and to lend assistance to the Bishops, for the punishment of any contempt by word, deed, or writing, of the faith, liturgy and institutions of the Roman Catholic church; while the Pope in his allocution, dwells with particular pleasure on the final paragraph of the compact, by which it is enacted that all other questions not expressly mentioned in the articles of this Concordat, shall be treated and resolved according to the doctrine of the Catholic church, and the usages and discipline approved by the Apostolic see, and all the laws, ordinances and decrees which have hitherto been in force in Austria and the separate provinces, or (as the Pope expresses himself) in each of the countries subjected to it, which are contrary to the present Concordat, are abrogated and abolished.

Thus the conventions of Vienna and Linez, by which the Protestants of Hungary sword in hand vindicated the freedom of conscience and the legal rights of Protestanism, are abolished; all the fundamental laws of 1790–91, which, putting an end to a two hundred years' struggle for religious freedom, established the liberties, rights and privileges of the Protestant church, are abrogated; and it is arrogantly declared that henceforward the supreme law of the land is to be those canonical ordinances of the Roman Catholic church, which command the extermination of heretics by fire and sword, and the confiscation of their property, for the benefit of the insatiable avarice and insolent ambition of that same church.

What persecutions, sufferings and annoyances are looming in these criminal provisions, I am not wanted to expatiate upon. The sword only can solve the knot—the sword, uncompromising and merciless—and it shall. * * * My hope rests with the general rising of Europe for liberty. * * * * *

Catholics and Protestants. The presence of a delegate from the Pope, in this country, has stirred up a great commotion among the Italian refugees in the United States, who appear to have been persecuted by this individual in their own country. This event also revives the anti-Romish church-feeling, always prevalent among our citizens.

The Romish church is evidently approaching a crisis, and in Europe it must crush its opponents or be crushed itself. It first begins to be discovered by those who are struggling for democratic institutions that it is the Romish church which stands the insurmountable barrier in their way, and the day is not distant when a terrible conflict will be commenced for its overthrow.

Without entering at all into the question of religion, it is self-evident that the religion of Rome is opposed to democracy and to education. In every part of both its letter and its spirit, it is opposed to liberal institutions, and to the progress of liberty and intelligence. It cannot exist with them, for its genius and character is stationary and anti-progressive.

In this age of progress, of popular rights, and of religious freedom, it seems like taking a dive into the middle ages to open a Catholic book or newspaper.

The doctrine of the Catholic church in regard to education is clearly committed in the following quotation, which is from the Shepherd of the Valley, a Roman Catholic paper of high standing, published at St. Louis. In a recent number of that paper the editor speaks as follows:

"We are not the friend of popular education as at present understood. The popularity of a humbug shall never, we trust, lead us to support it. We do not believe that the 'masses,' as our modern reformers insultingly call the laboring class, are not one whit more happy, more respectable, or better informed for knowing how to read. This is our private opinion, however; and as we entertained it before we had the happiness of becoming a Catholic, the parsons are hereby warned not to set it down as peculiarly Popish doctrine. We think that the 'masses' were never less happy, less respectable, and less respected, than they have been since the Reformation, and particularly within the last fifty or one hundred years—since Lord Brougham caught the mania of teaching them to read, and communicated the disease to a large proportion of the English nation—of which, in spite of all our talk, we are often the servile imitators. Reading is only one method of gaining information; and a method that can seldom be pursued with any success in private where there is no one to direct the student, and no guarantee that he desires his own improvement rather than his own amusement. One of the best informed and most respected men of his station in life that we ever knew, could not and cannot read a letter to this day.

"The idea that teaching people to read furnishes them with innocent amusement, is entirely false. It furnishes the majority of those who seek amusement from it with the most dangerous recreation in which they can indulge."

The Catholic religion is opposed to all that progress which is the characteristic of our institutions, and binds down a people as the Anglo Saxon and Norman race never can be bound. It will in time leave the nations which adhere to it as far in the rear of the Protestant nations, as China is at this hour behind the nations of Christendom.—[Saturday Union.

American Board. A brief statement of the pecuniary condition of the Board, at the end of October, was published in the Journal of Missions for December. At that time there had been a falling off in the receipts to the amount of $4,000. To this may now be added a deficiency in the receipts for November of nearly $4,000 more; thus making, for the first four months of the financial year, a diminution of income, compared with last year, of about $8,000, which, with the previously existing debt of $20,000, makes the present indebtedness of the Board not less than $28,000.

In connection with this fact it should also be stated, that since the meeting of the Board at Utica thirty-two missionary laborers have been sent to different parts of the world, who must be provided for; and that the unavoidable expenditures of nearly all the missions are increasing, and in some instances rapidly.

In these circumstances, the Prudential Committee feel constrained to make an appeal to the friends of the Board. If this indebtedness shall continue to increase, at the rate of two or three thousand dollars a month, till the end of July, 1856, evils of a very serious nature must inevitably ensue. Expected remittances must be withheld. Schools, presses, missions, must be cut down, and in some cases, perhaps, totally abandoned. The effects of such a retrograde movement, at home and abroad, would be painful in the extreme. The current now setting toward the foreign field, in our colleges and theological seminaries, would at once be checked, and might not recover itself for many years. Lamentation and mourning would be heard at the one hundred and eighty stations and out-stations of the Board. The embarrassments of their position would be greatly increased. Fresh vigor would be imparted to the hostile forces by which they are surrounded, and a deep shadow be thrown over the now hopeful and brightening prospects of the work in which they are engaged Indeed, is there not reason to fear that it would seal the doom of thousands on whom the light is just beginning to dawn, binding them in chains of darkness never to be broken? Will the friends of missions sit still while such results are impending? Certainly they will not; they cannot.—[Boston Traveller.

☞ Extract of a letter from a Hungarian to Madame Meszlengi Kossuth:

"Yes, our country will become free—this is my strongest and most sincere conviction. And it will become free, not in the distant future, after decades of years, but in a short time, or at least, after no such delay as that patriots of our age might, with God's help, not have reasonable hopes to spend some days of happiness on free, native soil, to redeem the sufferings of the dark past, and of the gloomy present. But let me warn you of one thing. Do not place your faith on any small attempt and high-sounding promise of Revolution. If anything happens, any eruption takes place, wish it, and pray for its success, but beware of attaching ever so small part of your faith to it, because there will be ninety-nine points out of a hundred for the loss, and an injured faith is no more firm, and is full of doubts. There will come a time, a day, when all the materials of the struggle will stand gathered in one compact mass. That day cannot be hurried, as it cannot be retarded. On that day, your faith will not hesitate to place itself, entirely and instinctively, on the success of the outbreak. But this outbreak cannot be forced, just as Vesuvius cannot be forced to eruption by the phosphorescent blaze of some matches thrown into the crater, though its burning lava overflows whenever the chemical mixture of its inflammable materials has reached the degree of natural ebullition. I confess to expecting salvation from nowhere but France. * * *. When you shall hear—as you will—that Paris has declared war or made a successful revolution, then you may surrender yourself to all the best hopes, and you will not be disappointed.

A Golden Thought. We know not the author of the following; but it is one of the most beautiful productions that we have ever read:

Nature will be reported. All things are engaged in writing their own history. The planet and the pebble goes attended by its shadow. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain side; the river, its channels in the soil; the animal, its bones in the stratum; the fern leaf its modest epitaph in the coal. The falling drop makes its sepulchre in the sand or stone; not a foot steps into or along the ground, but prints its characters more or less lasting, a map of its march; every act of the man inscribes itself on the memories of its fellows, and in his own face The air is full of sound—the sky of tokens; the ground is all memoranda and signatures, and every object is covered over with hints that speak to the intelligent.

Important Discovery at Babylon. A London paper states, that Col. Rawlinson has just discovered among the ruins of ancient Babylon an extensive library, not indeed printed on paper, but impressed on baked bricks, containing many and voluminous treaties on astronomy, mathematics, ethnology and several other most important branches of knowledge. These treatises contain facts and arguments which, in his opinion, will have no small operation on the study of the sciences to which they relate, and which throw great light upon biblical history and criticism, and the history of our race.

Fatal Disease in Peru. A dreadful epidemic, known as the "mortiferous fever," has broken out in Peru, and four thousand persons have perished by it. This motality being among the farmers, and a draught prevailing at the same time, has caused immense losses of cattle, on account of their getting astray in the woods, and falling a prey to wild beasts The sugar and the wheat crops were all lost, and the prospect of planters in that country was truly gloomy and miserable.

A letter from Grodnow, in Russia, in the Konigsberg Gazette, states that the new recruiting of the Russian army meets with great difficulties, the diseases prevalent last summer having made great havoc among the young men, those that have survived being mostly unfit for service, while many have escaped over the frontier to Prussia, or hid themselves in the interior The recruits are immediately sent off to the depots, to prevent further desertion.

From California. The war in the Northern part of California was progressing with much violence; nearly all the Indian tribes of the North were arrayed against the whites.

At San Francisco, a festival was celebrated in honor of the fall of Sebastopol, which ended in a general row. Ten thousand persons were present.

Murders were on the increase, the papers teeming with them.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus at Southbridge, Mass., on the 5th of Nov. 1855, Fanny, wife of Stephen Brackett, aged 74 years

Sister Brackett was born in Thompson, Ct., embraced religion at Dudley, Mass., and united with the Baptist Church in that place, in 1814. For the last 30 years, she with her surviving companion and family have been residents of Southbridge, remaining in connection with the Baptist Church in S., until about 1845, when under the labors of Dr. Smith, (now deceased,) she was led to a belief in the doctrine of the Lord's speedy coming and personal reign on the renewed earth, and with her husband has since been identified with the Advent people.

As a wife, Sr. B. was affectionate and devoted, as a mother, kind and solicitous, and as a Christian, consistent and faithful, adorning the doctrine of Christ in her life, and meeting death with calmness and resignation. With Luther and Milton, our Sr. believed that man "shall after this life feel neither good nor evil, in body or soul, until the day of doom;" a doctrine not popular, but yet possible; and exercising a firm faith that God was able to raise her from the dead. But a short time before her feet slipped over the brink of the dark river, she exclaimed that "she should sleep but a little while, and then rise to a glorious immortality." O happy day! when the Lord comes to give His people Eternal Life! May this hope cheer the hearts of our aged and bereaved brother, and the numerous surviving friends.

The funeral services were held in the M. E. House, which was kindly opened for the occasion, the Methodist clergyman Br. C., and the Union Minister both assisting. A sermon was preached by the writer from 1st Cor. 15: 53-55.

A few short years of evil past,
We reach the happy shore
Where death-divided friends at last,
Shall meet to part no more.

D. T. T.

Appointments.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. in
Brimfield, Sabbath, Jan. 6th.
Ware Village, Sabbath, Jan. 13th.
Springfield, Sabbath, Jan. 20th.
H. PRATT.

The Lord willing, Elder L. L. Howard will preach in Salem, at the Union St. Church, on Sunday the 27th.
TEMPLE HARDY.

By leave of Providence, Eld. L. L. Howard will preach at
Lawrence, on the 2d and 3d Sundays in January.

The Lord willing, Eld. J. Couch will preach at
Lawrence on the 4th Sunday in Jan.

The Lord willing, I will meet with Br. R. R. York by request of the Brn. at Brunswick, Me. Jan. 5th at half past six, eve., and remain over the Sabbath.
Hollis Centre, Jan. 12th, 6 1-2 o'clock, and remain over the Sabbath.
JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Northfield Farms, Saturday eve. Jan. 5th, and on Sunday Jan. 6th.
Vernon, Vt. Monday eve. Jan. 7th,
Ashfield, Tuesday eve Jan. 8th,
Charlemont, Wednesday and Thursday evenings Jan. 9th, and 10,
South Hawley, Friday eve, Jan. 11th
West Hawley, Saturday eve. and on Sunday Jan. 12th, and 13th,
Savoy Tannery, Monday eve. Jan. 14th,
North Adams, Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday evenings 15, 16th, 17th,
Cheshire, Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday 18th, 19th, 20th,
Chester Factories, Monday and Tuesday evenings 21st, and 22d,
Westfield Farms, Wednesday and Thursday evenings 23d, and 24th.
Westfield, Friday eve. 25th.
Springfield, Saturday eve. and Sunday 26th and 27th
Thorndike, Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Bondville, Tuesday eve, 29th.
Ware, Wednesday eve, 30th.
I expect a yoke-fellow to assist in filling the above appointments.
SAMUEL BRAGG.

By permission of Providence Eld. E. Burnham will preach at
New Bedford, on Sunday, Jan. 6th and 13th.

The Lord willing, by invitation, I will spend Lord's Day, Jan. 20th, with the Church in Portsmouth, N. H.
S. S. BREWER.

By Divine permission, I will preach at
Springfield, Mass., Friday Jan. 11th.
Jawbuck, Ct., Sunday Jan. 13th.
W. SHELDON.

Providence permitting, Br. A. M. Higgins appoints to meet the Church in North Dana, Sunday Jan. 6th.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Hawsonville, (Jamaica,) Vt., Sunday, Jan 6th.
My P. O. Address for a few days, will be Jamaica, Vt.
S. W. BISHOP.

If the Lord permit, Br. Z. Campbell will preach at Providence on Friday eve. Jan. 4th.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brn. in the following places.
Nashua, Sunday Jan. 6th.
Hillsborough, Sunday Jan. 13th.
Danbury, Sunday Jan. 20th.
Sutton, Jan. 22d, eve., where Br. Jesse Hezen may appoint.
Carlisle, Mass., Sunday, Jan. 27th, and longer, if thought best.
B. P. MANNING.

By Divine permission, I will preach at
West Hawley, Mass., Sunday Dec. 30th.
Savoy, (where Eld. McCulloch may appoint,) Jan 1st, and remain over the Sabbath.
Friends can write me at West Hawley Mass., until directed otherwise.
W. SHELDON.

If the Lord permit, I will hold meetings as follows.
Brunswick, Jan. 7th, 1856.
Freeport, (Flying Point,) Jan. 14th,
R. R. YORK.

If the Lord permit, I will be at
Casco, Jan. 6th, 1856.
J. PARTRIDGE.

Providence permitting, I will be at the following places to preach the word as God may assist and direct.
Poland, Me., Jan. 2d, 3d, and 4th, as the Brn. may see fit to appoint.
Portland, Me., Jan. 6th and 7th.
A. ROSS.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
New Britain, Sunday Jan. 8th.
C. GOODRICH.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Providence, Sunday Dec. 30th, and continue during the week and over the following Sabbath.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Middletown, Friday eve, Jan 4, and continue over the Sabbath.
Should the above appointments conflict with other arrangements, Brn. will please write me at Boston.
J. W. CRABTREE.

Notices.

☞ Advent brethren hold regular meetings every Sabbath in the Chapel on Spring Street; also on Tuesday and Friday evenings In giving out appointments, Brn. will please to name the place, as there are two meetings held in this city

For the Brethren,
THOMAS N. PALMER.
CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 19th, 1855.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor, for sale at this Office. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The above works by Eld. Z. Campbell, are for sale at this Office.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts "	3 " "
Future Pnuishment, by Grew,	2 cts "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 cts "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
Voice of the Church $1	"	9 " doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.

Address orders with the cash to
H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.
☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and by O. Hart, Concord, N. H., and D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

☞ Br. J. K. Bellows, your communication is received.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is [illegible] Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is [illegible]ville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

A friend $3,[illegible], a friend $1,50. Whole amount paid, $[illegible].

W Jackson, P J King, Z Grovier, C E Tucker, D Carr, J Gibson, Z K Stetson, R O White, D Hoskins, R Wakefield, M Young, E O Allen, S E Searle, E Miller, C Boutwell, [illegible], W Chase, N Clark, A Hamilton, A Knowlton, S C Berry, P M Berry, $1 each.

A D Street, M Hudson, J Monts, [illegible], 50 cents each.

For the Poor—J C Pettingill, 50 cents.

prese man was crushed to death in an awful manner; another was still more dreadfully mangled; while another lived till night, then died. Who knows what a day may bring forth? We need constantly to know where we are, whose we are, and what our prospects for eternity. We need a religion that will support us when we come to stop in a moment. We may die immediately, or in a more lingering manner; but the last day will come.—And then will come the day of God, the day of retribution, the day of Christ, the day of rewards and punishment, when every man shall receive the due reward for his deeds, whether they be good or bad. Get ready for every thing, know that you have the abiding Spirit of God, and are safe. God is your keeper, and if you walk in the spirit, and trust in Him, you are safe.

May God help us all to live and walk in the practical spirit of the Gospel, and be saved in the day of Jesus Christ.—Amen.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, JAN. 3, 1856.

Question.

Br. Merriam, will you inform your readers whether the last verse of Job 14th ought not to be placed before v. 21? I do not see how his flesh upon him can have pain and his soul mourn after his countenance is changed and he sent to the grave. A few words on this last verse in connection with the previous vs. might be of servise to your readers.

REPLY.

This chapter of Job expresses, in the most absolute and emphatic manner conceivable, the perfect nonentity of man subsequently to his decease. He even draws the contrast between man and a fallen tree, showing that the condition of man after death was far less favorable to a continued existence than that of a tree after it was felled to the earth; for it might possibly be that the roots of the tree would germinate, and thus its existence be perpetuated. But for man there was no such hope of surviving the shock that would prostrate him to the earth.—"But man dieth, and wasteth away, yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" This significant interrogation which implies most emphatically that he is not to be found, Job answers in the following manner: "As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; So man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."

The comparison here presented is most striking and expressive. As the waters of a flood are evaporated and not to be found, "so man lieth down, (not the body or cage, or covering of the man proper,) but MAN in all the departments of his being—the man proper—" lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."

He then proceeds thus: "O that thou woudst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee thou wilt have a desire to the work of thy hands."

Again: "Thou destroyest the hope of man. Thou prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth: thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away. His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. But his flesh upon him shall mourn." Vs. 19–22.—The sentiment expressed in v. 21, "His sons come to honor, &c., is so diametrically opposite to the commonly received opinions of our day, that it is indeed wonderful how any person can profess to take the Scripture for his guide, and then believe in ghosts or apparitions of departed men, appearing to give directions in regard to their estates, or any thing else concerning their posterity, of whose condition the Bible positively declares them to be utterly ignorant.

The last v. of this chapter, whatever it may have reference to, or wherever it should have been placed, it is certain can have no allusion to man in a disembodied state for it says "his FLESH UPOU HIM shall have pain," therefore it was man in his physical frame of which he speaks.

If any furthur proof be needed that the theology of our day is at varience with Scripture in reference to this chapter, it will be found in the following remarks and admissions of Albert Barnes, one of the most able and popular Commentators of our age. He remarks on the 7th v. thus:

"The feeling of Job here is, that when man was removed from the earth, he was removed finally; that there was no hope of his revisiting it again, and that he could not be employed in the dark abode of departed spirits in the cheerful and happy manner in which he might be in this world of light. This idea is expressed, also, in a most tender manner by the Psalmist:

Wilt thou show wonders to the dead?
Shall the dead arise and praise thee?
Shall thy loving-kindness be declared in the grave?
Or thy faithfulness in destruction?
Shall thy wonders be known in the dark?
And thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness? Ps. 88: 9–11.

And the same feelings were evinced by Hezekiah, the pious king of Israel:

For Sheol cannot praise thee?
Death cannot celebrate thee;
They that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth.
The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day;
The father to the children shall make known thy faithfulness.
Isa. 38: 18–19.

All these gloomy and desponding views arose from the imperfect conception which they had of the future world. It was to them a world of dense and gloomy shades—a world of night—of conscious existence indeed—but still far away from light, and from the comforts which men enjoyed on the earth. We are to remember that the revelations then made were very few and obscure; and we should deem it a matter of inestimable favor that we have a better hope, and have far more just and clear views of the employments of the future world. Yet probably our views of that world, with all the light which we have, are much farther from the reality than the views of the patriarchs were from those which we are permitted to cherish. Such as they are, however, they are fitted to elevate and cheer the soul. We shall not, indeed, live again on the earth, but we shall enter a world of light and glory, compared with which all that is glorious here shall fade away. Not far distant is that blessed world; and in our trials we may look to it not with dread, as Job did to the land of shades, but with triumph and joy."

On the 22nd, v. he says:

"The soul that is within him shall be sad; that is, in the land of shades. So Virgil, speaking of the death of Lausus, says:

'Tum vita per auras
Concessit mœsta ad manes, corpusque reliquit.*

The idea of Job is, that it would leave all the comforts of this life; it would be separate from family and friends; it would go lonely and sad to the land of shades and of night Job dreaded it. He loved life; and in the future world, as it was presented to his view, there was nothing to charm and attract. There he expected to wander in darkness and sadness; and from that gloomy world he expected to return no more forever. Eichorn, however, has rendered this verse so as to give a different signification which may perhaps be the true one.

'Nur uber sich ist er betrubt
Nur sich betrauert er.

'His troubles pertain only, to himself; his grief relates to himself alone.

According to this, the idea is that he must bear all his sorrows alone, and for himself He is cut off from the living, and is not permitted to share in the joys and sorrows of his posterity, nor they in his He has no knowledge of any thing that pertains to them, nor do they participate in his griefs. What a flood of light and joy would have been poured on his soul by the Christian hope, and by the revelation of the truth that there is a world of perfect light and joy for the righteous—in heaven! And what thanks do we owe to the Great Author of our religion—to him who is "the Resurrection and the Life"—that we are permitted to look upon the grave with hearts full of peace and joy."

It is indeed surprising that this learned Commentator, with all the candor and excellent traits of his character, should refer to the heathen philosophy of Virgil to illustrate the subject, and present the ideas of Job in striking contrast with the theology of the present day. The teaching of Scripture then, according to this Commentary, is far behind the teachings of modern theologians. It is certainly quite an admission that while Job, and David, and Hezekiah represent the dead as in a dark, gloomy, comfortless abode, the writers of our age represent them as in a place of light, joy and glory. The Bible presents it as a region of night, while modern theology presents it as a realm of everlasting day. A more striking contrast could not be drawn. Thus this Commentator assumes the responsibility of teaching that the word of God is "imperfect," and not only fallible, but absolutely FALSE; yea, EXCEEDINGLY ERRONEOUS in its instruction. And all this from one who holds to plenary inspiration—all this from one who believes the Bible to be the word of God.

It is admitted that the truths of God's economy were not, all at once, developed; there was a gradual unfolding of the plan of Infinite grace; but these developments would all harmonize, and never conflict with each other. But when, on the other hand, expositors of Scripture take the ground that the first instructions given in the word of God were imperfect, and that the waters of this fountain-head were diluted with an abundance of error, it annuls the very idea of inspiration, and reduces the sacred word of God to a level with fallible men; nay, far below the teaching of modern theological writers.—Nothing can present to my mind more clearly the false position of the great mass of the Church in respect to these things, than this candid admission of so prominent and estimable an Author as Albert Barnes, that the theology of the 19th century stands out in bold contrast—in DIRECT OPPOSITION even, to the theology of Scripture. "Either make the tree good, and its fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and its fruit corrupt." Either let us make the Bible our standard, and discard human theology; or else make human theology the standard, and discard the Scripture as a rule of faith.

* Then the soul departed sad through the air to the shades, and left the body.

Br. Campbell's Works.

We hope our Brn. who wish to read on the subjects presented in Br. Z. Campbell's works, will send in their orders, as they present the argument in a plain, clear, and forcible light, such as cannot fail to interest and instruct the enquirer after truth.

☞ We would thank our friends if, when they send in money for new subscribers, they will just mention that theyarenew subscribers. This will save us the trouble of examining our books to ascertain whether their names are on or not.

Please be particular in every case to name the STATE in which they reside.

☞ We have on hand a quantity of number 18 of the Crisis, which we struck off for free circulation. If our Brn. can make good use of them for procuring subscribers or otherwise, let them send in their orders for all they wish.

For The Crisis.

My Ride and Reverie.

BY W. S CAMPBELL.

I had just arisen from reading the dreamy lucubrations of Prof. Hare—in that lecture reported in the New York Tribune. It is a matter of astonishment that Prof. H. whose conversion has made so much excitement among the necromancers has nothing more important and direct to present in attestation of the truth of Spiritualism, than his plodding journey after this "will of the wisp." The Tribune called its most brilliant extracts from the Professor's book "rose water sentimentalism," adding, "if such namby pamby views are to be taken of the future, it would prefer the old Hebrew doctrine of good in this life." We might inform even the Tribune in its eminence, that the Hebrews believed in good in the future—a life by the resurrection of the dead.

The lecture failed to show that the table tippings result from any other cause than electricity, or that communications are given by any other agent than clairvoyance. Indeed, some of his own assertions proved directly the reverse of his position. The French Mesmerizers go beyond him by a long distance, and his Spiritiscope to boot.

A conversion, indeed, the case of the Professor! who, it appears, denied a future life before he was made to "seek unto familiar spirits,"—swallowed up in divination—a mire deeper than the previous mud—a change from the blackness of darkness to the darkness of blackness. Yet there is some honor for out-spoken infidelity that Rapology cannot claim.

The steam formed a pure, snowy cloud above the sombre and the bright, in that splendid machine—like truth and love leaving a beclouded world. It rolls up its aerial pathway—the short cry "aboard"—to my brother I mechanically accent farewell—we are started. I gather up the thought-reins for a bit of gloomy revery, as we roll slowly on from the "Garden City"—its broad prairie ending—streets less distinct in the dim distance—we are soon upon the dead-level prairie, and away—away over its smooth face like the lightnings running. To the marsh we roll in raging haste—how wide and well adapted to the iron track work the West demanded! Into our panorama, then rushes the lake; whose waters of green, deep, deep green, present so striking a picture—bounded by a beach of its own creation—its long line of breakers mischievously sporting till some woe-work comes to hand. The wind mourning over the surface of its current for good or evil—and for evil and death, how fully! Alas! troubled water, to how many poor victims of the storm-blast hast thou given a silent, cold, dark, grave-berth!—Cold is now thy aspect, heavy lowers thy frown. The black cloud from the far-off city hangs a fitting garment upon thy dark bosom. A few only of the white-winged barks of summer are there, for the hoarse breath of winter—the tumultuous wrath of sky and water have driven those into a safe haven, which have not been overwhelmed in the war of elements, and buried under the surges of ruin and woe—thou rollest onward in thy fury.

The future arose; which, impenetrable to human wisdom, offers to men its dubious and mysterious fields of exploration—appalling the senses—bewildering the emotions under a heavy cloud of darkness. An untracked, pathless desert is before him. Yet dark as it appears, light is there!—Barren as it may be, still pregnant with events. Blind as man is, he has an eye. The light prophetic shines over the dismal regions of time; and the history of this ambitious and mutable world is, in clear drawn lines, depicted in the inspired sketch-book. We have visions too. It is the faith-sight. Man does not wander in darkness, and grope his way on, like the infidel; who denies inspiration—whose soul-light is the dim and misty exhalations of his own brain—whose future is a blank land, draped in the dark and terrible conception of non-existence. Nay! A vision, the inner heart enjoys, of things divine for the world-to come life. Destiny in her grandest truths is brought home, is embraced, in the ample trust.

A long time, I looked again, upon the mocking Lake—beautiful, but imperious; cold, yet bland—delightful and deceitful—inviting to life, still fraught with death.—Came afterward to a broken tract of sand, sand, knoll and ridge—hummack and hollow—covered with oak, ashamed of its acorn-bed. Still on we sped. Came then, a relief to my vexed and languid spirit—pines and ponds—and line of sand hills, on the Lake side—wide marshes on the other—the swamp, the deep, darksome forest—immense trees of many years growth. I began to commune with those old familiar friends, I enjoyed it, but the whistle sounded—the cry, N. A. and S. crossing, started me up, and out into the thick woods.

In a dark place, gleaming—the lights as if an angelic torch-bearer had flung the glare of a new-born dispensation, o'er the retiring grief-scenes of earth; the light that the passing by of the present, is determined—and the inauguration of a future being, a divine truth. Here springs the hope of immortality. Here arises on the Christian's chart the lands of a recovered continent—its head-lands and hill-tops, all smiling invitation to the sea-tossed mariner. Its shores and vales all redolent with unsullied, undying life. Life in pureness—in its goodness, its greatness, its heaven. That future too, is unto believing hope a world of gorgeous being. In the world ye shall have tribulation—There are "those who have come up, out of great tribulation and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." "And white robes were given them, and they had palms in their hands. And they are like unto the angels of God."

O Pilgrim! the blisful future is just before—in all its light and love!

Who will doubt? Along the river brink—only, the cloud obscures the land—beyond, reign ever—shining suns. The toilsome journey will soon close, and the travel-wear will be over. The down-trodden still groan—the despot-ruled nations struggle on in vain. The war clarion sounds—the battle hosts gather—glory-crowned exploits, and gloom-covered actions of desperation, call our attention; mingle in light and dark shades. The present closes in all the horrors of political ruin, announced and appropriate—rolled on itself in blackness. The future comes—a world of life—the kingdom of God—a flood of truth, light, glory.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

BY H. PRATT.

No. 4.

Having shown that salvation through faith to all men was the fulfilling of the promise to Abraham, ("In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed,") we now proceed to notice the promise of the ensign recorded in Isa. 11: 10.

Now an ensign, as an object, is the flag or standard of a regiment; as a person, it is the name given to the one who bears the flag. When this standard is raised, it virtually offers protection to all who will rally around it, all who will seek unto it. Hence all who join the Allies—all who will come to their standard, secure their protection, and are thus saved from their enemies. Now the Lord has promised an ensign for us, and when this ensign shall be lifted up according to this prophecy in the 11th of Isa., it is for Jew and Gentile too. It is a "new way" by which we can insure ourselves from the enemy of all righteousness.

The promise reads thus: "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse which shall stand for an ensign of the people, to it shall the Gentiles SEEK, and His rest shall be glorious." That this refers to Christ all will admit. Now has He stood for "an ensign to the people?" Is there an opportunity for us Gentiles to seek unto this ensign (the Lord) and find protection? If so this prophecy has been fulfilled. If not, and Christ is this ensign, then there is no opportunity for us Gentiles to seek out Christ, and consequently we are without hope and without God in the world.

But that this is not the fact, and that we have such an ensign to seek unto and find protection and eternal salvation beneath His banner, Paul in his letter to the Romans declares, and the fact that Gentiles and Jews are, and have been for eighteen hundred years, seeking Christ, rallying around this standard, clearly proves.

Here then I will introduce Paul's testimony to settle this most important subject in connection with the prophecy, which, may the Lord grant, we may comprehend and understand, and thus be the means of benefiting others.

Isa. 11: 10. "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious."

Rom. 15: 8 12. "Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers: And that the Gentiles might glorify God for His mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name. And again he saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles with his people. And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him, all ye people.—And again Esaias saith, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust."

May the Lord help us to seek out this ensign now, and in that "glorious" rest share with the redeemed ones forever, Amen.

Yours, H. PRATT.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. J. Hale.

COLLINGSVILLE, Ct.
Dec. 23d, 1855.

1st Pet 5: 14. "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus, Amen."

The writer of this book was by occupation a fisherman; but was early called by our Savior, who, forseeing the fortitude he would exercise in preaching the Gospel, honored him with the name of Peter, which signifies a rock or stone. In proportion as the Christians of the first age multiplied, their sufferings became more general and severe, in consequence of which the Apostles considered themselves as especially called upon to comfort and encourage them. With this view, it seems Peter wrote this first Epistle to the Christians in Pontus and the neighboring provinces in Asia, in which he shows it is the duty of Christians to be willing to suffer for their religion, and suggests a variety of motives to induce them to suffer cheerfully. He also urges them to conduct themselves in a harmless manner, and be exemplary in every virtue; and that they may know how to conduct themselves on every occasion, he gave them specific directions relative to the most important duties both in civil and social life, and closes the Epistle as we have quoted above.

We find that all the apostles are constantly guarding the Church against jealousies, contentions, disputations, or strife of any kind, and are always urging professors to put on the whole array of Christian graces. And Paul in the 13th chap. of his first Epistle to the Corinthians points to charity as the foundation of the whole beautiful, sublime and majestic structure. Verse 2d, he says: "And though I have the gift of prophecy; and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." Through all the teachings of this great Apostle he is constantly holding up to our view the necessity of this crowning virtue. We are not all constituted alike, cannot all see alike; therefore we may glorify God by a diversity of operations, and yet all be actuated by the same spirit.

Brn. and Srs., although we are differently constituted, and are not all calculated to labor in the same part of the service of our Lord and Master, yet let us all be doing our Master's business. "For by one spirit we are all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles; whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one spirit:" therefore let us be careful to guard against our own besetting sins, and put on charity.

Let us also have faith, hope and a perfect knowledge of the truth, as it is in Christ Jesus.

It seems there was always a want of charity in the Christian Church, else why did the sacred writers urge it so strongly; and if there was a necessity of urging it so strongly in the days of the Apostles, it seems to me there is tenfold more necessity of it now when all the elements of war, and all the spirits of darkness are let loose and seem to be trying their utmost endeavors, knowing that their time is short. And if Peter found it necessary to urge on primitive Christians, that they should g[illegible] one another with a kiss of charity, [illegible] was necessary that the early Christ[illegible] should be thus careful to preserve u[illegible] and Christian fellowship, is it any les[illegible] now, when sin and all its accompany[illegible] train of evil have almost universal sw[illegible] Elect, be not deceived, for soon your [illegible]vior will call you home. But the day [illegible] ruin; yes, the day of irrecoverable r[illegible] to the ungodly, draws near.

WM J. HALE.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. John Gibson.

HOUGHTONVILLE, VT.,
Dec. 25th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I do feel exceeding glad of the blessed privilege of reading the World's Crisis from week to week, for it is truly cheering in these perilous times to read the comforting epistles of the Brn. and Srs. of like precious faith. Many think it strange that Advent believers will still hold on after they have been disappointed so many times, and ask, why will you not give it up, and come back? My answer is, I can see nothing but infidelity in that direction, but the crown is ahead; yes—glory be to God—by the eye of faith, I see, a little from this that glorious kingdom of God which will be under the whole heaven, and given to the saints of the Most High, who are to "possess it forever, even forever and ever."

It was a great disappointment to me to pass by the time when I supposed the 1335 days, or years would end, and not see good old Daniel in his lot; but this is no barrier in the way, to going forward, while I see in every direction the signs of the coming of the Lord, that are given by the Prophets, Jesus Christ, and His Apostles.

I will refer to some of them. Dan. [illegible] 44; Jer. 25: 30–38. I would ask those who will take the trouble to read this chapter, and then contemplate on the present state of all the nations of the earth, if he does not see some signs of their taking a hearty draught of that "cup of God's fury?" Does it not appear that the Lord has "a controversy with the nations?" Again: read Joel 3: 9, and onward. Is not this, too, now having a complete fulfilment? Jesus Christ says, recorded in Luke 21: 25–28; "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming upon the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the [illegible] of Man coming in a cloud, with pow[er] and great glory" Are not all these sig[ns] in the past, except those that are in pro[illegible]cess of fulfiment?

Paul tells us of quite a number of e[illegible] that would transpire in the last da[ys]. Read the 3d ch. of 2d Tim, and the[n] [illegible] if all these traits of character are now taking place before our eyes. 1 Tim. 4: 1. He says, "some shall [de]part from the faith, giving he[ed to] seducing spirits and doctrines of de[vils]. Oh! how lamentable it is, to see those who were once good Bible Christians, depart from the Bible faith, and associat[e] with those seducing spirits, which [illegible] the working of Satan, with power and signs and lying wonders; but so it is. And as Jesus says, "because iniquity abounds, the love of many shall wax cold; but those that endure to the end shall be saved."

O Brn. and Srs., how many of us will endure to the end? When the Lord comes will He find faith on the earth? I never felt more like persevering than now.

JOHN GIBSON.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. J. T. Ongley.

SYRACUSE, Dec. 26th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I have felt desirous for some time to write a few lines to you, and for the encouragement of the scattered flock. I would say, fear not though trials severe thicken on every hand. Your God will surely come, even God with a recompence; he will come and save us, if we trust in Him.

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick; But when the desire cometh, it is a tree of Life." O joyful hope! Long-looked-for, by the good of all ages. Soon the last child of God by faith, will be numbered, and the manifestation of the sons of God will appear, although some of the lively stones designed for that spiritual Temple, have proved themselves worthy, and therefore are laid by until the last stone is squared.

Glory to God—the resurrection of them will soon take place, and then all creation will rejoice together. "Amen, even so; come, Lord Jesus," is the cry of the writer of this, as well as of the beloved Apostle. The promise still holds good. "If the vision tarry, wait for it; for it will surely come." With the Poet I can say,

"By foes I'm despised, and by friends am forsaken;
My hope is deferred, and sick is my heart,
Though oft disappointed and sometimes mistaken,
Yet from my dear Jesus I near will depart."

Hold on a little longer, dear Brn. and Srs., "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him." Again; "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit on my Throne, even as I have overcome and am sit down with my Father on his Throne." Remember what He suffered to gain the right to reign over the kingdom under the whole heaven. He became poor for our sakes, that we may become rich. See what men of this world will do to gain its empty honors! what a difference in the Glory, Honor, &c., promised to the child of God by faith, (viz.) by a patient continuance in well doing. we gain the same, and immortality, eternal life and an eternal dwelling place, in a Kingdom where the saints will no more say they are sick. Cheer up; the signs thicken on every hand, soon the Beast and his army will fall, the rightful Heir to the throne will take the Kingdom and reign in Righteousness.—Shall we be there? Brn., this is the oft repeated cry of your Br.

There are a few in this place that are determined to go through, by the assistance of the grace of God. Our meetings are rather on the increase. We are poor as to this world's goods, but strong in faith, and we have quite a number that are anxious to see the Crisis, at its weekly visits, though I have not been able to take it for the last part of the last quarter.

Let us do what we can to help scatter the truth, and finally may we meet in the Kingdom of God.

Yours in hope,

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. Sheldon.

SPRINGFIELD, Dec. 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—We are still in a world of tribulation, and like Paul, we are "still in peril among false brethren!"—But wolves in sheep's clothing, who would be lords over God's heritage, cannot always hide their malice against the "little ones," behind a curtain of sanctimony.—The Judge standeth at the door, and will soon cut off those who "grudge one against another," and seek the ruin of the flock for self gratification. God knows that I am heart sick of papacy among Adventists. "Let brotherly love continue," and brotherly kindness elate our hearts, "esteeming others better than ourselves," rather than be filled with a mulish spirit.

I am still striving for the kingdom of God. Love to the saints scattered abroad.

Yours truly, W. SHELDON.

For the Crisis.

Taken from the Portland Eastern Argus, Dec. 24th, 1855.

Cling to the Mighty One.

Cling to the Mighty One,	Ps. 89: 19
Cling in thy grief;	Heb. 12: 11.
Cling to the Holy One,	Heb. 1: 12.
He gives relief;	Ps. 116: 9.
Cling to the Gracious One,	Ps. 116: 5.
Cling in thy pain;	Ps. 55: 4.
Cling to the Faithful One,	1 Thess. 5: 24.
He will sustain.	Ps. 28: 8
Cling to the Living One,	Heb. 7: 25.
Cling in thy woe;	Ps. 86: 7.
Cling to the Loving One,	1 John 4: 16.
Through all below;	Rom. 8: 38, 39
Cling to the Pardoning One,	Isa. 4: 7.
He speaketh peace;	John 14: 27.
Cling to the Healing One,	Exod. 15: 26.
Anguish shall cease.	Ps. 147: 3.
Cling to the Bleeding One,	1 John 1: 7.
Cling to His side;	John 20: 27.
Cling to the Risen One,	Rom. 6: 9.
In Him abide;	John 15: 4.
Cling to the Coming One,	Rev. 22: 20.
Hope shall arise;	Titus 2: 13.
Cling to the Reigning One,	Ps. 97: 1.
Joy lights thine eyes.	Ps 16: 11.

Exciting News from Kansas—More Outrages by the Missouri Ruffians. St Louis, Dec. 28. The Lexington (Missouri) Herald of the 22d says: On the 15th, the Free State Constitution of the Topeka Convention, was voted for, when a collision occurred at Leavenworth between the pro and anti-slavery parties. The ballot boxes were destroyed by the mob, voting stopped, and an anti-slavery man's house burned. A person charged with the last outrage was arrested and lodged in jail; his friends broke open the jail, rescued the prisoner, and then burnt down the building. Great excitement existed and both sides had sent for assistance.

Chicago, Dec. 31. A letter from Westport, dated the 18th, states that on election day the border Missourians mobbed various voting places on the Missouri river, and at several points would not allow the polls to be opened. A large mob destroyed the ballot box at Leavenworth, and maltreated the judges of election.

From China. Dates from Hong Kong are to Sept. 15.

An army of Imperialists 40,000 strong was defeated by the rebels near Canton, on the 28th of August. Subsequently another army of Imperialists 10,000 strong, was defeated by the rebel chief with an army of 3000 women.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE PACIFIC.

The steamship Pacific, Capt. Nye, from Liverpool, 15th ult., arrived at New York Dec. 28.

Respecting the prospects of peace, there is a mass of crude and contradictory statements, but made on such feeble grounds that they have ceased to influence even the Bourse. Meanwhile, preparations for a continuation of the war do not at all appear to slacken.

The English parliament opens on the 31st of January.

Considerable misunderstanding is said to exist between Lord Palmerston and his colleagues. Lords Palmerston and Panmure continue to urge the war, while the remainder of the cabinet are desirous of embracing the present opportunity of concluding a peace, and to their peace views the Emperor Napoleon is said to incline. Lord Palmerston is said to hold the threat of a dissolution of Parliament over the heads of his colleagues.

The city of Kars has at length fallen into the hands of the Russians. The particulars are not yet received, but it is believed that the garrison were compelled to surrender through famine; their numbers did not exceed 8,000 men, and they were so much reduced in strength as to be incapable of cutting their way through the enemy's ranks.

Omar Pacha was near Kutais which the Russians held with considerable force.

In the Crimea, the Russians had attacked the extremity of the French lines with about 3000, but after an hour's sharp fighting withdrew.

The Russian government has opened a new loan of fifty millions of roubles, 5 per cent. at Berlin, Hamburg and Holland.

The prospects for the speedy establishment of peaceful relations with Russia appear to be rather more doubtful; no progress being apparent in the negotiations at present.

Correspondence from the seat of war states that the Russians on the Northern side of Sebastopol continue to pour a very heavy fire of artillery against the southern side.

The allies replying but little. Their engineers continuing their work within the town.

The British army is said to be over supplied with equipments now.

English writers admit that the Russian army is well supplied for winter, having large supplies at Simpheropol and Davenkoi.

Eleven Russian Infantry Divisions are now in the Crimea, two having gone north. Prince Gortschakoff has extensively fortified the Tchougar road by batteries.

The Russians were concentrating their forces at Batchi Serai and Simpheropol.

The allies had fortified Kinburn, and consider it equal to any attack that can possibly be made.

The French lines at Kamiesch were nearly completed on a magnificent scale.

St. Petersburg advices say that a vast train of sleighs had entered the Crimea by the Perekop road with provisions, stores, &c. Also that the allies have 26 batteries ready to attack the northern forts, and 360 guns in position on Tchernaya.

Most of the allied fleet had passed Elsinore, homeward bound.

Russia has negotiated a new loan of fifty millions roubles at 82, with 5 per cent. interest, one third to be issued at Hamburg, another in Berlin and another at Amsterdam.

The whole of the Baltic fleet has now returned home.

The following is the latest news from the East:

Marseilles, Dec. 12. The Ganges steam packet is just arrived, with dates from Constantinople of the 3d. The English squadron had arrived at Constantinople. The English cavalry, and that of the Anglo-Ottoman contingent, had also arrived, and were to winter in the neighborhood of the Turkish capital.

The accounts from the Crimea are to the 30th ult. All military operations were suspended. The troops are still engaged in demolishing Sebastopol, and in constructing shelter for themselves out of the ruins.

The Russians were removing from their lines of defense, and concentrating their troops at Bakshi-Serai and at Simpheropol. The corps of the Belbec had also been reduced.

The accounts from Kertch, Eupatoria, and from Kinburn, contain nothing new. The Russians as well as the Allies were preparing their winter quarters.

A money panic is announced to have commenced in Russia. At Moscow and other places the bank notes are refused.

It is stated to be the intention of the Russian Government to effect the immediate emancipation of the serfs of the whole empire.

The Emperor is said to be favorable to the measure, and the land-owning aristocracy who have been sounded offered no opposition.

Since the snow has been covered with a crust of ice, enormous trains of sleds, six miles long, have entered the Crimea by Perekop and the Spit of Arabat, loaded with provisions for the use of the Russian army.

"The English dock yards and arsenals, as well as private ship yards, are at work with the greatest activity. No less than five more line-of battle ships will be completed by the spring, carrying from 131 guns to 80. There will also be 180 gun and mortar boats finished. Armaments of other kinds and destructives of all sorts are being produced with fabulous profusion. Men are rapidly enlisting and volunteering into the line, and there is not one small sign of abatement in the progress of war, except at its seat, figuratively and literally; for there it has squatted, to move, I suppose, some day. In France the preparations are proceeding as actively; and though it is reported the Emperor is inclined for peace, there is no proof of it in the enormous construction of material of war and the incessant dispatch of troops to the East; in the mission of Gen. Canrobert to Sweden and Denmark; in any or all of those acts which hitherto have indicated a desire to prosecute the war with vigor."

In regard to affairs in Russia, we have the following:

"The Paris Constitutionnel has a correspondence from St. Petersburg, which is certainly worth glancing at. The writer relates that, in the Russian capital at this moment are absolutely sitting and functioning two State Councils of a diametrically opposite tendency. One provoked into existence, inspired and presided over by Count Nesselrode, and having peace for its avowed and well defined aim; and the other composed of various generals, and presided over by the Czar himself, and whose object, if it be not the litteral prosecution of the war as a political necessity and doctrine, pre-accepted and carried out, is, at all events, the best possible organization of the war in detail. This council has, it seems, among its members, the three Grand Dukes, brothers of the Emperor, and the Generals in Chief Gortschakoff, Berg, Grabbe, Severs, Rudiger and Paniuntin, with the Admirals Sitkje, Nowossilsky, Mikoff, and all the disposable aides-de-camp generals."

The French and the English in Turkey. After the "four points" have been adjusted by the Allies and Russia, there will, it is apprehended, be a fifth, and very troublesome point, to be settled by the Allies themselves in relation to the occupancy of Turkish territory. It has been repeatedly mentioned that the French appear to be making arrangements for the accommodation of soldiers in Turkey, particularly in and near Constantinople, which indicate an expectation that their stay may be somewhat prolonged in the territory of the Sultan. And this state of things, it would seem, has not escaped the observation of the Turks. There is, too, as may be learned from hints of correspondents from the seat of war, no inconsiderable degree of ill feeling between the French and English soldiers. This has been specially noticeable since the grand assault on Sebastopol, in which the French were victorious at the Malakoff, while the English were terribly repulsed at the Redan. Such has been the state of feeling between the two armies, in consequence of these opposite results in their respective attacks, that summary punishment of French soldiers has been inflicted or permitted in several instances by the French commander-in-chief, for taunting the English with their failure at the Redan. In one instance, an English sentinel shot down a French soldier for an insult of this kind; and though the sentinel was immediately surrendered to the French, he was liberated at once, on the ground of justifiable provocation. Such has been the state of irritation on this subject, that Pellissier has been compelled to interdict all reference to the subject by his soldiers, under severe pains—we believe of death.

These things show but too clearly the state of feeling between the two armies, so far as the soldiery are concerned. The feeling between the officers, though more carefully guarded and concealed, is evidently not altogether different from what exists between the common soldiers. Added to this, the difficulties which may be apprehended in connection with the final settlement of accounts between the two governments, at the close of the great contest, and there is but too much reason to fear that the declaration of peace between Russia and the Allies may be the signal for serious controversy, if not actual hostility between the French and English.

Our thoughts have been turned into this channel by reading a letter from Constantinople, dated the 26th ult., published in the New York Commercial Advertiser, apparently from an American ship-master employed in the Black Sea in the transport service of the Allies. He says:—[Boston Traveller.

"The occupation of Turkey, particularly Constantinople and the vicinity of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles, by the Allies is so complete that the Turks feel very uneasy. They find themselves in a bad predicament. Their would-be friends are worse than enemies. They have become fully aware of their inferiority, but do not at all relish the manner in which they are treated.

"The unfriendly feeling between the French and English here has also been the cause of great uneasiness to them. For in the case of rupture between them, both parties would refuse to relinquish their foothold. France would not go, and England, bull dog like, would strive to hold on as long as France."

Letter from Kossuth published in the Independent.

In Kossuth's last letter to the Independent he alludes to the character of Francis Joseph of Austria as being most vile and infamous, and then referring to the complacency of the Pope and of the English government in respect to his course, he remarks:

* * * * *

Such is political morality and religion in this, our old world. There you have the condition of Europe, which Popes and Emperors think to perpetuate; and some amongst you there on the other side of the waters—even amongst you some there are—who think themselves wise men, because they doubt that an immense revolution draws nigh, as the world has never yet seen the like. Well, let them doubt; but you men of America, who can trace the finger of God in the events of history; you I would ask, Do you not fear that from the effect of passivity on your part, the evil is allowed to grow and grow—do you not fear that the volcanic eruption if delayed from want of early assistance will be such, must be such, as to shake every foundation of every structure, even that which men call the structure of the Christian religion? Protestant powers have no morality, Protestant nations have neither faith nor charity; and Roman Catholic Christianism—why, look to Francis Joseph and the Concordat. Calculate the eternal laws of creation, eternal, unswerving in the moral, alike as in the physical world; and you may safely sit down, and write a prophecy on many a future event, quite as sure as if you were writing a record of past events. Woe! thrice woe to Jerusalem!

* * *

What I the most dread is the fatal power which Francis Joseph by this shameful capitulation conceded to Roman priestcraft over the soul and mind of the youth, all public and private instruction being placed under the control and direction of the Bishops, together with the power to prohibit any book they dislike; and to watch that every science, philosophy, history, all shall be taught in conformity with the doctrines of the Papal Church, the same which condemned Galileo on the pretext of a Jews' myth. This is terrible indeed. If this system is allowed to work ten years, the least of the evils that must happen will be to see the rising generation thrown back by a whole century behind the general standard of enlightenment of our age.

* * * * *

Fraternal assistance is the more urgent now, as the civil power being by the fatal Concordat degraded into a mere executioner of the dictates of Popery, there can be not the slightest doubt about it, that no further indulgence can be anticipated with regard to the suppression of those numerous Protestant schools, which from poverty resulting from the emaciated condition of the country, have been found beyond the appointed time unable to answer the conditions which a tyrannical government has prescribed for their public existence. The protestants of Hungary, unless the country soon reconquers its freedom and independence, will have severe trials to undergo anyhow, in consequence of the recently concluded Concordat. The first article of this internal convention secures to Popery, all the privileges which, not by the laws of the country, but by its own canonical ordinances it claims to enjoy. The 16th article pledges the civil power throughout the empire, to execute the sentences of, and to lend assistance to the Bishops, for the punishment of any contempt by word, deed, or writing, of the faith, liturgy and institutions of the Roman Catholic church, while the Pope in his allocution, dwells with particular pleasure on the final paragraph of the compact, by which it is enacted that all other questions not expressly mentioned in the articles of this Concordat, shall be treated and resolved according to the doctrine of the Catholic church, and the usages and discipline approved by the Apostolic see, and all the laws, ordinances and decrees which have hitherto been in force in Austria and the separate provinces, or (as the Pope expresses himself) in each of the countries subjected to it, which are contrary to the present Concordat, are abrogated and abolished.

Thus the conventions of Vienna and Linez, by which the Protestants of Hungary sword in hand vindicated the freedom of conscience and the legal rights of Protestanism, are abolished; all the fundamental laws of 1790-91, which, putting an end to a two hundred years' struggle for religious freedom, established the liberties, rights and privileges of the Protestant church, are abrogated; and it is arrogantly declared that henceforward the supreme law of the land is to be those canonical ordinances of the Roman Catholic church, which command the extermination of heretics by fire and sword, and the confiscation of their property, for the benefit of the insatiable avarice and insolent ambition of that same church.

What persecutions, sufferings and annoyances are looming in these criminal provisions, I am not wanted to expatiate upon. The sword only can solve the knot—the sword, uncompromising and merciless—and it shall. * * * * My hope rests with the general rising of Europe for liberty. * * * * * *

Catholics and Protestants. The presence of a delegate from the Pope, in this country, has stirred up a great commotion among the Italian refugees in the United States, who appear to have been persecuted by this individual in their own country. This event also revives the anti-Romish church-feeling, always prevalent among our citizens.

The Romish church is evidently approaching a crisis, and in Europe it must crush its opponents or be crushed itself. It first begins to be discovered by those who are struggling for democratic institutions that it is the Romish church which stands the insurmountable barrier in their way, and the day is not distant when a terrible conflict will be commenced for its overthrow.

Without entering at all into the question of religion, it is self-evident that the religion of Rome is opposed to democracy and to education. In every part of both its letter and its spirit, it is opposed to liberal institutions, and to the progress of liberty and intelligence. It cannot exist with them, for its genius and character is stationary and anti-progressive.

In this age of progress, of popular rights, and of religious freedom, it seems like taking a dive into the middle ages to open a Catholic book or newspaper.

The doctrine of the Catholic church in regard to education is clearly committed in the following quotation, which is from the Shepherd of the Valley, a Roman Catholic paper of high standing, published at St. Louis. In a recent number of that paper the editor speaks as follows:

"We are not the friend of popular education as at present understood. The popularity of a humbug shall never, we trust, lead us to support it. We do not believe that the 'masses,' as our modern reformers insultingly call the laboring class, are not one whit more happy, more respectable, or better informed for knowing how to read. This is our private opinion, however; and as we entertained it before we had the happiness of becoming a Catholic, the parsons are hereby warned not to set it down as peculiarly Popish doctrine. We think that the 'masses' were never less happy, less respectable, and less respected, than they have been since the Reformation, and particularly within the last fifty or one hundred years—since Lord Brougham caught the mania of teaching them to read, and communicated the disease to a large proportion of the English nation—of which, in spite of all our talk, we are often the servile imitators. Reading is only one method of gaining information; and a method that can seldom be pursued with any success in private where there is no one to direct the student, and no guarantee that he desires his own improvement rather than his own amusement. One of the best informed and most respected men of his station in life that we ever knew, could not and cannot read a letter to this day.

"The idea that teaching people to read furnishes them with innocent amusement, is entirely false. It furnishes the majority of those who seek amusement from it with the most dangerous recreation in which they can indulge."

The Catholic religion is opposed to all that progress which is the characteristic of our institutions, and binds down a people as the Anglo Saxon and Norman race never can be bound. It will in time leave the nations which adhere to it as far in the rear of the Protestant nations, as China is at this hour behind the nations of Christendom.—[Saturday Union.

American Board. A brief statement of the pecuniary condition of the Board, at the end of October, was published in the Journal of Missions for December. At that time there had been a falling off in the receipts to the amount of $4,000. To this may now be added a deficiency in the receipts for November of nearly $4,000 more; thus making, for the first four months of the financial year, a diminution of income, compared with last year, of about $8,000, which, with the previously existing debt of $20,000, makes the present indebtedness of the Board not less than $28,000.

In connection with this fact it should also be stated, that since the meeting of the Board at Utica thirty-two missionary laborers have been sent to different parts of the world, who must be provided for; and that the unavoidable expenditures of nearly all the missions are increasing, and in some instances rapidly.

In these circumstances, the Prudential Committee feel constrained to make an appeal to the friends of the Board. If this indebtedness shall continue to increase, at the rate of two or three thousand dollars a month, till the end of July, 1856, evils of a very serious nature must inevitably ensue. Expected remittances must be withheld. Schools, presses, missions, must be cut down, and in some cases, perhaps, totally abandoned. The effects of such a retrograde movement, at home and abroad, would be painful in the extreme. The current now setting toward the foreign field, in our colleges and theological seminaries, would at once be checked, and might not recover itself for many years. Lamentation and mourning would be heard at the one hundred and eighty stations and out-stations of the Board. The embarrassments of their position would be greatly increased. Fresh vigor would be imparted to the hostile forces by which they are surrounded, and a deep shadow be thrown over the now hopeful and brightening prospects of the work in which they are engaged. Indeed, is there not reason to fear that it would seal the doom of thousands on whom the light is just beginning to dawn, binding them in chains of darkness never to be broken? Will the friends of missions sit still while such results are impending? Certainly they will not; they cannot.—[Boston Traveller.

☞ Extract of a letter from a Hungarian to Madame Meszlengi Kossuth:

"Yes, our country will become free—this is my strongest and most sincere conviction. And it will become free, not in the distant future, after decades of years, but in a short time, or at least, after no such delay as that patriots of our age might, with God's help, not have reasonable hopes to spend some days of happiness on free, native soil, to redeem the sufferings of the dark past, and of the gloomy present. But let me warn you of one thing. Do not place your faith on any small attempt and high-sounding promise of Revolution. If anything happens, any eruption takes place, wish it, and pray for its success, but beware of attaching ever so small part of your faith to it, because there will be ninety-nine points out of a hundred for the loss, and an injured faith is no more firm, and is full of doubts. There will come a time, a day, when all the materials of the struggle will stand gathered in one compact mass. That day cannot be hurried, as it cannot be retarded. On that day, your faith will not hesitate to place itself, entirely and instinctively, on the success of the outbreak. But this outbreak cannot be forced, just as Vesuvius cannot be forced to eruption by the phosphorescent blaze of some matches thrown into the crater, though its burning lava overflows whenever the chemical mixture of its inflammable materials has reached the degree of natural ebullition. I confess to expecting salvation from nowhere but France. * * * When you shall hear—as you will—that Paris has declared war or made a successful revolution, then you may surrender yourself to all the best hopes, and you will not be disappointed.

A Golden Thought. We know not the author of the following; but it is one of the most beautiful productions that we have ever read:

Nature will be reported. All things are engaged in writing their own history. The planet and the pebble goes attended by its shadow. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain side; the river, its channels in the soil; the animal, its bones in the stratum; the fern leaf its modest epitaph in the coal. The falling drop makes its sepulchre in the sand or stone; not a foot steps into or along the ground, but prints its characters more or less lasting, a map of its march; every act of the man inscribes itself on the memories of its fellows, and in his own face. The air is full of sound—the sky of tokens; the ground is all memoranda and signatures, and every object is covered over with hints that speak to the intelligent.

Important Discovery at Babylon. A London paper states, that Col. Rawlinson has just discovered among the ruins of ancient Babylon an extensive library, not indeed printed on paper, but impressed on baked bricks, containing many and voluminous treaties on astronomy, mathematics, ethnology and several other most important branches of knowledge. These treatises contain facts and arguments which, in his opinion, will have no small operation on the study of the sciences to which they relate, and which throw great light upon biblical history and criticism, and the history of our race.

Fatal Disease in Peru. A dreadful epidemic, known as the "mortiferous fever," has broken out in Peru, and four thousand persons have perished by it. This motality being among the farmers, and a draught prevailing at the same time, has caused immense losses of cattle, on account of their getting astray in the woods, and falling a prey to wild beasts. The sugar and the wheat crops were all lost, and the prospect of planters in that country was truly gloomy and miserable.

A letter from Grodnow, in Russia, in the Konigsberg Gazette, states that the new recruiting of the Russian army meets with great difficulties, the diseases prevalent last summer having made great havoc among the young men, those that have survived being mostly unfit for service, while many have escaped over the frontier to Prussia, or hid themselves in the interior. The recruits are immediately sent off to the depots, to prevent further desertion.

From California. The war in the Northern part of California was progressing with much violence; nearly all the Indian tribes of the North were arrayed against the whites.

At San Francisco, a festival was celebrated in honor of the fall of Sebastopol, which ended in a general row. Ten thousand persons were present.

Murders were on the increase, the papers teeming with them.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus at Southbridge, Mass., on the 5th of Nov. 1855, Fanny, wife of Stephen Brackett, aged 74 years.

Sister Brackett was born in Thompson, Ct., embraced religion at Dudley, Mass., and united with the Baptist Church in that place, in 1814. For the last 30 years, she with her surviving companion and family have been residents of Southbridge, remaining in connection with the Baptist Church in S., until about 1845, when under the labors of Dr. Smith, (now deceased,) she was led to a belief in the doctrine of the Lord's speedy coming and personal reign on the renewed earth, and with her husband has since been identified with the Advent people.

As a wife, Sr. B. was affectionate and devoted, as a mother, kind and solicitous, and as a Christian, consistent and faithful, adorning the doctrine of Christ in her life, and meeting death with calmness and resignation. With Luther and Milton, our Sr. believed that man "shall after this life feel neither good nor evil, in body or soul, until the day of doom;" a doctrine not popular, but yet possible; and exercising a firm faith that God was able to raise her from the dead. But a short time before her feet slipped over the brink of the dark river, she exclaimed that "she should sleep but a little while, and then rise to a glorious immortality." O happy day! when the Lord comes to give His people Eternal Life! May this hope cheer the hearts of our aged and bereaved brother, and the numerous surviving friends.

The funeral services were held in the M. E. House, which was kindly opened for the occasion, the Methodist clergyman Br. C., and the Union Minister both assisting. A sermon was preached by the writer from 1st Cor. 15: 53-55.

A few short years of evil past,
We reach the happy shore
Where death-divided friends at last,
Shall meet to part no more.

D. T. T.

Appointments.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. in
Brimfield, Sabbath, Jan. 6th.
Ware Village, Sabbath, Jan. 13th.
Springfield, Sabbath, Jan. 20th.

H. PRATT.

The Lord willing, Elder L. L. Howard will preach in Salem, at the Union St. Church, on Sunday the 27th.

TEMPLE HARDY.

By leave of Providence, Eld. L. L. Howard will preach at
Lawrence, on the 2d and 3d Sundays in January.

The Lord willing, Eld. J. Couch will preach at
Lawrence on the 4th Sunday in Jan.

The Lord willing, I will meet with Br R. R. York by request of the Brn. at Brunswick, Me. Jan. 5th at half past six, eve, and remain over the Sabbath.
Hollis Centre, Jan. 12th, 6 1-2 o'clock, and remain over the Sabbath.

JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Northfield Farms, Saturday eve. Jan. 5th, and on Sunday Jan. 6th.
Vernon, Vt. Monday eve. Jan. 7th,
Ashfield, Tuesday eve Jan. 8th,
Charlemont, Wednesday and Thursday evenings Jan. 9th, and 10.
South Hawley, Friday eve, Jan. 11th
West Hawley, Saturday eve. and on Sunday Jan. 12th, and 13th,
Savoy Tannery, Monday eve. Jan. 14th,
North Adams, Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday evenings 15, 16th, 17th,
Cheshire, Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday 18th, 19th, 20th,
Chester Factories, Monday and Tuesday evenings 21st, and 22d,
Westfield Farms, Wednesday and Thursday evenings 23d, and 24th.
Westfield, Friday eve. 25th.
Springfield, Saturday eve. and Sunday 26th and 27th
Thorndike, Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Bondville, Tuesday eve, 29th.
Ware, Wednesday eve, 30th.
I expect a yoke-fellow to assist in filling the above appointments.

SAMUEL BRAGG.

By permission of Providence Eld. [illegible] will preach at
New Bedford, on Sunday, Jan. 6th and 13th.

The Lord willing, by invitation, I will spend Lord's Day, Jan. 20th, with the Church in Portsmouth, N. H.

S. S. BREWER.

By Divine permission, I will preach at
Springfield, Mass., Friday Jan. 11th.
Jawbuck, Ct., Sunday Jan. 13th.

W. [illegible]

Providence permitting, Br. A. M. Higgins appoints to meet the Church in North Dana, Sunday Jan. 6th.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Hawsonville, (Jamaica,) Vt., Sunday, Jan 6th.
My P. O. Address for a few days, will be Jamaica, Vt.

S. W. BISHOP.

If the Lord permit, Br. Z. Campbell will preach at Providence on Friday eve. Jan. 4th.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brn. in the following places.
Nashua, Sunday Jan. 6th.
Hillsborough, Sunday Jan. 13th.
Danbury, Sunday Jan. 20th.
Sutton, Jan. 22d, eve., where Br. Jesse Hazen may appoint.
Carlisle, Mass., Sunday, Jan. 27th, and longer, if thought best.

B. P. MANNING.

By Divine permission, I will preach at
West Hawley, Mass., Sunday Dec. 30th.
Savoy, (where Eld. McCulloch may appoint,) Jan 1st, and remain over the Sabbath.
Friends can write me at West Hawley Mass., until directed otherwise.

W. SHELDON.

If the Lord permit, I will hold meetings as follows,
Brunswick, Jan. 7th, 1856.
Freeport, (Flying Point,) Jan. 14th,

R. R. YORK.

If the Lord permit, I will be at
Casco, Jan. 6th, 1856.

J. PARTRIDGE.

Providence permitting, I will be at the following places to preach the word as God may assist and direct.
Poland, Me., Jan. 2d, 3d, and 4th, as the Brn. may see fit to appoint.
Portland, Me., Jan. 6th and 7th.

A. ROSS.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
New Britain, Sunday Jan. 8th.

C. GOODRICH.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Providence, Sunday Dec. 30th, and continue during the week and over the following Sabbath.

S. G. MATHEWSON.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Middletown, Friday eve, Jan 4, and continue over the Sabbath.
Should the above appointments conflict with other arrangements, Brn. will please write me at Boston.

J. W. CRABTREE.

Notices.

☞ Advent brethren hold regular meetings every Sabbath in the Chapel on Spring Street; also on Tuesday and Friday evenings. In giving out appointments, Brn. will please to name the place, as there are two meetings held in this city.

For the Brethren,

THOMAS N. PALMER.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 19th, 1855.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor, for sale at this Office. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The above works by Eld. Z. Campbell, are for sale at this Office.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts	"	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts	"	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts	"	3 " "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 cts	"	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 cts	"	1,50 "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts	"	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts	"	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 cts	"	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts	"	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts	"	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts	"	1,50 " "
Voice of the Church $1		"	9 " doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.
Address orders with the cash to
H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.
☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and by O. Hart, Concord, N. H., and D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

☞ Br. J. K. Bellows, your communication is received.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is [illegible] Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is [illegible]ville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is [illegible], Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is [illegible], Mass. His Telegraphic address is [illegible] Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

A friend $3,00, A friend $1,50. Whole amount paid, $[illegible].

W Jackson, P J King, [illegible], [illegible], D Carr, J Gibson, [illegible], [illegible], D Hoskins, R Wakefield, M Young, [illegible], S L Searle, E Miller, C Boutwell, [illegible], W Chase, N Clark, A Hamilton, [illegible], S C Berry, P M Berry, $1 each.

A D Street, M Hudson, [illegible], 50 cents each.

For the Poor—J C Pettingill, 50 cents.

For The Crisis.

Hymn.

Tune—"My boat lies on the other shore."

Look at the nations now arrayed
With all the forces they can bring,
To fight against the Lamb once slain,
Our glorious and immortal King!

Chorus—
Then come, Lord, come, we need not fear,
Our home lies on bright Canaan's shore,
We only want our Savior dear,
And we'll live there forevermore.

But He will overcome them all—
He'll make His righteous sceptre known,
He'll crown His chosen, faithful, called,
Within their bright and heavenly home.
Chorus—Then come, &c.

The Lord will come on earth to reign.
He'll rule all nations with His rod,
And earth through all her bright domain,
Love and obey the living God.
Chorus—Then come, &c.

Then haste the day, the glorious sound
That falls upon each pilgrim's ear,
When Christ shall break the kingdoms down
And wipe away our every tear.
Chorus—Then come, &c.

We soon shall reach our Eden home,
Our trials then will all be o'er,
The Lord will reign on David's throne,
Forever and forevermore!
Chorus—Then come, &c.

Great Falls, N. H. J. B.

For The Crisis.

Pilgrim, cease to mourn.

By S. S Brewer.

Pilgrim, cease to mourn,
Suppress thy rising grief;
For soon the blissful morn
Will bring thee sweet relief.
Thy sorrows then shall end,
In that auspicious day;
Then let thy prayers ascend,
Keep still the narrow way.

Ye heralds, lift your voice,
And keep your armor bright;
Redemption's near—rejoice!
Arm! to defend the right!
The watchmen slumber round,
In silence hushed and deep,
Entranced in sleep profound,
Fatal, delusive sleep!

Arise! the day draws near,
The night is almost gone;
Poor Pilgrim, dry each tear,
And hail the festal morn,

When Zion's hosts shall come
To Beulah's blissful plain,
And gain their long-sought home,
Immortal there to reign!

For The Crisis.

The wicked not immortal; or the immortality of the soul disproved by Bible truth.

A lecture delivered by P. Tandy, Sept. 30, at Mill Village, Goshen N. H.

(Concluded.)

In drawing our subject to a close, we beg leave to remark, that one of the most striking characteristics of man, in the present state, is a universal tendency to decay.—In the earliest period of our existence this is manifest; but more abundantly is this seen in succeeding stages of life. Having passed the meridian, decay arrests us in a thousand forms, and with irresistible power! Our limbs gradually stiffen; the powers and faculties of body and mind lose their vigor, activity and strength; our health declines; pains multiply; feebleness and languor lay hold of the system; and death finally drags us into the tomb, where we are changed into corruption and dust. But it was not so in the beginning. Man was made pure, having no seeds of corruption or decay in him—so that he might have lived forever.

Secondly: we remark; man lost a right to the tree of life, by the fall; if he had eaten of it, he would have secured to himself immortality; which would have secured to him also eternity of existence and dominion. For immortality means no more nor less than "not subject to death." Did man eat of the tree of Life either before, or after he sinned? I answer, he did not. For proof, see Gen. 3: 22-24. "And the Lord God said, behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever; therefore, the Lord God sent him forth from the garden, * * * and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword, which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of Life." It seems to us, that there could be no propriety in the use of the word "ALSO," had he (man) partaken of it, (tree of Life,) before he sinned. That he did not afterwards is certain, for God guarded the tree in such a way, that access to it was rendered impossible. Therefore, neither Adam nor Eve ever ate of the tree of Life!—Had he eaten of the tree of life after he sinned, he would have lived forever.—Surely, then, had he eaten of it before he sinned, he would never have died—no, never! Positively, then, he never did eat of it; consequently then, he did not, and and does not now possess immortality.—The whole nominal Church may declare it to be so, but it is all in vain. God's word declares such a theory to be false! "The soul that sinneth, it (the soul) shall die." Again, we remark; we are from him: the stream cannot rise higher than the fountain; of course, immortality is not inherent in us. How, then, are we to get immortality? I answer, by Jesus Christ, the second Adam, who came and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel. We are to seek for it "by patient continuance in well doing." To all such, it will be given at the sounding of the last trump, when Jesus shall come to judge the world in righteousness, and reward every one according as his works shall be.

In proof of this position, we will now examine all the passages where this doctrine is directly taught. 2 Tim. 1: 10.—"But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." We see, then, that Christ has actually brought it within our reach, through the Gospel. Rom. 2: 6, 7, will show us how we may obtain immortality. "God will render to every man according to his deeds; to them who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, honor, and immortality, (he will render or give—Macknight's Trans.,) eternal life." How are we to obtain immortality? Let God testify. He says, it is by patient continuance in well doing. Is it consistent for us to believe that God requires us to seek for that which we already possess? Surely not. Can any wicked man get immortality on such terms? Impossible! For, "a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit." 1 Tim. 6: 16. "Who, (God) only hath immortality." (Please to read the whole verse.) What can be plainer than this positive declaration of God's own word? Yet we are told, right in the face of this Bible fact, that not only has God immortality, but that all men have it also!! How absurd!!!

1 Cor. 15: 52-54, shows us when those who have sought for immortality in the right way, will obtain it; which is at the last trump, when death is swallowed up in victory! Then shall "this mortal put on immortality." These are all the plain and positive Scriptures on the subject of immortality, none of which teach that man, or any part of him is immortal, but every passage is contradictory to the theory of man's natural immortality. Then, how astonishing it is, that such a doctrine should have been received by the professed people of God! And what a perfect fulfilment of the predicted state of the Church as a sign of the last days. "They shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." And here is one that contradicts every plain declaration of the word, and without one to favor it. From the frequent use of the terms, "immortal beings, immortal souls," &c., one would suppose the Bible filled with them; but on careful examination we find the word immortal used but once, and then applied to God. 1 Tim. 1: 17. "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God," &c. When God speaks of man, he calls him mortal. Job 4: 17. "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" thus harmonizing with the declaration, "God only hath immortality." I do not wonder that the reformers, with Martin Luther at their head, pronounced the doctrine of the immortality of the soul a "monstrous opinion." Luther once said, "I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful; such as that he is emperor of the world—king of heaven—and God upon earth—that the soul is immortal, with all these monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals."

In closing, we remark, that the origin of the doctrine of immortality is given by Gibbon thus: "Since the introduction of the Greek, or Chaldean philosophy, the Jews were persuaded of the pre-existence, transmigration, and immortality of souls." Standing as we do on that same platform, in consequence of which, the early Protestants were hunted like the beasts of the forests, a degree of the same spirit is manifested towards the Adventists at the present time; so that it is hardly thought fitting, or safe, by some, that they be admitted into sectarian pulpits, or be recognized by a certain class, as the humble followers of Christ. It is not so with the Captain of our salvation—He is no respecter of persons; for all that fear God and work righteousness are accepted of Him. The Roman practice of the invocation of the saints, is entirely based upon the doctrine of immortality; and the same is true of their purgatory.

The support of the Catholic system depends much on their prayers and mass for the dead; so that the doctrine of immortality is the corner stone of the abomination that has made desolate the Church of God! The system of Swedenborg is also based upon the same idea. Universal salvation leans much, if not wholly on the false and unscriptural notion that all men possess immortality. The rapping mania, which is sweeping over the civilized world as a strong delusion, sent upon all who reject the truth of Revelation, is founded in the same error of heathen philosophy! Thus we find, that instead of this principle, (the soul's natural immortality,) lying at the basis of true Christianity, it is the starting point of nearly every system of error and wild delusion! It is the main pillar of heathenism and idolatry, as well as of the anti-christain apostasy, and erroneous theories in the Protestant Church. Just let this single principle be knocked away, and a large proportion of heathen superstition and idolatrous worship falls to the ground; and the awful system of oppression under which the earth groans, follows in its train. So that I cannot, after a thorough investigation, regard the immortality system as one of the errors of this age, but as the great fundamental error in theology—the starting point of delusion!!!

Let me humbly say then, in conclusion, that man by sin was cut off from the tree of life—he was starving—dying. Christ comes—the bread of life—the feast is spread—hungry, perishing souls are invited, without money and without price—come, sinners, eat and live. If you stay away, you MUST DIE! Oh! my dear hearers who are needy of salvation, come to Christ and live; yea, live forever, and not die. Amen.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. Orson Ives.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—Let us "count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations; knowing this that the trial of our faith worketh patience." If we are reviled, reproached and despised for the position we have taken on time, nevertheless let us commit ourselves to Him who judgeth righteously, and continue in the pathway where he leads. Have we any reason to complain when we consider that the trials we experience are designed for the perfecting of our graces? Patience is one of the fruits of the Spirit; and we should let it have its perfect work, that we may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. O we need perfect faith, perfect patience, and perfect love. Then shall we have boldness in the day of Judgment. "Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Faith in trying circumstances justifies us, and being justified by faith, we have peace with God. We are satisfied that there will be an end, and our expectations shall not be cut off. The fulfilment of the prophecies proves to our minds the truth of Revelation. By a thorough examination we are confirmed in the truth, and in the hope of realizing our expectations. Yes; just as sure as the changes of government described in Daniel have taken place in harmony with the prophecies, just so sure those relating to the future will take place at the time appointed. Yes; the time has almost arrived in which we shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. His coming at the appointed time will be just as certain a reality, as that the sun and moon pursue their regular course through the skies. O how foolish and grovelling are the minds of those who believe that nothing uncommon can take place, because all things continue as they were from the beginning of Creation.—O what shame and confusion will cover them when they behold the injured and insulted Benefactor coming to take vengeance on the ungodly. "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth." "Yet a little while and the wicked shall not be." "Evil shall slay the wicked, and they that hate the righteous shall be desolate." Those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth and their inheritance shall be forever.

O it is desirable to have eternal life, and to see good days without any mixture of evil. Well it is the design of our heavenly Father that we should have such life and see such days, if we refrain our tongue from evil, and our lips from speaking guile, if we depart from evil and do good, seek peace and pursue it, and by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, honor and immortality. O what a glorious time awaits the faithful! They will rest from the tumult and turbulence of this sin-polluted earth. They will be clothed with the habiliments of heaven—even the righteousness of saints. Discord and strife, wars and tumults, will have no entrance there; but love will be the moving characteristic in all that heavenly region. No one will feel above holding fellowship with the humble and now despised followers of Jesus. And oh what a lovely dwelling place, in the midst of which shall be the throne of God and of the Lamb! There shall be no more curse. Here the curse is on the ground Thorns, thistles, and noxious weeds so infest it, as greatly to increase the toils of man. But there this curse will be removed; consequently such laborious cultivation will be dispensed with. What ever labors we have to perform will be a pleasurable, rather than a painful duty.—There will be no extremes of heat and cold, but the climate will be delightful, and everything shall retain the freshness of Eden beauty and loveliness. There shall be no sterile soil; for "the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing; the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon. They shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God." There shall be no famine, but the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely—the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase. The glory of the Lord shall dwell in every heart, and His praise on every tongue. "They shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the Lord." "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat; for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

Here everything is changeable and transitory; but there our inheritance will be incorruptible, undefiled, and shall never fade away. Here, life, health, beauty, and everything lovely fade away; but there,

"Eternal youth shall bloom,
And bright shall beam each eye."

The City of the great King shall be adorned with a wall of jasper, and gates of pearls, and the twelve foundations shall be of precious stones of various colors, blue, green, yellow, violet and purple. The street shall be of pure gold, and the name thereof shall be, "The Lord is there."

O then, if such a lovely paradise awaits the faithful, should we not give all diligence to make our calling and election sure? It becomes not the lowly followers of the Lamb to vaunt themselves; they must not be puffed up, or behave themselves unseemly. They should not think of themselves more highly than they ought to think. Let each esteem others better than themselves. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceit. Let the mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus, who made himself of no reputation, and took upon himself the form of a servant, wherefore God hath highly exalted him. Be thou humble also, and thou shalt be exalted in due time. Let us say with David, "I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes; I hate the work of them that turn aside; it shall not cleave to me. A froward heart shall depart from me; I will not know a wicked person." We must not associate with the wicked. They are dangerous company. "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Be not unequally yoked with them. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. What part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? For ye are the temple of the living God."

Sit not in the seat of the scornful, stand not in the way of sinners, walk not in the way of the ungodly, refrain thy foot from their path. Go from the presence of a man when thou perceivest not in him the lips of knowledge. Make no friendship with an angry man, and with a furious man thou shalt not go, lest thou learn his way and get a snare to thy soul. Walk with wise men. Be a companion of them that fear the Lord. Can you say, "my soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord. My heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God?" Can you say, "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in His temple?" Can you say, "A day in his courts is better than a thousand?"

Can you say, "O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee; my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land where no water is: To see thy power and glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary. Because thy loving kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee?" If we felt thus, I think there would not be much need of our being urged not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is? O let us be diligent, that we may be found of Him in peace.

Your unworthy Br. O. Ives.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. I. Ripley.

Pleasant Valley, Ct,
Dec. 24th, 1855.

It is not enough for us to believe that the wicked are to be destroyed, that the dead sleep, that the new heavens and earth are to be created, or that God gave His only begotten Son to die for us; that He rose from the dead, and a cloud received Him out of their sight, that He has gone to prepare mansions for those that love Him, that He has promised to return and receive such to Himself. This is not sufficient for us. While we have made these points of doctrine rallying points, many have neglected the practical, living part of Christianity, "these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the others undone."

We are commanded to be holy; for says the Apostle, "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." We should seek to be perfect even as our Father in Heaven is perfect. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." "who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him show out of a good conversation his works, with meekness of wisdom. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work." If we will be holy, if we will be perfect, let us bridle our tongues; talk less and pray more; "pray without ceasing; in every thing give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."

Therefore, Brn. and Srs., let us try by the grace of God to have our conversation in heaven from whence we look for our returning Lord. We are living in perilous times when iniquity is abounding and the love of many is waxing cold; they have laid down their watch. They have ceased to pray; their lamps have gone out; they have become worldly-minded. O what a lamentable state of things! Let us watch and pray lest we fall after the same example of unbelief. While we are forewarned in the Word of God of the apostasy in the Church in the last days, surely to us who have enjoyed such a flood of light, it ought to be a light-house to warn us of danger, instead of a stumbling-block, or an excuse for lethargy. Let us try to wake up, by the help of the Lord, the drowsy powers of our minds; to be holy as God who calleth us is holy, both in heart and in all manner of conversation. To be filled with bowels of mercies, kindness, meekness, gentleness, long-suffering; full of the work of faith, the patience of hope and the labor of love; and whatsoever we do in word or deed, let us do it in the name, and in the love and power of the Lord Jesus. Seek to be perfect men and women, to be sanctified throughout, to have a heart all-flaming with the love of God; that in every thought of our hearts, in every word of our tongues, in every work of our hands, we may show forth his praise, who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light, who hath set our feet in a large place; and we, by his all-sustaining grace, have been permitted to look for a kingdom where righteousness reigns, where all is peace and joy forever, and not a wave of trouble will roll across our peaceful breast. I love the home where all is fair, where all is peace, where all things bloom in immortal beauty, where there is no more death, but man, once fallen, now rescued, made immortal like our glorious King, can live forever.

Then we will sing unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father; to Him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen.

Yours, in hope,
William I. Ripley.

For The Crisis.

Letter from——

Dear Br. Merriam:—By your permission and the help of the Lord, I will say a few words to the scattered flock.

I felt sorry when I read the last editorial, to think that one religious paper could not be sustained without pecuniary embarrasment. Just look at the contrast!—Even in this county, there are three or four political papers, and one at least, that is styled neutral; yet a paper that advocates the simple truths of the Gospel, which circulates through many states, into Canada and Nova Scotia, cannot be supported, although its subscribers are those who profess to be daily expecting the coming of the Just One. Is it because Advent believers are all so very poor?—No; there is poverty enough in the Advent ranks, I am aware; but when time was agitated, they could sacrifice property. Why? Because they believed the Lord was coming at a certain time; but now that we do not know but it may be delayed a few years, they must hold on to their money. Sometimes it is true they who are worth their ten, fifteen, or twenty thousand dollars, give occasionally one, two, or three dollars, but why not sell that fine yoke of oxen which you do not need, and appropriate, say $100 to the support of the Crisis, for the benefit of that poor Br. who has to be deprived of it because it takes all his honest earnings to support his family these hard times, and he does not feel as though he wanted to beg. O ye who have this world's goods in abundance, even so that it becomes to yourself and families a snare, beware lest they drown you and some of yours in perdition. I know some who once bid fair for the kingdom, who now, it is to be feared, are fast being absorbed in the giddy rounds of fashion, partaking of what Br. Brewer styles the Devil's sugar coated pills. How hardly shall those that have riches enter into the Kingdom of God. Would it not be well for such to heed the command "sell that ye have and give alms," and thus do unto others as they would that they should do unto them.

Come, Brn. beloved, let us have one paper free from debt; and let those that have so give, that all God's poor may have the privilege of reading the Crisis, which is to me certainly a great treat. Oh Lord, prosper thy cause and sustain our Editor in his labors of love and all those connected with the Office.

From one who hopes soon to be where there will be no distinction of rich and poor, but all will be one in Christ Jesus.

Selected For the Crisis,

"I have nothing to give."

So said a church member when called upon for a contribution to missions.

"Nothing to give!" And yet he talked of the preciousness of the Gospel to his own soul; of the hopes he entertained of salvation through the blood-purchased provisions of the Gospel; but he has nothing to give to extend these joys and hopes to those whom he professes to love as himself.

"Nothing to give." Yet God is constant and munificent in His benefactions. Every day His treasure is opened, and fresh blessings freely dispensed. God never answers to the asking of His creatures, "I have nothing to give."

"Nothing to give!" And he wears decent apparel, lives in a comfortable house, sets a plentiful table, and seems to want for nothing necessary to insure the comfort of his family.

"Nothing to give!" And he sometimes attends the monthly concert, and prays that God will send the Gospel to the ends of the earth. He said many times during the year, "Thy kingdom come," and pretended that it was prayer. If dollars were as cheap as words, the treasury of benevolence would be full.—If Christians were as liberal with their purses as they are with their prayers, there would be no lack of means for sustaining the missionaries of the cross in every land.

I have nothing to give.! And the heathen are stretching out their hands in imploring petitions for the Bread of Life, and warm-hearted Christian ministers, and even Christian women, are standing upon the shores of our own land, looking across into the darkness and weeping for the means to carry them there that they may minister to the spiritual necessities of those perishing millions.

Nothing to give! That means, "The missionaries may stay at home or starve if they go, and the heathen may go to perdition, rather than I will part with any of my money for this relief."

Nothing to give! Then you ought specially to labor that you may earn something to give away. What, work at hard manual labor for the purpose of devoting the earnings to charity? Does not this savour of fanaticism? Presisely; the fanaticism of St. Paul. 'Let him labor, working with his own hands, the thing that is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth."

Divine Love. On one occasion, the Rev. Rowland Hill was endeavoring to convey to his hearers, by a variety of illustrations, some idea of his conceptions of the Divine love; but suddenly casting his eyes towards heaven, he exclaimed, "But I am unable to reach the lofty theme! Yet I do not think that the smallest fish that swims in the boundless ocean ever complains of the immeasurable vastness of the deep. So it is with me; I can plunge, with my puny capacity, into a subject the immensity of which I shall never be able fully to comprehend"

Inquisitive people are the funnels of conversation; they do not take anything for their own use, but merely to pass it to another.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, (COURIER BUILDING,) } ISSUED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. { NO. 27 CENTRAL STREET, (UP STAIRS.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1856. VOLUME 2.—NUMBER 22.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,
PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE SPEEDY COMING OF JESUS CHRIST.

S. J. VARNEY, Printer, . . . 27 Central St.

TERMS of Subscription to be PAID in ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months,	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months,	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months,	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months,	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	14,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	18,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Lowell, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS, J. COUCH, M. GRANT, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publications write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelop.

For The Crisis.

'I will bring distress upon men; and they shall walk like blind men.' Bible.

BY S. S. B.

No. 5.

Having in our last concluded our remarks on the Protestant churches, we will now take a brief view of the Greek Church, of which one writer observes:—"Since the Greeks became subject to the Turkish yoke they have sunk into the most deplorable ignorance in consequence of the slavery and thraldom under which they groan, and their religion is now greatly corrupted. It is indeed little better than a heap of ridiculous ceremonies and absurdities."

The head of the Greek Church is the Patriarch of Constantinople who is chosen by the neighboring archbishops and metropolitans and confirmed by the Emperor or Grand Vizier. He is a person of great dignity, being the head and director of the Eastern Church. The other patriarchs are those of Jerusalem, Antioch and Alaxandria. Mr. Tournefort tells us that the patriarchates are now set to sale and bestowed upon those who are generally the highest bidders.

It embraces in its bosom a considerable part of Greece, the Grecian Isles, Wallachia, Moldavia, Egypt, Abyssinia, Nubia, Libya, Arabia, Mesopotamia, Syria, Cilicia and Palestine. If to these we add the whole of the Russian Empire in Europe, great part of Siberia in Asia, Astracan, Casan and Georgia, it will be evident that the Greek Church has a wider extent of teritory than the Latin."

THE ASTONISHING change that has come over the creeds, constitutions and institutions of Europe within a few years, cannot be better illustrated than by reference to the Russian Catechism, published by imperial order in 1832, for the use of the Schools and Churches in the Polish provinces of Russia. The whole catechism may be found in the 50th number of the New York Sun, Oct. 30th, 1833, from which we extract a few questions and answers.

"Ques. How is the authority of the Emperor to be considered in reference to the spirit of Christianity?

Ans. As proceeding immediately from God.

Ques. How is this substantiated by the nature of things?

Ans. As it is by the will of God that men live in society; hence the various relations that constitute society, which, for its more complete security, is divided into parts called nations; the government of which is entrusted to a Prince, King or Emperor, or, in other words to a Supreme ruler: we see then as men exist in conformity to the will of God, society emanates from the same divine will, and more especially the Supreme power and authority of our Lord and Master the Czar.

Ques. What does religion teach us the humble subjects of his Majesty, the Emperor?

Ans. Worship, obedience, fidelity, the payment of Taxes etc., the whole being comprised in worship and fidelity.

What kind of an obedience do we owe him?

Ans. An entire, passive and unbounded obedience in every point of view.

Ques. How should our worship be manifested?

Ans. By the most unqualified reverence in words, gestures, demeanor, thoughts and actions.

Ques. Is it obligatory on us to pay taxes to our gracious sovereign?

Ans. It is incumbent on us to pay every tax, in compliance with his Supreme commands.

Ques. Is the service of the Emperor obligatory on us?

Ans. Absolutely so; we should, if required, sacrifice ourselves in whatever manner he deems expedient.

Ques. Is it incumbent on us to pray for the Emperor?

Ans. Both publicly and privately; also for the country, which is an indivisible part of the Emperor.

Ques. Does religion forbid us to rebel and overthrow the Government of the Emperor?

Ans. We are interdicted from so doing at all times, and under any circumstances.

Ques. What books prescribe these duties?

Ans. The New and Old Testaments, particularly the Psalms, Gospels, and Apostolic Epistles

Ques. What examples confirm this doctrine?

Ans. The example of Jesus Christ himself, who lived and died in allegiance to the Emperor of Rome, and who respectfully submitted to the judgment which condemned him to death. We have moreover, the examples of the Apostles, who suffered meekly in dungeons conformably to the will of the Emperor, and did not revolt like malefactors and traitors. We must therefore, in imitation of these examples, suffer and be silent."

Such is a portion of the blasphemous king-creed of Russia fifteen years ago, being in fact, only a part and parcel of the common doctrine of the Divine right of kings preached and practised for ages all over Europe, and upheld by those associate monsters, a corrupt Church, and Tyrant state. They are part of the creed by which kings, nobles and priests, have absorbed the glory of the earth and trampled upon and desolated mankind, rearing upon its dictum, their stakes, gibbets, inquisitions, and Holy alliances, pledged to strangle every aspiration of the human race for freedom, sanctioning their bloody horrors by an appeal to the will and word of God.

Poor Poland! such was the impious catechism placed in the hands of her children, to teach them obedience to the wretches who had murdered their fathers, partitioned their nation, and bound the despot's fetter on their own limbs and hearts. Nor was it worse than the will if not the word of the Imperials of Austria and the balance of Europe, at earlier dates. Thank heaven, Poland has studied other lessons than Russian and Austrian catechisms since 1832, and if any portion of Europe now stoops to odious bondage, it is through the force of armed legions of Cossacks, Pandours and Hussars, to whose sabre points, instead of impious catechisms, the despicable tyrants look for momentary safety.

Is it possible that the millions of this earth, to whom God, through nature and the common desire of human souls, has eternally preached freedom, plenty, and happiness, have for ages laid stricken and dumb in the dust without discovering and casting off this horrible fraud, to which the name of God and our Savior have been attached, as sanctions? History avows it! But the game of this impious craft is over. On the pyre of thrones, dungeons and fetters, which the awakening and indignant world is raising, these monsters of men, creeds and institutions, are to be offered up in expiatory sacrifice to insulted God and outraged humanity. Horribly sickening is the history of man's servitude and suffering under the tyrants of the past—brightening is his history in the present, and beautiful, oh! beautiful, is his vision of the future.

With a few extracts from documents in my possession in regard to the Greek Christian's war spirit, I will close on this truly dark portion of the professed Church of the meek and lowly one who went about doing good.

From a proclamation issued at the time of the revolution in Greece in 1854, I make the following extracts. "Our struggle is a holy and just one; and no one, when he considers the height of oppression to which we have been subjected, and the rights of nations, will ever utter a word against us, or in favor of our enemies and the Crescent that shines on our temples.

"Hasten then, brethren, to the common struggle; shake off the hated yoke of tyranny, and proclaim with us in the presence of God and all the world, that we fight for our country, and that God is the Defender of Christians. * * * Under the eye of the All-seeing God, we confidently rush into the midst of the danger, either to obtain our liberty, or to meet a glorious end. * * * And lastly we would appeal to you, oh private Ottomans inhabiting the country of our fathers: peace be with you. If you join us against the dynasty, you will enjoy in common with us, liberty, equality, honor, and personal safety. Your progress, your happiness, and your prosperity will be our first care—it will be our chief delight.—At the same time we forewarn you, that if you take up arms and oppress our holy struggle, we will be to you panthers and tigers. Your blood will stain the rivers, and cover the fields. Fire and iron will be the portion of your bodies, your houses, your cities, and your country!" Such are the mercies of their holy cause.

The late Emperor Nicholas, who died a rigid Greek religionist, when he heard the Sultan had declared war, fell into a passion, and swore he would wage a war of extermination against the Turks. The song of the Russian warriors who are Greeks, concludes with the following invocation:—

"Burst forth, then, holy war. Let our cry—the precursor of victory—be raised. That cry is, All for the God of Russia—for the Czar of the Russians."

Another article from the Boston Post states that when Nicholas heard of the destruction of Sinope, there was sung a Te Deum, which is a hymn of joy, on which occasion the Journal de St. Petersburg states—"The most pious Czar thanked the Lord of lords for the success of the Russian arms which had triumphed in the sacred combat for the orthodox faith." What a perversion of the term, "orthodox faith," which, according to Webster's definition of orthodoxy, is "soundness in faith; a belief in the genuine doctrines taught in the Scriptures." We will follow this orthodox faith of the Greeks a little farther in addition to the impious demands of his majesty set forth in the extracts of the catechism above.

He has sent his Bishops into the field of battle where blood and carnage are the order of the day, to inspire the infatuated soldiers with wrath, vengeance and fury. There is nothing probably in this world that will enkindle such feelings of detestation in the hearts of a misguided class of zealots as an impression that they are doing God service.

I will insert an extract from an article of Dr. Davega who has been to the Crimea, and recently returned to this country. He states as follows:—"In common with the soldiers they believe that they cannot be defeated, and are determined on fighting for every inch of ground in the Crimea before they give it up.

"The religious enthusiasm of the soldiers is kept up by the Greek Priests of whom there are a large number in the camp and who inspire them with an idea that they are engaged in a crusade against the Infidels. Every address issued by the Emperor is received by them with the greatest enthusiasm, and incites them to the most reckless deeds of daring and bravery." With an army inspired by such feelings, what cruelty will they not perpetrate? and what danger will they not dare? And all for the Greek religion.—Truly it is a Greek and Russian religion, as far from the religion of Christ and His Gospel, as Calvary is from the Roman Catholic Inquisition. Truly they are blind; and because they have sinned against God, they now walk like blind men. Take an instance of blind infatuation during the Hungarian war. It presents a striking example of fanaticism; and shows to what extremes those who become the dupes of designing men can be carried under the impression of religion.

"GEN. BEM AND SUPERSTITION. In Gallicia the sympathy for the Magyar cause was on the increase, more especially for Gen. Bem; and the clergy were at work—not on the nobility, for that was superstitious—but on the people, both in town and country. Superstition was called in as an auxiliary agent—such as little portraits of Bem pressing the Virgin Mary to his heart; prayers, for instance, Bem's orison and his battle prayer, were circulated by thousands among the peasantry, and marvellous tales of miracles pass from mouth to mouth; thus, Father Bem had been judged worthy of a special revelation from heaven, commanding him to build a church in Warsaw. All this has an incredible effect upon the people, and the inhabitants of Gallicia were beginning to regard the war against Russia as a religious war against the infidels."

Truly the Greek tares are ripe for the harvest and bound tightly together with the bands of Greek superstition; and the Angel will soon thrust in his sickle and reap—prepare for the harvest.

I will close this number with the following article extracted from a lecture of John Cumming delivered in 1817.

"A PREDICTION OF THE PRESENT WAR. John Cumming, of the Scotch Church, London, in a lecture delivered in Exeter Hall in the year 1847, pronounced among other matters, the prophetic words written below. They are copied from his 'Apocalypic Sketches:'

'Having explained the pouring out of the six preceding vials, the learned lecturer proceeds with the seventh—his text is Rev. 16: 17-21.

'The seventh vial is ready to be poured out, or if not already pouring we are upon the very verge of its being so. It trembles in the hands of the angel. We may expect that during the action of this vial, the mountaineer in the fastnesses—the miner in his subterranean caves—the voyager upon the ocean's bosom—the Arab in his desert—the Moslem in his mosque—the Cossack in his Steppes—the King upon his throne—the mother in her household—the babe in the cradle—all will feel its vibrations, receive the taint of its influence, and respond in a thousand echoes to the voice from above, 'It is done.'

'There will be rocking thrones; there will be subverted dynasties; there will be dislocated systems; there will be nations scattered and shaken as by a whirlwind; and the hearts of the great and the mean, the rich and the poor, trembling for fear of the things coming upon the earth.

'Now you will notice that under the seventh vial the ten kingdom form is no longer to be the distinctive characteristic of the Romish nations; they are to assume a new shape—they will be divided into a tripartite shape; three great masses will be the ultimate form into which all the nations of Europe and Christendom will be divided; as soon as you see the great leading powers coming into collision, with broad Europe for the battle field, and the evening of the world for the hour of the conflict, you may expect that the downfall of Babylon, and the Advent of Christ, and the dawn of the millenium are near.

'It is probable that this tripartite division will consist of France leading its hosts upon the one side, as the great partisan of the Papacy; the Autocrat of all the Russias, who has more than once played a cruel game, may lead the second part; and I have some idea that this old England of ours, so illustrious by its sainted sufferers, its noble army of martyrs, its devoted Christians, its preached Gospel, its spreading Christianity, its circulated Bibles, will also be the third part; and when the conflict comes, it will be as of old, England against the world, the truth of God against the apostasy of Satan and the infidelity of man."

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

"Our Father which art in Heaven." Matt. 6: 9.

Who is "our Father?" and who are we that thus claim the relation of children?

Our Father. His dwelling place is heaven—"which art in heaven." Jesus came down from heaven. He says, John 6: 38, "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."

The FATHER sent Jesus, (v. 39,) and the Father which sent Him is GOD. V. 27. "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you; for him hath GOD THE FATHER sealed." V. 33. "For the bread of GOD is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world." Therefore, "Our Father," to whom we pray "Thy kingdom come," is God; even the "God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." Blessed be His glorious name.

Our Father is GOOD. The Lord is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works." Ps. 145: 9. "For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations." Ps. 100: 5. "The Lord is good, a strong hold in the day of trouble; and he knoweth them that trust in him." Neh. 1: 7. Jesus "said unto him, why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God." Matt. 19: 17. This declaration of our Savior I understand in the same way as Paul's, 1 Tim. 6: 16. "Who only hath immortality"—that is, absolutely, independently, there is none good, none hath immortality but God, whom we are permitted to call "our Father." (Compare with Matt. 12: 35; and Luke 20: 36.)

"Our Father" is merciful and gracious. "And the Lord passed by before him, and proclaimed, The Lord, The Lord God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth." Ex. 34: 6. He is "long-suffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression; but He is also a jealous God, "by no means clearing the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generations." Num. 14: 18.

"The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.—He will not always chide; neither will he keep his anger for ever. He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities. For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him." Ps. 103: 8.

"Our Father" is great. "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and his greatness is unsearchable." Ps. 145: 8. "Great is our Lord, and of great power; his understanding is infinite." Ps. 147: 5. "For the Lord is great, and greatly to be praised: he is to be feared above all gods." Ps. 96: 4.

"Our Father" is a King. "The Lord is King forever and ever." Ps. 10: 16. "The Lord reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the Lord is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself; the world also is established, that it cannot be moved. Thy throne is established of old; thou art from everlasting." Ps. 93: 1-2. "But the Lord is the true God, He is the living God, and an everlasting King: (a King of eternity, Marg.) at his wrath the earth shall tremble, and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation."—Jer. 10: 10 "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen." 1 Tim. 1: 17. "Forasmuch as there is none like unto thee, O Lord; thou art great, and thy name is great in might: who would not fear thee, O King of nations? for to thee doth it appertain: forasmuch as among all the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is none like unto thee." Jer 10: 67.

R. W.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. R. E. Wood.

CHESHIRE, Dec. 26th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—We are still in the land of the dying—under the usurped authority of the enemy, amidst pain and sorrow, distress and death. I often exclaim in the fulness of my soul, when will the time come that death shall be destroyed? When will Jesus, the Mighty Conqueror, the glorious Life-Giver, come and destroy death and him that had its power, that is, the devil, and give life to those who are sleeping—who are to have immortality in the kingdom of God?

Truly, this sad, dreary earth has no charms for me. I feel like a poor, way-worn traveler, sad and lonely; a pilgrim and stranger in a strange land. I am surrounded by trials deep, and afflictions most severe. But I remember it is through much tribulation we enter into the kingdom. I have reason to fear that I am a very stubborn child, I need so much correction; but it affords me some comfort that I am not disowned; and by the rich grace of my Heavenly Father, I will endure chastisement as a faithful soldier of the cross.

The school of the cross is the school of light; and there must all the children of God be taught, to perfect them for glory.

The troubles and trials of the saints shall never sink them, but keep them from being capsized by every squall, that they may arrive with safety at the haven of rest, having their anchor fixed within the vail. Every traveler to the kingdom of God has pursued his way through the thorny path of affliction. Why should I complain of the rugged roads, the stormy days and dark nights that distress me in my pilgrimage, seeing that when I shall see things in the light of the glory of God, I shall approve of all. I should welcome whatever may loose me from this world, and bring me nearer to God.

I do rejoice that the dust of the lovely sleepers in Jesus, is held sacred in the eyes of our blessed Lord, that the Angels have a watchful care and charge over them, and they will soon be sent to gather them from every nook and corner of the earth. There will not one be left behind, praise the Lord.

I do long and pray and wait, with heavenly anticipation, for that time to come.

I am glad that I have the witness that I am an heir of God, a candidate for glory, and am waiting for Him who shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation;—and that I am hastening unto the day of the Lord, and crying, "Why is His chariot so long in coming? Why tarry the wheels of His chariot?" When shall I behold Him in all His glory, and see Him without a dimming vail, who is altogether lovely?

When shall my soul be revived with the Rose of Sharon in the Paradise of God? When shall I sit down with delight under the shadow of the Tree of life, the plant of renown, and eat of the immortalizing fruit, and drink of the refined wine?

When shall I join my songs with the anthems of the redeemed, and mingle my grateful notes with all the ransomed round the throne? When, O! when? Glory to God;—when Jesus comes.

There will be no parting of friends, no death, no funeral processions, nor charnel house. Praise the Lord, I long to reach that blessed home.

Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Amen.

RELIANCE E. WOOD.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. S. H. Waldron.

PORTLAND, Dec. 10th, 1855.

Dearly Beloved Br. Merriam:—As Br. Couch in behalf of the publishing Committee, has addressed an appeal to the Advent body, it becomes us cheerfully and speedily to respond to his call, by remitting to the Office of the Crisis our honest dues according to our several ability, that we may, if possible owe no man, or set of men, anything when the Lord comes to make up His jewels, and reward us according to our deeds, whether they be good or bad. I must confess that I was as remiss, perhaps, as almost any one, while receiving your paper gratuitously, but as the proverb still holds true, "it is never too late to do good," I will let the past suffice, and try to improve this golden opportunity, and the short remaining future more to the honor and glory of God. As the smallest favors are gratefully received among Adventists, I enclose my mite in this letter, which is all that I have to spare at present. But should we come short of meeting this demand upon the Office, I feel willing to do what little more I can, rather than the Committee should pay the bill, which I trust will not be the case. I wish I were able to pay this debt and also meet all other honorable demands upon honest Brn. and Srs. if I could have a heart so to do. But rather than [illegible] such a dangerous position, with all its attending consequences, I can truly say, let me remain poor as I am.

While writing this, my poor heart is made sad by sudden sickness in my family, which is not the first calamity we have suffered. I have passed through numerous trials and afflictions, have lost two dear children, and a beloved [illegible]

sister. Nevertheless, I can but rejoice amid all this; for they fell asleep in Jesus and of necessity must awake with His likeness when the seventh trumpet sounds, hallelujah to the Lamb. O the resurrection sounds sweet to the Christian's ear, and still sweeter because it is so soon to transpire. We are yet poor, mortal beings, and therefore know not what a day may bring forth.

If unprepared for the judgment at death, we shall certainly remain so; for "if the tree falleth toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be." But, thank God, we shall not all sleep; for some of us will remain unto the coming of the blessed Lord, and be "caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Your unworthy Br. in tribulation still looking and waiting for the literal second Advent of the Son of Man at the end of the days,

SILAS H. WALDRON.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, JAN. 12, 1856.

Hungary.

Since the fall of Hungary one would have supposed that the energies of that people must have been paralyzed under the withering, blighting influences of a tyrannical government with which the nation is oppressed; but it would seem no calamities whatever can break the spirit and subdue the uprising aspirations of the Magyar race. There is something excessively touching to the sympathies of our nature to see an oppressed and brave people struggling under misfortune and calamities enough to appal the stoutest heart—to witness their self-sacrificing spirit and love for their native country which many waters cannot quench nor floods drown. A good example this for the Christian's imitation.

It is indeed wonderful that when the nation lies torn, mangled and bleeding at every pore through the galling chains and fetters of national bondage—to see them still cherish the hope of a brighter day, and maintain an inflexible determination to do what lies in their power for the restoration of their country to the rights and immunities of free civil and religious institutions.

In reading some extracts from the "scrap-book of a Magyar exile," I find the people of Hungary so far from abandoning all hope and sinking into inaction and despair since the failure of their revolutionary struggle, have attempted to instruct the rising generation in the principles of liberty, in order that they may arise when circumstances shall pave the way and assert the independence of the nation.

Some of the principal teachers (ladies of high rank) have been arrested and imprisoned.

Thus we perceive the hand of God in the movements of the nations preparing the way for the sublime scenes that are soon to be ushered in.

We extract the following:—

"All these and more such signs convinced the Hapsburgs that the sword is insufficient to do their business. So they called on the Cross, and signed the Concordat. The Jesuits are now expected to accomplish what the Court-martials could not do. The Emperor of Austria has, as Faust to Mephistopheles, sold himself to the Pope, in exchange for the darkness and ignorantism, perversion and persecution, intolerance and fanaticism, which the dark messengers of the Roman temple of gross superstition and priestly despotism will be ordered to take to, and spread, plague-like, over the dominions of the House of Austria. There are days of hard trial, of a novel sort, in store for my country, but the nation of the Magyars will know how to brave them. So I do not feel the least anxiety about the ultimate moral results of the compact between Beelzebub and Moloch to corrupt my countrymen—though I grieve in foreseeing the tortures and losses they will have to suffer at the hands of the newly-patented inquisitors.

"Countess Blanche Teleki, (a distinguished teacher,) is now in Spielberg—it may be in the very cell in which Silvio Pellico was brooding over his Prigioni.—Her loss was, as it may be fancied, keenly felt by the whole Hungary, and the public sorrow over her sad fate was manifested in various ways."

Typographical.

In our last there were some typographical errors in the Editorial article, particularly the omission of part of the following verse. "But his flesh upon him shall have pain; and his soul within him shall mourn;" contained in the third paragraph from the bottom of the first column, second page.

For The Crisis.

Envy.

By B. MATHEWSON.

Says Cruden, "ENVY is an evil affection which makes men fret and grieve at the prosperity of another—accompanied by a malicious desire," and is, as he further remarks, "a deep pollution of the spirit."

It is not to be presumed that many, if indeed any, will peruse this humble effusion, whose hearts are matured in this detestable affection—bearing such a marked affinity to the spirit of darkness; therefore it is not to this class so particularly we speak, as to those who retain a desire for salvation—but possess so moderate a share of this bane of godliness as scarcely to perceive that what caused that sigh and sombre expression was envy in the incipient stage!

Webster defines envy thus: "To feel uneasiness, mortification, or discontent, at the sight of superior excellencies, reputation or happiness enjoyed by another; to repine at another's prosperity; to fret or grieve yourself at the real or supposed superiority of another—to hate him on that account."

Says Pollock:

"What made the man of envy what he was,
Was worth in others, vileness in himself,
* * * * ——Whene'er he heard
As oft he did, of joy and happiness,
And great prosperity, and rising worth,
'Twas like a wave of wormwood o'er his soul,
Rolling its bitterness."

Professing Christian, did you ever feel a little uneasiness when you saw one of your fellows possessed of superior talents that gained for him much love and respect? When you have beheld one possessed of superior personal accomplishments, or more splendid equipage, than yourself, have you never expressed by word, or look, or gesture, a hint to his disparagement? Or have you not, when occasion made it proper to speak of the virtues and talents of another, maintained a strict silence, because you felt regret at such rising worth? If so, you are in danger! for the monster envy has found a lurking place in some secret recess of the heart! though in embryo—rest assured it is there—and if suffered to remain will become a hydra-headed monster baffling human power though it be a Hercules!! How different from the Gospel sympathy we are taught to cherish by the Word of God, Rom. 12: 15. "Rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." The envious heart reverses this Scripture, rejoicing at anothers' tears and feeling sorrow at anothers' joy!

Paul prayed to be "delivered from unreasonable men." And what crime in sin's catalogue is more unreasonable than Envy? How perfectly unreasonable and serpent-like, to use any means to abuse another because you fancy him happier than yourself. To conceive ill will against one who has attacked none of our rights, nor done us any injury solely because he is mere prosperous or happier than yourself, is, as one remarks, "unnatural." Yes it is diabolical. Such an one is to be avoided with all cautiousness; for, as the wise man inquires, "who is able to stand before envy?"

One good writer observes that "this sin is universally admitted to be one of the blackest of the human heart."

How painful to be in the society of those who feel disquietude at the happiness of others! Converse with them of achieving sufficient victory over the world to make one happy in view of eternal life and joys—they are almost sure to point out the favorableness of your situation to the enjoyment of piety, compared with their own. But they—poor creatures! have not enough of creature comforts, &c., to serve God! forgetting that God has chosen his people in the furnace of affliction. They are not content with the place which the providence of God has called them to occupy—have not learned Paul's lesson of contentment in Phil. 9: 11, would be incredulous of the truth of Thomas A. Kempis' statement when one interrogated him thus:—

"O where is peace; for thou its paths have trod?

He answers,

"In poverty, retirement, and with God."

Sometimes unworthiness is urged as an excuse for not rejoicing at the comforts of others. It is indeed true that one may be very sinful and possess beauty, talent, riches; and partake of sumptuous fare every day; but Our Father will adjust that matter when the day of settlement arrives. Meantime we should take due care to observe the command He has taken pains to repeat again and again to us: "Be not thou envious against evil men." David confesses having once been overtaken in this fault while beholding the prosperity, riches, and ease of the wicked.—But on visiting God's Sanctuary he is soon convinced of his folly, and immediately humbles himself, making use of the following language to show the debasing influence of this sin. "So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast before thee." Ps. 73: 22. Please read the whole Psalm.

It is the height of folly to envy those who are having all their good things in this life. Their happiness is of a superficial kind and evanescent as a dream!

Do not envy that happiness caused by possessing the shining bubbles of this sin-cursed earth—they will soon burst in the air—and no place be found for them.—Would you wrest those pretty pebbles from the child incapable of enjoying higher objects? No, you would say, let him derive what satisfaction those will yield until I, by care and the blessing of kind Providence, can elevate and expand his mind to enjoy what reason and virtue dictate.

O do not envy the worldlings; for soon our Father will take away the kingdoms of this world from them and when clensed present the precious boon to His own little flock. Jehovah is the Administrator on the estate of the saints!

Bless His holy name—I have no misgivings but that it will be righteously adjusted. When the heirs are a little more matured, they will come into possession of the Kingdom under the whole heavens!

But perhaps my Brn. and Srs. possess more talent and earthly comforts than myself! And perhaps it is altogether best they should! Remember that "all things work together for good to them that love God." Suffer me to enquire whether they transcend Gospel limits in indulging in "costly array," extravagant and unnecessary furniture, &c., just to gratify the lust of the eye? If so, go to them with the meekness of Christ, and urge the claims of the Gospel upon them. But do not accuse unless the word of God accuses—work in harmony with that, and all will be well.

One envious spirit will destroy the happiness of the domestic circle! here is where the monster envy first nestled!—Cain sees his brother peculiarly blessed of heaven—enjoying that peace and quiet assurance which is the effect of righteousness—his envy knows no bounds until he terminates that happiness by imbruing his hands in his brother's blood! Another tragical scene caused by envy, destroyed the happiness of Jacob's family. Because the beautiful and virtuous Joseph was favored a little more than themselves, his brethren conceived the dreadful idea of putting him to death!

But perhaps there is no place where envy has a more pernicious influence than in the Church of God. If it take possession of one member, the injurious influence is felt by the whole body. The word of God informs us that "envy is the rottenness of the bones." Prov. 19: 30. Just think of the situation of one whose bones are putrid! And yet Inspiration never overrates in making comparisons. Therefore envy should excite as much dread in the Church as the putrefaction of the bones to their possessor.—The idea is, everything connected with such a body will be affected with disease terminating only in death.

When God saw this fatal malady taking deep root in the Church in the wilderness, He probably saw no remedy except by excision! However painful it may be, the dissecting knife must sometimes be used, if a portion of the body is saved.

Moses is appointed by God as a leader, and though characterized by a meekness superior to any other mortal, he is accused by a host of envious persons professing the same religion as himself, of leading them out into the wilderness to set himself up as a Prince over them. But Moses appeals to Him who hath said, "Vengeance is mine," and he immediately settles the affair by bidding the yawning earth to engulph them at once—forever shutting them from the sight of him they had so maliciously traduced.

Perhaps it would not be profitable to mention the multiplicity of cases where envy is referred to and condemned in severe language by Jehovah, but let every one who desires a home with the pure and the blest, beware of taking the first step in envy's path! The worldling even, would be happier by far to refrain from this sin, for it is its own tormenter. "Envy slayeth the silly one." Job 5: 2.

NEW HARTFORD, CT., Jan. 1.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. H. Clark.

FAIR HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—Though a stranger to you, yet I am often made glad by reading your lively epistles in the Crisis, of which I have been a reader from its commencement.

I can say from my heart that I am anxiously waiting for, and expecting the glorious time to come when the Lord will "turn away ungodliness from Jacob," and so save all Israel; when violence shall no more be known, and the glory of God shall fill the earth as the waters fill the sea. It is true we have looked and waited these many years for the Advent of the Redeemer, yet I have strong faith that "He that shall come will come and will not tarry." "God hath appointed a day in the which He will judge the world in righteousness." It will surely come! the appointed hour makes haste. Signs in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath, have spoken, and are speaking loudly to the inhabitants of the earth—the judgment is nigh—the great day of the Lord cometh; it hasteth greatly.

On looking at these things closely I am led to inquire, who, oh who can slumber and sleep on the verge of such great and solemn events? The moments in which we live are fraught with momentous and eternal consequences. Soon it will be said, "let him that is holy be holy still;" and on the other hand, "let him that is filthy, be filthy still." No change of character then—no probation—no mercy. Christ will have left the mercy seat—the judgment comes—the angels are sent to gather the elect—the wicked are doomed to die.

When we look at the judgment scene as revealed in the holy Book we are led to ask, am I ready? O solemn day! the day that will decide my fate! the millions who have lived will all be there and the secrets of all hearts will be made known. Then will the wicked perish; for in the law of God it is written concerning them, "they shall not see life." They "go away into everlasting punishment."

It is my earnest desire that I with all the saints may be constantly found clothed with the righteousness of Christ, that when He who is our life shall appear, we may all be ready, and appear with him in glory.

Yours waiting for redemption,

HARRIET CLARK.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. P. Green.

PLYMOUTH, Vt., DEC. 24th, 1855.

Br. Merriam:—What should I do if the "World's Crisis," should cease to come to me, a weekly, welcome and JOYFULLY received messenger. O I suppose the giver of every good and perfect gift, will see that we are provided for, or that (in other words,) he will provide means to feed His little flock although they have to wander alone, many of them, in rather dry places, over hill and dale. Now and then a servant of God comes along with something for them to feed upon which is very palateable to our hungry, starving souls. As for this meat which is so blessed for his servants to be giving when our Master cometh, we a few, poor, destitute and I trust humble, willing, waiting souls, would have to go almost entirely destitute of it, were it not for the (best periodical in the land) the World's Crisis. Our circumstances are such, that I cannot get a half dollar to send you, as yet. Hope the Lord's faithful ones will continue to do all they can to help sustain the paper. Be assured, God is in the work, and He will reward you in the paradise of God.

Come, dear Brn. and Srs., make all the effort that is in your power, to sustain the Advent cause; for God's own little Church has been, and is being sifted, but not one kernel of wheat will fall to the ground.

It seems almost heart-breaking, to see one's dear neighbors and friends at home, going the broad road to destruction, so careless and heedless, notwithstanding all the warning they have had.

O, my dear fellow travelers, and soldiers in the cause of Emmanuel, (with some of whom I have had an acquaintance through the medium of our good little paper,) you all have my prayers amid all the scenes you are called to pass through.—Since my paper came yesterday, my fears have been very great concerning the discontinuing of the Crisis. Hope all the subscribers will act according to their ability, and every one of us give, as God hath prospered us. O, may the blessings of kind Providence attend Br. Merriam, while he sojourns here below. Br. Merriam, I consider you to be a kind, benevolent, whole-hearted man, whose work will be richly rewarded in the Kingdom of God. You have my heartiest thanks for so kindly providing the poor, and the weak of your Master's flock with seasonable food.

There are some poor ones here who love to hear about Christ and his second appearing, that have no means of paying any thing, but would joyfully receive the man of God. Hope some one will come. Let us remember that it is through much tribulation that we enter those heavenly mansions prepared for us.

Glory to God for the prospect that lies before the saints.

From your unworthy Sr. in tribulation.

SOPHRONIA P. GREEN.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. Jackson.

EAST WALLINGFORD, VT., Dec 25th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I feel like a pilgrim and a stranger traveling towards the promised land. I am confident that the heavenly Canaan is not far distant. The promise made by God to Abraham, holds good "to him and to his seed after him which is Christ." If we are Christ's then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. O blessed be God for the prospect, and for such a promise as this to all the finally faithful, of that rest that remains for the people of God. The Savior says, Luke 21, "when these things, (the signs of His coming,) begin to come to pass. then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh;" and may not we who have lived to see all of them fulfilled look up? Yes, I think we may. Although not having realized the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls, so soon as we have expected, yet I am not discouraged, but am determined with my heavenly Father's assistance to hold out to the end. Notwithstanding our lot is cast in these perilous times, yet our Savior has said "my grace is sufficient for thee."

Dear Brn. be of good cheer. I believe the King of kings will soon appear.—Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus, and save thy waiting people.

Yours expecting deliverance,

WM. JACKSON.

For The Crisis

Letter from Br. J. E. Ainsworth.

BRIMFIEED, Mass., Dec. 30th, '55.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I have felt it a duty to write a few lines for the Crisis hoping that I may be directed by the Spirit of my Master Jesus. I have been a reader of the Crisis ever since it was first published. The spirit of it I have loved although of late there has been portions of it that I could not endorse, (though I would not speak of it in the way of finding fault.) I was a firm believer in time, and as I still look at the subject, I cannot see any way to avoid the conclusion that we were correct in the time, but wrong in the event. If we understand the language of our Savior as recorded by Matthew, that the darkening of the sun, May 19th, 1780, marked the end of the tribulation or twelve hundred and sixty days, how can we avoid the conclusion that the 1335 days are also in the past, and that it was not at the end of those days that Daniel was to stand in his lot, but at the end of the 2300 days of prophecy? Now that the blessing rests upon such, I cannot say that there are no others that will be saved, the LORD knoweth them that are his.

In looking over the subject, again and again, I cannot avoid the conclusion that God has led His people. The passing of those periods are way marks by which we may know our whereabouts. The prophet tells us to "keep the munition, WATCH the way, make thy loins strong: fortify thy power mightily."

Yours looking for and loving the appearing of Jesus.

JOHN E. AINSWORTH.

Selected For the Crisis,

THE INCONSISTENT, BACKSLIDING PROFESSOR OF RELIGION. He is not dead to sin; he is not living to righteousness; his light does not shine; he is not bearing faithful witness for Christ; he is not growing in grace; he is paralyzing his own influence for good in the Church, and to the world where he was placed that he might be a light to enlighten, and as salt to savor and preserve it. The conduct, the condition, the guilt of such an one, is vividly set forth in the following allegory.

"The devil, (says the allegory,) once held a great anniversary, at which his emissaries were gathered from every part of the world, to report what they were doing in his service, and how far they had been successful. 'I, (said one who came up exulting in his zeal,) I let loose the wild beasts of the desert on a whole caravan of Christians, and their bones are now bleaching on the sands." "What of that? (said the adversary,) their souls were all saved."

"And I, (said another,) drove the hurricane against a ship freighted with Christians, and they were all drowned in the sea." "And what of that? (again said the adversary,) you did but shorten their way to glory; for they too, were all saved."

"And I, (said another, thinking he had done a more acceptable work,) I kindled persecution against a little band of disciples, and as they refused to abjure their faith, they were all burnt at the stake"—"Fool, (said the adversary in his anger,) you only sent them to a brighter crown in heaven."

"And I, (said another,) cannot boast of much; for I have been ten years trying to get a single Christian asleep; but at last I have succeeded, and he is slumbering still.' 'Well done, (cries his master) that is indeed a feat worth achieving;" and a smile of satisfaction arose to his lips.

"And I, (said still another,) I, under one pretence and another, and through worldly influences and little temptations and gradual backslidings, have finally got the great mass of a church asleep, so that they live on about as the world live; and what is more, they do not seem alarmed at their state.' At that the devil shouted, and all the night-stars of hell sung for joy."

☞ He that judgeth of all things as they are, and not as they are said or esteemed to be, is truly wise, and taught rather of God than men.

For the Crisis.

Lines written on the death of Sr. Terry.

She sleeps.
Death with relentless hand, another gem
Which God will number at the last, has seized,
And now within its shadowy portals, claims
Its conquest—e'en a saint of faith and hope.

The agonies of heart and frame are past,
Sufferings and conflicts, partings, pains and tears
Their mission have fulfilled, and she's at rest.
For weary months disease was working at
The fount of life. And yet fond hearts believed
That God would hear the prayer of faith, and raise
The sufferer up. She lingered weeks and days,
To crush our hearts more keenly at the last.
We weep her loss, but cannot wish her back,
To taste again the bitterness of earth.
'Tis well. Our Father doeth right; and we
In leaving all with Him may find mid grief
A solace, and in mourning, joy.

O who
But those who've tasted of the bitter [illegible]
Can know the depths of anguish felt by those
Who bury from their sight the chosen one,
Whose love and presence o'er the paths of life
A hallowed influence shed, like rays from heaven,
Brightening the shadows of this vale of tears.
A wife and mother sleeps, but not for aye;
Eternal morning with its cheering beams
Of blessed light and life begins to break;
A herald, telling of the approaching Day.
Again, to life immortal, from the grave,
At Jesus' voice, thy loved one shall return,
And join thee where thy mourning shall be o'er.
And ye—who orphaned weep—how throbs my heart
With grief at your sad loss—a mother's love!
God keep you in this hour of bitter grief,
And aid to kiss the chastening rod which falls
So heavy, yet with love upon the heart.
Wife, mother, sister, friend, in that glad day,
We hope to greet thee where no tears are shed,
No farewells breathed from lips grown chill in death,
Where death is banished ever, night unknown,
And all the bitterness of human life
Forever fled—and immortality
The richest, brightest gift of God, our own!

MARY.

BOSTON, Jan. 6th, 1856

For The Crisis.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." James 1: 12.

The trials of earth are mighty and strong, — 1 Pet. 4: 12.
But the pilgrims by faith will o'ercome them ere long; — 1 John 5: 4.
Through Jesus they will conquer, and joyfully sing, — Rom. 8: 37.
"O grave, where is thy victory? oh death, where is thy sting?" — 1 Cor. 15: 55.
The jewels will shine like undefiled gold, — Mal. 3: 17.
In the kingdom of heaven with glory untold; — 1 Cor. 2: 9.
Though passing through trials, they'll be able to stand, — Luke 21: 36.
With their garments washed white in the blood of the Lamb. — Rev 7: 14.
Then courage, my brother! O fear not the strife, — 1 Cor. 16: 13.
We are fighting for Jesus and Eternal Life; — 1 Tim. 6: 12.
We soon shall sit down with the King on His throne, — Rev. 3: 21.
And dwell in our peaceful and glorious home. — Isa. 35: 10.

HARRISON McCULLOCK.

SAVOY, Mass., Dec. 14: 1855.

The title of the organ of the American and Foreign Bible Society has been changed to "The Colporter," and it gives anything but a cheering picture of the religious condition of our country, particularly of our cities. It gives some statistics, a brief synopsis of which may be interesting. Of the one million of people in our city and the places immediately adjacent, it is estimated there are more than eight hundred thousand who do not attend divine worship, which is a number six times as great as the entire population of the Sandwich Islands.

In Philadelphia and Boston, it is believed at least three-fourths of the people habitually absent themselves from church, and the same may be said of New Bedford, Fall River, Lowell and Worcester. The religious denominations too, have greatly decreased within ten years. The membership in the Baptist churches in this city has decreased 362 since 1845, although the population has increased 261,966. The Presbyterians in ten years, from 1843 to 1853, had decreased in numbers 660. The Methodists in the same time had lost 461, and there has been but one self-supporting Reformed Dutch church planted in this city during fifteen years. Such are some of the statistics of spiritual declension, while as a contrast to this picture we have six thousand grog shops and twenty-five hundred brothels!—[Boston Traveller.

sister. Nevertheless, I can but rejoice amid all this; for they fell asleep in Jesus and of necessity must awake with His likeness when the seventh trumpet sounds, hallelujah to the Lamb. O the resurrection sounds sweet to the Christian's ear, and still sweeter because it is so soon to transpire. We are yet poor, mortal beings, and therefore know not what a day may bring forth.

If unprepared for the judgment at death, we shall certainly remain so; for "if the tree falleth toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be." But, thank God, we shall not all sleep; for some of us will remain unto the coming of the blessed Lord, and be "caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Your unworthy Br. in tribulation still looking and waiting for the literal second Advent of the Son of Man at the end of the days,

SILAS H. WALDRON.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, JAN. 12, 1856.

Hungary.

Since the fall of Hungary one would have supposed that the energies of that people must have been paralyzed under the withering, blighting influences of a tyrannical government with which the nation is oppressed; but it would seem no calamities whatever can break the spirit and subdue the uprising aspirations of the Magyar race. There is something excessively touching to the sympathies of our nature to see an oppressed and brave people struggling under misfortune and calamities enough to appal the stoutest heart—to witness their self-sacrificing spirit and love for their native country which many waters cannot quench nor floods drown. A good example this for the Christian's imitation.

It is indeed wonderful that when the nation lies torn, mangled and bleeding at every pore through the galling chains and fetters of national bondage—to see them still cherish the hope of a brighter day, and maintain an inflexible determination to do what lies in their power for the restoration of their country to the rights and immunities of free civil and religious institutions.

In reading some extracts from the "scrap-book of a Magyar exile," I find the people of Hungary so far from abandoning all hope and sinking into inaction and despair since the failure of their revolutionary struggle, have attempted to instruct the rising generation in the principles of liberty, in order that they may arise when circumstances shall pave the way and assert the independence of the nation.

Some of the principal teachers (ladies of high rank) have been arrested and imprisoned.

Thus we perceive the hand of God in the movements of the nations preparing the way for the sublime scenes that are soon to be ushered in.

We extract the following:—

"All these and more such signs convinced the Hapsburgs that the sword is insufficient to do their business. So they called on the Cross, and signed the Concordat. The Jesuits are now expected to accomplish what the Court-martials could not do. The Emperor of Austria has, as Faust to Mephistopheles, sold himself to the Pope, in exchange for the darkness and ignorantism, perversion and persecution, intolerance and fanaticism, which the dark messengers of the Roman temple of gross superstition and priestly despotism will be ordered to take to, and spread, plague-like, over the dominions of the House of Austria. There are days of hard trial, of a novel sort, in store for my country, but the nation of the Magyars will know how to brave them. So I do not feel the least anxiety about the ultimate moral results of the compact between Beelzebub and Moloch to corrupt my countrymen—though I grieve in foreseeing the tortures and losses they will have to suffer at the hands of the newly-patented inquisitors.

"Countess Blanche Teleki, (a distinguished teacher,) is now in Spielberg—it may be in the very cell in which Silvio Pellico was brooding over his Prigioni.—Her loss was, as it may be fancied, keenly felt by the whole Hungary, and the public sorrow over her sad fate was manifested in various ways."

Typographical.

In our last there were some typographical errors in the Editorial article, particularly the omission of part of the following verse. "But his flesh upon him shall have pain; and his soul within him shall mourn;" contained in the third paragraph from the bottom of the first column, second page.

For The Crisis.

Envy.

BY B. MATHEWSON.

Says Cruden, "ENVY is an evil affection which makes men fret and grieve at the prosperity of another—accompanied by a malicious desire," and is, as he further remarks, "a deep pollution of the spirit."

It is not to be presumed that many, if indeed any, will peruse this humble effusion, whose hearts are matured in this detestable affection—bearing such a marked affinity to the spirit of darkness; therefore it is not to this class so particularly we speak, as to those who retain a desire for salvation—but possess so moderate a share of this bane of godliness as scarcely to perceive that what caused that sigh and sombre expression was envy in the incipient stage!

Webster defines envy thus: "To feel uneasiness, mortification, or discontent, at the sight of superior excellencies, reputation or happiness enjoyed by another; to repine at another's prosperity; to fret or grieve yourself at the real or supposed superiority of another—to hate him on that account."

Says Pollock:

"What made the man of envy what he was,
Was worth in others, vileness in himself,
• • • •——Whene'er he heard
As oft he did, of joy and happiness,
And great prosperity, and rising worth,
'Twas like a wave of wormwood o'er his soul,
Rolling its bitterness."

Professing Christinn, did you ever feel a little uneasiness when you saw one of your fellows possessed of superior talents that gained for him much love and respect? When you have beheld one possessed of superior personal accomplishments, or more splendid equipage, than yourself, have you never expressed by word, or look, or gesture, a hint to his disparagement? Or have you not, when occasion made it proper to speak of the virtues and talents of another, maintained a strict silence, because you felt regret at such rising worth? If so, you are in danger! for the monster envy has found a lurking place in some secret recess of the heart! though in embryo—rest assured it is there—and if suffered to remain will become a hydra-headed monster baffling human power though it be a Hercules!! How different from the Gospel sympathy we are taught to cherish by the Word of God, Rom. 12: 15. "Rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." The envious heart reverses this Scripture, rejoicing at anothers' tears and feeling sorrow at anothers' joy!

Paul prayed to be "delivered from unreasonable men." And what crime in sin's catalogue is more unreasonable than Envy? How perfectly unreasonable and serpent-like, to use any means to abuse another because you fancy him happier than yourself. To conceive ill will against one who has attacked none of our rights, nor done us any injury solely because he is mere prosperous or happier than yourself, is, as one remarks, "unnatural." Yes it is diabolical. Such an one is to be avoided with all cautiousness; for, as the wise man inquires, "who is able to stand before envy?"

One good writer observes that "this sin is universally admitted to be one of the blackest of the human heart."

How painful to be in the society of those who feel disquietude at the happiness of others! Converse with them of achieving sufficient victory over the world to make one happy in view of eternal life and joys—they are almost sure to point out the favorableness of your situation to the enjoyment of piety, compared with their own. But they—poor creatures! have not enough of creature comforts, &c., to serve God! forgetting that God has chosen his people in the furnace of affliction. They are not content with the place which the providence of God has called them to occupy—have not learned Paul's lesson of contentment in Phil. 9: 11, would be incredulous of the truth of Thomas A. Kempis' statement when one interrogated him thus:—

"O where is peace; for thou its paths have trod?

He answers,

"In poverty, retirement, and with God."

Sometimes unworthiness is urged as an excuse for not rejoicing at the comforts of others. It is indeed true that one may be very sinful and possess beauty, talent, riches; and partake of sumptuous fare every day; but Our Father will adjust that matter when the day of settlement arrives. Meantime we should take due care to observe the command He has taken pains to repeat again and again to us: "Be not thou envious against evil men." David confesses having once been overtaken in this fault while beholding the prosperity, riches, and ease of the wicked.—But on visiting God's Sanctuary he is soon convinced of his folly, and immediately humbles himself, making use of the following language to show the debasing influence of this sin. "So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast before thee." Ps. 73: 22. Please read the whole Psalm.

It is the height of folly to envy those who are having all their good things in this life. Their happiness is of a superficial kind and evanescent as a dream!

Do not envy that happiness caused by possessing the shining bubbles of this sin-cursed earth—they will soon burst in the air—and no place be found for them.—Would you wrest those pretty pebbles from the child incapable of enjoying higher objects? No, you would say, let him derive what satisfaction those will yield until I, by care and the blessing of kind Providence, can elevate and expand his mind to enjoy what reason and virtue dictate.

O do not envy the worldlings; for soon our Father will take away the kingdoms of this world from them and when clensed present the precious boon to His own little flock. Jehovah is the Administrator on the estate of the saints!

Bless His holy name—I have no misgivings but that it will be righteously adjusted. When the heirs are a little more matured, they will come into possession of the Kingdom under the whole heavens!

But perhaps my Brn. and Srs. possess more talent and earthly comforts than myself! And perhaps it is altogether best they should! Remember that "all things work together for good to them that love God." Suffer me to enquire whether they transcend Gospel limits in indulging in "costly array," extravagant and unnecessary furniture, &c., just to gratify the lust of the eye? If so, go to them with the meekness of Christ, and urge the claims of the Gospel upon them. But do not accuse unless the word of God accuses—work in harmony with that, and all will be well.

One envious spirit will destroy the happiness of the domestic circle! here is where the monster envy first nestled!—Cain sees his brother peculiarly blessed of heaven—enjoying that peace and quiet assurance which is the effect of righteousness—his envy knows no bounds until he terminates that happiness by imbruing his hands in his brother's blood! Another tragical scene caused by envy, destroyed the happiness of Jacob's family. Because the beautiful and virtuous Joseph was favored a little more than themselves, his brethren conceived the dreadful idea of putting him to death!

But perhaps there is no place where envy has a more pernicious influence than in the Church of God. If it take possession of one member, the injurious influence is felt by the whole body. The word of God informs us that "envy is the rottenness of the bones." Prov. 19: 30. Just think of the situation of one whose bones are putrid! And yet Inspiration never overrates in making comparisons. Therefore envy should excite as much dread in the Church as the putrefaction of the bones to their possessor.—The idea is, everything connected with such a body will be affected with disease terminating only in death.

When God saw this fatal malady taking deep root in the Church in the wilderness, He probably saw no remedy except by excision! However painful it may be, the dissecting knife must sometimes be used, if a portion of the body is saved.

Moses is appointed by God as a leader, and though characterized by a meekness superior to any other mortal, he is accused by a host of envious persons professing the same religion as himself, of leading them out into the wilderness to set himself up as a Prince over them. But Moses appeals to Him who hath said, "Vengeance is mine," and he immediately settles the affair by bidding the yawning earth to engulph them at once—forever shutting them from the sight of him they had so maliciously traduced.

Perhaps it would not be profitable to mention the multiplicity of cases where envy is referred to and condemned in severe language by Jehovah, but let every one who desires a home with the pure and the blest, beware of taking the first step in envy's path! The worldling even, would be happier by far to refrain from this sin, for it is its own tormenter. "Envy slayeth the silly one." Job 5: 2.

NEW HARTFORD, CT., Jan. 1.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. H. Clark.

FAIR HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—Though a stranger to you, yet I am often made glad by reading your lively epistles in the Crisis, of which I have been a reader from its commencement.

I can say from my heart that I am anxiously waiting for, and expecting the glorious time to come when the Lord will "turn away ungodliness from Jacob," and so save all Israel; when violence shall no more be known, and the glory of God shall fill the earth as the waters fill the sea. It is true we have looked and waited these many years for the Advent of the Redeemer, yet I have strong faith that "He that shall come will come and will not tarry." "God hath appointed a day in the which He will judge the world in righteousness." It will surely come! the appointed hour makes haste. Signs in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath, have spoken, and are speaking loudly to the inhabitants of the earth—the judgment is nigh—the great day of the Lord cometh; it hasteth greatly.

On looking at these things closely I am led to inquire, who, oh who can slumber and sleep on the verge of such great and solemn events? The moments in which we live are fraught with momentous and eternal consequences. Soon it will be said, "let him that is holy be holy still;" and on the other hand, "let him that is filthy, be filthy still." No change of character then—no probation—no mercy. Christ will have left the mercy seat—the judgment comes—the angels are sent to gather the elect—the wicked are doomed to die.

When we look at the judgment scene as revealed in the holy Book we are led to ask, am I ready? O solemn day! the day that will decide my fate! the millions who have lived will all be there and the secrets of all hearts will be made known. Then will the wicked perish; for in the law of God it is written concerning them, "they shall not see life." They "go away into everlasting punishment."

It is my earnest desire that I with all the saints may be constantly found clothed with the righteousness of Christ, that when He who is our life shall appear, we may all be ready, and appear with him in glory.

Yours waiting for redemption,

HARRIET CLARK.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. P. Green.

PLYMOUTH, Vt., DEC. 24th. 1855.

Br. Merriam:—What should I do if the "World's Crisis," should cease to come to me, a weekly, welcome and JOYFULLY received messenger. O I suppose the giver of every good and perfect gift, will see that we are provided for, or that (in other words,) he will provide means to feed His little flock although they have to wander alone, many of them, in rather dry places, over hill and dale. Now and then a servant of God comes along with something for them to feed upon which is very palateable to our hungry, starving souls. As for this meat which is so blessed for his servants to be giving when our Master cometh, we a few, poor, destitute and I trust humble, willing, waiting souls, would have to go almost entirely destitute of it, were it not for the (best periodical in the land) the World's Crisis. Our circumstances are such, that I cannot get a half dollar to send you, as yet. Hope the Lord's faithful ones will continue to do all they can to help sustain the paper. Be assured, God is in the work, and He will reward you in the paradise of God.

Come, dear Brn. and Srs., make all the effort that is in your power, to sustain the Advent cause; for God's own little Church has been, and is being sifted, but not one kernel of wheat will fall to the ground.

It seems almost heart-breaking, to see one's dear neighbors and friends at home, going the broad road to destruction, so careless and heedless, notwithstanding all the warning they have had.

O, my dear fellow travelers, and soldiers in the cause of Emmanuel, (with some of whom I have had an acquaintance through the medium of our good little paper,) you all have my prayers amid all the scenes you are called to pass through.—Since my paper came yesterday, my fears have been very great concerning the discontinuing of the Crisis. Hope all the subscribers will act according to their ability, and every one of us give, as God hath prospered us. O, may the blessings of kind Providence attend Br. Merriam, while he sojourns here below. Br. Merriam, I consider you to be a kind, benevolent, whole-hearted man, whose work will be richly rewarded in the Kingdom of God. You have my heartiest thanks for so kindly providing the poor, and the weak of your Master's flock with seasonable food.

There are some poor ones here who love to hear about Christ and his second appearing, that have no means of paying any thing, but would joyfully receive the man of God. Hope some one will come. Let us remember that it is through much tribulation that we enter those heavenly mansions prepared for us.

Glory to God for the prospect that lies before the saints.

From your unworthy Sr. in tribulation.

SOPHRONIA P. GREEN.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. Jackson.

EAST WALLINGFORD, VT., Dec 25th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I feel like a pilgrim and a stranger traveling towards the promised land. I am confident that the heavenly Canaan is not far distant. The promise made by God to Abraham, holds good "to him and to his seed after him which is Christ." If we are Christ's then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. O blessed be God for the prospect, and for such a promise as this to all the finally faithful, of that rest that remains for the people of God. The Savior says, Luke 21, "when these things, (the signs of His coming,) begin to come to pass then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh;" and may not we who have lived to see all of them fulfilled look up? Yes, I think we may. Although not having realized the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls, so soon as we have expected, yet I am not discouraged, but am determined with my heavenly Father's assistance to hold out to the end. Notwithstanding our lot is cast in these perilous times, yet our Savior has said "my grace is sufficient for thee."

Dear Brn. be of good cheer. I believe the King of kings will soon appear.—Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus, and save thy waiting people.

Yours expecting deliverance,

WM. JACKSON.

For The Crisis

Letter from Br. J. E. Ainsworth.

BRIMFIEED, Mass., Dec. 30th, '55.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I have felt it a duty to write a few lines for the Crisis hoping that I may be directed by the Spirit of my Master Jesus. I have been a reader of the Crisis ever since it was first published. The spirit of it I have loved although of late there has been portions of it that I could not endorse, (though I would not speak of it in the way of finding fault.) I was a firm believer in time, and as I still look at the subject, I cannot see any way to avoid the conclusion that we were correct in the time, but wrong in the event. If we understand the language of our Savior as recorded by Matthew, that the darkening of the sun, May 19th, 1780, marked the end of the tribulation or twelve hundred and sixty days, how can we avoid the conclusion that the 1335 days are also in the past, and that it was not at the end of those days that Daniel was to stand in his lot, but at the end of the 2300 days of prophecy? Now that the blessing rests upon such, I cannot say that there are no others that will be saved, the LORD knoweth them that are his.

In looking over the subject, again and again, I cannot avoid the conclusion that God has led His people. The passing of those periods are way marks by which we may know our whereabouts. The prophet tells us to "keep the munition, WATCH the way, make thy loins strong: fortify thy power mightily."

Yours looking for and loving the appearing of Jesus.

JOHN E. AINSWORTH.

Selected For the Crisis,

THE INCONSISTENT, BACKSLIDING PROFESSOR OF RELIGION. He is not dead to sin; he is not living to righteousness; his light does not shine; he is not bearing faithful witness for Christ; he is not growing in grace; he is paralyzing his own influence for good in the Church, and to the world where he was placed that he might be a light to enlighten, and as salt to savor and preserve it. The conduct, the condition, the guilt of such an one, is vividly set forth in the following allegory.

"The devil, (says the allegory,) once held a great anniversary, at which his emissaries were gathered from every part of the world, to report what they were doing in his service, and how far they had been successful. 'I, (said one who came up exulting in his zeal,) I let loose the wild beasts of the desert on a whole caravan of Christians, and their bones are now bleaching on the sands." "What of that? (said the adversary,) their souls were all saved."

"And I, (said another,) drove the hurricane against a ship freighted with Christians, and they were all drowned in the sea." "And what of that? (again said the adversary,) you did but shorten their way to glory; for they too, were all saved."

"And I, (said another, thinking he had done a more acceptable work,) I kindled persecution against a little band of disciples, and as they refused to abjure their faith, they were all burnt at the stake"—"Fool, (said the adversary in his anger,) you only sent them to a brighter crown in heaven."

"And I, (said another,) cannot boast of much; for I have been ten years trying to get a single Christian asleep; but at last I have succeeded, and he is slumbering still.' 'Well done, (cries his master,) that is indeed a feat worth achieving;" and a smile of satisfaction arose to his lips.

"And I, (said still another,) I, under one pretence and another, and through worldly influences and little temptations and gradual backslidings, have finally got the great mass of a church asleep, so that they live on about as the world live; and what is more, they do not seem alarmed at their state.' At that the devil shouted, and all the night-stars of hell sung for joy."

☞ He that judgeth of all things as they are, and not as they are said or esteemed to be, is truly wise, and taught rather of God than men.

For the Crisis.

Lines written on the death of Sr. Terry.

She sleeps.
Death with relentless hand, another gem
Which God will number at the last, has seized,
And now within its shadowy portals, claims
Its conquest—e'en a saint of faith and hope.

The agonies of heart and frame are past,
Sufferings and conflicts, partings, pains and tears
Their mission have fulfilled, and she's at rest.
For weary months disease was working at
The fount of life. And yet fond hearts believed
That God would hear the prayer of faith, and raise
The sufferer up. She lingered weeks and days,
To crush our hearts more keenly at the last.
We weep her loss, but cannot wish her back,
To taste again the bitterness of earth.
'Tis well. Our Father doeth right; and we
In leaving all with Him may find mid grief
A solace, and in mourning, joy.

O who
But those who've tasted of the bitter
Can know the depths of anguish felt by those
Who bury from their sight the chosen one,
Whose love and presence o'er the paths of life
A hallowed influence shed, like rays from heaven,
Brightening the shadows of this vale of tears.
A wife and mother sleeps, but not for aye;
Eternal morning with its cheering beams
Of blessed light and life begins to break;
A herald, telling of the approaching Day.
Again, to life immortal, from the grave,
At Jesus' voice, thy loved one shall return,
And join thee where thy mourning shall be o'er.
And ye—who orphaned weep—how throbs my heart
With grief at your sad loss—a mother's love!
God keep you in this hour of bitter grief,
And aid to kiss the chastening rod which falls
So heavy, yet with love upon the heart.
Wife, mother, sister, friend, in that glad day,
We hope to greet thee where no tears are shed,
No farewells breathed from lips grown chill in death,
Where death is banished ever, night unknown,
And all the bitterness of human life
Forever fled—and immortality
The richest, brightest gift of God, our own!

MARY.

BOSTON, Jan. 6th, 1856

For The Crisis.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." James 1: 12.

The trials of earth are mighty and strong, — 1 Pet. 4: 12.
But the pilgrims by faith will o'ercome them ere long; — 1 John 5: 4.
Through Jesus they will conquer, and joyfully sing, — Rom. 8: 37.
"O grave, where is thy victory? oh death, where is thy sting?' — 1 Cor. 15: 55.
The jewels will shine like undefiled gold, — Mal. 3: 17.
In the kingdom of heaven with glory untold; — 1 Cor. 2: 9.
Though passing through trials, they'll be able to stand, — Luke 21: 36.
With their garments washed white in the blood of the Lamb. — Rev 7: 14.
Then courage, my brother! O fear not the strife, — 1 Cor. 16: 13.
We are fighting for Jesus and Eternal Life; — 1 Tim. 6: 12.
We soon shall sit down with the King on His throne, — Rev. 3: 21.
And dwell in our peaceful and glorious home. — Isa. 35: 10.

HARRISON MCCULLOCK.

SAVOY, Mass., Dec. 14: 1855.

The title of the organ of the American and Foreign Bible Society has been changed to "The Colporter," and it gives anything but a cheering picture of the religious condition of our country, particularly of our cities. It gives some statistics, a brief synopsis of which may be interesting. Of the one million of people in our city and the places immediately adjacent, it is estimated there are more than eight hundred thousand who do not attend divine worship, which is a number six times as great as the entire population of the Sandwich Islands.

In Philadelphia and Boston, it is believed at least three-fourths of the people habitually absent themselves from church, and the same may be said of New Bedford, Fall River, Lowell and Worcester. The religious denominations too, have greatly decreased within ten years. The membership in the Baptist churches in this city has decreased 362 since 1845, although the population has increased 261,966. The Presbyterians in ten years, from 1843 to 1853, had decreased in numbers 660. The Methodists in the same time had lost 461, and there has been but one self-supporting Reformed Dutch church planted in this city during fifteen years. Such are some of the statistics of spiritual declension, while as a contrast to this picture we have six thousand grog shops and twenty-five hundred brothels!—[Boston Traveller.

Selected for the Crisis.

Roman Influences in Spain.

However dense the opacity with which the worshipers of the darkness of past ages may endeavor to obstruct light—however slow the world may be in dragging its lost rights from obscurity—still the work of illumination and disenthrallment progresses uninterruptedly. Mental and social emancipation, if impeded in one avenue, forces its way through another. The breach between Spain and Rome—a breach not created by a few individuals nicknamed by their enemies philosophers, but one in which the Cortes and Government are sustained by the immense majority of the citizens of Madrid and a large portion of the people in the provinces—proves clearly that the age in which we live sounds the death knell of various kinds of despotism.

At the very outset of what are historically termed modern times, beginning with the close of the fifteenth century and the early dawnings of the Reformation, Spain more than any other country contributed to strengthen the papal power, while the war upheld it in Italy more earnestly than the Italians themselves. It was Spain which carefully preserved the bloody sparks of the auto-da-fes until they became re-kindled in Italy and Rome by the accused Caraffa, and which alone fed the flames for centuries afterward. In Spain the Jesuits and Jesuitism had their birth; and when in the sixteenth century the conflict began between Luther and his disciples on one side and Rome and her tonsured legions on the other, Spain threw her power—which now for generations had overspread Europe—into the cause of persecution, and ruined herself in the effort to strangle in the cradle the new-born spirit. But now at last Spain, with her Most Catholic Majesties, has risen against the Rome she has so long obeyed and idolized, and with courageous endeavor is shaking off the load which has long oppressed her.

This struggle which is now developing itself between the better citizens and the clergy of Spain, the one battling for the admission of civilizing light, the other for the retention of the old enslaving darkness, is not of recent origin. It dates so far back as the time of Ferdinand VII. With occasional interruptions it has existed throughout the reign of Isabella II; it appeared distinctly during her minority, and is now brought to a decisive issue. Not that the Queen, or her nearest confidants or friends, is a willing party to the movement; but she is compelled to follow the impulse given to her Government by the Cortes and the popular will. During her minority, at the outset of the Regency, her mother, Maria Christina, was compelled to seek the support of the Liberals who aimed, with the introduction of the Constitutional system, to curtail the papal and monkish influence. Beside an impoverished nation and empty treasury there stood a clergy reveling in wealth, possessing rich treasures and an immense landed property lost and dead for all national uses. This property it was determined to return to the nation to which it originally belonged, in order that it might be converted into a source of public utility and serve to alleviate the public debt. A decree was enacted directing the sale of this property and to pay the salaries of the clergy from the public treasury. A great outcry was, of course, raised by the interested parties. Rome protested, but under the pressure of newer and better ideas, the law was partially carried out. In the course of events, however, Maria Christina, supported by the Moderados, felt herself strong enough to throw away the mask of hypocrisy, and under the premiership of Narvaez the Government atoned for the past by prostrating itself before the papal power. The further sale of church property was at once stopped and a concordat concluded. When liberty was murdered by the French troops on the seven hills Spain sent her ragged warriors, under Gen. Cordova, to give the last turn to the rack.

The recent revolution once more directed the attention of the nation to the existing abuses or immunities of the Church, and the interrupted nationalization of Church property. Reform throughout was and is a paramount necessity, and above all such reform as would abrogate those immunities condemned by common sense and reason as the heaviest burdens on the national body and mind. In the new budget the Cortes imposed a certain per centage of tax on all salaries paid by Government, and among others on those of the clergy, which as being the largest could best bear it. The infuriated priesthood at once carried their complaint to Rome, and the papal Charge d' Affaires at Madrid protested against this equitable measure. Without noticing, however, the protest, the Cortes continued their salutary work, abolishing Church abuses, reducing the power of Rome, and directing that the clergy in all temporal matters should be subject to the general laws of the country. The tribunal of the Rota, a supreme Ecclesiastical Court in Madrid, instituted in times gone-by for the decision of all civil and temporal matters affecting the clergy, and hitherto independent of the civil power, was abolished.

The Pope at once brought to bear the accustomed thunders which he has been recently hurling at Piedmont. In an arrogant allocution he declares null and void all the laws enacted by the legally constituted powers of the country, dispenses with obedience to them, and as has been the custom for centuries with Rome under such circumstances, authorizes lawlessness and incites to revolt. The priesthood appealed to and stirred up the worst and most violent passions of the masses, and tried to rekindle a bloody fanaticism of which we saw the fruit in the recent outbreak at Barcelona. Pacheco, the Spanish Minister, left Rome, and Monsignor Franchi, the Roman Charge d' Affaires, bade farewell to Madrid. The excitement by the last accounts was intense, and several attempts had been made to burn the old concordat publicly on the square of the Capital. It is a curious historical coincidence of Spain and Piedmont, that whatever happens in one at once reacts on the other country. When in 1820 Spain proclaimed the Constitution, Piedmont followed her example. This time Piedmont has taken the start, and now both countries are engaged in mortal stife with Rome, the priesthood, and all the results of long darkness. The Vatican forges its thunder, and excommunications are its lightning shafts; but they fall back impotently from the shield of a strong national sense and sound national conscience.

In the name of civilization and progress we salute with a joyous heart this parade of Roman fury. It is time for Italians and Spaniards to see, to learn, and to experience that though they may be excommunicated the sun will rise and set as usual, the world will move in its accustomed round and go on and prosper, and trees and fields will bear their wonted bloom and yield their wonted harvests. No destroying locusts will appear, or plague spread its wings, at the bidding of the monarch of Rome; nor will the roofs of houses fall in, or graves burst their inclosure and start open. Rome should carefully consider whether in these idle fulminations it is not like the self-destroying scorpion, thrusting the envenomed sting into its own head.

The "Covenant by Sacrifice" Many are desirous, like the sons of Zebedee, to share with Christ in the power of his glorious kingdom, but few are willing to follow in the track of the "Man of sorrows" while on earth, and like him be homeless wanderers, "despised and rejected of men." How few have faith to ascend manfully a Mount Moriah, or taste the bitter cup of Gethsemane. Let every thing go on smoothly, our names be extolled by the world, and success crown all our labors, and we rejoice in God and glory that we are children of a King; but let God chastise us for our profit—correct us for iniquity, till our "beauty consumes away like a moth," and friends and lovers are put far from us, and how soon our happiness is gone, and in anguish of spirit we choose "strangling and death rather than life." Why is this? You "that have made a covenant with God by sacrifice" answer. What did you withhold in the day of your espousals? How did you receive Christ? Was it not "at the loss of all things?" Did you not sell all that you had, and take Him for your portion forever? Then how is it that you are so easily moved? Earthly prospects may be blighted, friends be taken from you, the world prove cold-hearted and untrue—what of all this? Has it affected the riches of your inheritance, has it touched your portion? Those who live only for earthly good, may well make themselves miserable when that is denied, but how can they who live not "unto themselves," but "unto Him who died for them," yield to despondency when outward comforts fail, seeing their life is still hid with Christ in God? Our corrupt nature laments, and ever will, the loss of earthly enjoyments, but the natural man must be in subjection to the spiritual. The flesh must be mortified; for this the Christian must labor; he must be "crucified to the world," and the world to him. But says the afflicted one, did not God himself seem to depart from me, and weaken my strength in the way, I would not thus complain. Ah, humbled soul, your kind Father is just as near, and as tenderly mindful of your necessities in your low estate as when you were on the mountain top; the change is in you. You have fallen, and shut your eyes to the "angel of his presence." Because sensible comforts fail, your weak faith wavers. "Ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children. My son despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him. For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." O, let not doubt and distrust keep your soul at a distance, but draw near to Him who holds the rod, and the stroke will be less heavy.

God sees in prosperity your weak heart is lifted up, and your feet are led astray, and in love he afflicts you, to put you in mind of your "covenant" with him, "by sacrifice."

Reflect on the terms of that covenant. Did you not promise God your all, on condition that he would take away your burden of sin, and give you himself? He has ratified the contract, and made it binding forever, by fulfilling his part of the obligation, and will you shrink from yours? Have you no heart of gratitude to be touched with the unspeakable condescension of the great I Am, who, instead of rendering unto you according to your deserts, stoops to reason with you as with an equal, and speaks to you through his word and spirit, familiarly, "as a man speaketh unto his friends?" Can you withhold submission to Him who, though "heir to all things," yet, for the great love he hath towards us, is among us as one that serveth, and prays, "Father, I will that they also whom thou has given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory." Surely, the spirit must be willing, though the flesh be weak. But this weakness he compassionates, and having suffered himself in the flesh, is touched with the feeling of you infirmities, and not satisfied in his great mercy by fulfilling his part of the covenant, he assists you to fulfil yours by taking away your idols, and destroying your "high places."

For this will you complain? Heaven forbid! Say rather, Here, Lord, take friends, reputation, riches—take all of earthly happiness, if by this my soul may be united more closely to thee, as her only beloved, and I receive strength thereby to perform more acceptably my part of the blest covenant I have made with thee "by sacrifice."

Portents of the Coming Day.

In order to illustrate the working of the religious and political elements, we copy the two following articles: the first, from the Boston Journal; the second, from the Boston Herald.

The "Immaculate Conception" in France. The new dogma of the "Immaculate Conception" in the Romish Church, is creating quite a discussion among the faithful in France. L'Univers is the organ of the Jesuits and ultra-Montane portion of the Catholics, and Le Siecle is the organ of the Gallican or the anti-ultra-Montane portion of the Church. It is supposed that the new dogma will lead to a separation of the two branches of the Church. To give our readers some idea of the character of this controversy, we give the following, being a translation of an article in Le Siecle, in reply to an article in L'Univers:—

"You are the men who wrote the Code of the Inquisition, the greatest crime of human kind; who shed blood like water in the wars of the Albigenses, of the Waldenses, and of the Hussites; who butchered old men, women and children; and said, whilst treading under foot heaps of corpses, God will know who are his; who bled Spain to death, exterminated the Moors, and proscribed the Jews; who waylaid the Protestants on St. Bartholomew's day, blessed the dagger of Jacques Clement, let loose upon Europe the thirty years' war, concocted in secret the gunpowder plot, transformed Flanders, by the hand of the Duke of Alba, into an immense slaughter-house; burnt Giordano Bruno at the stake, tortured on the rack the genius of Galileo, extorted from Louis XIV, the revocation of the edict of Nantes, burnt four hundred villages in the Cevennes, signed a hundred thousand letters of cachet (warrants) against the Jansenists, condemned Calas, executed Labarre, flayed Fra Diavolo, killed, at Rome, General Duphot, shook in the 19th century, the law of sacrilege, as a trial torch of the Inquisition, and finally irritated France, during the restoration, to such a degree, that after a long resistance, France indignantly punished you. Do you recognize yourselves in this description of your services, and in the long trail of blood you have left behind you on the road of the past? Do you begin to find out what your family name is? Your name is not religion, for religion is peace in the State, whilst, wherever you set your foot, we find nothing but discord. No power, no people, has been able to live within the reach of your breath, without being poisoned and vomiting you back."

The American Irish Aid Society. In these times of revolutions and political convulsions, it is difficult to predict what event may or may not happen in the coming year. All over the world cities are springing up as if by magic, and republics grow as rapidly as did Jonah's Gourd—it may be to wither to the ground, as speedily. Wars and rumors of war, every where prevail. Active minds are plodding changes and movements of mighty import, and strong hands and willing ones, are prepared to carry them into effect.

Strange comminglings of nations are seen, and mighty empires are shaken to their foundations by antagonistic forces without, or convulsive elements within. Kings tremble upon their thrones, and it may be the thrones will be burnt to ashes or melted to cinders by the volcanic heat of popular indignation.

Men of foresight, wisdom, enlarged views, liberal and patriotic principles, and enthusiastic devotion to the sacred cause of Liberty, are preparing to take advantage of these convulsions, and of this unsettled state of affairs, to effect changes that they desire—changes that shall elevate the human race, and mark the age as one of noble deeds and devoted love of country.

They may accomplish much; they may, perchance, accomplish nothing—but the effort will have done them no harm, and it will demonstrate to aggression, tyranny, and usurped power, that the avengers of wrongs never sleep, and that they will embrace every opportunity to strike a blow, with the dagger, or the sword, at the heart of the oppressor.

We are told that in the United States there are one hundred thousand natives of Ireland, who have devoted themselves to the objects of this Society, signed its Constitution, and taken the preliminary steps towards preparation to act in such a manner, and at such time and place as the Supreme Directory shall deem proper. It is certain that they have control of large sums of money, and have procured implements of war to aid in the accomplishment of their purpose. And it is intimated that they have the promise of an abundant supply of pecuniary aid at any time they may see fit to act.—[Boston Herald.

Power of Religion. One of the most interesting anecdotes, illustrating the power of religion, was related a few days since, in a social meeting, by an English clergyman, who was acquainted with the facts.

A nobleman, Lord ———, was a man of the world. His pleasures were drawn from his riches, his honors, and his friends. His daughter was the idol of his heart. Much had been expended for her education, and well did she repay, in her intellectual endowments, the solicitude of her parents. She was highly accomplished, amiable in her disposition, and winning in her manners. They were all strangers to God.

At length Miss ——— attended a Methodist meeting in London—was deeply awakened, and soon happily converted. Now she delighted in the service of the sanctuary, and social meetings. To her the charms of Christianity were overflowing. She frequented those places where she met with congenial minds, animated with similar hopes. She was often found in the house of God.

The change was marked by her fond father with painful solicitude. To see his lovely daughter thus infatuated, was to him an occasion of deep grief, and he resolved to correct her erroneous notions on the subject of the real pleasures and business of life. He placed at her disposal large sums of money, hoping she would be induced to go into the fashions and extravagancies of others of her birth, and leave the Methodist meetings. But she maintained her integrity. He took her on long journies, conducted in the most engaging manner, in order to divert her mind from religion; but she still delighted in the Savior.

After failing in many projects which he fondly anticipated would be effectual in subduing the religious feelings of his daughter, he introduced her into company under such circumstances, that she must either join in the recreation of the party, or give high offence. Hope lighted up in the countenance of her affectionate but misguided father, as he saw his snare about to entangle the object of his solicitude. It had been arranged among his friends that several young ladies should, on the approaching festive occasion, give a song, accompanied by the piano forte.

The hour arrived; the party assembled.—Several had performed their parts, to the great delight of the party, which was in high spirits. Miss ——— was called on for a song, and many hearts now beat high in hope of victory. Should she decline, she was disgraced; should she comply, their triumph was complete. This was the moment to seal her fate! With perfect self-possession she took her seat at the piano forte, ran her fingers over the keys, singing at the same time in a beautiful melody, and with a sweet voice, the following stanzas:

No room for mirth or trifling here,
For worldly hopes or worldly fear,
If life so soon is gone?
If now the judge is at the door,
And all mankind must stand before,
The inexorable throne!

No matter which my thoughts employ,
A moment's misery or joy;
But O! when both shall end,
Where shall I find my destined place?
Shall I my everlasting days
With fiends or angels spend!

She arose from her seat. The whole party was subdued. Not a word was spoken. Her father wept aloud! One by one all of them left the house.

Lord ——— never rested until he became a man of Christian benevolence, having given to benevolent Christian enterprizes, at the time of his death, nearly half a million of dollars!—[Selected.

Public Worship in England. The recent census of Great Britain, which was very accurate, having been systematically conducted, and by a great subdivision of the labor, taken in a brief space, instead of requiring many months as did the census of the United States, among other things, shows the people of England to be a church-going people. The Sunday immediately succeeding the day on which the census was taken, was assigned, though without the fact being made public, for ascertaining the number of persons in attendance on public worship. It was found that upon the Sunday selected for the enumeration, thirty-five persons in every hundred of the population attended divine worship. These are thus divided under the general heads of Church of England, Protestant Dissenters, and Roman Catholics. The ratios are as follows: In every thousand persons in the churches and chapels on the day of the count, 490 were Protestant Dissenters from the Established Church, 470 were of the Church of England, and 40 were Roman Catholics. There was but one Roman Catholic to twenty-four Protestants. The Church of England had the largest attendance in the morning. In the afternoon and evening, however, the Dissenters had an excess of 2,203,966 worshippers.

In addition to the denominations enumerated in the tables, there is a statement appended, that there were found in attendance at their respective places of public worship, 80,000 Unitarians, 17,000 Irvingites, 16,000 Mennonites, 14,300 members of the Society of Friends, (which is a decline of that denomination,) and 5,000 Mormons. On the same day there were in attendance at the Sunday schools in England, 1,800,000 children and 250,000 teachers, and the total number of Sunday scholars on the books of the schools was about 2,400,000, and about two teachers to every fifteen scholars.

The population of England and Wales, to which these statistics apply, is about eighteen millions, and the census returns, we think, indicate a greater degree of attention to religious instruction than is manifested in the United States, though we have no data to determine the question.

Spirits Running Locomotives. The Old Colony Memorial, published at Plymouth, narrates an incident which is sufficiently marvelous to please the most ardent believers in "signs and wonders." It states as a matter of common notoriety in Plymouth, that during the last summer months, between three and four o'clock in the morning, there was regularly and distinctly heard upon the railroad the whistle as of an approaching train. As it was well known, however, that no train passed over the road at such a time in the morning, four gentlemen at the Samoset House determined to investigate the mystery. Accordingly, unknown to any one, they one morning about two o'clock stationed themselves on the railroad track, about a mile from town, and awaited the arrival of the supernatural visitor. They did not watch long nor wait in vain, for immediately they distinctly heard far off in the north the sound of a railway whistle, and presently "the distant clatter of wheels was heard—louder, nearer, nearer still it came—the click of the rails in their chairs, the rush of steam was as plain in their ears as if the lantern glared before them—the shriek of a demon-whistle close at hand made them leap from the track, as the train thundered down the grade—the hot breath of the panting steed was in their very faces as it passed—as the unearthly scream ceased, they heard the brakemen screwing up their brakes, the tinkle of a bell and a sound of meeting cars, as if the invisible spectre monster of the road had reached his journey's end."

About a month since, says the Memorial, one of the watchers visted a spirit circle in Boston, where he was an entire stranger to all present save one to whom he had never revealed the summer incident, when the engineer of the spectral train held spiritual converse with the astonished company. A protracted sitting was suddenly brought to a close, by the communicating spirit announcing that he must go.

"'Where and for what?' some one asked. 'To run the train,' was the prompt answer. The sitters looked each upon the other, 'and 'what train?' was the universal exclamation. 'The Old Colony train,' was the reply. 'Do you mean for us to understand that at this hour of the night a train of cars passes over that railway?' There was a long pause. Slowly and deliberately, as if making no common revelation, the arm of the medium moved at last, and the pencil wrote these words: 'In life I was an engineer upon that road. At stated intervals, a train, unseen of mortal eyes, takes the spirits of pious dead to the Pilgrim home they consecrated by their lives. Mr ———, who is with you, will say whether he has ever heard or knows ought of that train. It is not for mortals to know more.'"

The Memorial vouches for the truth of this wonderful narrative. It is a little singular, we will simply hint, that spirits who can enter rooms with closed doors, and who are ever present at the call of mediums, should require a train of cars to transport them to Plymouth!—[Boston Traveller.

Tremendous Snow Storm. On Saturday night and Sunday forenoon, we had a snow storm, which for continuous severity has seldom been equaled in latter years. As regards this point, the "oldest inhabitants" confess themselves entirely at fault. The storm commenced at the South, probably as early as Friday night or Saturday morning, for dispatches from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, of Saturday evening, announce an unusually severe snow storm, attended by a heavy gale of wind, and quite cold. At Washington, on Saturday evening at 9 o'clock, a foot of snow had already fallen, with a prospect of a continuance through the night. At New York, on Saturday evening, the wind blew a hurricane, and in some places the snow was two feet deep. The storm followed the coast, until it reached Halifax, where we hear that a severe gale commenced yesterday morning, and the streets were blocked with drifts of snow.

Some idea of the depth of the snow in our streets may be formed from the fact that Hathorne & Co. started for their stable at Williams Market yesterday morning, with four four horse sleighs to break out the way to Chelsea Ferry, and about one hundred men to shovel. The teams did not reach the ferry until about 4 o'clock in the afternoon—about seven hours going three miles.

It is not an extravagant estimate that five thousand people passed Saturday night in cars within five miles of this, or in the different depots.—[Boston Journal.

The Indian Outbreak in Florida. In a letter from Ocala, Fla., dated Dec. 25, we have some further information in regard to the attack of the Seminole Indians upon the Government troops. The letter, after giving the facts already published, says:

"It is scarcely necessary to say that the excitement throughout all the country is intense. It is known that beside the troops in the service of the United States which have been established at Fort Meyers and other points along the line of territory occupied by the Indians, there are several surveying parties already in the field, whose position is considered extremely perilous."—[Boston Journal.

A Field of Blood. Within the radius of five miles around Sebastopol it is supposed that more blood has been spilt, more lives sacrificed, and more misery inflicted, in a year, than on any other equal extent of the earth's surface, in the same time, since the days of Noah's flood.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE ARAGO.

Arrival of Steamship Arago.—Capture of Kars confirmed.—The steamship Arago, from Southampton, with dates from London of 19th ult, arrived at New York Sunday afternoon, Jan. 6.

The correspondent of the Daily News affirms that Sweden has ratified the treaty with England and France, whereby the allied powers guaranty the territorial integrity of Sweden, and the latter power engages not to allienate any of her territory to Russia. The contracting powers also engage to communicate reciprocally all propositions received from Russia.

Rumors of peace still continue abundant.—Count Esterhazy left Vienna for St Petersburg on the 16th ult., with important dispatches, it is said, containing propositions of a pacific tendency, and it is stated that if the Czar refuses their acceptance, Austria will withdraw her ambassador from St. Petersburg. Both the Daily News and Times express strong doubts as to the acceptance of the propositions by the Czar. It is affirmed that Esterhazy's instructions are to return immediately, in the event of the Czar's refusal.

The difficulty which existed between the English and French governments relative to the conditions on which peace should be made, had been arranged, it is said, through the efforts of the King of Sardinia.

The surrender of Kars is confirmed. Nine pashas, together with Gen. Williams and 16,000 troops, had been taken prisoners. Among the munitions of war which had been captured were 120 field pieces, including some heavy guns.

The Russian General Bebutuff had established his head-quarters at Kutais, and intends shortly to resume offensive operations against Anaka and Redoubt Kaleh. The defiles between Kars and Erzeroum were held by the Russians.

Affairs in the Crimea remain quiet.

Great preparations are being made by the British for the opperations of the Baltic fleet in the ensuing spring. Contracts had been made in Sweden for supplying the French fleet and its accompanying army. The Persian ambassador arrived at St. Petersburg on the 9th of December.

The Terms of Peace Sent to Russia. Count Esterhazy, the Austrian Ambassador at St. Petersburg, was to leave Vienna yesterday for his post, the bearer of the ultimatum which Austria has resolved to press upon the acceptance of the Czar. The tenor of the contents is no secret. We have repeatedly alluded in this journal to the terms that must be required from Russia to effect a peace that shall be safe and honorable. The annihilation of the maritime supremacy of Russia in the Black Sea, by the exclusion from its waters of all ships of war—by the dismantling of her fortresses on its coasts—and by the residences of Consuls, who may certify that no purposes but those of legitimate commerce are ever attempted to be compassed—would free Turkey from all danger by sea from her great neighbor; whilst the utter renunciation of all rights of interference with the Sultan's dominion over his subjects, and of protectorate over the Danubian Principalities, together with the cession of a portion of Bessarabia, comprising the mouths of the Danube, would secure the Porte in undisputed possession of its European territorial rights.

From St. Petersburg. The following letter had been received in Paris from St. Petersburg, under date of Dec. 6:—

"The police is so active here that it is difficult and even dangerous to write anything, and each time I take up my pen I do so in fear and trembling, and am only tranquil when I know that my letter is fairly over the frontier. You can hardly imagine the condition in which St. Petersburg is. Sorrow or dismay is depicted on every countenance. Distress and misery are everywhere. The government does its best to force the nobles to be generous, to give fetes and balls—but money is wanting. The theatres are open; the Italian opera has resumed its performances—and this may be said to be the only pleasure we now have here. The city has always had a military aspect; but now, more than ever, it has the appearance of a camp. The taking of Sebastopol fell on this population of Moujiks like a clap of thunder, and the defeat of Mouravieff before Kars exasperated every one. These are facts which cannot be kept secret, and which destroys many illusions. It is only now people begin to think that Russian armies are not always invincible, nor always victorious, and the peasants cannot recover from their astonishment.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says that the terms which Count Esterhazy carries have been accepted by both England and France. There had been a difficulty between the two governments, the English cabinet being unwilling to accept a settlement on the terms that France deemed sufficient; and to the King of Sardinia is given the credit of bringing them into accord. The writer expresses his belief, that Russia will not accept the new proposition.

Obituary.

MERIDEN, Ct., Jan. 2d, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—But a few months have elapsed since we were called to lay our beloved Br. Holmes in the lonely charnel house, and we had fondly hoped the cruel tyrant would no more step his icy foot within our ranks, but alas! he was not satisfied, and again our hearts bleed by being called to say farewell to one we loved.

Sr. Harriet E. Wilcox, the beloved companion of Br. Lewis Wilcox, fell asleep peacefully and in certain hope of a glorious resurrection and immortality through Jesus Christ the Life-giver, on Sabbath afternoon, Dec. 30th, 1855, aged 27 years.

Two years ago last May she closed the eyes of a darling little son and now she lies beside him, awaiting the life-call when "death shall be swallowed up in victory." Since that time her walk has been that of one who was seeking a better inheritance. She embraced the Advent views during Br. Adrian's labors here one year ago last March; since then, when her health would permit, she has met with us, and given her testimony to the blessedness of the Gospel hope. She has left a babe of a few months old, and may He who feeds the young ravens when they cry, take it in His arms and carry it in His bosom, and sustain and comfort our bereaved Br in his desolation and loneliness. Nothing but the blessed hope could now support him; but that proves a solace, and enables him to say, 'It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth Him good.' May the Lord help us to keep our lamps trimmed, and stand ready to obey the summons that shall proclaim our earthly labor done.

Oh thou broken-hearted weeper
In thy lonely, darkened home,
Strive to meet the lonely sleeper
When she triumphs o'er the tomb.

M. L. DURAND.

Fell asleep in Jesus, at Windham, Me., Thursday evening, Dec. 27th, Br Josiah Little, aged 63 years.

In noticing the death of this beloved Br., it can truly be said of him, "A good man has fallen."

For a long time previous to his death, Br. Little had been a firm and consistent believer in the speedy coming of Jesus Christ; and the effect of this blessed hope was always seen in his daily life, at home and abroad. Always at his post with his armor on, he was prepared to defend the truth and aid the cause of his Master. His house, his heart, and his hands were ever open to help the poor and needy. In the place of meetings, around the family fireside, and elsewhere, he was always faithful to his trust as a Christian, as a husband, and a father. But he has gone. His last sickness, which was typhoid fever, he bore with patience and resignation. A few days previous to his death, while his family and neigbors had gathered around him to witness the closing scene, he gave to each words of comfort or admonition, extended to them the parting hand, and bade them farewell. Often, when he could speak, would he call his wife and attending friends around him, request them to sing and pray with him, and with a heart full of love and joy, shout aloud to God. Calmly he met his end, saying that "the grave looked pleasant; for in it he should rest but a little while before the voice of Jesus would penetrate it, and he should awake to immortality." His last words were concerning the return of the "Nobleman" to set up His Kingdom under the whole heaven.

But as he sleeps in the grave, the tearful eyes of the widowed mother, fatherless children, and lonely sister, tell plainly that they are sadly afflicted. May the blessed hope of the Gospel cheer the hearts of these sorrowing ones now; and finally may they meet our dear Br. in the land of eternal day.

The funeral of Br Little was attended by the writer, who endeavored to comfort the bereaved ones by the words of truth recorded in Rev. 21:4.

R. R. YORK.

YARMOUTH, Jan. 2d 1856.
(Herald and Reformer please copy.)

Appointments.

CONFERENCE AT DANBURY, N. H.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at Danbury, commencing Friday, Jan. 25th, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the Sabbath. Meeting expected to be holden in the new School House, near Br. Knowlton's. Eld. David Leavitt and the writer are expected to attend.

For the Brn., T. M. PREBLE.

If the Lord will, I will preach at Springfield, Sunday, Jan. 13th.
J. W. CRABTREE.

The Lord willing, I will try to preach the word of life in West Brattleborough, Vt, Sunday, Jan. 13th.
Athol, Mass. Jan. 20th.
O. D. GIBSON.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 13th.
Portland, Me., Jan. 20th. J. COUCH.

Providence permitting, Br. Hemmenway will preach in Union St. Church, Salem, Sunday, Jan. 13th.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Collinsville, Sunday, Jan. 20th.
Fair Haven, Ct., Jan 27th.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. in
Ware Village, Sabbath, Jan. 13th.
Springfield, Sabbath, Jan. 20th.
H. PRATT.

The Lord willing, Elder L. L. Howard will preach in Salem, at the Union St. Church, on Sunday the 27th.
THURSTON HARDY.

By leave of Providence, Eld. L. L. Howard will preach at
Lawrence, on the 2d and 3d Sundays in January.

The Lord willing, Eld. J. Couch will preach at
Lawrence on the 4th Sunday in Jan.

The Lord willing, I will meet with Br. R. R. York by request of the Brn. at Hollis Centre, Jan 12th, 6 1-2 o'clock, and remain over the Sabbath.
JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Charlemont, Wednesday and Thursday evenings Jan. 9th, and 10,
South Hawley, Friday eve, Jan. 11th.
West Hawley, Saturday eve. and on Sunday Jan. 12th, and 13th,
Savoy Tannery, Monday eve. Jan. 14th.
North Adams, Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday evenings 15, 16th, 17th,
Cheshire, Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday 18th, 19th, 20th,
Chester Factories, Monday and Tuesday evenings 21st, and 22d,
Westfield Farms, Wednesday and Thursday evenings 23d, and 24th.
Westfield, Friday eve. 25th.
Springfield, Saturday eve. and Sunday 26th and 27th.
Thorndike, Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Bondville, Tuesday eve, 29th.
Ware, Wednesday eve, 30th.
I expect a yoke-fellow to assist in filling the above appointments.
SAMUEL BRAGG.

By permission of Providence Eld E Burnham will preach at New Bedford, on Sunday, Jan 13.

The Lord willing, by invitation, I will spend Lord's Day, Jan. 20th, with the Church in Portsmouth, N. H.
S. S. BREWER.

By Divine permission, I will preach at
Springfield, Mass., Friday Jan. 11th.
Jawbuck, Ct., Sunday Jan. 13th.
W. SHELDON.

Providence permitting, I will mee with the Brn. in the following places.
Hillsborough, Sunday Jan, 13th.
Danbury, Sunday Jan. 20th.
Sutton, Jan. 22d, eve., where Br. Jesse Hazen may appoint.
Carlisle, Mass., Sunday, Jan. 27th, and longer, if thought best.
B. P. MANNING.

If the Lord permit, I will hold meetings as follows.
Freeport, (Flying Point,) Jan. 14th.
R. R. YORK.

Notices.

☞ Advent brethren hold regular meetings every Sabbath in the Chapel on Spring Street; also on Tuesday and Friday evenings. In giving out appointments, Brn. will please to name the place, as there are two meetings held in this city.

For the Brethren,
THOMAS N. PALMER.
CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 19th, 1855.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor, for sale at this Office. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The above works by Eld. Z. Campbell, are for sale at this Office.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts "	3 " "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 cts "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 cts "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
Voice of the Church $1	"	9 " doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.

Address orders with the cash to
H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.
☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages, and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and by O. Hart, Concord, N. H., and D A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

☞ Br. J. K. Bellows, your communication is received.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is Russell's Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is Bolton-ville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

A Edgecomb, S Roberts, A Woodworth, C Akely, H Harris, W Baker, W Smith, C Goldie, D Thayer, J Hodgkin, D Hastings, A Bennett, G B Lawrence, J Grey, S Atkinson, W [illegible] ford, D S Cables, A O Holt, H Saunders, M A Abex, T Harrington $1 each.

L Tuttle, S S Parker, C B Jones, W A Durand, A Johnson, J Higby, I J Bailey, B Merrill, B Potter, W Dingwell 50 cents each.

A B Hoyt $2, H Way 25 cents, T Hildreth for the poor $2.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

A Edgecomb $1, Dr G Pierce $5, C Cottle $1, A B Hoyt $1, J Couch $5, H A Lord $1, A Waterman $1. Whole amount paid [illegible]

For The Crisis.

Armageddon.*

Oh Earth! thy robes are darkly stained with blood,
And long and blasphemous has been thy day;
And thou hast dared the vengeance of a God,
Till, weary grown, He will not long delay.

Black crimes befoul thy once fair Eden face:
Thou'rt loathsome in the eyes of holy heaven;
Nor dost thou yet repent of all thy ways,
Nor bow the knee, nor ask to be forgiven!

Canst thou not read the writing on the wall?
Dost thou not know the fiat has gone forth?
Thy days are numbered, and thou soon must fall,
Like a spent vessel, Oh thou sin-cursed earth!

Dark brood the heavens above the Eastern World,
Thunders, long pent, begin their mutt'rings dire,
Even now, the kings their banners have unfurled,
Drunk with the red wine of Jehovah's ire!

Staggering, reeling, ready to fall,
Blind with the frenzy of intoxication,
Dreaming of years to come, halcyon all,
While the sword glitters o'er every doomed nation.

Woe to the nations, when
That sword unsheathed shall be!
Woe to the bloody men
Wielding it ruthlessly!

Frenzied and maddened, though boasting of chivalry;
Thinking it glorious to murder each other!
'Mid clashing of steel, and 'mid roar of artillery,
Brother's sword bathed in the blood of his brother!

But hark! I hear a louder blast
Than e'er was blown by mortal breath,
It makes each foeman stand aghast,
And shuddering, stay his work of death.

And look! behold yon lurid sky
Grows brighter than the noonday sun,
With kindling glories, such as eye
Of mortal never gazed upon!

And brighter yet that fire doth glow,
And louder yet that blast doth blow,
When heaven's wide portal opes, and lo!
Forth rides a glorious cavalry!

Ah! who is this, their leader bold,
Girt with a zone of glittering gold,
Crowned with bright gems of worth untold,
Riding in glorious majesty?

"Clothed with a vesture dipped in blood,"
Bathed with the light as with a flood,
"His name is called the Word of God,"
And this, His well tried soldiery.

Now foemen of earth, there's a call for your chivalry,
Dare ye so august an army oppose?
No! trembling and white-lipped with terror, ye turn to flee,
Seeking the mountains to hide from your foes!

Yet thou'lt war with the Lamb, thus the sure word hath said of thee,
Blindly delirious, so mad hast thou grown,
Thou'lt rally once more, for the last strife this earth shall see,
Like the struggling of nature before her last moan!

And now, "a short work will the Lord of hosts make" of it,
All His mad foes to destruction are hurled,
Swept like the chaff when the fierce winds are shaking it,
"Chased like a rolling thing, out of the world."

And now behold! a bow of promise fair,
Re-spans the gentle heavens with peaceful ray,
Soft strains come breathing on the balmy air,
'Tis the mild dawn of an Eternal Day!

T. A. Ferris.

* Rev. 16: 16; Jer. 25: 27-34; Isa. 24: 30; Rev. 19: 11-21; Rev. 17: 14; Isa. 17: 13.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. A. Mussey.

Manchester, Dec. 29th, 1855.

"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." Rev. 3: 10.

Beloved Brn. and Sisters:—In view of the trials and perils, temptations and dangers to which the Church of God are exposed in this our day, how oft have the above precious words come to my mind.

"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience I also will keep thee"—precious promise! O how sure! And while the elements are raging and the storm is beating, I am ready to cry out am I on the rock? have I kept the word of his patience? If so, all is well amid the storm. I hear a voice above the raging tempest, saying, "he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them." O it is the voice of Jesus. "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock.—And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man which built his house upon the sand. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell; and great was the fall of it."

Blessed Master, we hear thy voice, we have read thy words, we will try to obey. But what is it to keep the word of thy patience? Listen, dear Brn. and Srs., hear His voice, obey His words; and all will be well. He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them; and what are the sayings of Jesus? His sermon on the Mount, Matt. 5th, 6th, and 7th chs., are the sayings of Christ while giving instruction to His disciples. But is this all? and will this save us? I answer, yes, if we do and keep the sayings of our beloved Lord and Master on the Mount of Olives, we are entitled to a seat in His everlasting Kingdom. But is there not something more for us to do? for we would do all thy requirements, Lord; and we often fear in this dark and cloudy day we shall not do all thou requirest us to do. The still, small voice still whispers amidst the gloom, "he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them."

Dear Brn. and Srs., let us dig deep, and build our house upon the rock, and keep the sayings of Christ; then let the winds and waves roar; yea, let the floods come and dash against our house, it will stand unmoved, for it is founded on the rock.

Was there ever a time so trying as the present? Are we not truly living in the hour of temptation that was to come upon all the world to try them? I can but believe it is even so. Keep the word of my patience, said He, that held in His right hand the seven stars, out of whose mouth went a sharp two-edged sword, and I also will keep thee. We will therefore rest on the promise.

Amid these trying, heart-searching times, I am oft reminded of the words that fell from the lips of our beloved Br. E. Burnham in the fall of '53, "ah, said he, I should not think strange if such a trying time should come that you would wish you were in your graves; blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." I have very nearly come to this, at times, and like the children of Israel, "then cried I unto the Lord, and he saved me out of all my troubles." They cried that they might be led to the City of habitation; so cry we, being buffeted and tempted, facing the storms, trials, and perils, Lord Jesus, come and take us home to our own City of habitation, that we may have rest.

Never were the promises of God more precious than now. I "will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with every temptation make way for your escape that ye may be able to bear it." "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love Him." Again: Peter in comforting us with the precious promise, tells us "the trial of our faith is much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire; that it may be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." He has also told us not to think it "strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try us, as though some strange thing had happened unto us; but to rejoice, inasmuch as we are made partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed, we may be glad also, with exceeding joy." These promises, dearly beloved Brn. and Srs., we will claim as our own, we will lean upon them, for no man is able to take them from us; casting all our care upon Christ, who is our great burden-bearer, for He careth for us.

But amid the rolling surges of time's tempestous ocean, I am oft reminded of poor Peter. He looked out upon the raging billows of the mighty deep—he heard a voice—he looked, and behold it was Jesus walking upon the water. Thinking it to be Him, he cried, "if it be thou, Lord, bid me come unto thee." Jesus says come. Full of faith, away went Peter on the water to meet his Lord; and as long as he fixed his eye on Jesus he kept above the waves; but as he cast his eye upon the foaming waters, he began to sink. Then we hear him crying, "Lord, save, or I perish." Jesus stretched forth His hand, and saved him. "Wherefore (said He,) didst thou doubt?" So it is with us at times; strong faith in God raises us above the perils of these last days, and Peter like, we feel almost strong enough to walk on the raging billows, and rise above the storm; but we stop a moment to listen to the roarings of the mighty deep, and the proud waves rise so high, faith fails us, we begin to sink, and like Peter we cry out, "Lord, save, or I perish."

At another time "the disciples were in the ship in the midst of the sea, toiling and rowing; for the wind was contrary unto them. And about the fourth watch of the night, Jesus cometh unto them walking upon the sea, and would have passed by them. But when they saw him, they were troubled, thinking it was a spirit." But He soothes all their fears, saying, "be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid." He calms the raging billows, and their hearts are made to rejoice.—And will He not appear and deliver us from all our fears and sorrows in the morning watch? I believe He will. Oh yes, blessed be His holy Name, He will come, and will not tarry. Methinks it is past midnight, and the morning cometh.

Amid the thunders of that awful day, while the billows are dashing—all nature is convulsed—thunders roaring—lightnings flashing—the earth quaking—the heavens shaking—the trumpet sounding—the graves bursting—the dead rising—the wicked wailing—a voice from the throne proclaims "it is done." Amid such commotion as this, will not nature shrink, and be overwhelmed with terror at the scene? But we shall hear a voice above the roaring of the waves, "it is I, be not afraid. Children, come home." Our fears are gone—trials ended—temptation passed—we rise triumphant amid "the wreck of matter, and the crash of worlds."—"Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed; and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the City of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High."

"What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, who is even at the right hand of God, making intercession for us. Who can separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?"

With the Apostle I can say, "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." I believe it. Hallelujah, praise the Lord. And let all the tempted and tried sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty say, Amen and Amen!

"Sometimes temptations blow
A dreadful hurricane,
And high the waters flow,
And o'er the sides break in;
But still my little bark out-braves
The blustering winds and surging waves.

My Bible is my chart,
By it the seas I know,
I cannot with it part,
It rocks and sands doth show;
It is my chart and compass too,
Whose needle points forever true."

Abigail Mussey.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. P. Green.

Plymouth, Windsor Co. Vt.
Nov. 25, 1855.

Dearly Beloved in Christ:—I wish to speak to you to-day through the medium of the Crisis; though I am obliged to remain at home on this, the Lord's day, which was set apart by God himself as a day of rest, a day for holy consecration to Him. I hope all that are convened under the sound of the Gospel, will make a wise improvement of such blessings; for there are many, of which I am one, that are not thus favored.

The Crisis comes to me, poor and unworthy as I am; and in it I find a rich repast to-day. I know not what I should do without it: it is a grand instrument, in the hands of God, of diffusing light and instruction to the scattered flock. Hope it will be continued till time shall end; for it grows better and better. The Lord will provide means for its publication as long as he sees fit, and no longer.

Write, dear Brn. and Srs., as often as opportunity presents itself. Give the word of exhortation, pray without ceasing, in every thing give thanks, hold on to the promises of God, be ye steadfast, immoveable, growing in grace daily, and in the knowledge of the truth. Let the ministers of God be faithful at their posts, though they suffer hunger, cold, or the scoffs and sneers of the poor, wicked, thoughtless children of the evil one. Go out into the high-ways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that the King's house may be filled. O that we may not any of us be found in the great assembly, without having on the wedding garment. If we are, we shall be cast into outer darkness, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth. O Lord, have mercy on us, save us in thy Kingdom.

Let us "wait upon the Lord until the day that he will rise up to the prey; for his determination is to gather the nations, that he may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them his indignation, even all his fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of his jealousy." May we escape those things that are coming on the earth.

O, let us not wander away from the fold of God. The way is plain and easy, even amidst trial severe. Poverty is no barrier against true religion, and the closest alliance with our Lord and Savior.—Let us realize with what a price we are bought.

Dearly beloved, may we keep His commandments, and do His will, that we may have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates, into the City; soon Christ will come and he will send His angels to gather his elect, from the four winds; then shall we meet all the loved ones of the Lord: Jesus is our loving friend, He always did love His humble followers and He always will to all eternity. I can already behold, by an eye of faith, our long-sought rest. O, we shall soon reap, if we faint not. O let us be ready to hail the glad, glad day. O glorious day! when we shall again behold our sleeping friends, near and dear to us by the ties of nature. All that sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. What more shall I say? I will have Jesus to reign over me; but the last servant of God will soon have been sealed. I believe there are strong indications of the great day of God Almighty being immediately ushered in, bringing "joy unspeakable and full of glory," to the true believer; but to the wicked, and the careless, sleepy professor, a storm is fast gathering that will burst with tenfold vengeance. Let us, my dear Brn. and Srs., struggle on a few more days. When a few more trials are over, when a few more storms are past, we shall meet to part no more. Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. Soon the victory will be won and the warfare be at an end. "Dark and dreary is the way"—strong and mighty are the elements which oppose; but through the riches of His grace, I shall overcome all my foes both inward and outward. I am continually crying to God for Almighty Grace to help me, that I may be admitted into His everlasting Kingdom. Bright are the hopes which sustain me. Let us love one another, pray for each other—and that we may meet in the place that Christ has gone to prepare, is the prayer of your unworthy Sister.

Sophronia P. Green.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

By H. Pratt.

No. 5.

The Gospel age, compared with former ages, was looked upon, and spoken of by the Prophets, as an age of glory, an age of light. The Apostle also, contrasting it with the Mosaic dispensation, says the former had no glory by reason of the glory that excelleth. Hear him. 2 Cor. 3: 6-11.

"Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life. But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away: How shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious?—For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.—For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth. For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious."

From this passage we perceive that this dispensation is not an age of "darkness, compared with Israel's glory," but rather one of light and glory. Isaiah, in his 60th ch., looks upon it in the spirit of prophecy when he says, "Arise, shine; (marg. be enlightened,) for thy light is come; and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. And Gentiles shall come to thy light and kings to the brightness of thy rising."

Now hear good old Simeon—one who was waiting 1800 years ago for the consolation of Israel. Luke 2: 25.

"Then took he him (Jesus) up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."

John 8: 12. "Then spake Jesus again unto them saying, I am the light of the world." And again: John 1: 9.—He was the true light. Now had they arisen and been enlightened, then would all these blessings in this 60th ch. of Isa. attended them. The sons of strangers would have built up their walls, &c., but they would not. "He came to his own, and his own received him not." Their deeds were evil, and they hated the light. "They would not come to the light lest their deeds should be reproved"—they chose darkness—they would not "Arise," and be enlightened; therefore says the Savior, "The kingdom of heaven shall be taken from YOU, and given to a people bringing forth the fruits thereof." But is it possible that this is conditional? Hear Jeremiah again. "At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it, if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, (did Israel "arise?" and was she willing to be enlightened when her light came?) then I will REPENT of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them"

But lest this should fail to confirm all minds of the conditionality of this prophecy I will let inspiration settle it forever. Isaiah says "the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls."

Now hear Zechariah upon this same point. Zech. 6: 15. "And they that are far off (strangers of course) shall come and build in the temple of the Lord, and ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you.

And this shall come to pass if ye will diligently obey the voice of the Lord your God." Does it not say IF? Have they obeyed dilligently the voice of the Lord?

Have they arisen and been enlightened with the "true light?" Let facts decide, and let us yield submission to the purpose of God.

For the Crisis.

Fight the good fight of Faith.

Hartford, Ct. Dec. 23d, 1855.

1 Tim. 6: 12. Faith is the principle which, in the sight of God, distinguishes His children in this world from other men. The Christian is to fight the good fight of faith, and by faith he lays hold on eternal life. To fight successfully, he must have his feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace—the helmet of salvation—the sword of the Spirit—the shield of faith—his head crowned with the righteousness which is of faith, and Jesus for his Captain and all will be well. Two great classes exist here, believers and unbelievers. The written word i. e. the Bible has survived the bitterest opposition—the minutest examination ever applied to any volume the world has ever seen. The fulfilment of prophecy—the human character—the effects upon the mind, and conduct of man, which the reception of the Gospel produces—these are some of the daily evidences of its truth. We are required to believe the testimony of God. We read in the account of the rich man and Lazarus, the former says to Abraham, "if one went unto them from the dead, they would repent." But Abraham replies, "if they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they hear though one rose from the dead." Now one has risen from the dead, even Jesus, and those who will not believe upon evidences before mankind, now, would not in case one rose from the dead in this day. We please God by placing simple and full reliance upon all He has said. We believe every thing the Scriptures record as having transpired; and everything they foretel to take place, we unhesitatingly and with all our hearts believe will come to pass. When we read that in six days the Lord made heaven, earth and seas, and all that in them are, we believe such is the plain truth; we do not require the professed aid of the geologist to show how it was done; that is, according to his explanations and reasonings—that one of these days meant thousands or milions of years, when God tells us the evening and morning were the first day; so of the second, third, fourth, &c. No! it is by faith, not human science, that we understand the worlds were framed by the word of God. It is by faith we know that God will raise the dead from their graves, notwithstanding the man of science demonstrates as he thinks such a work to be an utter impossibility. The sentiment avowed, which will believe nothing but what is obvious to the senses, we spurn; for it is an infidel sentiment. We believe in a miracle-working God. In our very hearts we believe, we realize, that He raised up Christ from the dead; and this living, this simple and genuine faith, grasps the Resurrection future of all now dead.

This is an age, Brn. and Srs., when faith is low. The vital truths of the inspired word are attacked in the professed Church, and out of it; yet by using the shield of faith, you will escape the delusions of this perilous time. Remember your fight is one of faith. O Brn. and Srs., redeem the time.

Yours truly, Solomon Hale.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. B. Spaulding.

Orington, Me. Dec. 30th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—Praised be God, I am yet alive, and my life is crowned with the mercies of God. I have to praise Him, and to labor in His cause, and find His work my delight.

You know my temperament is to be up, then down: well, blessed be God, it has been up with me for four months past, and I have been laboring on one of the Fox Islands—Vinal Haven—for the last four months, visiting families and giving lectures; and I have had a good time, found the people ready to come out to hear, and hear with candour and attention too.

There are 1500 inhabitants there, ten school houses, no Minister, nor meeting-house; of course there is no sectarianism, nobody feeling afraid their Church would be pulled down; nobody to oppose. It is the best field for me to labor in I have ever found. Almost every one would come out to hear, and I have given lectures in ten school houses in Vinal Haven, three in North Haven, and one in Matinicus—14 in all—from 3 to 10 lectures, in each, to good congregations. My lectures have been first, on searching the Scriptures, second and third, the Kingdom of Heaven, fourth, the fall of man and Restoration by Jesus Christ, fifth, the Resurrection of the dead, sixth, the new heavens and earth, seventh, the New Jerusalem, eighth, the signs of the times, ninth, the sleep of the dead, tenth, the destruction of the wicked, thus bringing the whole of the Advent Gospel before the people; a people who were ignorant of that doctrine; thus sowing the seeds of truth, which may spring up and bear fruit.

I have been very kindly received, very hospitably treated, and have enjoyed the work exceedingly. My health has been good, and my spirits are good. My faith remains firm in the glorious truths spoken of by the Prophets concerning the Kingdom of God, and the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Light I think does and will gradually increase. The disappointments we have passed will lead to more caution as to what we believe and receive. It should lead us to feel humble in view of our imperfections, and short-sightedness, and to trust more to the leadings of God's Spirit.—We should not shut up our minds against new truths, but keep them open to conviction, ready to hear and examine, and keep so humble that the spirit may lead us into truth.

I think I can see truths or prophecies ahead of us, which must be fulfilled before the cleansing of the earth by fire. I might name some of them over; but will not at this time, lest I should distract the Brn. I feel for them, I see the discouraged, distracted state of their minds. I sympathize with them, I know what it is; they have been honest in doing as they have, they acted according to their best light, and God always will bless those who act up to their best light; and wherever they have erred, their error has been that of the judgment, and not of the heart.

Let them take courage, trust in the Lord, and cling to His promises, not one jot or tittle of which will fail.

God is not a man, that He should lie; or the son of man, that He should repent, or change His purpose; what He hath said, He will do.

Comfort one another, speak ye comfortably to Zion, strengthen the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees, say to them of a fearful heart, be strong, behold your God will come. Yes, praised be His name, He will come and save you, though mistaken in the time, God's promises have not failed. Hold on, Brn., endure unto the end, and the Kingdom will be yours.

Yours, waiting for redemption,

Benjamin Spaulding.

Selected For the Crisis.

Pride and Humility. I never yet found pride in a noble nature, nor humility in an unworthy mind. Of all trees, I observe that God has chosen the vine—a low plant, that creeps upon the helpful wall; of all beasts, the soft and patient lamb; of all fowls, the mild and guileless dove. When God appeared to Moses, it was not in a lofty cedar, nor sturdy oak, nor the spreading plane, but a bush—an humble, slender, abject bush. As if He would, by these elections, check the conceited arrogance of man. Nothing procureth love like humility; nothing hate like pride.

For The Crisis.

Armageddon.*

Oh Earth! thy robes are darkly stained with blood,
And long and blasphemous has been thy day;
And thou hast dared the vengeance of a God,
Till, weary grown, He will not long delay.

Black crimes befoul thy once fair Eden face:
Thou'rt loathsome in the eyes of holy heaven;
Nor dost thou yet repent of all thy ways,
Nor bow the knee, nor ask to be forgiven!

Canst thou not read the writing on the wall?
Dost thou not know the fiat has gone forth?
Thy days are numbered, and thou soon must fall,
Like a spent vessel, Oh thou sin-cursed earth!

Dark brood the heavens above the Eastern world,
Thunders, long pent, begin their mutt'rings dire,
Even now, the kings their banners have unfurled,
Drunk with the red wine of Jehovah's ire!

Staggering, reeling, ready to fall,
Blind with the frenzy of intoxication,
Dreaming of years to come, halcyon all,
While the sword glitters o'er every doomed nation.

Woe to the nations, when
That sword, unsheathed shall be!
Woe to the bloody men
Wielding it ruthlessly!

Frenzied and maddened, though boasting of chivalry;
Thinking it glorious to murder each other!
'Mid clashing of steel, and 'mid roar of artillery,
Brother's sword bathed in the blood of his brother!

But hark! I hear a louder blast
Than e'er was blown by mortal breath,
It makes each foeman stand aghast,
And shuddering, stay his work of death.

And look! behold yon lurid sky
Grows brighter than the noonday sun,
With kindling glories, such as eye
Of mortal never gazed upon!

And brighter yet that fire doth glow,
And louder yet that blast doth blow,
When heaven's wide portal opes, and lo!
Forth rides a glorious cavalry!

Ah! who is this, their leader bold,
Girt with a zone of glittering gold,
Crowned with bright gems of worth untold,
Riding in glorious majesty?

"Clothed with a vesture dipped in blood,"
Bathed with the light as with a flood,
"His name is called the Word of God,"
And this, His well tried soldiery.

Now foemen of earth, there's a call for your chivalry,
Dare ye so august an army oppose?
No! trembling and white-lipped with terror, ye turn to flee,
Seeking the mountains to hide from your foes!

Yet thou'lt war with the Lamb, thus the sure word hath said of thee,
Blindly delirious, so mad hast thou grown,
Thou'lt rally once more, for the last strife this earth shall see,
Like the struggling of nature before her last moan!

And now, "a short work will the Lord of hosts make" of it,
All His mad foes to destruction are hurled,
Swept like the chaff when the fierce winds are shaking it,
"Chased like a rolling thing, out of the world."

And now behold! a bow of promise fair,
Re-spans the gentle heavens with peaceful ray,
Soft strains come breathing on the balmy air,
'Tis the mild dawn of an Eternal Day!

T. A. Ferris.

* Rev. 16: 16; Jer. 25: 27-34; Isa. 24: 30; Rev. 19: 11-21; Rev. 17: 14; Isa. 17: 13.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. A. Mussey.

Manchester, Dec. 29th, 1855.

"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." Rev. 3: 10.

Beloved Brn. and Sisters:—In view of the trials and perils, temptations and dangers to which the Church of God are exposed in this our day, how oft have the above precious words come to my mind.

"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience I also will keep thee"—precious promise! O how sure! And while the elements are raging and the storm is beating, I am ready to cry out am I on the rock? have I kept the word of his patience? If so, all is well amid the storm. I hear a voice above the raging tempest, saying, "he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them." O it is the voice of Jesus. "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock.—And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock. And he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man which built his house upon the sand. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell; and great was the fall of it."

Blessed Master, we hear thy voice, we have read thy words, we will try to obey. But what is it to keep the word of thy patience? Listen, dear Brn. and Srs., hear His voice, obey His words; and all will be well. He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them; and what are the sayings of Jesus? His sermon on the Mount, Matt. 5th, 6th, and 7th chs., are the sayings of Christ while giving instruction to His disciples. But is this all? and will this save us? I answer, yes, if we do and keep the sayings of our beloved Lord and Master on the Mount of Olives, we are entitled to a seat in His everlasting Kingdom. But is there not something more for us to do? for we would do all thy requirements, Lord; and we often fear in this dark and cloudy day we shall not do all thou requirest us to do. The still, small voice still whispers amidst the gloom, "he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them."

Dear Brn. and Srs., let us dig deep, and build our house upon the rock, and keep the sayings of Christ; then let the winds and waves roar; yea, let the floods come and dash against our house, it will stand unmoved, for it is founded on the rock.

Was there ever a time so trying as the present? Are we not truly living in the hour of temptation that was to come upon all the world to try them? I can but believe it is even so. Keep the word of my patience, said He, that held in His right hand the seven stars, out of whose mouth went a sharp two-edged sword, and I also will keep thee. We will therefore rest on the promise.

Amid these trying, heart-searching times, I am oft reminded of the words that fell from the lips of our beloved Br. E. Burnham in the fall of '53, "ah, said he, I should not think strange if such a trying time should come that you would wish you were in your graves; blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." I have very nearly come to this, at times, and like the children of Israel, "then cried I unto the Lord, and he saved me out of all my troubles." They cried that they might be led to the City of habitation; so cry we, being buffeted and tempted, facing the storms, trials, and perils, Lord Jesus, come and take us home to our own City of habitation, that we may have rest.

Never were the promises of God more precious than now. I "will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with every temptation make way for your escape that ye may be able to bear it." "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love Him." Again: Peter in comforting us with the precious promise, tells us "the trial of our faith is much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire; that it may be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." He has also told us not to think it "strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try us, as though some strange thing had happened unto us; but to rejoice, inasmuch as we are made partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed, we may be glad also, with exceeding joy." These promises, dearly beloved Brn. and Srs., we will claim as our own, we will lean upon them, for no man is able to take them from us; casting all our care upon Christ, who is our great burden-bearer, for He careth for us.

But amid the rolling surges of time's tempestous ocean, I am oft reminded of poor Peter. He looked out upon the raging billows of the mighty deep—he heard a voice—he looked, and behold it was Jesus walking upon the water. Thinking it to be Him, he cried, "if it be thou, Lord, bid me come unto thee." Jesus says come. Full of faith, away went Peter on the water to meet his Lord; and as long as he fixed his eye on Jesus he kept above the waves; but as he cast his eye upon the foaming waters, he began to sink. Then we hear him crying, "Lord, save, or I perish." Jesus stretched forth His hand, and saved him. "Wherefore (said He,) didst thou doubt?" So it is with us at times; strong faith in God raises us above the perils of these last days, and Peter like, we feel almost strong enough to walk on the raging billows, and rise above the storm; but we stop a moment to listen to the roarings of the mighty deep, and the proud waves rise so high, faith fails us, we begin to sink, and like Peter we cry out, "Lord, save, or I perish."

At another time "the disciples were in the ship in the midst of the sea, toiling and rowing; for the wind was contrary unto them. And about the fourth watch of the night, Jesus cometh unto them walking upon the sea, and would have passed by them. But when they saw him, they were troubled, thinking it was a spirit." But He soothes all their fears, saying, "be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid." He calms the raging billows, and their hearts are made to rejoice.—And will He not appear and deliver us from all our fears and sorrows in the morning watch? I believe He will. Oh yes, blessed be His holy Name, He will come, and will not tarry. Methinks it is past midnight, and the morning cometh.

Amid the thunders of that awful day, while the billows are dashing—all nature is convulsed—thunders roaring—lightnings flashing—the earth quaking—the heavens shaking—the trumpet sounding—the graves bursting—the dead rising—the wicked wailing—a voice from the throne proclaims "it is done." Amid such commotion as this, will not nature shrink, and be overwhelmed with terror at the scene? But we shall hear a voice above the roaring of the waves, "it is I, be not afraid. Children, come home." Our fears are gone—trials ended—temptation passed—we rise triumphant amid "the wreck of matter, and the crash of worlds."—"Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed; and, though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the City of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High."

"What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, who is even at the right hand of God, making intercession for us. Who can separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?"

With the Apostle I can say, "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." I believe it. Hallelujah, praise the Lord. And let all the tempted and tried sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty say, Amen and Amen!

"Sometimes temptations blow
A dreadful hurricane,
And high the waters flow,
And o'er the sides break in;
But still my little bark out-braves
The blustering winds and surging waves.

My Bible is my chart,
By it the seas I know,
I cannot with it part,
It rocks and sands doth show;
It is my chart and compass too,
Whose needle points forever true."

Abigail Mussey.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. P. Green.

Plymouth, Windsor Co. Vt.
Nov. 25, 1855.

Dearly Beloved in Christ:—I wish to speak to you to-day through the medium of the Crisis; though I am obliged to remain at home on this, the Lord's day, which was set apart by God himself as a day of rest, a day for holy consecration to Him. I hope all that are convened under the sound of the Gospel, will make a wise improvement of such blessings; for there are many, of which I am one, that are not thus favored.

The Crisis comes to me, poor and unworthy as I am; and in it I find a rich repast to-day. I know not what I should do without it: it is a grand instrument, in the hands of God, of diffusing light and instruction to the scattered flock. Hope it will be continued till time shall end; for it grows better and better. The Lord will provide means for its publication as long as he sees fit, and no longer.

Write, dear Brn. and Srs., as often as opportunity presents itself. Give the word of exhortation, pray without ceasing, in every thing give thanks, hold on to the promises of God, be ye steadfast, immoveable, growing in grace daily, and in the knowledge of the truth. Let the ministers of God be faithful at their posts, though they suffer hunger, cold, or the scoffs and sneers of the poor, wicked, thoughtless children of the evil one. Go out into the high-ways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that the King's house may be filled. O that we may not any of us be found in the great assembly, without having on the wedding garment. If we are, we shall be cast into outer darkness, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth. O Lord, have mercy on us, save us in thy kingdom.

Let us "wait upon the Lord until the day that he will rise up to the prey; for his determination is to gather the nations, that he may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them his indignation, even all his fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of his jealousy." May we escape those things that are coming on the earth.

O, let us not wander away from the fold of God. The way is plain and easy, even amidst trial severe. Poverty is no barrier against true religion, and the closest alliance with our Lord and Savior.—Let us realize with what a price we are bought.

Dearly beloved, may we keep His commandments, and do His will, that we may have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates, into the City; soon Christ will come and he will send His angels to gather his elect, from the four winds; then shall we meet all the loved ones of the Lord: Jesus is our loving friend, He always did love His humble followers and He always will to all eternity. I can already behold, by an eye of faith, our long-sought rest. O, we shall soon reap, if we faint not. O let us be ready to hail the glad, glad day. O glorious day! when we shall again behold our sleeping friends, near and dear to us by the ties of nature. All that sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. What more shall I say? I will have Jesus to reign over me; but the last servant of God will soon have been sealed. I believe there are strong indications of the great day of God Almighty being immediately ushered in, bringing "joy unspeakable and full of glory," to the true believer; but to the wicked, and the careless, sleepy professor, a storm is fast gathering that will burst with tenfold vengeance. Let us, my dear Brn. and Srs., struggle on a few more days. When a few more trials are over, when a few more storms are past, we shall meet to part no more. Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. Soon the victory will be won and the warfare be at an end. "Dark and dreary is the way"—strong and mighty are the elements which oppose; but through the riches of His grace, I shall overcome all my foes both inward and outward. I am continually crying to God for Almighty Grace to help me, that I may be admitted into His everlasting Kingdom. Bright are the hopes which sustain me. Let us love one another, pray for each other—and that we may meet in the place that Christ has gone to prepare, is the prayer of your unworthy Sister.

Sophronia P. Green.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

By H. Pratt.

No. 5.

The Gospel age, compared with former ages, was looked upon, and spoken of by the Prophets, as an age of glory, an age of light. The Apostle also, contrasting it with the Mosaic dispensation, says the former had no glory by reason of the glory that excelleth. Hear him. 2 Cor. 3: 6-11.

"Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life. But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away: How shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious?—For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.—For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth. For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious."

From this passage we perceive that this dispensation is not an age of "darkness, compared with Israel's glory," but rather one of light and glory. Isaiah, in his 60th ch., looks upon it in the spirit of prophecy when he says, "Arise, shine; (marg. be enlightened,) for thy light is come; and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. And Gentiles shall come to thy light and kings to the brightness of thy rising."

Now hear good old Simeon—one who was waiting 1800 years ago for the consolation of Israel. Luke 2: 25.

"Then took he him (Jesus) up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."

John 8: 12. "Then spake Jesus again unto them saying, I am the light of the world." And again: John 1: 9.—He was the true light. Now had they arisen and been enlightened, then would all these blessings in this 60th ch. of Isa. attended them. The sons of strangers would have built up their walls, &c., but they would not. "He came to his own, and his own received him not." Their deeds were evil, and they hated the light. "They would not come to the light lest their deeds should be reproved"—they chose darkness—they would not "Arise," and be enlightened; therefore says the Savior, "The kingdom of heaven shall be taken from YOU, and given to a people bringing forth the fruits thereof." But is it possible that this is conditional? Hear Jeremiah again. "At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it, if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, (did Israel "arise?" and was she willing to be enlightened when her light came?) then I will REPENT of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them"

But lest this should fail to confirm all minds of the conditionality of this prophecy I will let inspiration settle it forever.

Isaiah says "the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls."

Now hear Zechariah upon this same point. Zech. 6: 15. "And they that are far off (strangers of course) shall come and build in the temple of the Lord, and ye shal know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you.

And this shall come to pass if ye will diligently obey the voice of the Lord your God." Does it not say IF? Have they obeyed dilligently the voice of the Lord?

Have they arisen and been enlightened with the "true light?" Let facts decide, and let us yield submission to the purpose of God.

For the Crisis.

Fight the good fight of Faith.

Hartford, Ct. Dec. 23d, 1855.

1 Tim. 6: 12. Faith is the principle which, in the sight of God, distinguishes His children in this world from other men. The Christian is to fight the good fight of faith, and by faith he lays hold on eternal life. To fight successfully, he must have his feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace—the helmet of salvation—the sword of the Spirit—the shield of faith—his head crowned with the righteousness which is of faith, and Jesus for his Captain and all will be well. Two great classes exist here, believers and unbelievers. The written word i. e. the Bible has survived the bitterest opposition—the minutest examination ever applied to any volume the world has ever seen. The fulfilment of prophecy—the human character—the effects upon the mind, and conduct of man, which the reception of the Gospel produces—these are some of the daily evidences of its truth. We are required to believe the testimony of God. We read in the account of the rich man and Lazarus, the former says to Abraham, "if one went unto them from the dead, they would repent." But Abraham replies, "if they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they hear though one rose from the dead." Now one has risen from the dead, even Jesus, and those who will not believe upon evidences before mankind, now, would not in case one rose from the dead in this day. We please God by placing simple and full reliance upon all He has said. We believe every thing the Scriptures record as having transpired; and everything they foretel to take place, we unhesitatingly and with all our hearts believe will come to pass. When we read that in six days the Lord made heaven, earth and seas, and all that in them are, we believe such is the plain truth; we do not require the professed aid of the geologist to show how it was done; that is, according to his explanations and reasonings—that one of these days meant thousands or milions of years, when God tells us the evening and morning were the first day; so of the second, third, fourth, &c. No! it is by faith, not human science, that we understand the worlds were framed by the word of God. It is by faith we know that God will raise the dead from their graves, notwithstanding the man of science demonstrates as he thinks such a work to be an utter impossibility. The sentiment avowed, which will believe nothing but what is obvious to the senses, we spurn; for it is an infidel sentiment. We believe in a miracle-working God. In our very hearts we believe, we realize, that He raised up Christ from the dead; and this living, this simple and genuine faith, grasps the Resurrection future of all now dead.

This is an age, Brn. and Srs., when faith is low. The vital truths of the inspired word are attacked in the professed Church, and out of it; yet by using the shield of faith, you will escape the delusions of this perilous time. Remember your fight is one of faith. O Brn. and Srs., redeem the time.

Yours truly, Solomon Hale.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. B. Spaulding.

Orington, Me. Dec. 30th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—Praised be God, I am yet alive, and my life is crowned with the mercies of God. I have to praise Him, and to labor in His cause, and find His work my delight.

You know my temperament is to be up, then down: well, blessed be God, it has been up with me for four months past, and I have been laboring on one of the Fox Islands—Vinal Haven—for the last four months, visiting families and giving lectures; and I have had a good time, found the people ready to come out to hear, and hear with candour and attention too.

There are 1500 inhabitants there, ten school houses, no Minister, nor meeting-house; of course there is no sectarianism, nobody feeling afraid their Church would be pulled down; nobody to oppose. It is the best field for me to labor in I have ever found. Almost every one would come out to hear, and I have given lectures in ten school houses in Vinal Haven, three in North Haven, and one in Matinicus—14 in all—from 3 to 10 lectures, in each, to good congregations. My lectures have been first, on searching the Scriptures, second and third, the Kingdom of Heaven, fourth, the fall of man and Restoration by Jesus Christ, fifth, the Resurrection of the dead, sixth, the new heavens and earth, seventh, the New Jerusalem, eighth, the signs of the times, ninth, the sleep of the dead, tenth, the destruction of the wicked, thus bringing the whole of the Advent Gospel before the people; a people who were ignorant of that doctrine; thus sowing the seeds of truth, which may spring up and bear fruit.

I have been very kindly received, very hospitably treated, and have enjoyed the work exceedingly. My health has been good, and my spirits are good. My faith remains firm in the glorious truths spoken of by the Prophets concerning the Kingdom of God, and the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Light I think does and will gradually increase. The disappointments we have passed will lead to more caution as to what we believe and receive. It should lead us to feel humble in view of our imperfections, and short-sightedness, and to trust more to the leadings of God's Spirit.—We should not shut up our minds against new truths, but keep them open to conviction, ready to hear and examine, and keep so humble that the spirit may lead us into truth.

I think I can see truths or prophecies ahead of us, which must be fulfilled before the cleansing of the earth by fire. I might name some of them over; but will not at this time, lest I should distract the Brn. I feel for them, I see the discouraged, distracted state of their minds. I sympathize with them, I know what it is; they have been honest in doing as they have, they acted according to their best light, and God always will bless those who act up to their best light; and wherever they have erred, their error has been that of the judgment, and not of the heart.

Let them take courage, trust in the Lord, and cling to His promises, not one jot or tittle of which will fail.

God is not a man, that He should lie; or the son of man, that He should repent, or change His purpose; what He hath said, He will do.

Comfort one another, speak ye comfortably to Zion, strengthen the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees, say to them of a fearful heart, be strong, behold your God will come. Yes, praised be His name, He will come and save you, though mistaken in the time, God's promises have not failed. Hold on, Brn., endure unto the end, and the Kingdom will be yours.

Yours, waiting for redemption,

Benjamin Spaulding.

Selected For the Crisis.

Pride and Humility. I never yet found pride in a noble nature, nor humility in an unworthy mind. Of all trees, I observe that God has chosen the vine—a low plant, that creeps upon the helpful wall; of all beasts, the soft and patient lamb; of all fowls, the mild and guileless dove. When God appeared to Moses, it was not in a lofty cedar, nor sturdy oak, nor the spreading plane, but a bush—an humble, slender, abject bush. As if He would, by these elections, check the conceited arrogance of man. Nothing procureth love like humility; nothing hate like pride.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, (COURIER BUILDING,) | ISSUED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NO. 27 CENTRAL STREET (UP STAIRS.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. | LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1856. | VOLUME 2.—NUMBER 23.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE SPEEDY COMING OF JESUS CHRIST.

S. J. VARNEY, Printer, . . 27 Central St.

TERMS of Subscription to be PAID in ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months,	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months,	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months,	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months,	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	14,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	18,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel undes obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Lowell, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS, J. COUCH, M. GRANT, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publications write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelop.

For The Crisis.

'I will bring distress upon men; and they shall walk like blind men.' Bible.

BY S. S. B.

No. 6.

ROME, named the Eternal City, is called by one historian the city of robbers. This famous capital of the western world, and residence of the Pope of Rome, or man of sin, stands on the river Tiber, fifteen miles from its mouth.

Its foundation according to the chronology of Usher was laid in the year of the world 3256, about 748 years before Christ, and towards the end of the reign of Hezekiah king of Judah, by Romulus and Remus, and soon it became the mistress of the world.

From this city went forth the mailed hordes of invading savages to murder, burn or conquer. From this city went forth the decree that obliged Joseph and the virgin Mary to go to Bethlehem, the place were the Messiah was born.

In this city Nero, the most cruel and savage of all men, and also the most wicked and depraved, (except some of the Popes,) began his persecution against the Christian Church. He condemned them to death, and they were insulted in their sufferings. Some were sewed up in skins of beasts, and then exposed to dogs to be torn in pieces. Some were nailed to crosses, others perished by fire. The latter were sewed up in pitched coverings which, being set on fire, served as torches to the people, and were lighted up in the night. Nero gave leave to use his own gardens as the scene of all those cruelties. He however killed himself in the fourteenth year of his reign.

"HISTORIANS usually reckon ten general persecutions, the first of which was under the emperor Nero, thirty-one years after our Lord's ascension, when that emperor, after having set fire to the city of Rome, threw the odium of that execrable action on the Christians. First, those were apprehended who openly avowed themselves to be of that sect; and by them were discovered an immense multitude, all of whom were convicted. Their death and tortures were aggravated by cruel derision and sport; for they were either covered with the skins of wild beasts and torn in pieces by devouring dogs, or fastened to crosses, and wrapped up in combustible garments, that, when the daylight failed, they might, like torches, serve to dispel the darkness of night.—For this tragical spectacle, Nero lent his own gardens, and exhibited at the same time the public diversions of the circus; sometimes driving a chariot in person, and sometimes standing as a spectator, while the shrieks of women burning to ashes, supplied music to his ears.

"The Second general persecution was under Domitian, in the year 95, when 40,000 were supposed to have suffered martyrdom.

"The Third began in the third year of Trajan, in the year 100, and was carried on with violence for several years.

"The Fourth was under Antonius, when the Christians were banished from their houses, forbidden to show their heads, reproached, beaten, hurried from place to place, plundered, imprisoned, and stoned.

"The Fifth began in the year 127, under Severus, when great cruelties were committed. In this reign happened the martyrdom of Perpetua and Felicitas, and their companions. These two beautiful and amiable young women, mothers of infant children, after suffering much in prison, were exposed before an insulting multitude, to a wild cow, who mangled their bodies in a horrid manner; after which they were carried to a conspicuous place, and put to death by the sword.

"The Sixth began with the reign of the emperor Maximinus, 235.

"The Seventh, which was the most dreadful ever known, began in 250, under the emperor Decius, when the Christians were in all places driven from their habitations, stripped of their estates, tormented with racks, &c.

"The Eighth began under Valerian.—Both men and women suffered death, some by scourging, some by the sword, and some by fire.

"The Ninth was under Aurelian, in 274; but this was inconsiderable, compared with others before mentioned.

"The Tenth began in the nineteenth year of Diocletian, 303. In this dreadful persecution, which lasted ten years, houses which were filled with Christians were set on fire, and whole droves were tied together with ropes, and thrown into the sea. It is related that 17,000 were slain in one month's time; and that during the continuance of this persecution, in the province of Egypt alone, no less than 144,000 Christians died by the violence of their persecutors; besides 700,000, that died through the fatigues of banishment, or the public works to which they were condemned." [Buck's Theological Dictionary.

From this city of murders went forth the bloody mandates of these cruel monsters. But Rome has had its morning, noon, and now comes its doleful night—a night in which no glimmering star of hope shall shed a ray of light amid the fierceness of the wrath of God who has witnesed the tears, and heard the dying groans and prayers of His persecuted saints. Not a hair of their heads has fallen without His notice; He has watched their precious dust; He will soon revivify those martyred ones, of whom it is written they came out of great tribulation. Their prayers are among the odours in the golden vials of Rev. 5: 8.

The population of this great city, according to Putnam in his dictionary of dates, is estimated in A. D. 48, at 6,900,000! The ground on which the modern city is built covers about one thousand acres, or one mile and a half square. Its walls form a circuit of fifteen miles, and embrace an area of 3000 acres. In 1836 the population consisted of 153, 678, exclusive of Jews, who amount to 3,700.—It now has one building—St. Peters—that will hold over one third of its population. It covers 20 acres, and cost one million.* Pope Leo X, in order to carry on this magnificent structure, published indulgences and a plenary remission to all such as should contribute money towards it. This world-renowned structure will hold 54,000 persons. The city contains 46 squares, 5 monumental pillars, 10 obelisks, 13 fountains, 22 mausoleums, 150 palaces, 346 churches.

Rome once contained 6,900,000 inhabitants; its present number is not one quarter of a million. "Alas! alas! that great city," in which the mitred Antichrist sat in the temple of God, showing himself to be Lord God the Pope, now crouches a sycophant at the feet of one of the vilest parvenus, who in turn uses him to serve his own political interests.

An article before me makes the following statement:—

"ROMANISM AT ROME. Italy is the best place for seeing the effects of Popery; for if there is anything good in the system there you ought to see it. Rome ought to be a celestial city; for if the Pope be God, then the city must be heaven—it might be expected to be the New Jerusalem, whose inhabitants bask in the perpetual sunshine of Pontifical favor. Well, we know that in 1847 there were 150,000 inhabitants in the city of Rome; now there are only 100,000, the other 50,000 being banished or in prison, and their old Pope requires from that day to this, the power of two foreign armies to keep him in his rickety chair. If the Pope be God, then the inhabitants are saints; but of what is Rome's population composed? Brigands, shirri, soldiers, daupers, and prisoners, and the Pope presiding over them all!"

* Pounds Sterling.

Let me introduce an extract taken from the columns of the New York Times of Jan. 31st, 1852. It presents a sample of Papal Romish government in the nineteenth century.

"NEAPOLITAN ATROCITIES. It is nearly a twelve-month since Mr. Gladstone's expose of Neapolitan cruelty and deception was made public. Sufficient time has passed to judge of the effects. If the government of that unfortunate kingdom could possibly be shamed into humanity, it would have been so since that eloquent pamphlet was circulated throughout Europe, exciting the horror of the benevolent, and the contempt of all public men, who cannot fail to realize the gratuitous barbarity of such proceedings. Naples is branded as the felon government. It stands before the world in the plenary enjoyment of all the infamy its terrible wickedness deserves.

"Our files of the Risorgiamento keep us posted as to the course of events in the Two Sicilies, and we regret to observe no amelioration of the symptoms. The number of political prosecutions continues without abatement. It is no rare occurrence to see three or four hundred prisoners arraigned, at one Court term, for high treason, in having lent themselves to the project of Italian Unity. Twenty-five thousand prisoners are supposed to suffer the vengeance of government, the torture of hunger, the intolerable weight of chains, or the welcome agonies of death, in the various prisons of the kingdom. Those noble men, Poerio, Scialoia, Setembrino, Cagnazzi, still rot in confinement. It happened that the finest intelligences the miserable despot could lay his hands on, were the first to fall beneath his wrath. Nearly all the talent, enlightenment, wisdom and goodness of the kingdom were shut out from life, light and hope forever, at the first outburst of the monster's cruelty.—Now the men of a less notable stamp, the true-hearted but subordinate sympathizers with liberal sentiments, are having their day. The trials are purely arbitrary, the object of every officer of the Court being the conviction of the prisoner, and the prisoner having no earthly means of defence. There is no getting back to freedom from a Neapolitan Court room. The only exit is into some filthy dungeon, populous with vermin, or what is worse, abandoned wretches flung in to suffer the penalty of revolting crimes. The city of Naples is less crowded with prisoners of State than other portions of the kingdom. It is an object of the government to prevent the world of travel that floods every season that lonely capital, from encountering the evidences of demon-like barbarity. The castles, fortresses, and dungeons of Calabria, however, make up for any deficiencies in inhumanity at the capital. The Island of Capri has 120 or 130 upon it. A writer thence describes the treatment of one of the prisoners, and leaves us no reason to doubt that it is a fair ensample of the whole.

"'One of these unfortunate men was condemned to be lashed in the Piazza of our little village for some trifling offence. During the night he nailed up his prison door. The ordinary Urban guard the next morning were sent to bring him to the flogging-post, but finding they could not get at the prisoner, the civil authorities called in a picquet of soldiers. The prisoner from within prayed for trial, saying he was unjustly condemned to be flogged. At last the soldiers broke open the door, and he was laid on a bench to be lashed. The unhappy man tried to escape. The soldiers then struck him with the butt-ends of their guns, on the hips, head, and belly, accompanied by sabre wounds. Thus bleeding and exhausted, he was again placed on the bench to be flogged, but being supposed to be dying, he was carried off to prison, where he expired in a few hours.'

"And thus are men of the highest refinement, and accustomed through early life to every indulgence of ease and intellectual gratification, doomed to suffer the long, tedious tyranny of years, if death, more merciful than man, does not interpose to release them.

"The only means of estimating the number af those who have fallen victims to royal jealousy, is to count up in each community, the various individuals whose disappearance cannot be otherwise explained by their friends, and whose known probity of character, and frankness of utterance, would be likely to expose them to danger of the judgment. They are, perhaps, unheard of, and their fate left problematical for months, when at last they are extracted from some loathsome vault, to have the question of guilt or innocence sifted. Mr. Gladstone confined his narratives to cases which had transpired on the Continent. The dungeons of the Island would have furnished him instances of prisoners brought up for trial who had been awaiting it for two years, among unspeakable, inconceivable sufferings.

"It seems therefore that the efforts of Mr. Gladstone, seconded by Lord Palmerston, to arm the public opinion of Europe against the atrocities of this crowned felon, have had but a partial effect. The Court of Naples certainly exhibited at the time much sensitiveness to criticism, but only modified its plans so as to conceal them better from scrutiny. There was the additional Inquisitorial element of secrecy introduced, to baffle foreign impertinence. That was pretty much all. The capital prosecutions are as numerous, the charges as frivolous, the penalties as severe, as they ever were; and the king defies alike the opinion of men and the dictates of humanity.

"'See Naples and die,' was the exulting proverb of olden time. 'See Naples and live if you can,' is the modern version. The kingdom is a vast prison, with countless unseen dungeons, and lurking trap holes in which the pride, and manhood, and intellect of the people are buried alive. Its cities are slaughter houses, where better blood is daily poured out, than ever coursed in Bourbon veins. Its schools inculcate passive obedience to the king, whose violated oaths are described as so many acts of piety. The Churches are thronged with soldiery to whom the well drilled priests pour out Sunday after Sunday absurd invectives against Liberty and the constitution; or panegyrize the blessings of absolutism.—This is Naples of to-day. A people, whose characteristic is long-suffering, and gentleness, and patience, oppressed with a sorer burden of tyranny than history furnishes an idea of! It seems impossible that such wrongs can exist in the nineteenth century. The common sense of mankind should at once speak and forbid it."

The article above presents some idea of what Papal rule and authority does when it has power, and what it would do if it could. Here is another sketch of BABYLON THE ONCE GREAT:

"A SKETCH OF THE PAPAL STATES. A letter from Ravenna, dated June 12, says the misery in the States of the Pope is extreme. Last year the harvest and the vintage failed, and now they would sell themselves for a piece of bread.—Mothers and even fathers sell their daughters at the tenderest age, even of ten or twelve years; and there is among the poor suffering creatures universal corruption. The price of a piece of bread has risen from three to six fold, and that of the commonest wine (here a necessary of life, and used by all,) three times or more.—When I go to take my breakfast in the coffee-house, (where even at these high prices, I still have an excellent mug of coffee, milk, sugar, two rolls, and two boiled eggs, napkins, &c., in the best coffee-house, for 9 cents—4 1-2 d.) I see little children, miserable women, and even old men, once evidently in better circumstances, and educated too, come and lean by the door, look wistfully in, and humbly wait for you to see their misery, or beg you, for the sake of the Blessed Mary, to relieve their hunger! The people generally do not get one-third of what they want to eat. Meantime they sustain 72 cardinals, or a good portion of this college, idle and useless princes, besides a host of priests that eat up the land, and a good round number of their own good-for-nothing soldiery. Then it requires more than 10,000 French soldiers to keep the capital, eternal Rome, in order, and the Pope from running away, or being massacred, and at least 10,000 Austrians for the north in Bologna, Ancona, Forli, Faenza, &c. What a picture! And yet it is not exaggerated, but underdrawn. Meantime the nobility are also sinking; for the law of primogeniture has been abolished, the estates are divided, and I can see nothing before the Papal States, but universal decay, misery, and downfall."

In another article from the pen of S. Cassali Sechi, Editor of Gavezzi's Crusader, once a citizen of Rome, now of N. Y., we find the following: He addresses himself to Arch Bishop Hughes on the eve of his embarkation for Rome as follows:

"My Lord, you are going to Italy! my most beloved and native land. Soon you will tread with your national episcopal brogues that soil of heroes and of martyrs—the idea alone of seeing that terrestrial Paradise—that blue sky of her serene heavens—that sun which covers with its radiant mantle her miseries and sorrows makes my very heart throb. You will arrive there with a pompous suite. You will be received by the hierarchy with honors—you will march through the streets of our Eternal Rome, as one of her masters and conquerors. And you, a stranger, will be better protected than a Roman citizen. * * I wish you would follow me in an ordeal of spiritual manifestation, on an errand through the city of Rome and into the Roman States. In our walk through the deserted streets of the 'Eternal City,' were we to meet the so called Representative of God on earth, driving in a sumptuous and richly decorated carriage, followed by a company of dragoons, to see the people going and coming without kneeling as of old before HIS HOLINESS and shouting no more as was customary in the bright days of his Pontificate, you need not be surprised, MY LORD JOHN HUGHES; because the people are starved, oppressed with taxes, tortured by the most demoniac police Satan himself could have ever invented to persecute humanity. You would see even mothers covering the face of their children at the breast, that they should not receive from the modern Nero a Papal blessing, which at Rome in our day is considered a curse.

"From the public streets I would lead your Lordship to the dungeons and prisons of San Michele a Ripa Grande, or of the Termo Diocleziane, where we could learn from the Papal Jailor how died a few months ago, 'one Gavezzi,' after having endured five years of close confinement, of privation, of mental aberration, and physical tortures.

"In these two establishments we could find not hundreds! but thousands! of political prisoners—all the youth of Rome and of the Roman States who were unfortunate enough to trust in the paternal pardon of your Pope. Do not be surprised if you find those dens crammed and jammed with moving human flesh.—Should you by accident complain of it to CARDINAL DELLA GENGA, the minister of justice would answer you, 'If the prisons are filled, the graves are open.'

"Inquiring of the inmates, for what crime they are so barbarously treated, they would answer you, 'My Lord, for loving republicanism and liberty as they do in America.' Should you interest yourself so far as to ask them how they were condemned—by what tribunal they were judged—on what authority they were dragged away for years and years from the bosom of their friends and family and society, they would feebly reply, 'We were tried by an Inquisitorial court without meeting our accusors and informers face to face, without being allowed to reply, or choose a defender; we appeared before our masked Inquisitors only to be sentenced.' Their nourishment, my Lord, you would find very different from your Episcopal table. The poor martyrs of freedom are fed on bad brown bread, or soup so clear that you could christen with it. Meat and fresh vegetables are totally banished from those enclosures, or make there a scanty visit only on holy days. The same treatment is practised at St. Leo, at Civita Vecchia, at St. Michele, at Palliano, and in all the hundreds of political Papal galleys. * * Next, my Lord, comes the police. Oh, the PAPAL POLICE is as the Romans call it, l'inferno sulla terra (hell on earth.) This department will offer your Lordship another specticle of a monstrous and inefficient government. The directors and commissioners are generally men taken out of the prisons, or from among highway robbers. In SACRED ROME you will find a Chief of Police and administrator of justice (!) the famous NARDONI who has served as a forger many years in a galley; and should you insist on his taking off his clothes, you would find on his shoulders the brand of infamy stamped with a hot iron.

"The administration of the laws in the Roman States is under the special jurisdiction of Bishops like you. They preside at trial as you would do were New York an appanage of popery. The successors of the Apostles employ Russian legislation, administering the bastinado to political offenders, and also to women. When the pious men cannot discover by false promises of pardon, or by bribery, any confederacy or political secret, they resort to the canaletto, a barbarous instrument under which the wretched victim often expires. This salutary expedient was first introduced by the very Rev. Cardinal Pacà, in 1847. Religious toleration, which, according to his Holiness, is an abomination of modern times, is out of the question, and totally unknown in the States of the Papacy. At Rome, near the Coliseum, or behind the Capitol, or side by side with the Minerva, where is the Inquisition with hundreds of victims deprived of freedom, you will see plenty of street preaching. You will not find the so-called Angel Gabriel, but ignorant, dirty priests, abusing Protestants, denouncing heretics, and damning all those out of the Church."

Such, reader, is the state of modern Rome.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Preparation to meet the Bridegroom.

[BY S. M. BASSETT.

A conviction has been resting upon my mind for the last year, that the Advent Church have never yet been fully prepared to meet the Lord. I think that but few are so completely dead to the world and all it contains, and entirely consecrated to God, as to be qualified for translation.

Dear Brn. and Srs., we are on the eve of that great day of days for which all other days were made. Prophets and Apostles have in all their writings been pointing down to it as the great consummation day. Saints in all ages have viewed it as the most important of all events. We look upon it as an event most awfully sublime. Does it not then appear evident that those who are to witness such an event with mortal eyes, must be pre-eminently holy? Reason as well as Revelation teaches us that we must be entirely purified from all that is, in any degree, offensive in the sight of God, before we can gaze, with an unblanched countenance upon a scene of such terriffic grandeur, and transcendent glory. The word of the Lord says, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Let us, for a moment contemplate a scene which St. Paul tells us was a faint type of that scene for which we are looking. See Heb. 12: 18–29. In the 26th verse he says, God's "voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven." Let us imagine, if we can, the glorious and awful scene at mount Sinai. There were thunders and lightnings, the sound of a trumpet, long and loud, the very mountain itself smoking, trembling, and quaking. Grand and terrific indeed! Ah, God was there. When a pure and holy God revealed himself in this majestic and awful manner, who can wonder that it was almost too much for mortals to bear? But beloved, we are looking for a scene, far more glorious, "also heaven," is to be shaken! How will a guilty, trembling world try to shrink away from the presence of the great and mighty God!"

Says Isa. 2: 19, "And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord and for the glory of His majesty, when He ariseth to shake terribly the earth." Awful moment! How should we "Watch and pray that we may be accounted worthy to escape all those things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man?" Oh, surely, if we have "this hope" in us, we shall "purify ourselves, even as he is pure." Every desire, and motive, which does not spring from pure love to God, will be denied.

This purifying process is a severe one, and but few probably will endure it.—Says Daniel, "Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried." We must be entirely set apart for God. It is not sufficient that we aim to be; we must actually be entirely consecrated to God. We must be much more dead to the world, and alive to God, than we have probably ever yet been. We have, dear Brn. and Srs., passed through many trials which have been severe.—The belief of a doctrine so much hated and despised by the world as the appearing of our glorious King, has exposed us to no small amount of ridicule. Our names have been "cast out as evil," we have been scoffed at, but have all our trials, great as they have been, served so to wean us from the world that we are conscious of doing nothing except to please God? that we have His smile and approbation resting on us continually, and that we are doing nothing but what we are conscious God approves? Have our trials had this effect? If not, we have not been sufficiently purified, the gold has not been sufficiently tried. We must enter the furnace once more; and it must be heated hotter than ever before. We shall come out at last, glory to God, not only "as gold seven times purified, but also as a bride with white raiment and adorned with her jewels. Isa. 61: 10.

O let us hasten to purify ourselves and be ready for the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, JAN. 19, 1856.

The Millennium.

As we may have some readers who have not fully investigated the Scriptural testimony in regard to the Millennium, and particularly as our Correspondent who writes under the signature of Amicus, has offered some friendly suggestions on the subject, I thought it might be advisable to present some remarks, not specifically in reply to him, but upon the question of the pre-millennial Advent, leaving it for others, if they choose, to reply definitely to his arguments.

The great question of paramount importance in relation to the coming age of glory to the Israel of God, is, whether the glowing, precious, blessed promises that shine all through the prophetic declarations in relation to the day of Israel's triumph, and the extension of her dominion over the entire surface of the globe, is to be accomplished by the personal appearing of Zion's King for the redemption of His people and the destruction of His enemies, or by a spiritual manifestation of His grace, conquering the world by the energies of His all-subduing love. This one grand idea is the key to the prophetic vaults which will bring out of this bank of heaven the rich deposits of golden treasure—the pure coin bearing the image and superscription of Prince Immanuel. Just settle this point, and a solution is found to the entire subject.

Let us recur to some passages of Scripture which are claimed by the advocates of a temporal millennium as favoring their theory on this subject.

To my apprehension the Scriptures are so plain on this subject that he may run that readeth; for if it be in the power of language to express the final catastrophe—the ultimate ruin that is to overwhelm a rebellious world, it is expressed in those identical passages and their contexts that are so frequently cited to prove a spiritual reign. In those very Scriptures the sentence of a guilty world is written as in letters of living light. The lightnings of God's vindictive justice flash fearfully, and the thunders of His violated law roll in monitory tones that are enough to shake the pillars of the earth, from those portions of divine writ which by the present popular theology are distorted into the light of God's countenance, and the whispers of His love.

One of the passages most commonly quoted to sustain the popular theory is that contained in the 2d Ps. "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." V. 8. This being the first passage which is understood to clearly develop the great fact of Christ's spiritual reign, and as furnishing a sort of chartered right to the heathen as the subjects of His overflowing love, to be controlled by the sceptre of His grace, we will commence with this Psalm.

It has been God's method of communicating instruction, to seize upon some present object, or some prominent event, as a nucleus, around which to throw many instructive ideas—many salutary admonitions, or heavenly consolations, as the case may be. Now the most prominent vent in the world's history—that point from which radiates all the light that has shone upon a benighted world is the cross. It was the most fearful development of heaven-daring rebellion on the part of those who, with wicked hands, crucified and slew the only begotten and dearly beloved Son of God, the world ever witnessed.—The inspired Psalmist lays hold on this event to illustrate the revolted state of man and the final retribution of such an apostatized race.

His first exclamation is, "Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us." vs. 1–3.

Turn now to Acts 4: 25–28. "Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together, against the Lord, and against his Christ. For of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontus Pilate with the Gentiles and the people of Israel were gathered together, For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done." This quotation from the 2d Ps. demonstrates that David had reference primarily to the events transpiring at the crucifixion. The idea seems to be this—a war is waged by the combined powers of earth against the government of God. The moral purity of His Son, and the holy requisitions of the Gospel were abhorrent to their feelings; and through the corruption of their own depraved natures, instead of submitting to His blessed yoke and heavenly precepts, they reject His easy reign, break assunder the bonds of moral obligation, and cast away the cords of the divine law. Thus they virtually undertake to overthrow the government of Jehovah, and wage an unequal contest with the King of kings.

V. 4. "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision." In the poetic imagery of the Psalmist, the Lord is represented as holding His enemies in derision, or as smiling at the puny efforts of such impotent foes.

V. 5. "Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure."

This is an expression of the indignation of God at such unparalled outbreaks of violence and rebellion.

V. 6. "Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion." This v. declares that His King, (Marg. Anointed,) the same Anointed One against whom their energies had been combined, and whom they had designed to crush, was exalted to the honors of royalty. They thought to extinguish the spiritual light so painful to their diseased organs of vision; but they had indeed "imagined a vain thing;" for that light had arisen in glory far above their reach, and in peaceful security it looked down from the heights of heaven above.

V. 7. "I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." In this v. the Father recognizes the object of their malice as the Son of His love. To find the fulfilment, turn to Acts 13: 32, 33.—"And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that He hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee."

Thus it appears that the Lord made this public recognition of His Son by raising Him from the dead. The object of the Father's most endeared affection could not be permitted to remain under the dominion of death. The Divine arm is put forth, the chains of death are broken, the charnel house unlocked, and Jesus comes up again, covered with light and glory, triumphant over the powers of hell. Thus it was demonstrated that He was no other than the Son of God, being declared such by the resurrection from the dead.

V, 8. "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

Many believe that as the heathen are to be given to Christ for an inheritance, they must of necessity be converted; but that this is not a Scriptural position, the following verse will show.

V. 9. "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." But as some would convert this iron rod of justice into a golden sceptre of mercy, and make this denunciation of wrath a promise of salvation, let us proceed to scrutinize the passage in the light of Bible truth.

The term break seems to be used in Scripture as synonymous with destroy, as "I will break the pride of your power;" "and shall be broken; yea, also, the prince of the covenant." I am confident no different interpretation can be fairly made out from Scripture usage. But when you come to connect with it the idea of a rod, it would be in the highest degree unnatural to regard it as the operation of God's grace; and if you add that this breaking shall be with a rod of IRON, it is passing strange that any one should mistake such denunciations for a promise of salvation, and more especially when it is annexed that they shall be dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel.—This last expression is one of the most striking representations that could be conceived of to express the perfect, final and irremediable destruction of the heathen, and all who are in rebellion against the government of God. What can more fully present the idea of utter destruction—eternal ruin—than dashing to fragments an earthern vessel? If it were not for the prejudices of education, and a desire to sustain a favorite theory, no one could have misinterpreted so plain a passage evidently spoken too in "sore displeasure" of God against most atrocious wickedness. Were the advocates of the popular theory to take the ground occupied by many sound and gifted minds, as that of Pres. Edwards, that the millennium would be preceeded by great and terrible calamities that would exterminate a large portion of the wicked from off the earth, there might be some plausibility in their exposition of similar passages; but when the position is taken that the world's conversion is to be effected by the ordinary means of grace as theologians now believe, it is impracticable to find any harmony or consistency in the scriptural presentation of the subject.

Now the Bible is intended as a plain guide—"a light to our feet and a lantern to our path"—would the great Author of it threaten to dash in pieces the subjects of His pardoning love and saving grace with a rod of iron? Would He tell them in His WRATH that Jesus is exalted as Head over the house of David? that He holds the reins of universal empire? and that all who have risen in rebellion against His sovereign authority are to be given into His hands, inasmuch as He is the rightful Proprietor of all things, even to earth's remotest bounds? and that He has "appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained (or appointed by His decree in the 7th v. of this Psalm,) whereof He hath given assurance unto all men in that He hath raised Him from the dead?" Acts 17: 31. Would He have published to the powers of darkness a manifesto couched in the severest terms of denunciation, and announcing the tremendous and startling fact that those who were implicated in the awful scenes of Calvary were under His control? that they came within the bounds of His jurisdiction, which fact was demonstrated by His victory over death and hell? for "He was declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead," Rom. 1: 4

I learn from the Cottage Bible that there are two words signifying a staff, shebet and chakak; the one, being emblematical of civil power; the other, of judicial authority; and that the word here translated "rod of iron," is that which denotes the office of a Judge. This circumstance proves conclusively that the exposition I have given is correct; for a just Judge is expected to pass sentence according to the merits or demerits of the case. It may fall within the province of the civil power to pardon the guilty, but the judicial power must be governed by the requisitions of the law, and adjudge the criminal accordingly.

Let us now recur to Bible usage—one of the most satisfactory methods of settling theological questions.

Jer. 51: 20–23. "Thou art my battle-axe and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations; and with thee will I destroy kingdoms; And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider; With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and maid; I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers."

Here the expression, "break in pieces," occurs nine times; and does it mean destruction? or salvation? Let the following verse answer. "And I will render unto Babylon, and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea, all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the Lord." If Babylon was saved, and her inhabitants converted, then this expression denotes salvation; if otherwise, destruction.

Again: Jer. 48: 38. "There shall be lamentation generally upon all the housetops of Moab, and in the streets thereof: for I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the Lord." Here the expression is precisely analogous to that in the second Psalm. Was Moab saved? Let the 42d v. answer.—"And Moab shall be DESTROYED from being a people."

Not to pursue the analogy further we have quoted ten examples of Scripture usage, in all of which it cannot be disputed that similar expressions signify entire destruction.

But there is evidence on this point, if possible, still more convincing. If there be any possibility of settling to a moral demonstration the meaning of a passage, it is by the quotation of that passage into some other portion of Scripture; for in such a case we have not merely a precedent, but the exposition of the sacred writer himself.

In Rev. 2: 27 we find a quotation of the 9th v. of the Ps. under consideration, and the context there shews it has reference to the time when His enemies are to become His footstool.

The text and context read thus: "But that which ye have already hold fast till I come. And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father." vs. 25–27. Says Jesus: "hold fast till I come," again: "he that overcometh," again: "keepeth my work unto the end." All these expressions denote beyond controversy that the reference here is to the literal coming of Christ, and the reward to be given to the saints at the resurrection. Just in the same manner a recompense is promised to the faithful of all the seven Churches when He shall come. How striking is the fact that the reward here promised is the same as that promised to Christ in the second Psalm. It is analogous to being seated with Him in His throne, or sitting "on 12 thrones judging the 12 tribes of Israel," or executing "the judgment written; this honor have all the saints." Ps. 149: 9. It is as if He had said, to him that overcometh will I give power over the nations according to the commission which I have received of my Father in the second Psalm.

In Rev. 19th, where Jesus rides forth to fulfil the executive judgment, the saints participate in this ultimate triumph over His foes. "Out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should SLAY the nations," (v. 15,) and from v. 21 we learn that "the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, and all the fowls were filled with their flesh." Therefore the sword is an emblem of destruction indisputably. Again: "And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God." That this is the executive judgment, none can deny. Here then we have the first and last clause of a verse, expressive of the final judgment upon the wicked, and between these two members of the sentence is almost the identical phraseology found in the second Psalm, "He shall rule them with a rod of iron."

Thus has inspiration placed this term in a position from which no human power can wrest it as they do the other Scriptures, so there can be no excuse for not understanding what God means by a rod of iron.

Vs. 10, 11. "Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings; be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling."

An appeal is made in these verses to the kings and judges, or rulers of the earth, to serve the Lord with FEAR, and rejoice with TREMBLING—are they called upon to fear and tremble lest the world should be converted? lest they should enjoy the salvation of God? or are they admonished to fear the iron rod of Jehovah's wrath?

V. 12. "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him."

It was the custom of the age for the princes of the realm to kiss a newly crowned king in token of their willing subjection to his authority. Jesus is spoken of in this Psalm as a King newly inducted into office on the holy hill of Zion. Zion, being the seat of David's power, was an apt emblem of the throne of Christ on which He was to sit and rule over the house of David.

Thus far this Psalm plainly denotes the just indignation of God against the rebellious subjects of His government; but it closes with a promise of blessings on the head of all those who trust in Him.

In settling the meaning of Scripture phraseology, we ought first to decide on the signification of the terms according to the common usage of language the world over. Secondly, to ascertain how far the context agrees with the construction you may put upon it. Thirdly, to ascertain the Bible usage by comparing the text with other passages throughout the Bible. Fourth, to find whether your construction harmonizes with the general tenor of Scripture sentiment. The three first methods I have adopted in examining this interesting portion of divine writ. The fourth remains to be attended to.

Taking the plain, literal sense of the language, what a beauty, sublimity and harmony there is throughout the Psalm. But with the spiritual view all is distorted, unnatural and incongruous. And not only so, but it conflicts with the representations of Scripture in other portions of the word. Some of these portions we may take up in a future number.

Personal Favors.

Thank the Lord—and much obliged to those friends from whom I have received private benefactions of late. From two friends I have received $5 each for my personal benefit; from several others, one and two dollars each. I would like to add some remarks, but want of time prevents at present.

For The Crisis.

The Age of Gospel Light.

I have been requested by a Br., favorable to the Advent views, to give my opinion, through the Crisis, upon the 14th ch. of Zechariah.

These views were, in a measure, expressed, in an article which I wrote some weeks since, upon the 20th of Revelation. I presume they will not accord with those of our Advent Brn., but they are presented in a spirit of kindness, and if unscriptural, I wish to be set right.

Before entering upon the consideration of this subject, we would premise, that we can see a good reason why our Lord should desire to have His Gospel become victorious over all the earth, and can see no reason why He should not; for "He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."—With this great principle in view, we will proceed to examine the subject.

It would seem, that the events herein described have not had their fulfilment. By some it has been thought, that the first two verses, related to the overthrow of Jerusalem by the Romans; but a weighty objection to this view arises from the fact, that it is here recorded, that "one half of the city shall go forth into captivity; and the residue shall not be cut off from the city;" whereas a general dispersion then took place; and "Zion was ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem became heaps.—The fulfilment of this prophecy is then in the future; therefore the further inquiry is, When will it be fulfilled?

In our former communication, we adverted to the incursion of Gog and Magog, as recorded in the 38th, and 39th chapters of Ezekiel's prophecy. This warlike prince, the prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal, it appears, is to come forth to fight against the ancient chosen of God, and is to fall on the mountains of Israel, with all His bands, and there be given to the ravenous birds of every sort, and to the beasts of the field to be devoured, Ezek. 39: 4. The fulfilment of this prophecy, being yet in the future, and describing an event similar to the one under consideration, may therefore be fairly presumed to refer to one and the same event. In the eleventh chapter of Daniel, commencing at the 40th verse, we have also a prophecy of similar import. After describing the conduct of the wilful king; (which we understand to be the same as the Antichrist of St. Paul and St. John.) the prophet says, "The king of the south shall push at him, and the king of the north shall come against him," &c. We find by this prophecy, that this king of the north is to overflow and pass over, and that he shall also enter into the glorious land, and many shall be overthrown, some however will escape, which agrees with the chapter under consideration.—The substance of this combined prophecy, then, in brief, appears to be this, The Jews will be restored to their own land, and this king of the north, or Gog, in the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, will cast his eyes upon the glorions land, the inhabitants of which are dwelling in unfortified security; Ezek. 38: 8, and in his rapid conquests, will overspread much of it, and gain possession of the beloved city. The inhabitants of the land, in their distress, cry out for aid to their Brn. in Christ, the Gentile Christian nations, which aid at this critical juncture arrives, and arrests the complete overthrow of the beloved city. The time has also arrived for the Most High to manifest His power for the deliverance of His people, as He manifested it in former days against the Egyptians and other of their ancient enemies. "The Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with thee." As if He had said, Fear not, O! ye chosen of the Lord, for He shall collect the faithful of the remote nations to aid thee, and himself appear, as in former days, for thy deliverance. What will be the exact nature of the miraculous display of Divine power alluded to in the fourth verse, would be as presumptuous for us to say, as to attempt to ascertain the exact nature of the plagues, with which He will smite the hosts of His enemies, around the beloved city. That they will be smitten with a fearful plague, is vividly set forth in this ch., from the 12th to the 15th vs., and also, that a strange delusion will seize upon them, so that the hand of each, shall be lifted up against his neighbor.

After the overthrow of these presumptuous enemies, the Lord will have perfected His Kingdom, and have ushered in that blissful period of light and knowledge, which all His prophets have predicted, and which are described in the concluding verses of this chapter, wherein the most common concerns of life, are said to be marked with "Holiness to the Lord," and He will be king over all the earth. (verse 5.

It is also asked, if the Mount of Olives is not the Sanctuary that is to be cleansed, and made holy, for the camp of the saints, during the reign of Christ?

In Dan. 8: 14, we read in reply to the interrogation of the saint therein mentioned, "Unto two thousand, and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." And from the 17th v. we are informed that the vision extends to the end. We will now turn to the 13th ch. of Matt., vs. 38 to 43, and we shall perhaps ascertain something of the nature of this cleansing. The word in the 38th v., rendered world, is kosmos, which is correct; in the 39th and 40th vs., it is aionos, age; Therefore the passage reads thus; "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom, but the tares are the children of the wicked one. The enemy that sowed them is the Devil; the harvest is the end of the world, (age,) and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world, (age.) The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

It is therefore important that we ascertain what is here meant by the "end of the age." The Jews, we are informed, were accustomed to dispute concerning the two ages of the world; i. e., the age antecedent to the coming of the Messiah, and the age when the Messiah should come in majesty, and establish His kingdom, and introduce an era distinguished for knowledge, liberty, and piety. The disciples seem to have been impressed with those views, to which our Lord adverts, commissioning them to promulge this gospel of the kingdom, correcting however the errors into which they had fallen in regard to the nature of His kingdom and its subjects, (Acts 1: 6–9.) In John 19: 36 we have also the words of our Savior which assure us that his kingdom is not of this world; and in Luke 17: 20, it is said it "cometh not with observation," and from the connection we infer that it was already introduced. Yet some in our day, like the disciples of old, who said, "Lord, will thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" are looking for the Messiah to sit on a material and earthly throne; and to disabuse the mind of this unscriptural idea, is a matter of vital importance.

We read, Dan. 2. 35, that the "stone cut out without hands became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth." Isaiah tells us of this mountain, 2d ch. 2d to 6th vs., and informs us what it is: The mountain of the Lord's house. Thus we conclude, that the sanctuary is the Church of Christ; His spiritual kingdom, Which He received at His ascension; Dan. 7: 13, 14, the elements whereof were introduced into this world at His Advent; Luke 17; 21. In which the enemy has sowed tares; 2 Thess. 2; 3, and which will be plucked up at the end of age, as we perceive by the passage under consideration. This we conceive extends to the dawn of the Millennial period; which will be distinguished as an age of remarkable purity, light and spiritual prosperity, in proof of which we would refer to Isa. 2d to 6, Ps. 2: 8; 46: 9; Jer. 50: 5; Hosea 2: 18; Jer. 31: 45; Zech. 8: 20–23, as a portion of the passages upon this subject, with which the Scriptures abound. Then will the Gospel of our Lord become victorious in the earth.

AMICUS.

PARTICULAR NOTICE.

ORRINGTON, Jan. 8th, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—I want to say through the Crisis to our preaching Brn., that it is thought best under existing circumstances, to have a Conference in Hermon, where the Brn. and Srs. from different places can meet and exchange views, and come to a better understanding than now exists. We have not had one of our western Brn. to preach to us since the time passed, except Br. Cummings. Brn., do not neglect us any longer.

Will not Br. Couch, Hemmenway, Brewer, or some one who can, come and labor with us, appoint a Conference as above, when it will suit them best, and give notice through the Crisis?

By request, WM. CHAPIN.

P. S. While writing the above, I forgot to mention the labors of Br. Boutell, who spent some time with us last fall, and should this meet his eye, we hope he will receive it as a request to come again as soon as convenient.

W. C.

Bible.

BY RALPH HOYT.

Bible! blessed Bible!
 Treasure of the heart!
What sweet consolation
 Doth thy page impart;
In the fiercest trial,
 In the deepest grief,
Strength, and hope, and comfort,
 In each holy leaf.

Bible—let me clasp thee,
 Anchor of the soul!
When the storm is raging,
 When the waters roll,
When the frowning heavens
 Darken every star,
And no hopeful beacon
 Glimmereth afar,

Be my refuge, Bible!
 Then be thou my stay,
Guide me on life's billow,
 Light the dreary way;
Tell me of the morrow,
 When a sun shall rise,
That shall glow forever,
 In unclouded skies.

Tell me of that heaven
 In the climes above,
Where the bark rides safely
 In a sea of love.
Bible! let me clasp thee!
 Chronicle divine,
Of a world's redemption,
 Of a Savior, mine!

Wisdom for the simple,
 Riches for the poor,
Hope for the desponding,
 For the sick, a cure;
Rest for all the weary,
 Ransom for the slave,
Courage for the fearful,
 Life beyond the grave!

Bible! Blessed Bible!
 Treasure of the heart,
What sweet consolation
 Doth thy page impart;
In the fiercest trial,
 In the deepest grief,
Strength, and hope, and comfort,
 In each holy leaf!

Christ in the Tempest. The sea of Galilee is a small body of water, of no importance to the commercial world, and forsaken now by the busy population which once surrounded its shores. Yet it is classic ground to the Christian; for near its shores and upon its waters were performed some of the most wonderful works of our Saviour, which are related by the historians of his life with a conciseness and simplicity that show the absence of all artifice, and command the admiration of the thoughtful reader. Let us contemplate one incident, for example.

One day he had been teaching a great multitude; and when evening was come, he said to his disciples, "Let us pass over unto the other side." "And they launched forth," in fearless obedience to their Divine Teacher. How little did they anticipate the trials and dangers of that night! They risked all in obedience to their Lord, not asking what evil would happen to them in the path of duty. But not so with Christ. He knew all that was about to happen. The tempestuous wind, the rough sea, and the danger of being swallowed up in the deep—all were known to him, who, though in human shape, could "see the end from the beginning." Yet he trembled not; not a ruffle of anxiety disturbed the serenity of his peace; and, weary with the toils of the day, he sought and found physical repose. There, on that soft pillow, slept the mortal frame of him who ruled the tempest and the sea; and in all the consciousness of his omnipotence, he feared not, but slept on as quiet and secure, as unconscious of danger as an infant in its mother's arms, while his disciples, who had not yet learned the full extent of his power, were toiling to steer the vessel safely through the tempest, and trembling lest they should be swallowed up by the raging billows; they went to their Lord in that hour of fearful danger, and awaking him, exclaimed, "Lord save us; we perish," and they found him a mighty deliverer. Rising calmly and fearlessly from his repose, ready to rescue his chosen ones from the jaws of death, and in the full consciousness of his power to save, he stepped forth, and in the simple majesty of his omnipotence, he "rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace—be still." Could a mere man have the presumption to speak in such a tone of conscious authority to the warring elements? How would they mock his impudence, by raging on with redoubled violence! Yet this humble personage, to all appearance no more powerful than those around him, was obeyed at once by the wind and the waves. They recognized the mandate of the supreme; and as soon as the voice of command was passed from his lips, they laid themselves at rest at his feet.

An incident so astounding to human credulity, yet so clearly palpable to their senses, could not fail to produce a corresponding effect upon the minds of those who witnessed it. "They feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?" But Jesus, ever ready to improve the lessons of experience, turned to them, and in a tone of mild reproof asked, "Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?" These inquiries were not designed for the occasion alone on which they were uttered. They are applicable at all times to all occasions in which the disciples of Christ are prone to give way to feelings of alarm and discouragement, and to lose a sense of the all-sufficiency of that Divine Power into whose hands they have confided their salvation. In the voyage of life, we meet with many dangers and trials, that take us by surprise, and find us unprepared. While, apparently, surrounded with safety and security, the black cloud arises, and the tempest thickens around us, causing the timid heart to quake and to feel its helplessness.

"There are swift hours in life—strong, rushing hours,
That do the work of tempests in their might."

At such times, when we are apt to feel our helplessness, and to tremble in view of impending danger, as did the disciples when they saw the wind and waves threatening to overwhelm them; then it is that the Lord's inquiry should be laid to our hearts—"Where is your faith?" Faith was often the theme of our Savior's remarks. He knew its value to the human soul. It gives peace, stability and strength in the hour of danger and trial. Without it no one is safe, no one is free from the agitations which conscious weakness forces upon the mind at such times. Faith gives serenity and fearlessness to the mind, and strength to the arm. He is the most trustworthy mariner, who bravely exerts himself to steer his rudder true amid the howlings of a tempest, instead of giving way to cowardly fear and despair. The most savage beasts of the forest will cower and flee before the steady gaze of the man who fears them not. So with temptation, so with a thousand imaginary dangers and perplexities which have their origin in a mind which has no foundation to repose upon, no confidence in a Divine Providence, who is pledged for the protection from all harm of all who trust him; they vanish before the bravery of a trustful heart, and leave it to the enjoyment of "perfect peace."—[Selected.

Selected for the Crisis.

The Evening Prayer. "Our Father." The mother's voice was low, and tender and solemn.

"Our Father." On two sweet voices the words were borne upward. It was the innocence of reverent childhood that gave them utterance.

"Who art in heaven."

"Who art in the heavens," repeated the children, one with her eyes bent meekly down, and the other looking upwards, as if she would penetrate the heavens in which her heart aspirated.

"Hallowed be Thy name."

Low fell the voices of the little ones. In a gentle murmur they said, "Hallowed be Thy name."

"Thy kingdom come."

And the burden of the prayer was still taken up by the children, "Thy kingdom come."

"Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

Like a low sweet echo from the land of angels —"Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," filled the chamber.

And the mother continued—"Give us this day our daily bread."

"Our daily bread," lingered a moment in the air, as the mother's voice was hushed in silence.

"And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors."

The eyes of the children had dropped for a moment. But they were uplifted again, as they prayed—"And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors."

"And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil For thine is the kingdom, and the power and glory, forever. Amen."

All these holy words were said piously and fervently, by the little ones, as they knelt with clasped hands beside their mother. Then, as their thoughts, uplifted on the wings of prayer to their heavenly Father, came back again and rested on their earthly parents, a warmer love came gushing from their hearts.

Pure kisses—tender embraces—the fond "good night." What a sweet agitation pervaded all their feeling! Then two dear heads were placed side by side on the snowy pillow, the mother's last kiss given, and the snowy curtains drawn.

What a pulseless stillness reigns throughout the chamber! Inwardly the parents' listening ears are bent. They are giving these innocent ones into the keeping of God's angels, and they gather around their sleeping babes. A sigh deep and tremulous, breaks on the air. Quickly the mother turns to the father of her children with a look of earnest inquiry on her countenance. And he answers thus her silent questions:

"Far back, through many years, have my thoughts been wandering. At my mother's knee, thus said I nightly, in my childhood, my evening prayer, 'Our Father,' that she taught me. Childhood and my mother passed away. I went forth as a man, into the world, strong, confident, and self-seeking. Once I came into great temptation. Had I fallen in that temptation, I would have fallen, I fear, never to have risen again. I was about yielding. All the barriers that I could oppose to the inrushing flood, seemed just ready to give way, when, as I sat in my room, one evening, there came from an adjoining chamber, now first occupied for many weeks, the murmur of low voices. I listened. At first no articulate sound was heard, and yet there was something in the tones that stirred my heart with new emotions. At length there came to my ears, in the earnest, loving voice of a woman, the words—'Deliver us from all evil.' For an instant, it seemed to me as the voice of my mother. Back with a sudden bound through all the intervening years went my thoughts; and a child in heart again, I was kneeling at my mother's knee. Humbly and reverently I said over the holy words of the holy prayer she had taught me, heart and eyes uplifted to heaven.

"The hour and the power of darkness had passed. I was no longer standing in slippery places, with a flood of waters ready to sweep me to destruction—but my feet were on a rock.—My mother's pious care had saved her son. In the holy words she taught me in childhood, was a living power to resist evil through all my after life. Ah! that unknown mother, as she taught her child to repeat his evening prayer, how little dreamed she that the holy words were to reach a stranger's ears, and save him, through memories of his own mother! And yet it was so.—What a power there is in God's Word, as it flows into and rests in the minds of children!"

Tears were in the eyes of the wife and mother, as she lifted her face and gazed with a subdued tenderness upon the countenance of her husband. Her heart was too full for utterance. A little while she thus gazed, and then, with a trembling joy, laid her head upon his bosom.—Angels were in the chamber where their dear ones slept, and they felt their holy presence.

Later from Central America. The steamship Northern Light arrived at New York on Saturday night, Jan. 12.

Important from Nicaragua. Matters at Nicaragua are said to be improving. San Salvador and Honduras have officially recognized the Government of Rivas, and a Minister from Honduras is reported on his way to Granada.

Walker was receiving continued accessions to his forces. Kinney is still at San Juan del Norte; a large number of his men have recently joined Walker.

An expedition under Roman Rivas, son of the President, had fortified themselves near Castillo Rapids, and threatened to seize the Transit Co.'s steamer, and the property of the passengers, but Commodore Paulding, at the request of the Company, sent forward an armed party, when Rivas and his party fled. Colonel Hornsby was to proceed with an armed force for the further protection of the place.

One hundred and twenty recruits for Walker's army, left San Francisco on the 20th in the Cortes.

The Central American Kinney's paper, alludes to a report that Honduras and San Salvador had made overtures to Nicaragua to reinstate the old confederation of the States.

The Indian War in Oregon. Dates from Oregon are to the 14th of December. The Indian war was raging with increased fury. The Oregon mounted volunteers, under Lieut. Kelly, attacked the Indians at Fort Wallawalla, Dec. 8th, and fought them forty-eight hours, losing eight killed and eleven wounded. Among the killed, were Capt. Bennett and Lieut. Barrows. The Indians lost their chief and fifty men. The volunteers were short of ammunition, and had sent to Fort Henrietta for supplies.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE ATLANTIC.

The steamship Atlantic arrived at New York, Sunday, Jan. 13, bringing nine days later news from Europe.

General News. The news by this arrival is interesting, but not important, and mostly confined to rumors. Peace negotiations remain in statu quo. Prince Esterhazy has reached St. Petersburg with the Western ultimatum, but it is not yet replied to. Austria has notified Prussia of its contents, and Prussia assents to urge it upon the Czar.

Saxony has also sent to St. Petersburg Baron Siebach to recommend the Czar to accept the ultimatum.

Rumor repeats that Denmark is about to join the Western Alliance, as Sweden has. The propositions of the Western powers are kept secret, but it is believed that Russia would accept but for England's demands for indemnity, which Russia, backed by Austria, absolutely refuses. On the whole, the prospect of speedy peace has advanced little or none.

There is no news from the seat of war, except details of the capture of Kars.

A dispatch from Vienna to the London Times states that Count Buol had communicated the terms of peace to Prince Gortschakoff; they are the same as mentioned in the London Times of December 12th. The territory demanded to secure the free navigation of the Danube is that part of Bessarabia lying between the fortress of Chotyr, on North Salt Lake, Casyk on the south, and the Pruth on the west. Three weeks from the day of delivery, is the time allowed for consideration.

Advices from Constantinople to the 17th ult. state that sixty merchantmen had been wrecked off the Salina mouth Four hundred lives lost.

It is reported that a French frigate was wrecked off the Spanish coast; all hands lost.

We have details of the surrender of Kars, but they possess no general interest. The brave garrison did not surrender until all hopes of relief had died out, and capitulation or starvation were the only alternatives. Eighty men died of starvation in one day. A correspondent of the London News gives the following account of the condition of Kars before the surrender:

"The dispatches from Erzeroum, as well as a variety of other accounts, depict the horrors and desolation of the beleagured city—nay, it is further stated, on the best authority, that such was the extremity of woe and misery to which the inhabitants and soldiery were at last reduced, that the most disgusting articles of every description, which might serve for sustenance, were eagerly sought after and bought up at a fabulous price. A medical man and countryman, for instance, it has been stated to me, paid cheerfully for a cat, the enormous sum of £2. The rations of the troops amounted daily per man, to one hundred drachms, comprising a little horseflesh, and other horrors, with a handful of flour, whereof a portion was baked into a mass, and the rest, diluted with a little water, served as soup.

The terms of the capitulation of that ill-fated fortress are very honorable to both parties.—General Mouravieff granted all the honors of war to the capitulating garrison, and General Williams stipulated for the free departure of the Polish and Hungarian officers."

The idea of calling together a European Congress "to settle not only the present Eastern difficulty, but all the complications in European relations that have arisen since the Congress of Vienna"—in other words to readjust the balance of power—is reported to be the pet idea of the Emperor Napoleon, and to be exceedingly distasteful to England. In connection with this alleged idea of Napoleon's is the publication in Paris of a pamphlet entitled, 'The Necessity of a Congress to Pacify Europe.' This pamphlet is ascribed to the pen of Napoleon himself, and of course has made a great sensation. The object of the paper seems to be to convince the nations of Europe that peace may be concluded without a loss of honor or dignity by either of the belligerent parties. The paper is strongly denounced by the British press.

The Crimean veterans had received a magnificent reception at Paris. The Emperor in his speech to them, said:

I have recalled you, though the war be not terminated, because it is only just to relieve in their turn the regiments that have suffered most. Each will thus be able to take his share in glory, and the country which maintains 600,000 soldiers has an interest in maintaining in France a numerous and experienced army, ready to march wheresoever necessity may require. Preserve, then, carefully the habits of war, and fortify yourselves in the experience you have already acquired.

Hold yourselves in readiness to respond, if need be, to my appeal; but yet on this day forget the hardships of the soldier's life, return thanks to God for having spared you, and march proudly in the midst of your brethren in arms and your fellow-citizens whose acclamations await you.

The following is published in the English papers:

A telegraphic dispatch from Berlin relates an unconfirmed rumor to the effect that Russia and the United States have concluded a treaty, offensive and defensive, in case war should break out between Britain and America; but another version is, that the agreement merely relates to the purchase of ships-of-war

The following is a paragraph in the Vienna Austrian Gazette:

There is a good deal of talk in the military circles of a treaty having recently been concluded between the Cabinets of St. Petersburg and Washington, in which they bind themselves to lend each other effective assistance in the event of war breaking out between the United States and the Western Powers. It is further said, and with greater probability, that Russia is negotiating with the States for forty-five to fifty ships-of-war.

A camp of 40,000 men will be formed this winter at Cherbourg, France, and, it is reported, another at Brest.

The French Minister of War, notifies that the price of exemption from the military conscription is fixed for this year at 2,800 francs.

Several English gun-boats are cruising in the Sea of Azoff, destroying, where the ice does not hinder them, all the Russian fisheries.

Russian Preparations for another Campaign. A despatch from Berlin, dated Dec. 27th, says:

The preparations making by Russia for the next campaign, do not favor hopes of peace. The reinforcements for the 11th Russian division, now in the Crimea, are concentrating in the South, ready to join their regiments at the first notice. The effective of the reserves in the southern provinces amounts to about 80,000 men.

The Indian War in Oregon. A battle has been fought by the Oregon volunteers, under Lieut. Kelly, in which the Indians were badly beaten. Below is Lieut Kelly's official report of the affair, which is dated Dec. 8th:

"Yesterday morning, as my command was on the line of march from the mouth of the Do Shute river to Whitman's valley, we were attacked by about 400 Indians, with whom we kept up a running fight all day, and for a distance of about ten miles among the Walla-Walla river. At dark yesterday, the battle was suspended, by the Indians withdrawing. We drove them from every position which they took, both in the brushwood along the river bank and on the adjacent hills. This morning the battle was renewed and raged all day. At dark this evening the Indians again withdrew. The number of the Indians who fought us has been considerably greater than yesterday, and is supposed to exceed 600. To-morrow morning we expect a renewal of the battle, which, in all probability will last for some time to come.

I regret to say that yesterday and to-day we have lost many brave and gallant men, who fell nobly fighting for their country. Subjoined to this despatch you will find a list of the killed and wounded. The loss of the Indians must be very great, as their killed alone, during the two days, cannot be less than fifty men. Among their killed yesterday, was the noted chief of the Walla Walla valley, the celebrated Peu-peu-mox-mox. He was taken prisoner by my command, on the 5th instant, near his camp on the Touchet, and during the battle yesterday made an effort to escape. On doing so he was killed, together with four others who were made prisoners at the same time, and who attempted to get away. To-morrow, as I said, we expect a renewal of the battle, and I regret to say that we are not in a situation to repel the attack of the Indians with the vigor that is desired. This arises from our scarcity of ammunition and the broken-down condition of our horses.

In this sanguinary affair, three officers and two men were killed, and fourteen men wounded. The Oregon papers contain accounts of murders of families and individuals in unprotected places, giving evidence that the Indians have commenced a war of extermination.

The Oregonian says the end of this war will only be when the last red-skin, who has spread terror among the peaceable citizens of these two valleys, shall have bit the dust. The same paper of Dec. 15 says:

Gen. Wool, U. S. A., is now, as we learn, engaged in arranging preliminaries for a campaign against the Indians at an early day. We are informed that Gen. Wool will take the field as soon as he can concentrate a sufficient force, obtain the necessary supplies for his troops, and the weather will permit of a successful campaign."

Frightful Prevalence of Murder and Ruffianism in New Orleans. It is painful to read such accounts of unrebuked crime in one of our largest and most important cities, as the following, from the New Orleans Delta of a recent date:

"Within the last eight weeks there have been more assassinations in the public thoroughfares of the Republican city of New Orleans, than, we will venture to assert, have occurred in the whole despotic empire of brutalized Austria, a nation of forty millions of people, in the last two years; or, indeed, in any other despotic government in Europe, within the same time; or in any other equal period—save a revolutionary era—since the time when it was the custom to employ professional assassins in Italy to avenge private wrongs, or gratify individual vengeance.

In a state of affairs so deplorable, in a condition of society so disorganized, and with a public sentiment so blunted that four assassinations in one night, and innumerable other outrages against the person that may in numerous instances result in death, excite no more attention, challenge no greater comment from the press or the public, than a mere notice of the fact in the local columns of the daily papers, can we believe that it is impossible to get the population to make such a public demonstration of its determination to put an end to, in an exemplary, if not strictly legal manner, to these diabolical occurrences, as will forever put an end to their revival in this city, once so famed for the peaceful, orderly and decorous behavior of its inhabitants?

We have no laws, for either those charged with their administration and execution who are disposed to do their duty, few though those so disposed are, are either paralyzed by the infidelity of the greater number, or stand helpless before the demands of justice and an indifferent public

That something may be done to arrest and remedy this fearful state of things, we suggest to our fellow citizens the propriety of a call for a public meeting, to devise ways and means to maintain public order and preserve life and property in this city of New Orleans."

The same paper of Dec. 27, has the following paragraph:

On Monday afternoon last, a few minutes after Judge Robertson, of the First District Court, had dismissed the rule for a new trial, in the case of John M. Bell vs. Joseph Hufty, some six or eight persons, standing in the corridor of the court house, were knocked down with slung shots. For about an hour the building was in the undisputed possession of twenty or thirty persons, who would gather about any man obnoxious to them, knock him down from behind without saying a word, and then proceed to treat another in the same manner, until the building was cleared. No attempt was made to disturb them in their saturnalia. The court house has become one of the most dangerous places in this ruffian-ridden city.

The Irish Fillibusters at Cincinnati. It was announced several days since that some eight or ten persons had been arrested at Cincinnati on a charge of setting on foot a hostile invasion of the Canadas. The examination of these parties commenced on the 7th inst., before Judge Leavitt, of the United States Court.

Messrs. Sage and Probasco appeared for the prosecution, which was set on foot by Mr Rowecroft, the British Consul. Mr Sage made a statement of what the prosecution expected to prove—

"That a secret association, called by its members the 'Irish Emigrant Aid Society of Ohio,' had been in existence in this city for a period of three months or more; that it was auxiliary to a parent society in Boston, Massachusetts; that the aims of both, as would appear, were 'the subversion of British government in Ireland,' through or by the help of some military expedition, set on foot and organized in this country by the societies named; that the defendants in this case were members of the 'Irish Emigrant Aid Society,' and in that capacity had violated the neutrality law."

Mr Sage also read an address of the Robert Emmet Branch of the Irish Emigrant Society of Ohio, to the Irishmen of the Buckeye State, which is not essentially different from the addresses already issued by kindred societies in this city and New York. Mr Sage also read the following oath administered to the members of the society:

"In the awful presence of God, I do voluntarily declare and promise, that I shall use my endeavors to form a brotherhood amongst Irishmen of all persuasions, for to uproot and overthrow English Government in Ireland; and I furthermore declare, that neither hopes, fears, rewards or punishments shall ever induce me to make known any of the secrets of this order; to all this I most solemnly pledge my most sacred honor."

A Washington correspondent of the Herald telegraphs: A strong impression pervades political circles that our relations with Great Britain are threatened and serious apprehensions are felt and expressed by many Senators, several of them in the confidence of the Administration, of an early rupture between the two Governments.

Another correspondent telegraphs—"Highly important despatches have been received at the State Department from England, with reference to the understanding respecting Central American affairs. They will be formally considered by the Cabinet to-morrow, when their import will be known.

New York, Jan. 14. Another Railroad Accident—Three Persons Missing. Another accident occurred on the Hudson River Railroad at ten o'clock last night; as the down train from Albany, drawn by two locomotives, was passing over the bridge at Stuypten, Devil Creek, one of the locomotives went through the bridge into the river, taking a passenger car and two baggage cars with it. One engineer, one fireman, and a boy are missing, as far as known no one else is missing or hurt.

Second Despatch. It is now ascertained that several passengers were hurt, but not seriously. Both engines, with one passenger car and ten baggage cars, were smashed to pieces.

Henry Dawson, the engineer of the first engine, is badly scalded. The engineer of the second engine, who is missing, is supposed to be under the water. His name is George Perisen.

The fireman on the same engine, Howard Root, is also probably killed. The little boy escaped uninjured. All the passengers of the train went on to New York early this morning. Workmen are busy repairing the bridge, and trains will go through regularly this evening.

The accident was caused by the ice.

Infidels Reproved. Sir Isaac Newton set out in life an infidel; but, on a close examination of the evidences for Christianity, he found reason to change his opinion. When the celebrated Dr. Edmund Halley was talking infidelity before him, Sir Isaac addressed him to the following effect:—"Dr. Halley, I am always glad to hear you when you speak about astronomy, or other parts of the mathematics, because that is a subject you have studied, and well understand; but you should not talk of Christianity; for you have not studied it. I have, and am certain that you know nothing of the matter." This was a just reproof, one that would be very suitable to be given to the infidels of the present day; for they often speak of what they have never studied, and what, in fact, they are entirely ignorant of. Dr Johnson, therefore, well observed, that "no honest man could be a Deist; or no man could be so after a fair examination of the proofs of Christianity." On the name of Hume, the historian, being mentioned to him, as one who had studied it, "No, sir," said he, "Hume owned to a clergyman in the bishopric of Durham, that he had never read the New Testament with attention."

Millenarianism in England. The Paris correspondent of the Presbyterian says, in a recent letter:

"Of the three divisions of the Church of England, the Evangelical is increasing the most numerously in members and clergy; the High church is losing ground, and the Broad church has comparatively few representatives, but these few, intellectual. The Unitarians are diminishing. As to the various dissenting denominations, the Papal aggression served to bring them nearer Evangelical Churchmen. Present duty seems to point to the field of missions—to be active in the Lord's service—and to the second advent of the Lord, which is now an active principle among the majority of the religious there."

The driver of a milk wagon between Seekonk and Providence perished with cold, as his team was passing India bridge, on Thursday morning of last week.

Appointments.

God willing, I will preach in
The Advent Chapel, in Danville, Canada East, the two last Sabbaths in February, and in the vicinity, during the week, as the friends may arrange. I hope to see many of my former friends.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

The Lord willing, I will lecture at
Kirk St. Chapel, Lowell, Wednesday eve, Jan. 23d.
Portsmouth, N. H., Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Kennebunkport, Me., Wednesday, Jan. 29th.
Bridgeport, Me., Jan. 30th.
Falmouth, Me., Jan. 31.

L. L. HOWARD.

☞ There is some mistake in the above appointments, but we give them as written, not knowing how to correct them.

It it be the will of the Lord, I will preach in Brunswick, Me., Jan. 17th.
Hollis, Jan. 18th.
Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 20th.
Salem, Mass., Jan. 21st and 22d.
Lowell, Jan. 23d.
Lynn, Jan. 25th.
Boston, Jan. 27th.
Providence, R. I., Jan. 29th, eve.

E. HODGES.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at Durham, S. W. Bend, Jan. 27th.
Freeport, Feb. 3d.
Brunswick, Feb. 10th.

R. R. YORK.

By Divine permission, I will try to fill the appointments I lately withdrew, as follows.
Worcester, Tuesday, Jan. 22d, where Br. Myers may appoint.
Westborough, Wednesday, Jan. 23d.
Boston, Thursday, Jan. 24th.
Roxbury, Friday, Jan. 25th.
Fair Haven, Mass., Jan. 26th and 27th, over the Sabbath.
Providence, Monday and Tuesday Jan. 28th and 29th.
Warwick, or Appanagg, Jan. 30th and 31st, Wednesday and Thursday, where Br. J. B. Wait may appoint.
Layfayette, Friday, Feb. 1st.
Peace Dale, Saturday and Sunday Feb. 2d and 3d.
Fair Haven, Ct., Monday, Feb. 4th.
Bridgeport, Tuesday, Feb 5th.
Waterbury, Wednesday, Feb. 6th.
Bristol, Thursday, Feb 7th.
Friday, Saturday and Sunday, as Providence may direct.
If any of the above appointments conflict with others, please inform me by letter in season to alter my course.

HIRAM MUNGER.

CONFERENCE AT DANBURY, N. H.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at Danbury, commencing Friday, Jan. 25th, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the Sabbath. Meeting expected to be holden in the new School House, near Br. Knowlton's. Eld. David Leavitt and the writer are expected to attend.

For the Brn., T. M. PREBLE.

The Lord willing, I will try to preach the word of life in Athol, Mass. Jan. 20th.

O. D. GIBSON.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Portland, Me., Jan. 20th. J. COUCH.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Collinsville, Sunday, Jan. 20th.
Fair Haven, Ct., Jan. 27th.

S. G. MATHEWSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. in Springfield, Sabbath, Jan. 20th.

H. PRATT.

The Lord willing, Elder L. L. Howard will preach in Salem, at the Union St. Church, on Sunday, the 27th.

TEMPLE HERRY.

By leave of Providence, Eld. L. L. Howard will preach at
Lawrence, on the 3d Sunday in January.

The Lord willing, Eld. J. Couch will preach at
Lawrence on the 4th Sunday in Jan.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Cheshire, Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday 18th, 19th, 20th,
Chester Factories, Monday and Tuesday evenings 21st, and 22d,
Westfield Farms, Wednesday and Thursday evenings 23d, and 24th.
Westfield, Friday eve. 25th.
Springfield, Saturday eve. and Sunday 26th and 27th
Thorndike, Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Bondville, Tuesday eve, 29th.
Ware, Wednesday eve, 30th.
I expect a yoke-fellow to assist in filling the above appointments.

SAMUEL BRAGG.

The Lord willing, by invitation, I will spend Lord's Day, Jan. 20th, with the Church in Portsmouth, N. H.

S. S. BREWER.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brn. in the following places.
Danbury, Sunday Jan. 20th.
Sutton, Jan. 22d, eve., where Br. Jesse Hazen may appoint.
Carlisle, Mass., Sunday, Jan. 27th, and longer, if thought best.

S. P. [illegible]

Notices.

☞ Advent brethren hold regular meetings every Sabbath in the Chapel on Spring Street; also on Tuesday and Friday evenings. In giving out appointments, Brn. will please to name the place, as there are two meetings held in this city.

For the Brethren,

THOMAS N. PALMER.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 19th, 1855.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor, for sale at this Office. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The above works by Eld. Z. Campbell, are for sale at this Office.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts "	3 " "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 cts "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 cts "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
Voice of the Church $1	"	9 " doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.
Address orders with the cash to
H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.
☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and by O. Hart, Concord, N. H., and D A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

☞ Br. J. K. Bellows, your communication is received.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is Russell's Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

M Joice, E P Streeter, E Melcher, N C Lock, A Curtis, W F Carpenter, J R Allen, B Bussier, A S Conant, L Brooks, A P Wells, R Reding, H B Sevey, B E Mansfield, R Morril, $1 each. M L Clark $4,20, N H Brooks $6, A Howe $1,50, G A Fuller 50 cents, M Merrill 30 cents, C Flemming 36 cents, B F Bickford 50 cents, J Nugent 50 cents.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

A friend $2, South Waterford $1, E. Woodward $1, M Grant $5, M L Clark 80 cents. Whole amount paid $39,54.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used; it gripes without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, [illegible] Coughs and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, CORNER OF MOODY AND AUSTIN STREETS, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have myself proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps [illegible] serve the cause of humanity to [illegible] advertisement to the public. [illegible]

PARTICULAR NOTICE.

Orrington, Jan. 8th, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—I want to say through the Crisis to our preaching Brn., that it is thought best under existing circumstances, to have a Conference in Hermon, where the Brn. and Srs. from different places can meet and exchange views, and come to a better understanding than now exists. We have not had one of our western Brn. to preach to us since the time passed, except Br. Cummings. Brn., do not neglect us any longer.

Will not Br. Couch, Hemmenway, Brewer, or some one who can, come and labor with us, appoint a Conference as above, when it will suit them best, and give notice through the Crisis?

By request, Wm. Chapin.

P. S. While writing the above, I forgot to mention the labors of Br. Boutell, who spent some time with us last fall, and should this meet his eye, we hope he will receive it as a request to come again as soon as convenient.

W. C.

Bible.

By Ralph Hoyt.

Bible! blessed Bible!
Treasure of the heart!
What sweet consolation
Doth thy page impart;
In the fiercest trial,
In the deepest grief,
Strength, and hope, and comfort,
In each holy leaf.

Bible—let me clasp thee,
Anchor of the soul!
When the storm is raging,
When the waters roll,
When the frowning heavens
Darken every star,
And no hopeful beacon
Glimmereth afar,

Be my refuge, Bible!
Then be thou my stay,
Guide me on life's billow,
Light the dreary way;
Tell me of the morrow,
When a sun shall rise,
That shall glow forever,
In unclouded skies.

Tell me of that heaven
In the climes above,
Where the bark rides safely
In a sea of love.
Bible! let me clasp thee!
Chronicle divine,
Of a world's redemption,
Of a Savior, mine!

Wisdom for the simple,
Riches for the poor,
Hope for the desponding,
For the sick, a cure;
Rest for all the weary,
Ransom for the slave,
Courage for the fearful,
Life beyond the grave!

Bible! Blessed Bible!
Treasure of the heart,
What sweet consolation
Doth thy page impart;
In the fiercest trial,
In the deepest grief,
Strength, and hope, and comfort,
In each holy leaf!

Christ in the Tempest. The sea of Galilee is a small body of water, of no importance to the commercial world, and forsaken now by the busy population which once surrounded its shores. Yet it is classic ground to the Christian; for near its shores and upon its waters were performed some of the most wonderful works of our Saviour, which are related by the historians of his life with a conciseness and simplicity that show the absence of all artifice, and command the admiration of the thoughtful reader. Let us contemplate one incident, for example.

One day he had been teaching a great multitude; and when evening was come, he said to his disciples, "Let us pass over unto the other side." "And they launched forth," in fearless obedience to their Divine Teacher. How little did they anticipate the trials and dangers of that night! They risked all in obedience to their Lord, not asking what evil would happen to them in the path of duty. But not so with Christ. He knew all that was about to happen. The tempestuous wind, the rough sea, and the danger of being swallowed up in the deep—all were known to him, who, though in human shape, could "see the end from the beginning." Yet he trembled not; not a ruffle of anxiety disturbed the serenity of his peace; and, weary with the toils of the day, he sought and found physical repose. There, on that soft pillow, slept the mortal frame of him who ruled the tempest and the sea; and in all the consciousness of his omnipotence, he feared not, but slept on as quiet and secure, as unconscious of danger as an infant in its mother's arms, while his disciples, who had not yet learned the full extent of his power, were toiling to steer the vessel safely through the tempest, and trembling lest they should be swallowed up by the raging billows; they went to their Lord in that hour of fearful danger, and awaking him, exclaimed, "Lord save us; we perish," and they found him a mighty deliverer. Rising calmly and fearlessly from his repose, ready to rescue his chosen ones from the jaws of death, and in the full consciousness of his power to save, he stepped forth, and in the simple majesty of his omnipotence, he "rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace—be still." Could a mere man have the presumption to speak in such a tone of conscious authority to the warring elements? How would they mock his impudence, by raging on with redoubled violence! Yet this humble personage, to all appearance no more powerful than those around him, was obeyed at once by the wind and the waves. They recognized the mandate of the supreme; and as soon as the voice of command was passed from his lips, they laid themselves at rest at his feet.

An incident so astounding to human credulity, yet so clearly palpable to their senses, could not fail to produce a corresponding effect upon the minds of those who witnessed it. "They feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?" But Jesus, ever ready to improve the lessons of experience, turned to them, and in a tone of mild reproof asked, "Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?" These inquiries were not designed for the occasion alone on which they were uttered. They are applicable at all times to all occasions in which the disciples of Christ are prone to give way to feelings of alarm and discouragement, and to lose a sense of the all-sufficiency of that Divine Power into whose hands they have confided their salvation. In the voyage of life, we meet with many dangers and trials, that take us by surprise, and find us unprepared. While, apparently, surrounded with safety and security, the black cloud arises, and the tempest thickens around us, causing the timid heart to quake and to feel its helplessness.

"There are swift hours in life—strong, rushing hours,
That do the work of tempests in their might."

At such times, when we are apt to feel our helplessness, and to tremble in view of impending danger, as did the disciples when they saw the wind and waves threatening to overwhelm them; then it is that the Lord's inquiry should be laid to our hearts—"Where is your faith?" Faith was often the theme of our Savior's remarks. He knew its value to the human soul. It gives peace, stability and strength in the hour of danger and trial. Without it no one is safe, no one is free from the agitations which conscious weakness forces upon the mind at such times. Faith gives serenity and fearlessness to the mind, and strength to the arm. He is the most trustworthy mariner, who bravely exerts himself to steer his rudder true amid the howlings of a tempest, instead of giving way to cowardly fear and despair. The most savage beasts of the forest will cower and flee before the steady gaze of the man who fears them not. So with temptation, so with a thousand imaginary dangers and perplexities which have their origin in a mind which has no foundation to repose upon, no confidence in a Divine Providence, who is pledged for the protection from all harm of all who trust him; they vanish before the bravery of a trustful heart, and leave it to the enjoyment of "perfect peace."—[Selected.

Selected for the Crisis.

The Evening Prayer. "Our Father." The mother's voice was low, and tender and solemn.

"Our Father." On two sweet voices the words were borne upward. It was the innocence of reverent childhood that gave them utterance.

"Who art in heaven."

"Who art in the heavens," repeated the children, one with her eyes bent meekly down, and the other looking upwards, as if she would penetrate the heavens in which her heart aspirated.

"Hallowed be Thy name."

Low fell the voices of the little ones. In a gentle murmur they said, "Hallowed be Thy name."

"Thy kingdom come."

And the burden of the prayer was still taken up by the children, "Thy kingdom come."

"Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

Like a low sweet echo from the land of angels—"Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," filled the chamber.

And the mother continued—"Give us this day our daily bread."

"Our daily bread," lingered a moment in the air, as the mother's voice was hushed in silence.

"And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors."

The eyes of the children had dropped for a moment. But they were uplifted again, as they prayed—"And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors."

"And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power and glory, forever. Amen."

All these holy words were said piously and fervently, by the little ones, as they knelt with clasped hands beside their mother. Then, as their thoughts, uplifted on the wings of prayer to their heavenly Father, came back again and rested on their earthly parents, a warmer love came gushing from their hearts.

Pure kisses—tender embraces—the fond "good night." What a sweet agitation pervaded all their feeling! Then two dear heads were placed side by side on the snowy pillow, the mother's last kiss given, and the snowy curtains drawn.

What a pulseless stillness reigns throughout the chamber! Inwardly the parents' listening ears are bent. They are giving these innocent ones into the keeping of God's angels, and they gather around their sleeping babes. A sigh deep and tremulous, breaks on the air. Quickly the mother turns to the father of her children with a look of earnest inquiry on her countenance. And he answers thus her silent questions:

"Far back, through many years, have my thoughts been wandering. At my mother's knee, thus said I nightly, in my childhood, my evening prayer, 'Our Father,' that she taught me. Childhood and my mother passed away. I went forth as a man, into the world, strong, confident, and self-seeking. Once I came into great temptation. Had I fallen in that temptation, I would have fallen, I fear, never to have risen again. I was about yielding. All the barriers that I could oppose to the inrushing flood, seemed just ready to give way, when, as I sat in my room, one evening, there came from an adjoining chamber, now first occupied for many weeks, the murmur of low voices. I listened. At first no articulate sound was heard, and yet there was something in the tones that stirred my heart with new emotions. At length there came to my ears, in the earnest, loving voice of a woman, the words—'Deliver us from all evil.' For an instant, it seemed to me as the voice of my mother. Back with a sudden bound through all the intervening years went my thoughts; and a child in heart again, I was kneeling at my mother's knee. Humbly and reverently I said over the holy words of the holy prayer she had taught me, heart and eyes uplifted to heaven.

"The hour and the power of darkness had passed. I was no longer standing in slippery places, with a flood of waters ready to sweep me to destruction—but my feet were on a rock.—My mother's pious care had saved her son. In the holy words she taught me in childhood, was a living power to resist evil through all my after life. Ah! that unknown mother, as she taught her child to repeat his evening prayer, how little dreamed she that the holy words were to reach a stranger's ears, and save him, through memories of his own mother! And yet it was so.—What a power there is in God's Word, as it flows into and rests in the minds of children!"

Tears were in the eyes of the wife and mother, as she lifted her face and gazed with a subdued tenderness upon the countenance of her husband. Her heart was too full for utterance. A little while she thus gazed, and then, with a trembling joy, laid her head upon his bosom.—Angels were in the chamber where their dear ones slept, and they felt their holy presence.

Later from Central America. The steamship Northern Light arrived at New York on Saturday night, Jan. 12.

Important from Nicaragua. Matters at Nicaragua are said to be improving. San Salvador and Honduras have officially recognized the Government of Rivas, and a Minister from Honduras is reported on his way to Granada.

Walker was receiving continued accessions to his forces. Kinney is still at San Juan del Norte; a large number of his men have recently joined Walker.

An expedition under Roman Rivas, son of the President, had fortified themselves near Castillo Rapids, and threatened to seize the Transit Co.'s steamer, and the property of the passengers, but Commodore Paulding, at the request of the Company, sent forward an armed party, when Rivas and his party fled. Colonel Hornsby was to proceed with an armed force for the further protection of the place.

One hundred and twenty recruits for Walker's army, left San Francisco on the 20th in the Cortes.

The Central American Kinney's paper, alludes to a report that Honduras and San Salvador had made overtures to Nicaragua to reinstate the old confederation of the States.

The Indian War in Oregon. Dates from Oregon are to the 14th of December. The Indian war was raging with increased fury. The Oregon mounted volunteers, under Lieut. Kelly, attacked the Indians at Fort Wallawalla, Dec. 8th, and fought them forty-eight hours, losing eight killed and eleven wounded. Among the killed, were Capt. Bennett and Lieut. Barrows. The Indians lost their chief and fifty men. The volunteers were short of ammunition, and had sent to Fort Henrietta for supplies.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE ATLANTIC.

The steamship Atlantic arrived at New York, Sunday, Jan. 13, bringing nine days later news from Europe.

General News. The news by this arrival is interesting, but not important, and mostly confined to rumors. Peace negotiations remain in statu quo. Prince Esterhazy has reached St. Petersburg with the Western ultimatum, but it is not yet replied to. Austria has notified Prussia of its contents, and Prussia assents to urge it upon the Czar.

Saxony has also sent to St. Petersburg Baron Siebach to recommend the Czar to accept the ultimatum.

Rumor repeats that Denmark is about to join the Western Alliance, as Sweden has. The propositions of the Western powers are kept secret, but it is believed that Russia would accept but for England's demands for indemnity, which Russia, backed by Austria, absolutely refuses. On the whole, the prospect of speedy peace has advanced little or none.

There is no news from the seat of war, except details of the capture of Kars.

A dispatch from Vienna to the London Times states that Count Buol had communicated the terms of peace to Prince Gortschakoff; they are the same as mentioned in the London Times of December 12th. The territory demanded to secure the free navigation of the Danube is that part of Bessarabia lying between the fortress of Chotyr, on North Salt Lake, Casyk on the south, and the Pruth on the west. Three weeks from the day of delivery, is the time allowed for consideration.

Advices from Constantinople to the 17th ult. state that sixty merchantmen had been wrecked off the Salina mouth. Four hundred lives lost.

It is reported that a French frigate was wrecked off the Spanish coast; all hands lost.

We have details of the surrender of Kars, but they possess no general interest. The brave garrison did not surrender until all hopes of relief had died out, and capitulation or starvation were the only alternatives. Eighty men died of starvation in one day. A correspondent of the London News gives the following account of the condition of Kars before the surrender:

"The dispatches from Erzeroum, as well as a variety of other accounts, depict the horrors and desolation of the beleagured city—nay, it is further stated, on the best authority, that such was the extremity of woe and misery to which the inhabitants and soldiery were at last reduced, that the most disgusting articles of every description, which might serve for sustenance, were eagerly sought after and bought up at a fabulous price. A medical man and countryman, for instance, it has been stated to me, paid cheerfully for a cat, the enormous sum of £2. The rations of the troops amounted daily per man, to one hundred drachms, comprising a little horseflesh, and other horrors, with a handful of flour, whereof a portion was baked into a mass, and the rest, diluted with a little water, served as soup.

The terms of the capitulation of that ill-fated fortress are very honorable to both parties.—General Mouravieff granted all the honors of war to the capitulating garrison, and General Williams stipulated for the free departure of the Polish and Hungarian officers."

The idea of calling together a European Congress "to settle not only the present Eastern difficulty, but all the complications in European relations that have arisen since the Congress of Vienna"—in other words to readjust the balance of power—is reported to be the pet idea of the Emperor Napoleon, and to be exceedingly distasteful to England. In connection with this alleged idea of Napoleon's is the publication in Paris of a pamphlet entitled, 'The Necessity of a Congress to Pacify Europe.' This pamphlet is ascribed to the pen of Napoleon himself, and of course has made a great sensation. The object of the paper seems to be to convince the nations of Europe that peace may be concluded without a loss of honor or dignity by either of the belligerent parties. The paper is strongly denounced by the British press.

The Crimean veterans had received a magnificent reception at Paris. The Emperor in his speech to them, said:

I have recalled you, though the war be not terminated, because it is only just to relieve in their turn the regiments that have suffered most. Each will thus be able to take his share in glory, and the country which maintains 600,000 soldiers has an interest in maintaining in France a numerous and experienced army, ready to march wheresoever necessity may require. Preserve, then, carefully the habits of war, and fortify yourselves in the experience you have already acquired.

Hold yourselves in readiness to respond, if need be, to my appeal; but yet on this day forget the hardships of the soldier's life, return thanks to God for having spared you, and march proudly in the midst of your brethren in arms and your fellow-citizens whose acclamations await you.

The following is published in the English papers:

A telegraphic dispatch from Berlin relates an unconfirmed rumor to the effect that Russia and the United States have concluded a treaty, offensive and defensive, in case war should break out between Britain and America; but another version is, that the agreement merely relates to the purchase of ships-of-war.

The following is a paragraph in the Vienna Austrian Gazette:

There is a good deal of talk in the military circles of a treaty having recently been concluded between the Cabinets of St. Petersburg and Washington, in which they bind themselves to lend each other effective assistance in the event of war breaking out between the United States and the Western Powers. It is further said, and with greater probability, that Russia is negotiating with the States for forty-five to fifty ships-of-war.

A camp of 40,000 men will be formed this winter at Cherbourg, France, and, it is reported, another at Brest.

The French Minister of War, notifies that the price of exemption from the military conscription is fixed for this year at 2,800 francs.

Several English gun-boats are cruising in the Sea of Azoff, destroying, where the ice does not hinder them, all the Russian fisheries.

Russian Preparations for another Campaign. A despatch from Berlin, dated Dec. 27th, says:

The preparations making by Russia for the next campaign, do not favor hopes of peace. The reinforcements for the 11th Russian division, now in the Crimea, are concentrating in the South, ready to join their regiments at the first notice. The effective of the reserves in the southern provinces amounts to about 80,000 men.

The Indian War in Oregon. A battle has been fought by the Oregon volunteers, under Lieut. Kelly, in which the Indians were badly beaten. Below is Lieut Kelly's official report of the affair, which is dated Dec. 8th:

"Yesterday morning, as my command was on the line of march from the mouth of the Do Shute river to Whitman's valley, we were attacked by about 400 Indians, with whom we kept up a running fight all day, and for a distance of about ten miles among the Walla-Walla river. At dark yesterday, the battle was suspended, by the Indians withdrawing. We drove them from every position which they took, both in the brushwood along the river bank and on the adjacent hills. This morning the battle was renewed and raged all day. At dark this evening the Indians again withdrew. The number of the Indians who fought us has been considerably greater than yesterday, and is supposed to exceed 600. To-morrow morning we expect a renewal of the battle, which, in all probability will last for some time to come.

I regret to say that yesterday and to-day we have lost many brave and gallant men, who fell nobly fighting for their country. Subjoined to this despatch you will find a list of the killed and wounded. The loss of the Indians must be very great, as their killed alone, during the two days, cannot be less than fifty men. Among their killed yesterday, was the noted chief of the Walla Walla valley, the celebrated Peu-peu-mox-mox. He was taken prisoner by my command, on the 5th instant, near his camp on the Touchet, and during the battle yesterday made an effort to escape. On doing so he was killed, together with four others who were made prisoners at the same time, and who attempted to get away. To-morrow, as I said, we expect a renewal of the battle, and I regret to say that we are not in a situation to repel the attack of the Indians with the vigor that is desired. This arises from our scarcity of ammunition and the broken-down condition of our horses.

In this sanguinary affair, three officers and two men were killed, and fourteen men wounded. The Oregon papers contain accounts of murders of families and individuals, in unprotected places, giving evidence that the Indians have commenced a war of extermination.

The Oregonian says the end of this war will only be when the last red-skin, who has spread terror among the peaceable citizens of these two valleys, shall have bit the dust. The same paper of Dec. 15 says:

Gen. Wool, U. S. A., is now, as we learn, engaged in arranging preliminaries for a campaign against the Indians at an early day. We are informed that Gen. Wool will take the field as soon as he can concentrate a sufficient force, obtain the necessary supplies for his troops, and the weather will permit of a successful campaign."

Frightful Prevalence of Murder and Ruffianism in New Orleans. It is painful to read such accounts of unrebuked crime in one of our largest and most important cities, as the following, from the New Orleans Delta of a recent date:

"Within the last eight weeks there have been more assassinations in the public thoroughfares of the Republican city of New Orleans, than, we will venture to assert, have occurred in the whole despotic empire of brutalized Austria, a nation of forty millions of people, in the last two years; or, indeed, in any other despotic government in Europe, within the same time; or in any other equal period—save a revolutionary era—since the time when it was the custom to employ professional assassins in Italy to avenge private wrongs, or gratify individual vengeance.

In a state of affairs so deplorable, in a condition of society so disorganized, and with a public sentiment so blunted that four assassinations in one night, and innumerable other outrages against the person that may in numerous instances result in death, excite no more attention, challenge no greater comment from the press or the public, than a mere notice of the fact in the local columns of the daily papers, can we believe that it is impossible to get the population to make such a public demonstration of its determination to put an end in an exemplary, if not strictly legal manner, to these diabolical occurrences, as will forever put an end to their revival in this city, once so famed for the peaceful, orderly and decorous behavior of its inhabitants?

We have no laws, for either those charged with their administration and execution who are disposed to do their duty, few though those so disposed are, are either paralyzed by the infidelity of the greater number, or stand helpless before the demands of justice and an indifferent public.

That something may be done to arrest and remedy this fearful state of things, we suggest to our fellow citizens the propriety of a call for a public meeting, to devise ways and means to maintain public order and preserve life and property in this city of New Orleans."

The same paper of Dec. 27, has the following paragraph:

On Monday afternoon last, a few minutes after Judge Robertson, of the First District Court, had dismissed the rule for a new trial, in the case of John M. Bell vs. Joseph Hufty, some six or eight persons, standing in the corridor of the court house, were knocked down with slung shots. For about an hour the building was in the undisputed possession of twenty or thirty persons, who would gather about any man obnoxious to them, knock him down from behind without saying a word, and then proceed to treat another in the same manner, until the building was cleared. No attempt was made to disturb them in their saturnalia. The court house has become one of the most dangerous places in this ruffian-ridden city.

The Irish Fillibusters at Cincinnati. It was announced several days since that some eight or ten persons had been arrested at Cincinnati on a charge of setting on foot a hostile invasion of the Canadas. The examination of these parties commenced on the 7th inst., before Judge Leavitt, of the United States Court.

Messrs. Sage and Probasco appeared for the prosecution, which was set on foot by Mr Rowecroft, the British Consul. Mr Sage made a statement of what the prosecution expected to prove—

"That a secret association, called by its members the 'Irish Emigrant Aid Society of Ohio,' had been in existence in this city for a period of three months or more; that it was auxiliary to a parent society in Boston, Massachusetts; that the aims of both, as would appear, were 'the subversion of British government in Ireland,' through or by the help of some military expedition, set on foot and organized in this country by the societies named; that the defendants in this case were members of the 'Irish Emigrant Aid Society,' and in that capacity had violated the neutrality law."

Mr Sage also read an address of the Robert Emmet Branch of the Irish Emigrant Society of Ohio, to the Irishmen of the Buckeye State, which is not essentially different from the addresses already issued by kindred societies in this city and New York. Mr Sage also read the following oath administered to the members of the society:

"In the awful presence of God, I do voluntarily declare and promise, that I shall use my endeavors to form a brotherhood amongst Irishmen of all persuasions, for to uproot and overthrow English Government in Ireland; and I furthermore declare, that neither hopes, fears, rewards or punishments shall ever induce me to make known any of the secrets of this order; to all this I most solemnly pledge my most sacred honor."

A Washington correspondent of the Herald telegraphs: A strong impression pervades political circles that our relations with Great Britain are threatened and serious apprehensions are felt and expressed by many Senators, several of them in the confidence of the Administration, of an early rupture between the two Governments.

Another correspondent telegraphs—"Highly important despatches have been received at the State Department from England, with reference to the understanding respecting Central American affairs. They will be formally considered by the Cabinet to-morrow, when their import will be known."

New York, Jan 14. Another Railroad Accident—Three Persons Missing. Another accident occurred on the Hudson River Railroad at ten o'clock last night; as the down train from Albany, drawn by two locomotives, was passing over the bridge at Stuypten, Devil Creek, one of the locomotives went through the bridge into the river, taking a passenger car and two baggage cars with it. One engineer, one fireman, and a boy are missing, as far as known no one else is missing or hurt.

Second Despatch. It is now ascertained that several passengers were hurt, but not seriously. Both engines, with one passenger car and ten baggage cars, were smashed to pieces.

Henry Dawson, the engineer of the first engine, is badly scalded. The engineer of the second engine, who is missing, is supposed to be under the water. His name is George Perisen.

The fireman on the same engine, Howard Root, is also probably killed. The little boy escaped uninjured. All the passengers of the train went on to New York early this morning. Workmen are busy repairing the bridge, and trains will go through regularly this evening.

The accident was caused by the ice.

Infidels Reproved. Sir Isaac Newton set out in life an infidel; but, on a close examination of the evidences for Christianity, he found reason to change his opinion. When the celebrated Dr. Edmund Halley was talking infidelity before him, Sir Isaac addressed him to the following effect:—"Dr. Halley, I am always glad to hear you when you speak about astronomy, or other parts of the mathematics, because that is a subject you have studied, and well understand; but you should not talk of Christianity; for you have not studied it. I have, and am certain that you know nothing of the matter." This was a just reproof, one that would be very suitable to be given to the infidels of the present day; for they often speak of what they have never studied, and what, in fact, they are entirely ignorant of. Dr Johnson, therefore, well observed, that "no honest man could be a Deist; or no man could be so after a fair examination of the proofs of Christianity." On the name of Hume, the historian, being mentioned to him, as one who had studied it, "No, sir," said he, "Hume owned to a clergyman in the bishopric of Durham, that he had never read the New Testament with attention."

Millenarianism in England. The Paris correspondent of the Presbyterian says, in a recent letter:

"Of the three divisions of the Church of England, the Evangelical is increasing the most numerously in members and clergy; the High church is losing ground, and the Broad church has comparatively few representatives, but these few, intellectual. The Unitarians are diminishing. As to the various dissenting denominations, the Papal aggression served to bring them nearer Evangelical Churchmen. Present duty seems to point to the field of missions—to be active in the Lord's service—and to the second advent of the Lord, which is now an active principle among the majority of the religious there."

The driver of a milk wagon between Seekonk and Providence perished with cold, as his team was passing India bridge, on Thursday morning of last week.

Appointments.

God willing, I will preach in
The Advent Chapel, in Danville, Canada East, the two last Sabbaths in February, and in the vicinity, during the week, as the friends may arrange. I hope to see many of my former friends.

Edwin Burnham.

The Lord willing, I will lecture at
Kirk St. Chapel, Lowell, Wednesday eve, Jan. 23d.
Portsmouth, N. H., Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Kennebunkport, Me., Wednesday, Jan. 29th.
Bridgeport, Me., Jan. 30th.
Falmouth, Me., Jan. 31.

L. L. Howard.

☞ There is some mistake in the above appointments, but we give them as written, not knowing how to correct them.

If it be the will of the Lord, I will preach in Brunswick, Me., Jan. 17th.
Hollis, Jan. 18th.
Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 20th.
Salem, Mass., Jan. 21st and 22d.
Lowell, Jan. 23d.
Lynn, Jan. 25th.
Boston, Jan. 27th.
Providence, R. I., Jan. 29th, eve.

E. Hodges.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at Durham, S. W. Bend, Jan. 27th.
Freeport, Feb. 3d.
Brunswick, Feb. 10th.

R. R. York.

By Divine permission, I will try to fill the appointments I lately withdrew, as follows.
Worcester, Tuesday, Jan. 22d, where Br. Myers may appoint.
Westborough, Wednesday, Jan. 23d.
Boston, Thursday, Jan. 24th.
Roxbury, Friday, Jan. 25th.
Fair Haven, Mass., Jan. 26th and 27th, over the Sabbath.
Providence, Monday and Tuesday Jan. 28th and 29th.
Warwick, or Appanagg, Jan. 30th and 31st, Wednesday and Thursday, where Br. J. B. Wait may appoint.
Layfayette, Friday, Feb. 1st.
Peace Dale, Saturday and Sunday Feb. 2d and 3d.
Fair Haven, Ct., Monday, Feb. 4th.
Bridgeport, Tuesday, Feb 5th.
Waterbury, Wednesday, Feb. 6th.
Bristol, Thursday, Feb 7th.
Friday, Saturday and Sunday, as Providence may direct.
If any of the above appointments conflict with others, please inform me by letter in season to alter my course.

Hiram Munger.

CONFERENCE AT DANBURY, N. H.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at Danbury, commencing Friday, Jan. 25th, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the Sabbath. Meeting expected to be holden in the new School House, near Br. Knowlton's. Eld. David Leavitt and the writer are expected to attend.

For the Brn., T. M. Preble.

The Lord willing, I will try to preach the word of life in Athol, Mass. Jan. 20th.

O. D. Gibson.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Portland, Me., Jan. 20th. J. Couch.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Collinsville, Sunday, Jan. 20th.
Fair Haven, Ct., Jan. 27th.

S. G. Mathewson.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. in Springfield, Sabbath, Jan. 20th.

H. Pratt.

The Lord willing, Elder L. L. Howard will preach in Salem, at the Union St. Church, on Sunday the 27th.

Temple Hersey.

By leave of Providence, Eld. L. L. Howard will preach at
Lawrence, on the 3d Sunday in January.

The Lord willing, Eld. J. Couch will preach at
Lawrence on the 4th Sunday in Jan.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Cheshire, Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday 18th, 19th, 20th,
Chester Factories, Monday and Tuesday evenings 21st, and 22d,
Westfield Farms, Wednesday and Thursday evenings 23d, and 24th.
Westfield, Friday eve. 25th.
Springfield, Saturday eve. and Sunday 26th and 27th
Thorndike, Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Bondville, Tuesday eve, 29th.
Ware, Wednesday eve, 30th.
I expect a yoke-fellow to assist in filling the above appointments.

Samuel Bragg.

The Lord willing, by invitation, I will spend Lord's Day, Jan. 20th, with the Church in Portsmouth, N. H.

S. S. Brewer.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brn. in the following places.
Danbury, Sunday Jan. 20th.
Sutton, Jan. 22d, eve., where Br. Jesse Hazen may appoint.
Carlisle, Mass., Sunday, Jan. 27th, and longer, if thought best.

S. P. Manning.

Notices.

☞ Advent brethren hold regular meetings every Sabbath in the Chapel on Spring Street; also on Tuesday and Friday evenings. In giving out appointments, Brn. will please to name the place, as there are two meetings held in this city.

For the Brethren, Thomas N. Palmer.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 19th, 1855.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor, for sale at this Office. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The above works by Eld. Z. Campbell, are for sale at this Office.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts "	3 " "
Future Pnuishment, by Grew,	2 cts "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 cts "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
Voice of the Church $1	"	9 " doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.
Address orders with the cash to
H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.
☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and by O. Hart, Concord, N. H., and D A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

☞ Br. J. K. Bellows, your communication is received.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is Russell's Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

M Joice, E P Streeter, E Melcher, N C Lock, A Curtis, W F Carpenter, J R Allen, B Bussier, A S Conant, L Brooks, A P Wells, R Reding, H B Sevey, B E Mansfield, R Morril, $1 each. M L Clark $4,20, N H Brooks $8, A Rowe $1,50, G A Fuller 50 cents, M Merril 30 cents, C Flemming 36 cents, B F Bickford 50 cents, J Nugent 50 cents.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

A friend $2, South Waterford $1, R Woodward $1, M Grant $5, M L Clark 80 cents. Whole amount paid $39,54.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, CORNER OF MOODY AND AUSTIN STREETS, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have myself proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present the advertisement to the public.

For the Crisis.

Sr. Glorlow's inquiry, "Watchman, what of the night?" transposed into verse, with a Response.

By William Shepherd.

The Inquiry.

"Tell me, ye Watchmen, who 'round Zion stand,
What of the night? Is not the dawn at hand?
Does not the Sun of Righteousness begin
To beam with light on this dark world of sin?

Do not those rumbling sounds I hear afar
Herald the coming of God's chariot-car?
Still rolling onward, while behold! it brings
Angelic myriads and the King of kings!

Or, by weak fables have I been deceived?
A baseless vision has my heart believed?
Or was it Truth's stern voice rung through the land—
'Behold! the coming Bridegroom is at hand!'

Tell me, ye Watchmen! oh! some hope impart,
That quick may cheer my weary, aching heart;
While at the Throne of Grace, remember me,
That God in all my woes, my aid may be!"

The Response.

Lo! on the tower as now I watch the way,
Methinks I see some signs of coming day,
As yonder in the distance I descry
A beauteous light that gems the eastern sky.

And then I list intent those sounds afar,
Like chariot wheels of some majestic car,
While Angel voices fill the heavenly dome,
Assuring us the Lord is soon to come!

We did not follow any fancied dream,
No cunning fable, no delusive gleam;
'Twas glorious Truth that your glad heart believed,
When you the message of the Lord received.

Cheer up—cheer up—there's hope—there's joy for thee;
Soon shall the shades of night forever flee.
List to those earnest tones that greet thine ear,
"The Morning cometh!" Christ will soon appear!

The Watchmen as they tread their lonely round,
Before their God in "instant prayer" are found;
They pray for thee—for all—their prayer is one—
"Thy Kingdom come, O Lord! Thy will be done!"

Elizabeth City, N. J., Jan., 1856.

For The Crisis.

Hymn.

Ye soldiers of the holy Cross,
The crown will soon be given;
Hold on—hold on, nor heed the loss,
Your names are writ in heaven.
The New Jerusalem comes down,
Adorned with majesty,
And all the saints will enter in,
And taste the heavenly joy.
Oh! that's the joy for me!

O what a blessed hope is ours,
While here on earth we dwell;
We love to bear our Savior's cross,
Since all will end so well;
Oh let us to the end endure
Reproach for His dear Name,
Eternal Life is certain—sure—
For all who this attain.
Oh! that's the hope for me.

The City of the living God,
The saints will soon possess,
Because they own His precious word,
And His blest name confess;
Before the throne they'll stand,
Who trust the Savior's word,
With happy hearts they'll enter in
The joy of their dear Lord.
Oh! happy day for me.

O happy, happy, blissful day,
When all the saints shall rise,
And with their glorious Lord and King,
Mount upward to the skies.
And while the elements shall burn,
And all the wicked be destroyed,
The saints shall rise above all harm,
And reign forever with the Lord.
Oh! that's the day for me.

M.

Sublime Thought.

"Could we with ink the ocean fill,
Were the whole earth of parchment made,
Were every single stick a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade,
To write the love of God to man,
Would drain the ocean dry,
Nor would the scroll contain the whole,
Though stretched from sky to sky."

The Bridegroom's Coming.

Selected from "Shadows of the New Creation," for the Crisis.

By William Shepherd.

"He comes! he comes! the Judge severe!
The seventh trumpet speaks him near;
His lightnings flash, his thunders roll:
How welcome to the faithful soul!"

The day of Redemption unfolds, and brighter and brighter tints bespangle the eastern sky with the approach of the glorious morning. "Let the heralds of mercy withhold not the proclamation with which they are intrusted! Let the trumpet give no uncertain sound! Let its voice be raised to the fulness of joyful anticipation, and hope, for the awakening and comfort of the Church of God in the earth; For shall we not need the richest and clearest consolatory announcement, amid the fearful trials and troubles, which we know must precede the day of the Lord! Arise, then, ye slumbering shepherds! Awake, ye listless watchmen! Stand up on your tower! Look out for the signs of the coming day! Scorn to be found doubting or distant, when the morn is breaking and the shadows are fleeing away, and the Lord about to appear. Behold, already, his chariots are preparing—His angelic hosts are marshalled—the saints that attend Him are collecting—the wings of the wind are ready to convey Him.

How much better and happier to be found among those who are wisely expecting, and preparing, and warning others to be on their watch, and to keep their garments, lest that day come upon them as a thief, and find them naked and ashamed, than to be taken unawares in the ranks of the foolish and careless and hostile, who will not believe nor obey nor get ready in due season! Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find watching; for verily he shall be made ruler over many things and "shall enter into the joy of his Lord!"

The second coming of our Lord in glory, as a King, in triumph and honor, as a successful Conqueror over his foes and as a loving Bridegroom to his true Church, is a theme upon which holy Scripture utters no doubtful voice, but is exultingly eloquent and transcendentally comprehensive. It is, in fact, the grand theme to which all Revelation tends, and upon which human Redemption hinges. Its first utterance was in Eden, immediately after the fall, when it was declared that the Serpent's head should be bruised by the Woman's seed—and its last echo is in the conclusion of the Apocalypse, and the winding up of the Scripture cannon, where the song is consummated.—Salvation is sung, Satan is bound, and Christ reigns.

It is very clear that the first Advent of the Redeemer had nothing grand, ostensible, or glorious in its circumstances. Everything external, in that appearance, was designedly calculated to mark Him as a lowly, oppressed, and afflicted sufferer. He was, at that period, distinctly—The Sacrifice. "The Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world." It behoved Him thus to be degraded, and to suffer, "the just for the unjust;" taking upon Him the form of a servant, and in that form being "obedient unto death," and thus being bruised (according to the prediction in Gen. 3) under the Serpent's power, but specially "for our iniquities."

It will be observed by the careful student of prophecy, that the greater part of the glowing descriptions of Isaiah and other prophets concerning the Messiah's Kingdom is as yet unfulfilled. These relate onwards, from the Advent in humiliation to the Advent in glory; and often connect the two great events together by a link so slight that both seem to coalesce in one grand harmonious scene, which nothing but the divine wisdom (to whom all things however distant, are present) could possibly unveil.

Do any of the prophets speak of the coming of Messiah into the world, and not connect a far higher promise than has ever yet been fulfilled, or is ever likely to be fulfilled, while the world remains in its present state? If we hear Him announced to Abraham, it is He in whom "all families of the earth shall be blessed"—or, as revealed to Jacob, He is the Sceptre, the Shiloh, "unto whom the gathering of the people shall be"—or shown to entranced Balaam, He is the Star out of Jacob, and the Sceptre out of Israel, to "smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth"—or foretold to royal David, He is the Son, who "shall build a house" for the Father's name, and whose throne "shall be established for ever." Do we hear of Him from the Psalmist's inspired melodies? He is the deliverer of the poor, the Redeemer of the soul (man) the object of adoration to kings, to be called blessed of all nations, and to come and "judge the earth in righteousness." Do we listen to Isaiah's inspired theme? He is to establish the Lord's house in the top of the mountains, all nations are to flow unto it, and walk in the light of it. He is to "shake terribly the earth," and bring down the loftiness of men, and to be exalted alone in that day. He is to be "beautiful and glorious" and to "make the fruit of the earth comely." He is the virgin's son, making himself "of no reputation," yet Immanuel and wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the Father of the ages, the Prince of Peace," on whose shoulders the government is to rest; He is the rod out of Jesse's stem, and a branch out of his roots; yet, in His days, "the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid." He is to "swallow up death in victory, and to wipe away tears from off all faces, and take away the rebuke of his people from off all the earth"—He is to be Judge, and Lawgiver, and King—He has "no form nor comeliness" (in His first sacrificial Advent,) but He is afterwards, to have "a portion with the great," and to "divide the spoil with the strong," and to be "fairer than the children of men." After a period of darkness, He is to "beautify the place of His Sanctuary," which is to be called "the city of the Lord, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel—an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations;" whose walls shall be salvation, and whose gates shall be praise; and the Lord shall be its everlasting light and glory.

The 63d of Isaiah gives an intimation of terrible punishments attending upon the coming of the Lord, and Savior, and Judge, which must take place simultaneously with, or just previously to His manifestation as the Bridegroom of the Church. There must be the glorious triumph of Christ, as the King and Conqueror over His own and His people's enemies, before we can hail the full bliss of His espousals. Hence, not to mention numerous other prophecies, Malachi, the last of the Old Testament—harbingers of Messiah's days, describes in his closing chapter, the succession of events in the order above mentioned. The day is coming—it has not come yet, though Christ's first Advent in humility has long passed—which "shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble," the day is coming which "shall burn them up," so as to "leave them neither root nor branch"—in that day the wicked shall be trodden down, and shall be "ashes under the soles of the feet" of God's faithful people. "He shall break them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel."*

But the events attendant upon this, are those which we now undertake and delight to treat of—the exaltation of the true Church of Christ in the earth—the joy of her espousals to Christ, as the Bride to the Bridegroom. "Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in His wings, and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall." "Thou art fairer than the children of men; grace is poured into thy lips; therefore God hath blessed thee forever—Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever, the sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre; thou lovest righteousness, and hatest wickedness; therefore God, thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows; and all thy garments smell of myrrh, aloes and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, whereby they have made thee glad. King's daughters were among thy honorable women; upon thy right hand did stand the Queen (the Bride—the Church,) in gold of Ophir. The King's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold; she shall be brought unto the King in raiment of needle work; the virgins, her companions that follow her, shall be brought unto thee; with gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought; they shall enter into the King's palace."

To such highly rapturous and pre-figurative strains does the sweet Psalmist tune his inspired lyre, and sound aloud from distant times, the regal pomp and hymenial Advent in glory and love to His Bride, of Messiah, the fairest, and loveliest, and mightiest Friend of His ransomed and espoused Church. O my soul, be wise to recognize the joyful sound, and let the chords of the heart vibrate within in melodious unison to the triumphant song of praise! Anticipate by faith the happy day, and be thou ready with the golden ornaments of the pure Gospel, and the fine raiment of the saints, to enter with acceptance to the Marriage Supper of the Lamb!

Let us proceed to trace further the Scriptural proofs and tokens of this approaching manifestation and consummation of redeeming power and love.

The Song of Songs is an Epithalamic Ode—highly pictured with Eastern imagery—descriptive of the faithful Bride's preparation and expectancy of the royal Bridegroom's coming in His beauty, glory and majesty. His name is as "ointment poured forth," sweet and fragrant with the richest perfumes and graces. The "upright love Him." He is as "the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys." He is "the chief among ten thousand, He is altogether lovely." His banner over His Church is love. She exults in His favors and protection, and awaits with ardent expectation for the time when her Beloved shall come to be glorified; and she calls upon Him to "make haste," in His triumphant Advent, and "be like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of spices."

And, casting aside high-wrought metaphor—who is this Beloved, but as described in the language of the prophets? "Thy Maker is thine husband, the Lord of hosts is His name: and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; the God of the whole earth shall He be called." "And it shall be at that day, saith the Lord, that thou shalt call me Ishi (my husband) and shalt call me no more Baali (my Lord;) for I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall no more be remembered by their name.—And I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in lovingkindness, and in mercies: I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness, and thou shalt know the Lord."

The love of Christ for His Church, and our close fellowship and intimate union with Him are set forth in the New Testament in the most attractive light. "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: cotinue ye in my love; If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love. * * This is my commandment that ye love one another, as I have loved you: greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." * * "Christ is the head of the Church, as the husband is the head of the wife. * * Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word: That he might present it to himself a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish. * * No man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the Church; for we are members of his body of his flesh, and of his bones."

This view of the intense love of the Savior towards the whole body and every member of the true spouse, the Church, is brought out still more clearly, when the final manifestation of Christ and the exaltation of His people are spoken of. The Parable of the ten Virgins was intended as a representation of the last coming of the Bridegroom, and the necessity of great watchfulness on the part of all His elect attendants—called here (Matt. 25th,) "the wise Virgins." The announcement has gone forth as upon the wings of the wind, finding its way to the uttermost parts of the earth, "Behold! the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet Him."

But in what state will He find and meet the visible Church? and who shall swell the strain of His glorious Advent?

"When the Son of Man cometh shall He find faith on the earth?" This implies that many even of the professing flock shall be among the "foolish virgins," slumbering and sleeping, when they ought to be trimming their lamps, and letting their light shine out of the abundance of the grace of God in their hearts. In the last days there shall be perilous times.—Many shall be "lovers of pleasure, more than lovers of God, and having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." Others, who compose the true and wise members, and occupy the inner sanctuary of the Temple of God in the earth, having the secret of the Lord in their tabernacle, and the seal of the Spirit upon their hearts, are found ready, and rejoice to meet Him at His appearing and Kingdom.

(To be Continued.)

* See Malachi 3: 4; Ps. 2, &c., also other announcements of coming judgments, preparatory to the signal deliverance and final redemption of the whole earth and manifestation of the Son of God. Ps. 45: 3-5; 72: 9; Isa. 2, and 26: 15, 16; Dan. 12: 1; Joel 3: 3; Matt. 24; 25, &c., Rev. 16: 17, 18, 19. Ps. 45.

Selected for The Crisis from the N. Y. Observer.

Inquiries.

The Savior said of a certain woman, "She hath done what she could." Can the same remark be applied to the conduct of the reader? Have you done all that, through the aid of Divine grace, it was in your power to do? Are you daily doing all that you can do in the service of Christ? Is there not something more which you can do?

Can you not pray more? Perhaps you have, sometimes, for slight and inefficient reasons, omitted family prayer: can you not be more constant in the performance of that duty? The late venerable Dr. Hyde, in a letter to his son, reminded him that family prayer was never omitted in his house; shall it ever, except from necessity, be omitted in yours?

Perhaps you sometimes neglect secret prayer; can you not avoid that neglect in future? You know that prayer is essential to spiritual life, as the atmosphere is to animal life. Defraud not your soul of its birthright of prayer.

Perhaps you may have set apart a suitable amount of time for this duty. Can you not pray more in that time? Can you not pray with greater concentration of thought and desire, and with a firmer reliance on the promises of God?

Can you not praise more? Can you not be more abundant in thanksgiving for your spiritual and temporal mercies?—You doubtless thank God daily for His goodness to you; but can you not put more heart into your thanks? As you sit by your fireside, or are walking by the way, or are engaged in your employment, can you not think over the instances of His mercy, and thus stir up your heart to thankfulness? Just in proportion to your efforts to call to mind your mercies, will their number and magnitude increase in your view.

Can you not be more careful to know and to do what is right? Christians are a peculiar people: one of their marked peculiarities is that they are anxious to do that which is right, not because right doing will save them, but because it is what they were made and redeemed for. Can you not be more careful to view every proposed action in the light of duty?—Take a little more time for consideration before you enter on a course of action.—Ask yourself, is this right? Will it please God? Can I implore God's blessing to rest upon me while I am doing it? If you have any doubts about its lawfulness, refrain from doing it.

Our minds are blinded by sin. We need to cultivate our powers of perception as well as our powers of feeling. To do this we must exercise them constantly, carefully, consciencioualy and prayerfully. We must also do that which we perceive to be right. Perseverance in doing our duty will assist us in forming right judgments in regard to duty. "If any man do my will he shall know of the doctrine." A willing and obedient spirit is a great aid to a correct interpretation of the divine will.

Can you not do more for the happiness of others? Christians were not made to live for themselves. They are to be imitators of Him who went about doing good. They are to do good as they have an opportunity. They are to be watchful for opportunities of doing good to the bodies and to the souls of men.

Do you care as much for others as a redeemed sinner ought to? Are you constantly planning and doing something to promote the temporal and spiritual happiness of those to whom you have access? Are there once desolate hearts which have been made to rejoice through your sympathy and bounty, and are there happy converts brought in through your instrumentality? Can you not increase the number?

Can you not give more liberally? Perhaps God has prospered you more abundantly with respect to property. You are then one of his rich stewards. He made you rich that you may give liberally.—How much you are to give, is a question to be settled between yourself and your Master. Whatever that amount is, it is to be a liberal one. God gives liberally and upbraideth not. His children are to follow His example. They are to do what they can. Wealthy Christian, can you do no more than you have done?

Perhaps you are a child of poverty.—You may have but few earthly comforts. Probably you have more than your Master who had not where to lay His head.—You are not to be excluded from the privilege of giving. You may give what you can, and your mite will be as acceptable to the Savior as the thousands of your wealthy brother. You can give something. You have given something: can you not give more?

Can you not be more submissive to God's will? Passive obedience is quite as important as active obedience. We are not only to do God's will joyfully, but we are to suffer it joyfully. Can you not guard more carefully against a murmuring spirit? Can you not, by prayer and painstaking, acquire the ornament not only of a meek and quiet, but a perfectly submissive spirit?

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. J. Miller.

West Brattleboro, Vt., Dec. 23d, 1855.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—As we are all scattered over the land, a few here and a few there, it does us all good to hear from each other through the Crisis. It does me good and I doubt not it does others. If we can write but a few lines yet we may, say something that will be comforting to the weary, way-worn pilgrim. Oh! it does make my heart glad to hear from the scattered flock, although there are many of them whom we never have seen in the flesh, yet I do hope we shall all be so faithful as to meet in the blessed Kingdom where we shall see each other, face to face, and no more be strangers—blessed be God.

Dear Brn. and Srs., I do long to be there, where we shall see our blessed Jesus, and ever be with Him. We must walk very straight in order to reach that happy place. I sometimes feel as though I am too unworthy to be accepted, but His promises are sure to all those that will believe. With the assistance of divine grace, I trust we shall be faithful enough to gain the promised land. I know it will be worth leaving houses and lands, fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters. I feel as though I had left all of these that I might seek the Kingdom of God. I have been obliged to do all this, and I thank God that I have; for I believe that we shall possess the promised land, and that is far better than the treasures of earth. I am weak both in body and mind; but the Lord will make us strong, if we trust in Him, and Him alone.

O what precious promises our blessed Jesus did leave on record for us! How He suffered and died on the cross, that we poor unworthy creatures might live forever. I feel as though I possessed more and more of His blessed spirit every day; and the more I think of our blessed Master's coming, the more I desire Him to come and redeem His children from this sin-cursed earth. O I do thank God that such a day is coming, and that quickly.—How much wickedness abounds on every hand. How much more are people glued to the world every day they live, even those who profess to be Adventists.

Every one is holding on to his property; it is mine say they; and are unwilling to expend a cent for the cause of Christ.

Let us all, as Brn. and Srs., be liberal with what we have, and do all we can for the furtherance of the Gospel of Christ, knowing what we have here is not ours but Christ's, and that we must be willing to communicate, instead of laying up treasures for this life.

And now, dear Brn. and Srs., let us keep ourselves unspotted from the world, that we may be presented faultless before His presence with exceeding joy.

From your unworthy Sr. looking for the Lord. S. Janette Miller.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. R. Humphries.

Buffalo, Dec. 31st, 1855.

Do we know for a certainty that the 6th vial is poured out?

Yes; because that under it the nations are gathered.

Do we know for a certaity that this is the gathering spoken of in Rev. 16th?

Yes: because they are gathered to a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.

Does the Crimea answer to the great wine press spoken of in Rev. 14th?

Yes: because in it is the Armageddon, and it measures a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

What city is the great wine press trodden without?

The dominion over which the papal power ruleth, as the following testimony will show. When France made war against the two witnesses, there was a great earthquake, (Revolution,) and the 10th part of the city fell—or one of the ten kingdoms. And under the pouring out of the 7th vial the great city is divided into three parts. Then the city is the Roman empire, and the Crimea is outside the city. Truly prophecy is a sure light. But where are our watchmen?

This seems to me to be the meat in due season, and if the trumpet do not give a certain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle? The vision must speak and not lie; for the time has come to reap. I do expect that the coming spring will usher in the pouring out of the 7th vial—the nations rushing as the rushing of many waters—the great wine press be filled—and the voice from the temple and from the throne will say, it is done. Rob't. Humphries.

On Listening to Evil Reports. The longer I live the more I feel the importance of adhering to the rule which I have laid down for myself in relation to such matters, viz:

1. To hear as little as possible whatever is to the prejudice of others.
2. To believe nothing of the kind until I am absolutely forced to it.
3. Never to drink into the spirit of one who circulates an ill report.
4. Always to moderate, as far as I can, the unkindness which is expressed towards others.
5. Always to believe that if the other side were heard a very different account would be given of the matter.

Henry Ward Beecher on Sectarianism. This clergyman recently preached a sermon against old school Calvinism, in which he said he wished it fully understood by his people, that he served them not as the minister of a sect, but one of the truth. "I am not, he declared a Calvinist, an Armenian, a Universalist, a Unitarian, a Pelagian, nor a Swedenborggian, but I am simply Henry Ward Beecher, a preacher of the Gospel, a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ; and trying to make other people believe in Him—that is all."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, (COURIER BUILDING,) | ISSUED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NO. 27 CENTRAL STREET (UP STAIRS.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. | LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1856. | VOLUME 2.—NUMBER 24.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE SPEEDY COMING OF JESUS CHRIST.

S. J. VARNEY, Printer, . . 27 Central St.

TERMS of Subscription to be PAID in ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months,	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months,	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	14,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	18,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel undes obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Lowell, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publications write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelop.

For The Crisis.

'I will bring distress upon men; and they shall walk like blind men.' Bible.

BY S. S. B.

No. 7.

ROME.

In my last number I endeavored to present the present deplorable condition of this once haughty and Imperial mistress of the world.

We will now present some statements from various sources developing the fact that there are now latent fires at work in Italy, that will soon explode and consume this monster of iniquity. The present union of France with those ten petty divisions of Italy, is only fulfilling the Scriptures in one respect, and will soon manifest the declaration of the Almighty in another. France, to my mind, in her present condition, is the 8th form of the beast, or in plainer words is the BEAST; and those ten Papal divisions—Sardinia, Parma, Modena, Lucca, Lombardy, States of the Church, Milan, Tuscany, Naples, San Marino, are the ten horns. Rev. 17: 16, "And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire."

They are now giving their power and strength to the Beast; (or, as it reads in an old translation before me, "God has put it in their hearts to execute his designs in agreeing to give their kingdom to the beast, until the divine oracles shall be accomplished."

In ours, it reads thus: "For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled. And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth."

Speaking of these ten powers—Murdock's Syriac translation reads: "These persons have not yet received royalty, But they receive authority, as if kings, with the beasts of prey for one hour."

In Mace's translation, London Edition, A. D. 1729, the 9th, 10th and 11th verses read: "The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth. They likewise signify seven kings; five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he comes, he will continue but a short space. The beast that was and is not, is himself the eighth. He is of the seven, and shall be destroyed." The latter part of the 12th verse reads; "but receive power as kings for a while with the Beast." The 16th v. reads thus:—"The ten horns which you saw on the beast, they shall hate the whore, they shall plunder and strip her, eat her flesh, and burn her with fire."

The last phase in the apocalyptic view of the Revelator, as they—these kings—were seen, "ere they plunder and strip her," was a condition of hatred. Now then I purpose to let some eye witnesses of the condition of Rome speak on this deeply interesting point of the subject.

The hatred of this monster of iniquity on account of the cruelty of Priests, Bishops and Pope, to the citizens of Rome and the Papal states, by fraud, bribery, plunder, imprisonment, lying, murder, and the horrors of the inquisition has awaken a feeling of hatred and fury in the populace that thirsts for vengeance. I will here insert an article or two concerning some disclosures in the city during the revolution of '48.

"SECRETS OF THE INQUSITION. The correspondent of the London Daily News describes a visit he had paid to the many small, dark, and damp dungeons of the inquisition at Rome, which have lately been thrown open to the public. It is out of the beaten track behind St. Peter's.—The correspondent says:—

"'The officer in charge led me down to where the men were digging in the vaults below; they had cleared a downward flight of steps, which was choked up with old rubbish, and had come to a series of dungeons under the vaults deeper still, and which immediately brought to my mind the prisons of the Doge under the canal of the Bridge of Sighs at Venice, only that here there was a surpassing horror. I saw imbedded in old masonry, unsymmetrically arranged, five skeletons in various recesses, and the clearance had only just begun; the period of their in sertion in this spot must have been more than a century and a half. From another vault, full of skulls and scattered human remains, there was a shaft about four feet square ascending perpendicularly to the first floor of the building, and ending in a passage off the hall of the chancery, where a trap-door lay between the tribunal and the way into a suite of rooms destined for one of the officials. The object of this shaft could admit of but one surmise. The ground of the vault was made up of decayed animal matter, a lump of which held imbedded in it a long silken lock of hair, as I found by personal examination as it was shovelled up from below. But that is not all; there are two large subterranean lime-kilns, if I may so call them, shaped like a beehive in masonry, filled with layers of calcined bones, forming the substratum of two other chambers on the ground floor in the immediate vicinity of the very mysterious shaft above mentioned.'"

"THE INQUISITION. The N. Y. Recorder makes the following translation from the 'Indicator,' of Malta, in relation to Archbishop Cashiur, who has been for twenty-two years incarcerated in one of the dungeons of the Inquisition of Rome, for being guilty of having proven-fallible the infallibility of a Pope:—'Deceived by the appearance of benignity and forgiveness shown by Pope Pius IX, we spoke of this unfortunate Archbishop in 1846, in the 17th number of this journal. We hoped, from the charity of Pius IX, if not the entire liberty, at least some indulgence towards that unfortunate person; but on the contrary, we hear from our correspondent at Rome, that the unhappy Cashiur has been reduced to a state of suffering greater than before, by the order of Pius himself. The few concessions which had been granted to him by Pope Gregory have been recalled by Pope Pius IX.—The pretext for this is, that the archbishop has had a difference with brother Pio, a Dominican friar and jailor of the Inquisition; but the true reason, says our correspondent, is a wish to conceal from the world the existence of the Inquisition, which could not be done while Cashiur was seen taking his walks accompanied by keepers.'"

The articles published in Rome under the caption of "The Pope weeks, by Montazio, 1848," and circulated by thousands, have kindled a feeling in the breasts of millions, according to Mazzini's statement, which the Pope and all his clan cannot extinguish. The Irish Patriot from Catholic Ireland remarks:—

"HATING THE HARLOT. John Mitchell, in a late letter to Archbishop Hughes, has asserted some notorious facts, illustrative of the deleterious influence exerted in Italy by the Papal Government.

Having shown that the spiritual and temporal authority of the Pope have no necessary connection, he proceeds to characterize the government of the Prince of Rome, which the Romish priesthood would fain establish in this country, as follows:

"But I undertook further to show that the Pope, as a Prince, "is a bad prince, and his government a mischievous government." To most persons the universal and intense hatred of the Romans to that goverment would be proof enough. In 1849 they fought till their city was a ruin in order to be rid of it; and from that day to this, it has needed all the Papal troops, (mostly foreigners,) and an army of Frenchmen besides, to thrust that government down their throats. This is enough; but Americans, and those Irishmen who, in America, see and know what freedom and justice are, had better consider a little the nature of the Papal government, in order that they may learn to regard it with utter EXECRATION as one of the worst and meanest despotisms that now deform Europe."

A correspondent remarks as follows in a Boston paper.

"A curious quarrel has broken out at Naples between the King and the Jesuits. The Neapolitan Minister of Police recently sent for father Giuseppe, the head of the order of Jesus, and informed him that he must no longer teach the "revolutionary" doctrine that the Pope is superior to all the Kings of the earth. The Minister added, that in 1848 the Jesuits had been sent out of the kingdom "in coaches," but if they continued to teach such doctrines they would be, "hunted out with kicks!" Father Giuseppe and twenty-three others, much alarmed at the threat, have published a statement professing their entire devotion to the absolute monarchy of Naples."

At a meeting of the Italian exiles in the city of New York since the revolution of '48, the following statements were made in their report. Guglielmo Gazana, stated: "Both Italians and strangers, agree that there can be no salvation for Italy without the destruction of the Papacy, through which monstrous and cruel power Italy has been brought to suffer all the tortures by which for ten centuries she has been lacerated."

Another writer observes: "The condition of the people of Rome is deplorable in the extreme. They are reduced to great poverty, and are denied the smallest approach to either—civil or religious liberty. They are plundered and robbed of their property by the tyrannical laws of the Papal Government, which are enforced by the French army of robbers. They still however hope for the future and maintain and cherish a most deadly hostility and revenge to their oppressors and foreign allies. This state of things is common to the whole of Italy."

Another writer states:—"Nine-tenths of the people in Rome including the female portion of the population, look on the Pope and his Cardinals with contempt, as spiritual impostors; and with the utmost hatred and horror, as temporal oppressors." * * * The popular feeling of the Romans has been so embittered by the manifold executions, imprisonments, treacheries and oppression of their rulers, that I regret to say, I found the popular leaders inexorably deaf to any councils of moderation and mercy, deliberating merely whether the HOLY FATHER should be hanged from the cross of St. Peter, or over the so called Tomb of St. Peter within."

Hear Gavazzi speak:—"In the approaching crusade we adopt the sword as an emblem of our determination to fight for God and our native land. The sword is to destroy all the enemies of civil and religious liberty in Italy."

I will now introduce an item from the speech of the celebrated Italian patriot, JOSEPH MAZZINI. After a somewhat lengthy speech in London, in which he referred to the secret organization throughout the Italian States, in deadly hostility to their oppressors, he closes in the following manner:—

"And thousands belonging to the popular classes in Italy, are at present involved in this mysterious and underground propagandism; and the secret lies unrevealed."

These remarks caused a profound sensation amongst the audience, who gazed at each other with astonishment.

He continued: "We shall struggle—struggle—struggle—to the last—help us if you can—for with my hand on my heart, and a serene yet bold look meeting yours, I can tell you ours is a holy struggle, commanded to us by Providence, and meant for good. Yes; we shall struggle, and this is the mind—the unconquerable decision of the millions. We are ripe for liberty and independence."

Since that speech was delivered, I have clipped the following from a foreign paper which shows the blood hounds are on their track, and scent their prey.

"A letter from Florence says: 'On the 20th of August 1855, commenced the trial of a secret society, which has been detected in correspondence with the republican committee in London. The trial has not presented any features worthy of particular remark, excepting the oath administered to the members, which is as follows:—'In the name of God and of the people, I swear faith to Italy, which is to form itself into one republic; continual war against all its enemies, whether foreigners or Italians, and above all, against THE POPE-KING, who is its worst enemy.—I swear to conform to the instructions which shall be transmitted to me by the delegates of the triumvirate, who direct this association; I swear to keep secret the laws and operations of the association, whenever I cannot myself take part in those operations for the triumph of the good cause. So be it, and forever.'"

This is the latest account I have from the cage of unclean and hateful birds.

"☞ The Pope has been slightly unwell, but not seriously. Many rich families are leaving Rome, fancying the state of affairs extremely precarious, and in the Romagna and the Marshes, misery increases, and brigandage and assassination render life and property insecure."

I will close this article, lest I should weary the reader. Much more might be added from statements of different persons; but let the above suffice.

(To be continued.)

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. C. E. Gierlow.

MACON, GA., Jan. 1st, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—Christmas has passed with all the noise and confusion with which it is celebrated here at the south.—Dancing, frolicking, and feasting, together with the discharge of fire-arms and crackers, have been the order of the day for a week, and I assure you that my heart is sad. Truly, the world is fast ripening for destruction, and my weary soul cries out in anguish—How long, Oh Lord, how long shall the wicked triumph? Shall thy forbearance continue forever? But I will turn away from this dark picture of iniquity and degradation that meet me on every hand, and look to Him who is altogether lovely, the chiefest among ten thousands, and ask for grace to enable me to stand in this evil day, with the Gospel armor on, ready to do and suffer all His blessed will.

I acknowledge that I have been in a luke-warm state since the passing of the time at which we expected the consummation of our hope, and was getting on to the borders of the enchanted ground, when it pleased the faithful Shepherd to admonish me of my danger, by taking my little lamb—my precious babe, who by his enticing loveliness had won the tenderest affections of my heart. This affliction has served to crucify me to the world, and awaken me to a sense of my position, in regard to the coming day, when the destinies of all shall be decided. With humble confidence I drink the cup which infinite wisdom hath prepared for me. "Even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight." But, Father dear, while passing through the deep waters which at times seem ready to overwhelm me, I pray thee to encircle me in thine everlasting arms, and bear me safe to that peaceful shore,

> Where sickness, pain, and death,
> Are felt and feared no more!

Why should I mourn and hang my head in grief? The precious Jewel is not lost, which I have loved so well. If I am faithful, it will sparkle in the crown of glory which the righteous Judge will give me in the day of His appearing. And oh, to think that day is now so near! Yes very near, not ten or twelve years distant, but the next great event to be looked for.

Oh, that some of God's watchmen might come this way, and endeavor to awaken His people to a sense of their proximity to the judgment!

It has become noised about, that our views are very strange, and consequently many persons are anxious to see and converse with me, in relation to our faith. Some of these are much surprised to find that the Bible sustains us in the conclusion that the end of all things is at hand.

I was sent for, to go some 3 or 4 miles out of town a few days since, to visit a Universalist family who seemed very much pleased with the way I understand the Scriptures, and were very anxious to have me come again. They keep some 10 or 12 slaves about the house, and probably have many more, yet they spoke decidedly against the system. They keep them to provide for and prevent them from suffering. It is against the laws of this state for any person to liberate his slaves, and if one should do so, I know not what would become of the poor creatures, ignorant as they are; especially, as they would have to be conveyed to the north, or some other place, where they are not known. But, thank the good Lord, He is soon coming to proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of the prison to them that are bound! Hail, happy day! Oh, who that is a child of God, would not rejoice to see it? My weary soul cries out, Oh, come, thou great emancipator, and take thy children home!

In regard to the 2300 days of Daniel, I see no propriety in disconnecting them from the 70 weeks, since Gabriel had been commanded to make him to understand the vision. This he did not accomplish, in the 8th chapter, but in the 9th, he comes to Daniel to give him "skill and understanding," and commences by telling him to "consider the vision." Did Gabriel forget what he came for? and after he thus addressed him, did he begin to talk upon a subject entirely foreign to THE vision? Impossible! Yet if the 2300 days began with the 70 weeks at 445, B. C., our Savior must have been much older at His crucifixion than we should have supposed Him to have been from the reading of the New Testament, or those years must have ended at some time in the past. God grant that we may have some additional light on this important subject in order to make those events to harmonize

If the vision commenced at 445, which corresponds with the marginal reading of an old Bible—I find here, the cleansing of the sanctuary must begin next year; and notwithstanding the cry of peace and safety, it is evident that the vintage is soon to be gathered into the great "winepress of the wrath of God!" We see in our own country indications of that fearful conflict, in which, every man's sword shall be against his brother.

From what I read in a paper yesterday, civil war has probably already commenced in Kansas, the particulars of which you will most likely have learned before this shall reach you. God grant that we may be prepared to escape all these things, and stand before the Son of man in peace!

P. S. My last letter should have been dated Dec. 9th, instead of Nov. 9th.

For The Crisis.

Letter from S. T. B.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK, Jan. 13th, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—God grant you may be still sustained in your efforts to feed the scattered flock; not only by pecuniary aid, but by the united prayers of the faithful, and their contributions of meat in due season."

Fifty-five, has rolled away, and we are yet on pilgrimage—this side the promised land, like Gideon, with his reduced army, faint, yet still pursuing." The dark waves of temptation and trial, are continually passing over us, which makes me feel that we have come into "the hour of temptation, that was to come on all the world to try them." O to be of that number, "that keep the word of His patience." Then, O, how safely we shall be kept. How sure the promise!

I cannot better express my present feelings than by quoting the language of another, which I will transcribe for your columns, thinking it will find a response in the heart of many a way-worn pilgrim.

"Varied are the scenes through which we pass—attended with fightings without, and foes within.

"How peculiarly calculated are the trials of this last time, to probe every department of the soul, and wake to feeling the most fine and tender chords that vibrate in the human heart! What developments do we see of the dark principles of depravity from heartsbut partially redeemed, when circumstances seem favorable! O when will Christ live in those who bear His name, as sin lives in the sinner?—When will the Church be able in truth to say, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me?" But though there is a shady side to life's scenes; (and indeed it seems to be one continuous shade,) yet there is a fountain of light and glory in Christ.

"How manifest is the love of God in the adaptation of the Gospel to the peculiar circumstances of life. How precious are His promises, as well as great. What circumstances where the promise does not reach us? What wounds so deep that love cannot cure; or trials so complicated that cannot be turned to our account?

"From earth with its broken promises, and faded prospects—O my soul, turn away! Turn away fully to Him who is true—who careth for thee; who sees thee always: who when thou art bending before the fury of the blast, stoops—because His heart yearns over thee to raise thee up—who hears thy sighs, though deep drawn and silent—counts and bottles up thy tears!

"O turn to HIM; yes, and on Him gaze till thou art charmed with His beauty, and ravished with His love. O yes, until thou dost reflect His lovely image."

S. T. B.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. Mary H. Thayer.

HAWLEY, Mass., Dec. 16, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—While reading your request in the paper that the Brn. and Srs. would write for the Crisis, I said, Lord, what wilt thou have me do?

Since the passing of the time, I have looked very poor to myself, and felt very dependent, but my help is all thrown on Jesus' dear name, and I find in Him a perfect portion, a complete Savior. Yes; in Him my God meets me, and I find peace and the smiles of His approbation. O what a gift is Jesus! the gift of God truly. In Him living waters flow; but how many, while He is pleased to tarry, have committed "two evils; they have forsaken the fountain of living waters, and hewed out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." And as for myself, my feet had well nigh slipped in the hour of temptation; but the Lord has been my stay; the Spirit does help my infirmities from time to time, and having obtaind help of God, I continue unto this day, waiting for His Son from heaven. I am trying to overcome and keep His works unto the end. The past movements, first and second, I believe have been the work of God. Whenever I enjoy the most intimate communion with my Heavenly Father, the light shines on the past, and faith is strong that the Lord has begun and will finish this work. His people are his treasure, and cannot be lost; precious as the apple of His eye, they are tenderly watched in all their trials and disappointments; and it will be he that endureth to the end that will be saved. I often think of the many that I have formed acquaintance with in this time movement, and say to myself, what will become of them in this hour of temptation? But again I think of the great Shepherd of the sheep, and with Him I must trust them. If this should meet the eye of any of them, let me say, be not weary in well doing, for in due season you will reap if you faint not. Dangers are thickening; "wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand; above all taking the shield of faith." Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, think of the hope of our calling, and the High Priest of our profession, remember what we have been redeemed with from our vain conversation. It was not with silver or gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, a Lamb without blemish and without spot.

Your Sr. in Christ,

MARY H. THAYER.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, JAN. 26, 1856.

To our Patrons.

As we are almost daily receiving accessions to our number of subscribers, it is difficult to know precisely how many to strike off: consequently our papers sometimes fall short. This was the case with our two last issues; so that to some who had not paid beyond no. 13, we did not forward the paper.

We would be heartily glad to send to all who are willing to read, without money and without price, but with every returning week comes our printer's bill amounting to between $30 and $40, beside all other bills. Our bills must be paid when due, or else the paper must stop. On this account we are under necessity to ask payment in advance.

It would be with extreme regret that we should discontinue the paper to any one, and if after the expiration of this quarter, we strike from our list the names of any who are willing, but unable to pay; or if through mistake we cut off any who have paid, we hope they will write us immediately.

The Millennium.
No. 2.

The next portion of Scripture which will come under our observation, and which appears evidently to be parallel to the 2d Ps., is Ps. 110th.

V. 1. "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool." The original idea conveyed by the expression, "until I make thine enemies thy footstool," seems to be this. In ancient times it was customary for a monarch who had been victorious over his enemies to place his feet upon the necks of the conquered subjects, in token of their subjugation to his authority. The representation in this verse is that Jesus was "exalted as a Prince and Savior," for to give repentance to Israel," Acts 5: 31, being seated at the right hand of God until such time as His enemies should be placed under His feet, or given up to his control, as the Judge of all the earth. The point of chronology at which this was accomplished may be learned from other portions of the word. Turn to Eph. 1: 19-23.—"And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us ward who believe according to the working of his mighty power, Which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name, that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, Which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all."

The Apostle connects together the fact of His resurrection and that of His being seated on the right hand of God.

Again: Heb. 1: 3. "Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." V. 5. "For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?" Here the Apostle connects the idea of His ascension at the right of God with the expression used in the 2d Ps. "Thou art my Son," &c. V. 13. "But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footsool?" In this verse he connects with the other expressions referred to, the idea presented in the first verse of the Psalm under conisderation. From these various quotations it is evident, that when Jesus arose from the dead He was publicly recognized by the Father as His Son, seated on Zion's hill as head over the house of David, exalted at the right hand of God, and having overcome, was seated with the Father on His throne, to remain in this state of exaltation as a Prince giving repentance unto Israel until the day when His enemies are to be delivered into His hands to be destroyed by the executive judgment.

V. 2. "The Lord shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies."

Zion here spoken of as the seat of power from which the rod of His strength would be sent out, is evidently the same as the holy hill of Zion of the 2d Ps. upon which the same king was to be set, and from which centre of power He would break the nations with a rod of iron.

"Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies." The term rule, in the old Testament' is often used as synonymous with judge.

The correspondence in the phraseology of these two Psalms makes it evident that the same events are referred to.

V. 3. "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth." "Thy people shall be willing"—thy people shall be voluntary offerings, willing subjects, obedient servants in the day of thy power. What day is that? The day when He shall send the rod of His strength out of Zion, when He shall rule or judge in the midst of His enemies. "In the beauties of holiness, from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth"—or "more than the dew of the morning thou shalt have the dew of thy youth."

We are informed by critics that the punctuation of this verse should be altered that the colon should not be placed after morning, but after holiness, making it read thus: "Thy people shall be willing (or volunteers) in the beauty of holiness: more than the womb of the morning thou shalt have the dew of thy youth."

The idea here conveyed I take to be this. In the day of Christ's power when the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord, He will have a people described in Revelation as a multitude which no man could number all of whom will be willing, obedient subjects, ready to do His bidding, so that when He rides forth on the white horse the saints will attend Him in bright retinue, and this honor as the Psalmist says have all the saints.

V. 4. "The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek."

This v. brings to view the manner in which the vast multitude of Christ's voluntary subjects are brought into His holy service, and to a consecration of all their energies to His glory, viz. through the priesthood of the Messiah, who was to be a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek. But some perhaps may now be ready to say that the rod of His strength being sent out of Zion appears from this verse to be merely the effect of the Messianic priesthood, or, in other words, the blessings of the New Covenant, i. e., the salvation of men under the Gospel. But mark the succeeding verse.

V. 5. "The Lord at thy right hand shall strike through kings in the day of His wrath."

"The Lord at thy right hand"—the same Lord spoken of in the first v. of this Ps., as being seated at the right hand of Jehovah, i. e., Christ, "shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath." This I apprehend to be the exercise of "the rod of His strength" by which He is to "rule in the midst of His enemies." But to settle this question beyond controversy, read the following verse.

V. 6. "He shall judge among the heathen, he shall fill the places with the dead bodies; he shall wound the heads over many countries."

When that time comes in which his enemies are to be made His footstool, after He has been seated at the right hand of His Father during the Gospel dispensation, or during the time He officiates as a Priest after the order of Melchisedek, when the time comes, for the rod of His strength to be sent forth out of Zion or, in other words, for Him to take unto himself His great power and reign, or, in other words still, to "break the nations with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel," then "He shall judge among the heathen, and FILL THE PLAICES WITH THE DEAD BODIES." Now if it be possible for language to express destruction it is here fully expressed. No comment on this verse is needed.

V. 7. "He shall drink of the brook in the way: therefore shall he lift up the head."

This v. is understood as representing Christ like a mighty conqueror who, in the hot pursuit of His enemies, refreshes himself from the cooling stream, and thus is prepared with renewed vigor to pursue and exterminate the foe.

The Late Trouble in Kansas. St. Louis, Jan. 21. A dispatch from Weston says that the reported battle in Kansas was greatly exaggerated. Nothing serious occurred. There were none killed, and but few slightly wounded.

For the Crisis.

The 2300 Days.

BY P. ALLING.

I must acknowledge myself deeply pained at the course pursued by our leading papers and Brn. relative to the prophetic periods, most of whom practically declare this portion of the Scriptures of truth "unprofitable," and refusing all further inve tigations themselves concerning their termination, do all they can to discourage others. All must admit that much injury has been done to the cause of truth by the errors of the past. Still nothing has really occurred to destroy, or in any wise impair real faith in the sure word of prophecy, which, in connection with the ending of the periods, plainly declares 1st negatively, that "none of the wicked shall understand," and in the second place, affirmatively, that "the wise shall understand."

Christ has clearly defined who are the wise, viz. those who "took oil in their vessels with their lamps," they are they, who, heeding the divine injunction, keep their lamps trimmed and burning, and, because they know not the day nor the hour, therefore continue to watch. In order that we may thus do, and attain that light promised unto the just, which "shineth more and more unto the perfect day," we need all the light reflected from this blessed "lamp"—in this place of our pathway, just prior to the day-dawn. Nothing less will answer. Historic prophecy, the signs of the times and the periods are each distinct and shining lights, imparted to the Church by the God of prophecy, to illumine her pathway to the haven of rest, and are available only through the exercise of a living faith. When thus united her light is a perfect one.

Now, to obscure any portion, must necessarily diminish her light, and subject her to the danger of being turned aside from the true path, as witnessed on all sides, in the many who have cast away their confidence in that portion of the vision defined by the periods, not a few of whom, have fixed upon assumed events yet far in the future enterely incompatable with the immediate coming of Christ. When the mind becomes thus filled, truth has but little or no chance of admitance. Hence the danger of casting away our confidence in any portion of the vision which will soon speak and not lie. The great error of the past has been in our arriving at positive conclusions from inferential premises, which errors should lead us to use caution in the future, but should not in the least deter us from further research, nor diminish our faith in the nearness of the event.

In our past history portions of the sure word have been manifestly fulfilled, thus indicating that, in the main, we have walked in the way marked out by the prophets of old, and we feel somewhat as would an accurate surveyor, engaged in re coursing a long line, of which the beginning and ending as well as numerous way-marks were described in a survey bill before him, should he, after having run the prescribed distance in harmony with these various marks, fail to reach the real termination. Disappointment of course he would feel, yet no relinquishment of faith in the original line, but rather a confirmation. The result would be a re-examination of his minutes, as well as of the original. Whilst thus engaged suppose he should discover that the square stone post, at which he placed his compass was in fact only one of several witness posts to a triangular mound of masonry as the real starting point. O, he would say the mistake was in the outset, which at once explains the mystery. But how came this about? Oh, I see. Instead of confining myself to the letter of the original, I received as testimony the opinions of the learned, and, accordingly commenced my measurement at the wrong mark.

With the foregoing remarks I will say, my attention has recently been called to a re-examination of the 8th and 9th chapters of Daniel. The result has been a confirmation of my faith in their connection, as well as the obtaining of some apparent light relative to the commencement of the 2300 days or years. By reference to ch. 9: 25, it will be seen that the 69 weeks commence with "the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem." "The street shall be built again, and the wall," which work was to be done "in troublous times." By an examination of the various decrees in the book of Ezra, and especially the one issued by Artaxerxes in the 7th year of his reign, it will be seen that reference only is made to the temple. Now it will be remembered that Br. Miller followed the popular commentators of the day, and fixed upon this identical decree as the one from which to date the commencement of the 2300 days, (viz. 457 B. C.,) which brought the end thereof about A. D. 1843 or 13 yrs. ago the coming spring. Thus we see the real cause of our disappointment growing out of a neglect to observe the discrepancy between the prophecy and the decree. But before leaving the book of Ezra I wish to call attention to ch. 6: 14, which reads as follows:—"And the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo, and they builded and finished it according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the commandment of Cyrus and Darius and Artaxerxes KING of Persia." Thus we see that all those decrees of the Persian kingdom were but an unit in executing the one great decree of the God of Heaven relative to the rebuilding and restoration of the temple.

Now if the Divine record upon the subject ended with the book of Ezra, we should be justified in leaving the subject as unprofitable and a thing not revealed. But as God in his good providence saw fit to add the book of Nehemiah as a continuation of the same subject, it behooves us to extend our examinations through that book also for further light. In thus doing it will be seen that there is a perfect agreement in the decree issued by Artaxerxes in the 20th year of his reign with Nehemiah, and the prophecy, as well as the accomplishment of the precise work specified, and that too "in troublous times." Therefore I claim that we are jusified in fixing upon that decree as the one indicated in the prophecy, and should commence our reckoning from the date thereof. Much additional force is due this argument on account of this being the last decree in the series, as well as the closing up of the Divine record. By reference to the marginal date in our Polyglott Bibles, 445 B. C. will be found the year assigned to it. Now add thereto all of A. D. 1855 and we have the complete number of 2300 years. Mark, the decree went forth in the first month, Jewish time. The errors in our chronology, if any, will of course effect the result.

NORWALK, Ohio Jan. 15th, 1856.

☞ In regard to the chronology of the 2300 days as presented by Brn. Alling and Witherell, I would say that if the commandment went forth in 445 B. C., it was not 445 full years before Christ, but in the 445th year before Christ: consequently 1855 full years since Christ will not make 2300 years, but the period must extend to the same point in 1856, at which the commandment went forth in 445 B. C.

ED.

For the Crisis.

The 2300 Days.

BY J. B. WETHERELL.

I feel desirous to write a few lines for publication, although unless I am assisted by the Divine Spirit, I shall accomplish nothing. But with it, I may accomplish all I desire, which is the glory of God, and the comfort and encouragement of the little flock. My heart feels deeply upon the subject I am about to speak of, which is the 2300 days of Daniel the Prophet. I do heartily believe we can come to a Bible conclusion, and get a correct and definite commencement and close of all the Prophetic Periods, and the design of the blessed Lord in giving them.

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing but He revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Amos 3: 7.

Did the Lord reveal this subject to Daniel?

"In the third year of Cyrus king of Persia, a thing was revealed unto Daniel whose name was called Belteshazzar; and the thing was true, but the time appointed was long: and he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision." Dan. 10: 1.

What is to be understood by an appointment? To appoint is to fix or establish. The thing was revealed to Daniel. What do we understand by a revelation? Communication of secret truth. Daniel speaks of both revelation and appointment in the same verse. Now by putting those together we understand that a secret truth was communicated, fixed and established. Is this in keeping with Amos? I think it is. "How long shall be the vision?" Dan. 8: 13, 14. (What vision?) "Concerning the daily sacrifice." (Is that all the vision covers?) "AND the transgression of Desolation, to give BOTH the sanctuary and host to be trodden under foot. And he said unto me, unto two-thousand three-hundred days, (years) then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

Daniel had three visions; but did not speak of a daily sacrifice except in one, that is, in the 8th ch. I think then we can determine what the 2300 days were given for. To measure two things, namely, 1st, daily sacrifice, 2nd, the transgression of desolation. What was this desolation? It was a desolating power. What power? The 'little Horn with eyes and mouth." Whence did it originate?—From the Greek nation. After it was divided into four kingdoms, this came out from one of the four. What was his first work in the Church? To take away the the daily. What next? To place the abomination that maketh desolate."—What was to be the character of this desolating power? It was to tread down the saints and the earth. Was the treading down of the saints to continue as long as that of the earth? It was not. Are we told how long it should tread down the saints? Yes; 1260 days, or time, times and an half." How long is that? I understand the word time, in the singular number, to denote a year; 12 months to a year and 30 days to a month. Times, plural, I understand denotes two years and half a time half a year, thus:—

$12 \times 30 = 360$ days
$24 \times 30 = 720$ days
$6 \times 30 = 180$ days

1260 days

This is the prophetic style of reckoning, viz. a day for a year. It agrees with John's 42 months which make the same amount. Then we have here established in prophetic style what we will call a prophetic number. When did it commence and end? In order to be independent of profane history we will refer to the darkening of the sun as marking its precise termination. Said the Savior, "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand.") Has Daniel spoken of more than one abomination standing in the holy place, (or Church?) He has not. Then this must be the one. What shall he that readeth get an understanding from? I do not see any thing but that period.

After describing the tribulation, He said the sun should be darkened. Was the sun darkened in the spring of 1780? It was; and living witnesses will testify to it. Yes; christian witnesses too. Then, as we said above, let us begin our explanation from the darkening of the sun, and deducting 1260 from 1780 it carries us back to the spring of 520. If this corresponds with Bower, no objection can be made. We think then, we have found our period.

We will now endeavor to prove the 1335 days commence with the 1260.—"And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be A thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred five and thirty days," (years,) Dan. 12: 11, 12. In the 11th v. he says, A thousand. Why did he say A thousand in speaking of this first period? The article A does not make any thousand days definite. Well then, if there were no need of making it definite, and there were no other thousand years commencing at that time, the article A would be proper. Why then did he say, THE thousand?—making it a definite thousand. It was because he had before spoken of A thousand days, (years.) So it would be proper to call it THE thousand, in order to define it and be understood. Thus by commencing them with the 1260, we have proved, at least to my mind, that the 1335 years expired last spring. From what point did the 2300 years commence? Dan. 9: 23. "I am come to show thee, for thou art greatly beloved. Therefore, understand the matter and consider the vision. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people." "Know therefore and understand that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks. The street shall be built again, and the wall even in troublous times." Read Neh. 4: 13-23. This tribulation, I think, corresponds with Dan. 9: 25. When did Christ become the Messiah the Prince? "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a PRINCE and a Savior for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins, And we are His witnesses of these things, so is also the Holy Ghost whom God hath given to them that obey Him," Acts 5: 30-32. We think this 22d v. looks like confirming the covenant with many for one week spoken of in Dan. 7: 27. "Which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will," Heb. 2: 3, 4.

These passages prove to my mind, that the 69 weeks of years ended at Pentecost. How many years will 69 weeks of years make? Ans. 483. How many this side the Cross to fill up the 2300 days? Ans. 1817. Has that number of years elapsed? Ans. It will be fulfilled in the coming spring.

We will now add the number of years this side the cross to the age of Christ, which proves to be 38 years, and then deduct that sum from the 2300 years thus: $1817 + 38 = 1855$ and $2300 - 1855 = 445$. Thus we have 445 years before Christ for the commencement of the 2300 days.

Does this agree with Usher? It does. In our English Bibles it is set down B. C, 445. But this is proved I think independently of any human chronology. I believe the 2300 days will run out with the present Jewish year. I think Daniel tells us the time, Dan. 10: 4. "In the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is Heddekel." Here Daniel sees the great vision and the Angel. Daniel gives a description of the Angel and converses with him.

In what respect does this arrangement differ from the '54 arrangement? In the 1854 arrangement the going forth of the commandment was placed in the year 446 B. C. This arrangement places it in 445 B. C. Nearly all then believed that the 1335 days would end at the resurrection, which the passing of time has proved was not correct. Daniel was told to go his way after the 1335 days had ended; for he was told he should rest and stand in his lot at the end of the days, or at the time appointed.'

☞ We copy the following by request from the Reformer.

Ministerial Conference.

We have been requested to say that a Conference of the Ministry is desired by many, if not all, of the preachers in Western Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Eastern New York, at some central place, and at as early a day as possible to obtain a full expression upon the subject.

It is believed by many of our oldest preachers that there has never been a time in our history as a people, when there was more necessity for the ministry to confer together, then at the present, and when a neglect of this duty could be so inexcusable. Every fact in our present state, and connected with our future hope, demands a Conference of the ministry, and renewed, united effort for the peace of the Church and spread of truth.

Those who have wished said Conference wish it for the following purposes:

1. To consider the present state of the Church, the scarcity of effectual preaching, and to devise some plan by which, if possible, the Churches may be more equally assisted, and more generally supplied with faithful preaching.

2. To confer on the importance of Gospel discipline among us as a people, and to consult as to the best method of maintaining a Gospel discipline in all the Churches.

3. To endeavor to fix upon, and agree in, such a course of future operation in all our effort, whether writing, exhorting, or preaching, as shall secure the peace of the Church, the fellowship of the Ministry, and by consequence, the glory of God and the good of our fellow men.

Those who have requested us to make this announcement, wish every preacher interested in the well-being of the Advent cause within the territory above named, who is in favor of such a Conference, and would attend one if appointed, to forward his name, immediately, to be annexed to the call. Let each one who forwards his name, suggest the place and length of the Conference, and the majority shall rule as to time and place.

If such a Conference is held, it ought to be appointed in the next week's papers, hence every Br. should act without delay. We think the place should be somewhere in Connecticut; some have suggested Hartford, but we are willing the Brn. should appoint the time and place, but let it be done at once, if done at all.

For Brn. in the ministry,

J. TURNER.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. Joseph K. Bellows.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13th, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I saw an article in the Crisis from Br. Decker, in which he sets forth the number of the beast taken from Clark. I have myself taken a different view of the subject. It is a well known historical fact, that all the popes of Rome—the head of the Beast—have worn a mitre with an inscription, the numerical letters of which make 666. Suffer me to offer for the perusal of the Brn. an article published in a book some eight or ten years ago. Who the author of the article is, I know not; but it read as follows:—

"The number of the name of the Beast. Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast; for it is the number of a man; and his number is six-hundred three score and six." Rev. 13: 18.

The Pope of Rome is the personification of Antichrist—the head and representative of the man of sin. He wears a mitre with this inscription: Vicarius Filii Dei—that is, the Vicar of the Son of God—a name or title which he impiously assumes, and which contains the exact number 666. Selecting the letters in this name used by the Latins in numbering, we give their numerical value thus:

V	5
I	1
C	100
I	1
V	5
I	1
L	50
I	1
D	500
I	1
	666

Joseph K. Bellows.

In regard to the above I would simply remark: if the numerical letters contained in the term, Latin kingdom, as written in the Hebrew, Greek and Latin languages, make in each of those languages 666, and the inscription on the pope's mitre makes the same number, it would seem impossible that so many coincidences should be merely accidental; but out of the mouth of four witnesses this fact is satisfactorily established. Ed.

For the Crisis.

Almost Home.

By S. S. Brewer.

The storm is on the mighty deep,
The lofty billows roar,
The angry waves now dash, and leap,
And lash the rock-bound shore;
Far—far upon the foamy crest
Outspreading far and wide,
Where Ocean heaves its troubled breast,
A noble bark doth ride.

There on its deck the Captain stands,
His eye upon the chart,
While gathered 'round him are the hands,
Each one with anxious heart;
The night is gathering dark and drear,
But not the time to sleep,
The breakers roar—there's danger near—
And all a watch must keep.

But hark! a cry! there's land ahead,
And rocks and quicksands too,
Haste—quickly bring the line and lead,
The Light House is in view;
Quick, Pilot, veer thy helm around,
The city now appears;
Each heart now dances at the sound—
Dismissed are all their fears.

The sails are furled—the anchor cast—
The storm is past and o'er,
And all the crew right glad at last,
To greet their friends on shore,
They hear no more the Storm King rave,
Or surging billows foam;
They fear no more a watery grave,
They're safely landed home.

Lawrence, Mass.

A Beautiful Sentiment. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings," says the Bible, "Thou hast ordained praise." Who so reads the following, will feel the force of the passage.

At an examination of a deaf and dumb institution some years ago in London a little boy was asked in writing.

Who made the world?

He took the chalk and wrote underneath the words:

In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.

The Clergyman then inquired in a similar manner:

Why did Jesus Christ come into the world?

A smile of gratitude rested on the countenance of the little fellow as he wrote:

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners."

A third question was then proposed evidently adapted to call the most powerful feelings into exercise:

"Why are you born deaf and dumb when I can both hear and speak?"

"Never," said an eye witness, "Shall I forget the look of resignation which sat upon the countenance, when he again took the chalk and wrote:

"Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight."

Prize the Bible. Oh! what mines of wealth are there in the Bible, of which most of us know nothing. This is one use and need of afflictions; they make the Word of God precious A single text becomes more to us in hours of trial than was the whole Bible before. We cling to it as a drowning man clings to the plank which saves him from a watery grave. We bear our whole weight upon it, and find it strong enough to bear us and not break. Hear Bunyan:

"Ah! what did I now see in that blessed sixth of John? 'And him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out.' Oh, many a pull hath my heart had with Satan for that blessed sixth of John! A word, a word to lean a weary soul upon, that it might not sink for ever. It was that I hunted for."

And perhaps we shall have to go through some of Bunyan's sorrowful experiences, before we shall learn to prize the Bible as he did.

Defeat and Flight of Emperor Soulouque.—Philadelphia, Jan. 22. Advices from Port au Prince of Jan. 1st, confirm the defeat of the Haytiens by the Dominicans. Faustin had escaped from the field, and a reward of 10,000 doubloons was offered for his head. There is an intense feeling against him, and if caught he would be shot by his own people.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE AMERICA.

The America reached Halifax Wednesday evening of last week, with Liverpool dates to 8:30 A. M. of Saturday, January 5th.

Latest Telegraphic Intelligence from London to Liverpool. Grand Council of War at Paris. The Post says in the course of a few days the general council of war is to be held in Paris, at which England will be represented by His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Sir Richard Airey, and Sir Harry Jones, together with Admirals Sir Edmund Lyons and Dundas.

Palmer & Green, bankers in Litchfield, have failed. Liabilities £220,000—assets £150,000.

The Negotiations. There is nothing new of an official character with respect to the peace negotiations, but there is evidently in quarters usually well informed a growing impression that negotiations will not terminate in a satisfactory manner.

Count Nesselrode has addressed a circular note to the representatives of Russia at the chief foreign courts, dated St. Petersburg, Dec. 22. In this note it is stated that Russia accepts the third point relative to the neutralization of the Black sea in the following sense: "That Turkey's right to close the strait be maintained: That no ships of war be admitted in the Black sea, excepting those of Russia and Turkey: That the number of ships to be so maintained be mutually arranged by Russia and Turkey, and that it be ratified by direct special treaty between these two powers without the interference of other nations. This interpretation the allies consider to be inadmissible.

Le Nord, the Russian paper at Brussels, publishes an analysis of Count Nesselrode's circular. The circular owns that the desire expressed by the emperor of the French at a public solemnity, in favor of a prompt and durable peace, was at the same time, and still is the dearest desire of the emperor Alexander. Referring to the Vienna conferences, the circular casts upon the allies the blame of having rendered them abortive. So long as his enemies choose to substitute force for the spirit of justice and conciliation, the czar was obliged to remain silent; but as soon as he heard his enemies were disposed to take up again the negotiations of peace on the basis of the four points, he did not hesitate to come forward frankly to meet these pacific dispositions and seek earnestly a possible solution for the third point.

The Russian propositions are already known. The circular concludes by saying that Russia calmly and comfortably awaits the decision of her enemies.

When Austria and the western powers agreed upon the conditions to be sent to St. Petersburg, she agreed not to communicate to other powers what these terms were until they should have reached their destination. Secrecy was kept.

Count Esterhazy reached St. Petersburg on the 26th, and the next day laid the propositions before the Russian cabinet. On the 28th Count Buol communicated to Prince Gortschakoff at Vienna the terms on which the western powers would assent to peace, and stated that these terms were approved by Austria. The terms are these already published.

Russia has made known in Count Nesselrode's circular her willingness to treat for the neutralizasion of the Black sea, but it is expected that she will absolutely refuse to assent to the requirements of "cession of territory" to keep open the Danube. By the phrase "cession of so much territory as is necessary to secure to all nations the free navigation of the Danube," is meant the cession of that part of Bessarabia which lies between the fortress of Chotga on the north of Salt lake, Sacyk on the south and the river Pruth on the west.

Three weeks from the day the propositions were delivered was the time allowed for their consideration. Notwithstanding all appearances it is strongly suspected that Austria will not take the field against Russia in the spring, unless previously assured of the active support of the Germanic Bund.

From Sweden the accounts are very warlike. Commanders have received instructions, marked private, to refuse leave of absence, and to have regiments in the highest state of efficiency by the spring. Military and naval manufactures go on, and indications are that, in accordance with the secret article of the treaty, Sweden will openly take the field with the allies in the spring. Sweden has on hand some millions of thalers surplus revenue, which is to be devoted to equip the army and navy.

The Danish government is reported to have consented to the establishment of depots of stores for the English fleet at Kiel, and the English fleet is to rendezvous there in April.

India and China. Manila dates to the 9th of November report a dreadful occurrence that happened on board of the American ship Waverly She put into Manila to bury her captain, and some trouble ensued on board, when the mate shot two or three, and drove the rest below, and then went ashore to attend the funeral. On his return the hatches were opened, and out of 450 men 251 were reported dead from suffocation. The mate and crew were imprisoned by the Spanish authorities. It is reported that the American Consul declined to take cognizance of the catastrophe.

Serious difficulty has arisen at Hong Kong between Mr Keeman, American Consul, and the local authorities. The trouble arose by British Police of Port apprehending E. W. Nichols, master of American ship Reindeer, on board his ship, for assault on the carpenter and for putting him in irons. Nichols was fined $50, with $25 compensation, but refused to pay. Consul Keeman was present during the examination and protested against the jurisdiction of the Court, as the affair took place on board an American ship. The police then proceeded to lock up Capt. Nichols, but Keeman took him by his arm and went quickly to the harbor, whence he took boat and went on the U. S. steamer Powhattan. Superintendent and police followed and demanded the prisoner to be given up. Capt. McCluney, of the Powhattan, replied that without stating whether Nichols was on board the Powhattan or not, he considered the action of the Court altogether illegal, and he would not hesitate to resist by force any attempt of the British authorities to exercise jurisdiction over American citizens in American ships. Nichols afterwards sent the amount of fine to the Court. The Consul was summoned by a warrant to appear and answer, but did not attend, wherein he was apprehended and committed for trial before the Supreme Court, charged with the rescue of a prisoner.

Chinese politics to Nov. 15th unchanged.—British ship Invincible, Shanghae to London, sunk the American ship A Cheseborough during a squall. No particulars.

The Docks of Sebastopol. A letter from Kamiesch of the 5th inst., in the Gazette du Midi, says: "I can announce to you a fact of considerable importance—the docks of Sebastopol are to be blown up on the 9th. These docks were among the most remarkable maritime constructions not only of Russia but of the whole world. An idea of the expense which they have occasioned may be formed from the fact that their sides are constructed of square blocks of which each side measures about five feet. Miners have for some time been engaged in sinking shafts to the bottom of the lowest foundations; these shafts were terminated recently, and preparations for the blowing up were then made. The destruction of these great works will be the signal for a war without mercy.—'It seems to me,' said a general, 'that in blowing up the docks we shall blow up the head-quarters of negotiations.'"

The North Side of Sebastopol. The Russians are actively engaged in constructing fortifications on the north side of Sebastopol. Every day bodies of from 2000 to 3000 men leave the citadel and proceed to their work. The summit of the plateau Constantine is covered by a pile of batteries and counter batteries, of cavaliers and redoubts, united together to Fort Constantine by numerous covered ways. In the rear of the fort is a small bay, at the foot of which three batteries have been erected. Fort Catherine and Fort Severnaya are equally surrounded by batteries. To the right of Severnaya are some sunken steamers, and then another village or collection of barracks and storehouses, protected by two batteries. All these are commanded by the citadel, which has been so much increased that all that formerly existed is now concealed behind the immense work recently executed.

The Invalide Russe publishes a proclamation by Gen. Mouravieff calling the entire population of Imeretia Guriel and Mingrelia to wage a war of extermination against the enemies of the cross. It is this measure which is supposed to have induced Omar Pacha's retreat.

Russia. The Czar has ordered the Commandants in Finland in the Baltic provinces to report the means of defense to the grand council of war now in session at St Petersburg. Contracts are advertised for immense quantities of ammunition. New rifle regiments are being enrolled. Emancipation is offered as a bribe to the serfs, while some of the restrictions imposed by the Czar Nicholas have been repealed.

The publication of the Austrian Concordat has been prohibited, lest it should cause religious discontent. The Czar has also issued a decree conferring on Peasants the right to possess landed property in Poland Personal serfdom is to be replaced by annual payments; three years are allowed for the execution of the decree.

Herat has been taken by the Persians, which causes excitement as it is the key of northern India. An expedition up the Persian gulf to compel Persia to give up her conquest, is talked of.

Marshal Pelissier is reported to have notified his Government that no military success is possible from the present base of operations in the Crimea. Hence, they say, the grand council of war to be called in Paris to decide on a new plan for the spring campaign.

General Williams and the prisoners of Kars have been sent to Teflis Col. Schwartzenburg had succeeded in reaching Erzeroum. The journals announce that the Russians found at Kars 3,000 wounded and 250 cannon.

The Crimean submarine telegraph is broken. The journals state that it will be difficult and take long to re-establish it. Storms continue. Four merchant vessels have been thrown on the Crimean coast.

The Russian Court is not pleased with Baron Seebach's mission to St. Petersburg, and Col. Manteuffel is sent to Dresden to demand positively to what extent Bavaria and Saxony have engaged themselves with the Western allies. He would leave Berlin Dec. 30th, proceeding also to Vienna to deliver a reply to the letter in which Austria notified Russia of the new measures taken at St. Petersburg.

About one hundred men a week continue to be discharged from the army, on account of wounds or other disqualifying causes.

Gen. Marmora is expected soon at Turin, on his way to Paris, where he was expected to take part in a grand council of war.

The total strength of the army in Ireland, including all arms, is 32,340 men, of which 9,376 are stationed in the Dublin district.

From France we learn that a camp for 100 000 men is being traced out at St. Omer, and another camp of 40,000 is to be formed at Cherbourg. The marine artillery at Cherbourg and Brest is at present making experiments with new balls, of a conical form, terminating in a point of steel, and filled with gunpowder the explosion of which can break to pieces, it is said, the hardest stonework.

Warlike Preparations are in progress in Sweden. Leave of absence is refused to military officers, and a letter from Stockholm, of Dec. 24, says:—"Here the belief is general that we are preparing to take part in the war in the spring; and although the partisans of Russia disclaim against it, public opinion in general is greatly in favor of it, and a war with Russia would be a very popular measure."

Destructive Floods have occurred in various parts of Sicily, worst about Messina, destroying a vast amount of property, and also causing the loss of many lives.

On the 16th ult, there was a solemn procession in St Petersburg for the purpose of exhibiting to the people the colors and other trophies captured at Kars. There was also at the same time special divine service in the churches, at all of which the priests adverted to the recent victory of the Cross over the Crescent.

The Ministry of War has advertised for tenders for the supply of 139 complete mortar carriages, and fittings for an immense number of others. All are to be delivered early in the spring. 5280 cwts. of ordnance are to be delivered at Archangel. The arsenal at St. Petersburg is ready to contract for the delivery of 200,000 lbs. of Russian lead.

Important from Denmark. The Berlin correspondent of the Times says:—

"According to a private letter I have received from Copenhagen, it is stated that the Danish government, under the two-fold presure of the partial relinquishment of neutrality by Sweden and the apparently inevitable conflict with the United States, on account of the Sound dues, has decided upon making advances to the allies in the matter of the future campaign in the Baltic. A special envoy is very shortly to be accredited to London for the purpose of concluding a treaty by which England shall guarantee to Denmark the possession of her West India Islands. In case of hostilities it is apprehended by the Danes, that the first step taken by the Americans would be to lay violent hands on the Danish Island of St. Thomas. The recent expedition of British naval forces to the West Indies, will throw an appearance of probability upon the idea that our government may fall in with this view."

Omar Pacha and his Army. Accounts from Constantinople assert positively that Omar Pacha had abandoned the design of marching on Kutais, and was in full retreat upon Souchum Kaleh. 10,000 of his troops, with others to be despatched are to be sent to Trebizond, to cover Erzeroum, which place, it is apprehended, will be attacked by General Mouravieff. The command will be given to Ismael Pacha.

French Plans for the Future. Intimations from different sources authorize the anticipation of some grand military arrangements in France, with special reference to future operations against Russia and her allies. The French Imperial Guard is to be constituted on a larger basis; and that corps, with the veterans re-called from the Crimea, is to be made the nucleus of an army which can be readily directed to any point where its services may be required. Two camps of 100,000 each, will, it is expected, be formed immediately on French territory, to serve as schools for the grand army alluded to by the Emperor in his speech to the returned Crimean troops; and in reference to the destination of this army, the Times correspondent says:—

"I have no difficulty in supposing that this point will be the Rhine, in case Russia do not accept the conditions of peace we propose to her, and in case Germany again allows itself to be intimidated or seduced by our enemy. Nay, more, if peace be not concluded this winter, if the spring still sees Prussia timid and uncertain, not to say hostile to us, and Russia still obstinate, I have little doubt that the next campaign will commence on a scale commensurate with the power of the two greatest nations of the earth, and that the war will then become a war à l'outrance.

Russian Plans for the next Campaign. A letter from Moscow, dated Dec. 20th says, that at the grand council lately held at St. Petersburg, it was decided to fortify St. Petersburg and Moscow, and with Warsaw, make these places three first-class fortresses. The writer adds: "General Todtleben has arrived here, and, notwithstanding the extreme rigor of the weather—the frost having set in here with all the proverbial violence of a Russian winter—may be seen every day, accompanied by his staff of engineers, all wrapped up in bears' skins, surveying the ground and fixing the poles to designate the line of circumvallation, which will be commenced on the breaking up of the frost."

The cold was so severe at Warsaw, that several sentinels had been found frozen to death in their sentry boxes, although they are relieved every half hour. No fears for Cronstadt or Helsingfors are entertained, as the allies had demonstrated their incapacity to harm these strongholds. Several minor garrisons are to be drawn in and the troops concentrated in a few large armies.

The War in Hayti An arrival at Bristol, R. I., brings advices from Port au Prince to Dec. 29. The black vomit continued to be quite fatal. In regard to the war it was rumored, according to a correspondent of the Providence Journal, that great dissatisfaction prevailed among the troops, and numbers had revolted. A skirmish had taken place between the Dominicans and Haytians, in which the latter came near being defeated, being taken by surprise, and sustaining a heavy loss in provisions and ammunitions.

It is rumored that a strong force of the Royal Marines will be organized for service in the Baltic next Spring.

The steam transport La Dordogne has just embarked 1000 men of the 1st and 2nd Regiment of Zouaves at Algiers, to convey them to the Crimea.

On the 15th carts were carrying butter and cheese from Balaklava to the camp, presented to the troops by her Majesty.

The Cork Examiner announces on authority that it is the intention of a company of high mercantile position to establish a line of steam vessels which will ply regularly between that port and New York.

Mr Gisborne has reached Egypt to make arrangements for laying the submarine electric telegraph from Constantinople to Alexandria, to cross Egypt, and to be hereafter extended from Suez to India.

A serious insurrection has taken place in the Hadjaz, in Arabia, where the authority of the Sultan is very feebly maintained by a very small number of troops.

It is stated that the Emperor Napoleon has addressed a letter to Admiral Hamelin, Minister of Marine, expressing his desire that 25 mortar boats and 150 gun boats may be ready in the Spring.

New Submarine Machine for War. Mr Mauer, after being refused by the British Government, has obtained great encouragement from the Russians, who have been at the expense of erecting one of his machines at a cost of about £15,000. It is said to be a clever invention, and to be spoken well of by the most intelligent engineers at St. Petersburg. It is to be propelled by two screws, and steered to any point under water, where it may remain for eight hours without requiring fresh air to be pumped. The Russians ostentatiously profess to congratulate themselves that it was not adopted by the English, as it might have been efficacious in enabling them to remove the booms and mines they have put under water to prevent the approach of ships of war.

The Baltic Fleet for 1856. The Globe gives as nearly as possible, an accurate list of the Baltic fleet for 1856. It is to consist of thirty-eight line-of-battle ships and heavily armed frigates, mounting 2812 guns; eighteen corvettes and steam-frigates, mounting 302 guns; twenty smaller steamers, with 105 guns; seventeen dispatch gunboats, with 78 guns; three floating-batteries, with 52 guns; four heavy mortar-ships, mounting 44 pieces; 137 gunboats and mortar-boats, carrying two heavy pieces of ordnance on an average. There will also be a store ammunition-ship, hospital-ship, and a floating factory. Total, 243 ships-of-war; all, with the exception of a store-ship and a hospital-ship, propelled by steam. Total guns 3667.

The Times Paris correspondent writes: "When the Emperor Alexander returned to Nicolaieff he was more warlike than before. Whether it was the thought of the ruins of Sebastopol that awoke the spirit of vengeance within him, or that hope arose as he witnessed the vast preparations in his more secret arsenals, I know not; but I know for a fact that he was ready to fling defiance not only at France and England, but expressed himself about Germany in terms of the utmost indifference."

Constantinople. As far as influence with the authorities is concerned, at the present moment, the French are decidedly in the ascendant. All the members of the new ministry are devoted to their interest; the Grand Vizier or prime-minister is openly their avowed adherent, and they manage the affairs just about as they please.

Later from Europe—Determination of England and France to Prosecute the War. New York, Jan. 21. The steamship Washington, from Bremen and Southampton, arrived at 4 o'clock. She brings London dates of the 5th.

The Naples correspondent of the London Times mentions a report that the King of Naples had become favorably disposed towards the Allies, and there was a further rumor that he would send a contingent to the Crimea.

The Paris corespondent of the same paper says that assurances have been given in an official quarter of the resolution of France to carry on the war in the most vigorous manner, in the event of Russia not acceding to the proposition of the Allies, and that the Emperor and the English Government were determined not to abate an iota of the terms on which peace would be accepted.

Congress To-Day—Washington, Jan. 22.—House—Mr Boyce offered a resolution to the effect that in view of the threatening aspect of our relations with England, indicating the advent of startling events, it behooved the conservative elements of the House to unite at once for the election of a Speaker.

The Government has received no official information as to the recent bloody outrage in Kansas, announced by telegraph. Several Senators to-day informally confessed as to the policy of advising the President to send a military force to Kansas to preserve peace and protect the Territory against Missouri invasions.—Southern members predict that civil war is inevitable in a short time.

☞ PARTICULAR NOTICE.☜

Eld. Edwin Burnham, having kindly responded to the voice of the Church in Shipton, C. E., will commence a series of meetings in Danville, on Sunday, Feb. 17th, and continue over the next Sabbath.

This visit of Br. B. will be hailed by the healthy, growing Church here, with no ordinary degree of satisfaction; for it was mainly indebted to his labors for its original existence; and his name with that of some others, stands associated with feelings of the deepest gratitude, being dear to the memory of many of God's enlightened saints in these parts.

As his stay in Canada is limited to the above period, Brn. at a distance who feel interested, will not need to be told what to do.

In behalf of the Church,

John Porter.

Danville, C. E., Jan 18, 1856.

Kansas Affairs. The clouds are gathering blackness even along the horizon of our own beloved country.

We extract the following from a letter written by Hon. David R. Atchison in which he makes an urgent appeal to the citizens of Georgia for armed recruits.

"Let your young men come forth to Missouri and Kansas! Let them come well armed, with money enough to support them for twelve months, and determined to see this thing out! One hundred true men will be an acquisition. The more, the better. I do not see how we are to avoid civil war. Come it will. Twelve months will not elapse before war, civil war of the fiercest kind, will be upon us. We are arming and preparing for it. Indeed, we of the border counties are prepared. We must have the support of the South. We are fighting the battles of the South. Our institutions are at stake. You far Southern men are now out of the naive of the war, but if we fail, it will reach your own doors, perhaps your hearths. We want men, armed men. We want money; not for ourselves, but to support our friends who may come from a distance. * * * *

D. R. Atchison.

P. S. I would not be astonished if this day laid the ground-work for a guerilla war in Kansas. I have heard rumors of strife and battle at Leavenworth, seven miles from this place, but the ice is running in the Mississippi river, and I have nothing definite. I was a peace-maker in the difficulty lately settled by Governor Shannon. I counseled the 'Ruffians' to forbearance, but I will never again counsel peace

D. R. A."

New York, Jan. 16 Sad Disaster. The ship St. Dennis, hence for Havre, foundered at sea on the 6th inst. The captain, second mate, three cabin passengers, and a portion of the crew, in all about thirty souls, went down in her. The first mate, Mr Tafts, third mate, Mr Gardiner, and nine seamen, took to the long-boat, were picked up after being twenty-nine hours in it, and brought to this port by the ship Naples, from Leghorn. The St. Dennis was commanded by Capt. Follansbee, and was so badly damaged in the gale of the 5th that the above disaster ensued.

The last that was seen of the captain, who refused to leave his ship, though begged so to do by all, he was standing on deck, winding up his watch, when she went down, about ten minutes after the boat left. Capt. Follansbee had commanded the St. Dennis for nearly twelve years. The rescued seamen were in the boat twenty-nine hours, with but one barrel of sea biscuit, soaked with salt water. They had not one drop of fresh water.

More Disturbances in Kansas. St Louis, Jan 19. The Kicapoo Pioneer of the 18th inst, says a battle took place last night at Easton, between a party of free state men and some pro-slavery men, in which one of the latter was killed and several wounded.

Several abolitionists were also killed or wounded. A company from Lawrence, under Capt. Brown, and the Kicapoo Rangers were the parties.

A large number of persons had left for Easton. The disturbance is supposed to have grown out of the election of the 15th.

Appointments.

Br. George Brown is expected to preach at Classic Hall, in this city, on Sunday, Jan. 27th, if the Lord permit.

By Divine permission, I will preach at West Hawley, Mass., Sunday, Jan. 27th.
Charlemont, Mass., Sunday, Feb. 3d.

W. Sheldon.

The Lord willing, I may be expected to administer the word of life as follows.
At the Baptist Chapel in Exeter, N. H., Sunday, Jan. 27th.
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 3d.
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 10th.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Feb. 17th.

S. S. Brewer.

God willing, I will preach in
The Advent Chapel, in Danville, Canada East, the two last Sabbaths in February, and in the vicinity, during the week, as the friends may arrange. I hope to see many of my former friends.

Edwin Burnham.

The Lord willing, I will lecture at
Portsmouth, N. H., Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Kennebunkport, Me., Wednesday, Jan. 29th.
Bridgeport, Me., Jan. 30th.
Falmouth, Me., Jan. 31.

L. L. Howard.

☞ There is some mistake in the above appointments, but we give them as written, not knowing how to correct them.

By Divine permission, I will try to fill the appointments I lately withdrew, as follows.
Boston, Thursday, Jan. 24th.
Roxbury, Friday, Jan. 25th.
Fair Haven, Mass., Jan. 26th and 27th, over the Sabbath.
Providence, Monday and Tuesday Jan. 28th and 29th.
Warwick, or Appanagg, Jan. 30th and 31st, Wednesday and Thursday, where Br. J. B. Wait may appoint.
Layfayette, Friday, Feb. 1st.
Peace Dale, Saturday and Sunday Feb. 2d and 3d.
Fair Haven, Ct., Monday, Feb. 4th.
Bridgeport, Tuesday, Feb 5th.
Waterbury, Wednesday, Feb. 6th.
Bristol, Thursday, Feb 7th.
Friday, Saturday and Sunday, as Providence may direct.
If any of the above appointments conflict with others, please inform me by letter in season to alter my course.

Hiram Munger.

CONFERENCE AT DANBURY, N. H.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference at Danbury, commencing Friday, Jan. 25th, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the Sabbath. Meeting expected to be holden in the new School House, near Br. Knowlton's. Eld. David Leavitt and the writer are expected to attend.

For the Brn., T. M. Preble.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Fair Haven, Ct., Jan 27th.

S. G. Mathewson.

If it be the will of the Lord, I will preach in
Lynn, Jan. 25th.
Boston, Jan. 27th.
Providence, R. I., Jan. 29th, eve.

B. Hodges.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at Durham, S. W. Bend, Jan. 27th.
Freeport, Feb. 3d.
Brunswick, Feb. 10th.

R. R. York.

The Lord willing, Elder L. L. Howard will preach in Salem, at the Union St. Church, on Sunday the 27th.

Temple Hardy.

The Lord willing, Eld. J. Couch will preach at
Lawrence on the 4th Sunday in Jan.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Westfield, Friday eve. 25th.
Springfield, Saturday eve. and Sunday 26th and 27th
Thorndike, Monday eve, Jan. 28th.
Bondville, Tuesday eve, 29th.
Ware, Wednesday eve, 30th.
I expect a yoke-fellow to assist in filling the above appointments.

Samuel Bragg.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brn. in the following places.
Carlisle, Mass., Sunday, Jan 27th, and longer, if thought best.

B. P. Manning.

Notices.

☞ Advent brethren hold regular meetings every Sabbath in the Chapel on Spring Street; also on Tuesday and Friday evenings In giving out appointments, Brn. will please to name the place, as there are two meetings held in this city.

For the Brethren,

Thomas N. Palmer.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 19th, 1855.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th ch.'s of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts, postage 6 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell,

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts	"	12	" "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts	"	3	" "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts	"	3	" "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 cts	"	1	"
Scripture Tract,	3 cts	"	1,50	" "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts	"	3	" "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts	"	3	" "
The Last Days,	5 cts	"	3	" "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts	"	3	" "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts	"	3	" "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts	"	1,50	" "
Voice of the Church $1		"	9	" doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.
Address orders with the cash to
H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.
☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and by O. Hart, Concord, N. H., and D A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is Russell's Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

W Shepherd, Mrs Duell, J Barr, M Garrison, P Alling, J M Wyman, R Hardy, C W Wiggin, R Converse, C S Emerson, R Allen, $1 each.
M W Benham $5, S T Bemis $2, H Barnard $2, S R Eddy 50 cts, J Rofe 50 cts, E Rice 50 cents.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

A friend $5. Whole amount $44,54.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1; it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, CORNER OF MOODY AND AUSTIN STREETS, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have myself proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public. Ed.

For the Crisis.

The Resurrection.

By S. S. Brewer.

The saints of God are sleeping round,
Low in their narrow bed,
Unconscious, till the trumpet's sound
Shall wake them from the dead.

The good and bad together lie,
Until the morn shall break,
Then Christ, descending from on high,
Shall all His saints awake.

Grim death in Sheol now confines
The saints until the hour
Of that great day that God assigns—
Death then shall lose his power.

Thanks be to God, the saints shall rise,
And lift their voice and sing,
"O grave, where is thy victory?
O death, where is thy sting?"

Then death shall lay his sceptre down,
Creation shall be free,
And all the saints shall wear a crown
Of Immortality.

"That the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath." Job 21: 30.

"The soul that sinneth, it shall die,"
The Lord of hosts hath said,
In Sheol they unconscious lie,
Alike with all the dead.

But shall the wicked suffer pain?
The Lord most surely hath
Declared that he shall live again,
In that great day of wrath.

The good and bad shall hear His voice,
And wake to life again,
The saints of God shall then rejeice,
And with Him ever reign.

The sea shall then give up her dead,
Poor sinners, how they look!
With fear they raise their guilty heads,
Their names not in life's book.

From sea, and earth, and hell they come,
Poor mortals, how they cry!
They now receive their final doom,
The second death they die.

Lawrence, Mass.

The Secoud Advent.

By William Shepherd.

He comes! He comes! with angel bands attending,
Ten thousand swell the triumph of His train,
"Look up," ye sufferihg ones, behold! descending,
King Jesus comes, on earth to rule and reign.

He comes! He comes! hark! from the eastern region,
The seventh trumpet speaks His coming nigh;
The armies of the earth, whose name is legion,
Go forth to war, and to the battle-cry!

He comes! He comes! foretold in sacred story,
Jesus, of whom the Prophets sweetly sing,
Heir to the throne of David, and the glory
Of the resplendent age, and Israel's King.

He comes! He comes! enrobed with regal splendor,
A glorious crown adorns His royal brow,
Unlike the babe once laid in Bethlehem's manger,
"The Lion of the tribe of Judah," now.

He comes! He comes! Hades is moved to meet Him,
The dead awake, the sleeping saints arise;
They hear His voice, with joy come forth to greet Him,
Their Great Deliverer coming from the skies.

He comes! He comes! Oh sinner, heed the warning,
Prepare to meet our God, while yet you may,
No more the Savior's glorious Advent scorning,
Prepare to meet the coming Judgment Day.

He comes! He comes! Amen! Amen! resounding
From every saint, through valley, mount and plain;
Let prayer be heard from every clime ascending,
Till Jesus comes, whose right it is to reign.

Elizabeth Town, N. J., April, 1854.

The Bridegroom's Coming.

Selected from "Shadows of the New Creation," for the Crisis.

By William Shepherd.

(Concluded.)

As the professing Church, and the world in general will not be expecting nor prepared for, the day of His final visitation, we hear the thunder of Judgment mingled with the gentle breathing of mercy, at His coming. There shall be "great tribulation;" and immediately afterwards, "the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—The same Jesus who was seen by wondering Apostles to ascend from Mount Olivet, and go into heaven, while "a cloud received him out of their sight," "Shall so come in like manner as he was seen to go into heaven." He shall "come with the clouds of heaven," and "dominion, and glory, and a Kingdom shall be given unto Him." "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives," when "the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with Him."* Then shall the heathen be given for His inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for His possession. They who will not have Him to reign over them, shall be "broken with a rod of iron, and dashed to pieces like a a potter's vessel. "The Lord shall consume them with the breath of his mouth, and destroy them with the visibility of his Advent." (Murdock) Then shall be heard the great voice of much people in heaven—the company of the saints in Paradise who grace the triumphant nuptials of the Lord. "Salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God; for true and righteous are His judgments." Then, the voice of the angelic host and of the redeemed, as the voice of one man, shall come forth from the throne, saying, "praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great."

Then, "the voice of a great multitude as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings"—including the harmonious choral acclaim of angels and saints above, and the saints below, who "meet the Lord in the air"—shall resound, saying, "Allelujah: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth! Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the Marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready."

Shout all the people of the sky,
And all the saints of the Most High,
Our Lord who now His right maintains,
Forever and forever reigns.

To the Bride, thus prepared, is granted that she should be "arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints." Then, truly may it be said, "BLESSED ARE THEY WHICH ARE CALLED TO THE MARRIAGE SUPPER OF THE LAMB"—"BLESSED IS HE THAT SHALL EAT BREAD IN THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

There are many in the visible Church who shall yield to "the obedience of faith," and to "the Word of God," being conquered by the sharp sword, which goeth out of His mouth. They will give glory to the name of, "The King of kings and Lord of lords." Many strangers shall submit themselves; many that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before Him. These who submit themselves are called "the nations of them that are saved (sozomenon)—the people who "fell under him"—"the abundance of the sea, which shall be converted unto him—the forces of the Gentiles, which shall come unto him," when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

The Apostle to the Thessalonians (1 Thess. 4,) describes the order of Christ's attendants, who compose his triumphant marriage retinue. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them who sleep, will God, by Jesus, bring with him. And this we say to you, by the word of our Lord, that we who may survive and be alive, at the coming of our Lord, shall not precede them who have slept, Because our Lord will himself descend from heaven, with the mandate, and with the voice of the chief angel, and with the trump of God; and the dead who are in the Messiah, will first arise; and then, we who survive and are alive shall be caught up together with them to the clouds, to meet our Lord in the air; and so shall we be ever with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort ye one another with these words." (Murdock.)

The immediate effect of His coming, shall be the deliverance of His people from their cruel haters and persecuters, the gathering together of "his elect from the four winds"—the enthronement of the King on "the holy hill of Zion," and the establishment of the saints in their promised rest and glory in the Kingdom of God. This is further intimated, in 2 Thess. 1: 6, &c. "And since it is a righteous thing with God, to recompense trouble to them that trouble you: and you who are troubled, he will vivify, with us, at the manifestation of our Lord Jesus the Messiah from heaven, with the host of His angels; when He will execute vengeance with the burning of fire, on them that know not God, and on them that acknowledge not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus the Messiah. For these will be recompensed with the Judgment of eternal destruction, from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to display His wonders in His faithful ones; for our testimony concerning you, will be believed, in that day.—(Murdock) Also in Ps. 50: 3–6, "Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him; He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me, those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice, and the heavens shall declare his righteousness, for God is Judge himself"—and lastly in Isa. 62: 1, &c., there is a richness of promise which nothing but the Bridegroom's coming can possibly fulfil either towards "the Zion of the holy one of Israel," or toward the accession from the Gentile Church.

"For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation as a lamp that burneth: and the Gentiles shall see thy light, and all kings thy glory; and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name. Thou shalt also bear a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of God. Thou shalt no more be termed forsaken; neither shall thy land be called desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzibah (my delight in her,) and thy land Beulah (married;) for the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married. For, as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall thy sons marry thee; and as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee."

These intimations, coupled with the frequent references in the New Testament, before quoted, to the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, (or Life-giver,) and the gathering together to Him at His coming, of His beloved and ransomed people to reign in honor and glory with Him, as a spouse long affianced, given to the Bridegroom, are sufficiently clear and glowing descriptions to arrest our hearts, and cause us to "lift up our heads" in anticipation of the promised happiness in store for the faithful.

The Spouse of Christ, a term applied to the collective body of believers who shall be ready to meet and attend upon Christ at His appearing and His Kingdom, represent a class of Christians of no mean and ordinary character. They were once "the children of wrath, even as others," and were "dead in trespasses and sins," and walked according to the course of this world. But the loving Redeemer saw them in their low estate, and said unto them, "live!" He cast the mantle of His love upon them, having given Himself for them, and bought them by the price of His blood. In due season He called them by His Spirit, and they, through grace, obeyed the call. His first love to them, begat love in them to their Lord. This love was strong as death, and stronger than Satan, whom it expelled from the throne of the heart. Then they were clothed with the garments of righteousness, and as pure virgius, they were presented and espoused to Christ, keeping themselves unspotted from the world, and walking religiously in all good works.

Such grace it is, which can fit the fallen heirs of Adam's sin and misery for the royal inheritance of saints in light, raising the beggar from the dunghill, and setting him with princes, yea, making him "higher than the kings of the earth."

O praise our God, ye people, and cause the voice of His praise to be heard abroad! "Bless the Lord, O my soul," may each of the Lord's servants exclaim, "and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies; who satisfieth thy mouth with good things, so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's!"

With bright hope let each tried pilgrim of the Cross lift up his head; for his redemption draweth nigh. Let him rejoice at the quickly dawning day.

Judgments are now abroad in the earth, the harbingers of the great day of Christ's victory and espousals. Let the Bride adorn and prepare herself. Let her deck herself with her brightest ornaments, and adorn herself with her most costly jewels. Let her be clothed with the garment of salvation, and be covered with the robe of righteousness. Let her lamp be trimmed, let her light be burning bright. Let there be no misgiving in her expectation; no doubtfulness in her hope; no uncertainty in her voice; no insincerity in her love! "BEHOLD! THE BRIDEGROOM COMETH!"

"Arise, shine; for thy light is coming, and the glory of the Lord is rising upon thee!" Thy Savior, thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob is coming, with ten thousand of His saints, and myriads of holy angels! He will come suddenly, O that He may find thee watching, while the world will be slumbering! O that He may gladden thee with the smile of His approval of thy faith, while He complains of not finding faith in the earth! Then shalt thou go in with Him to the marriage, while to others, "the door will be shut." In vain shall these cry without, "Lord, Lord, open unto us!" In vain, alas! to cry for mercy, when it is the time of just retribution and judgment.

O my soul—may the devout reader inwardly resolve—prepare at once to meet Him! For, who knows—now that His coming has been far and near announced, how soon and how sudden may be the brightness of His appearing?

"Hark! the song of Jubilee
Loud as mighty thunders roar,
Or the fulness of the sea,
When it breaks upon the shore;

"Hallelujah! for the Lord
God Omnipotent shall reign;
Hallelujah! let the word
Echo round the earth and main!"

P. S. In transcribing the above article from this interesting work ("Shadows of the New Creation") we have given it verbatim, with but few exceptions, omitting nothing however saving a few introductory lines in poetry which were rather inappropriate, inserting others instead which seem more in keeping with the subject, and using Murdock's translation from the Syriac in some of the Scripture quotations in place of our common version used by the Author, the same appearing much more comprehensive, clear and energetic. We submit "The Bridegroom's coming" to the careful perusal of all who are interested in the sublime and glorious theme, trusting in God that it may be productive of much good.

* See Dan. 7: 13, 14; Zech. 14: 4-6.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

By H. Pratt.

No. 6.

Having shown in former Nos. that Jesus has stood as Ensign to the people, and does still invite all to come to him without money and without price; and again, that He has come a light into the world, that His covenant people rejected the light, by doing which they cut themselves off from those promised blessings found especially in Isa. 60 and Zech. 6; we now proceed to examine another of those promises made to the fathers concerning the tabernacle of David, Amos 9: 11.

The object of this tabernacle according to James' testimony was, that "men might seek after the Lord." Acts 15: 17.

Now has this prophecy had a fulfilment, or are we to look to a future time for its accomplishment? To settle this matter perfectly we will learn whether there has been a tabernacle thrown down, and substituted by another which meets the prophecy. Paul, in discoursing upon this subject in his letter to the Hebrews, ch. 9: 2, says: "For there was a tabernacle made; the first (part) wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shew bread; which is called the SANCTUARY."

V. 3d. "And after the second veil the tabernacle (or the second part) which is called the holiest of all. A description of this tabernacle of which Paul speaks may be found in Ex. 26, and onward. It was to be made according to the fashion showed to Moses in the Mount. Ex. 26: 30. There were two apartments in this tabernacle; the first (or two-thirds) part was called the sanctuary, and after the second veil, the Holy of holies. A description of this veil which separated the sanctuary from the Holy of holies, is found in Ex. 26: 31 and onward; and the object of this arrangement was for the purpose of seeking unto the Lord, and especially for the Jewish nation. All offerings, or the blood of all offerings, was to be brought into this sanctuary, and offered by a priest, and no offering was acceptable except as they complied with this arrangement. This arrangement was afterwards brought into the temple and thus constituted the manner of worship in the house of David. This continued although occasionally interrupted till David's Son hung upon the cross. Then the veil of the temple was rent from top to bottom, and thusthis tabernacle arrangementwhich was in and belonged to the house of David, became "fallen down. No more bullocks, or rams, or pigeons, to be offered now, the great offering is made, "once for all," the antitype of Abel's lamb has come—his blood is shed—a new dispensation is ushered in—and a "new and living way" is opened up by David's Son, "whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear." But is the tabernacle of David raised up by which Gentiles and Jews may seek after the Lord? If so, there must be a similarity between this and the former. This must be the Antitype, and consequently a more perfect one. Paul says (Heb. 9: 9) the former tabernacle was a FIGURE; and again in the 23 v. he calls it a pattern, and to make it perfectly plain, he says in ch. 8: 2, that WE HAVE "a minister of the sanctuary, and TRUE TABERNACLE which the Lord pitched and not man." If we have then got the TRUE one, why look for another?

But where is this tabernacle of which Paul speaks? That place into which our High Priest is gone, he says is the holy of holies, and consequently one part of the true tabernacle. The other part must be where the candlestick, shew-bread and table are, and where offerings are made. Now as this is wheresoever two or three are gathered together, it follows that this earth is the sanctuary of the true tabernacle which the Lord pitched and and not man. Here offerings can be made acceptable to God, and consequently it must be the sanctuary. Having then the true tabernacle, heaven, earth and sky, and this is what the Jews themselves understood their tabernacle to represent, for Josephus himself says that the holy of holies represented heaven itself, and the other part which Paul calls the sanctuary represented "land and water on which men live;" and the "veil was so beautifully wrought that it could not at all be told from the sky itself," we ask does this meet the prophecy? All must admit that there is an opportunity for all men to seek the Lord in this dispensation. Does the prophecy propose more than this? or rather does it not promise this very thing? But Inspiration does not leave us in the dark in this matter. It has spoken, and let us bow in submission to its gracious teachings. As the Jews had been a privileged people, it was a matter of wonder to them to see the Holy Ghost come upon the Gentiles. Peter confesses the whole matter at the time, and others also by stern necessity were compelled to admit that God is no respecter of persons, yet in some respects they preferred Moses to Christ, and demanded that these converted Gentiles should be circumcised.—This finally brought about a conference which resulted in showing that a new dispensation had come in, through which the Gentiles might become partakers in the promises of God made to the fathers, and that the true tabernacle, or the tabernacle of David had been raised up for that same purpose. Here are the facts; read and believe.

Acts 15: 6. "And the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter"

V. 7. "And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up and said unto them; Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago (at the first,) God made choice among us that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel and believe."

V. 8. "And God which knoweth the hearts bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us."

V. 9. "And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith."

* * * * * *

V. 12. "Then all the multitude kept silence and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them."

V. 13. "And after they had held their peace, James answered saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me."

V. 14. "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name."

V. 15. "And to THIS agree the words of the prophets, AS IT IS WRITTEN."

V. 16. "After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down: and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up." (For What?)

V. 17. "That the residue (remnant) of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called."

Is James speaking of the subject under consideration by the conference, the bringing in of the Gentiles? He is.

Does he quote Peter's language, or what Peter had just been speaking of, when he says Simeon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name?

Does he say to THIS agree the words of the prophet?

Then let us believe, and not be found fighting against God.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. L. F. Titcomb.

Holyoke, Dec. 16th, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I hope the effort that is being made to increase the circulation of the Crisis will be successful, that those two thousand old patrons whom the Crisis was sent to last week, will be enabled to become subscribers to a paper that will give them meat in due season. May the Lord show those Brn. that are complaining of the large taxes they have to pay these hard times, that they can help His cause by sending the Crisis to those Brn. and Srs. that are not able to pay for it, and at the same time reduce their taxes. There are but few of us, as poor as some of us are, but have more of this world's goods, than our Savior and the Apostles had. Half an ounce of silver paid the taxes of our Lord and Peter. "Charge them that are rich in this world that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life."

Brn. and Srs., if we obey the commands of our Lord, we shall be letting go of this world, that when the trump sounds, we may be able to rise and meet the Lord in the air. "But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer. And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins." "Use hospitality one to another without grudging. As every man hath received the gift, even so minister one to another as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

Your Br., hoping for eternal life at that day,

Lewis F. Titcomb.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. Amos Rowe.

Madison, Me., Dec. 29th, 1855.

To the Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad: Grace, mercy and peace be with you from God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ. There are a few in this place, mostly poor in this world's goods, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom. Though we have been disappointed, time and again, yet we believe God has led us in the main, glory to His blessed name.

We cannot believe we have had all the light; for we are taught in God's blessed Book that the path of the just will shine more and more unto the perfect day."—We believe that the Midnight Cry is in the past; also that the 1335 days have ended for at the closing up of that period, Danel will stand in his lot, and the saints of ithe Most High will take the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven, and possess it for ever, even forever and ever. And that event we believe to be near.

O how my heart grows warm when I think of meeting those way-worn pillgrims scattered over this sin-polluted world, in the Kingdom of God! Thrice happy morn!! when the loved of earth shall meet, where no farewell tear is shed.

Amos Rowe.

For The Crisis.

From Sr. B. Mathewson.

New Hartford, Ct. Jan. 1st, '56.

Dear Br. Merriam:—As some remarks have been made against Adventists for using familiar airs in their devotions, merely because they had before been used for a secular purpose, I send the following from the Newark Dayly, which proves, if true, that we have some noble precedents.

"The poetical effusions first introduced by Martin Luther, A. D. 1517, were chiefly sung to German melodies. These ancient airs, so expressive of religious solemnity, were originally applied in the French court to licentious songs; and 'Old Hundred,' written long before Martin Luther's time, was a love ditty. The queen of Henry II. sang her favorite psalm, 'Rebuke me not in thy indignation,' to a fashionable jig; and Anthony, King of Navarre, sang 'Stand up, O Lord, to revenge my quarrel,' to the air of a dance of Poitou."

Riches of the Old Testament. There is scarcely a surer evidence of low attainments in religion, than undervaluing the Old Testament.—The mature Christian finds it rich in the same gospel as the New, and the New is the KEY to the Old. "If the Psalms," says Irving, in his brilliant introduction to Horne, "contain not the argument of the simple doctrines, and the detail of the issues of the gospel, to reveal which the Word of God became flesh and dwelt among us, yet now that the key is given, and the door of spiritual life is opened, where do you find such spiritual treasures as in the Book of Psalms, wherein are revealed the depths of the soul's sinfulness, the stoutness of her rebellion against God, the horrors of spiritual desertion, the agonies of contrition, the blessedness of pardon, the joys of restoration, the constancy of faith, and every other variety of Christian experience? And if they contain not the narrative of Messiah's birth, and life, and death; or the labors of his apostolic servants, and the strugglings of his infant church; as these are written in the books of the New Testament, where, in the whole scriptures, can we find such declarations of the work of Christ, in its humiliation and its glory, the spiritual agonies of his death, and glorious issues of his resurrection, the wrestling of his kingdom with the powers of darkness, its triumph over the heathen, and the overthrow of all its enemies?"

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, (COURIER BUILDING,) | ISSUED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NO. 27 CENTRAL STREET (UP STAIRS.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. | LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1856. | VOLUME 2.—NUMBER 25.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE SPEEDY COMING OF JESUS CHRIST.

S. J. VARNEY, Printer, . . 27 Central St.

TERMS of Subscription to be PAID in ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months,	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months,	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	14,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	18,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside and direct to ELD. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Lowell, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS, J. COUCH, M. GRANT, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publications write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelop.

For The Crisis.

'I will bring distress upon men; and they shall walk like blind men.' Bible.

BY S. S. B.

No. 8.

ROME. ITS HATRED TO THE BIBLE.

In this article we propose to show that this Mother of abominations maintains the same deadly hatred to Bibles and toleration she ever has, notwithstanding her boasted pretensions to the contrary. From the following testimonies you will not fail to observe that there is no hope from without, for a papist.

"ROMANISM IN EUROPE. Ex-Gov. Authony, who is traveling in Europe, and whose testimony is the more valuable that it is entirely impartial, thus writes of the Catholic Church:—

"'As I am convinced from the evidence of my own observations, that the people of Europe owe much of their abasement to the heartless machinations of kings, so I also as sincerely believe that their condition is equally the result of the artful co-operating influence of the Catholic Church in States where that Church holds sway. This partnership of priest and prince has produced selfish and unwise systems of government, and these have done the work. That system of religion, wherever it exists, must be a false and hurtful one, which in any way violates man's nature, or brings down his moral dignity—which tells him to trust a weak priest, or a corrupt and fallible Church—whatever its pretensions—rather than foster a noble self-reliance, and look for aid to the Eternal God; which teaches him to meanly degrade his nature, and crawl miserably in the dirt, thinking thus to appease divine displeasure, rather than raise himself into the enjoyment—taking upon himself at the same time the responsibility—of that freedom which it was the mission of the Son of God to declare. It is indeed a melancholy thing to see a people degraded and unconscious of their degradation; still careless and indifferent whatever new humiliation may come. What future is there for such a race? For them the day of hope is past, the day of doom is come. No vitality within; new life can be awakened or imparted only by influences from without.'"

"UNIVERSITY OF FRANCE—ACADEMY AT BORDEAUX. The Inspector of the Schools of the Dordogne to the School Masters of the Department.

"MONSIEUR L'INSTITUTOR—Many of the cures and their assistants have reported their schoolmasters as having suffered to be introduced into their respective schools Bibles and Testaments, which contain doctrines contrary to the true religion. I know that some of the teachers have permitted these books to be used because they were deceived by the colporteurs, who told them that they were sent by me. I hasten to request you to remove those dangerous books from your school. I will without delay, in company with the Priest, visit and inspect your schools, and every copy of these books that we shall find, we will cause to be burnt. I embrace this opportunity of informing you, that from this time, I will allow only three books in the rural schools, viz.,

1. The catechism of the diocese.
2. A book of moral lessons, instructive and easy to be understood by the children.
3. A book of arithmetic.

(Signed) L. LAFOREST.
Inspector of Schools, &c., &c."

Friar Jennings, in a sermon preached before Dr. McHall—the pretended Bishop of Tuam—and several of his priests, and for which sermon he was greatly commended, remarked, "any persons who practice the reading of the Bible will inevitably fall into everlasting destruction. I would therefore, my dear friends and followers, most earnestly beseech you by the love that you bear to the Virgin Mary and the saints, by the love that you bear to your dear priests, not to allow these Bible readers near your houses, not to speak to them when you meet them on the roads, but put up your hands and bless yourselves, and pray to God and the Virgin Mary (how often do Romanists deny that they pray to the Virgin and Saints,) to keep you from being contaminated by the Bible. The worst of all pestilences—the infectious pestilence of the Bible—will entail on yourselves and your children the everlasting ruin of your souls. Those who send their children to schools where the Scriptures are read, give their children bound in chains to the devil!"

Said O, A. Brownson, "We would rather our children should grow up in ignorance of letters, than be taught in a school that is not Catholic."

Read the following extract from the bull of Pope Gregory 16th to all Bishops ond Priests. "From the reading of the Bible will spring liberty of conscience and religious liberty, and thence as from an inexhaustible source—public prosperity and political liberty. Accordingly it is your duty to remove from the hands of the faithful, Bibles in the vulgar tongues, and all other prohibited books. We are confident that our exertions and yours will be seconded by the civil authority."

We had an exhibition of Bible burning in this country a few years since, at Plattsburg in the State of N. Y., and we should have heretic burning also if they had the power. If the following Rev. Zealot could wish his Brn. in the bottom of the sea for fear of Protestant influence, we might conclude what he would do with such dangerous heretics, could he have the authority.

"WHETHER AN IRISHMAN CAN BE SAVED IN AMERICA. A Roman Catholic clergyman of the diocese of Cashel, says the London Watchman has received a letter from an Irish priest, the Rev. Thomas Reardon, pastor of Eastern Pensylvania, in the course of which the writer imploringly entreats his correspondent to use all his influence to cheek what he designates the insane spirit of emigration to America which seems to possess the people of Ireland. 'They are rushing,' says the writer, 'on the almost certain ruin of their soul, while their temporal condition is at best but little improved. I have had much experience of the mode of life into which nearly all our people are drawn, and I solemnly believe that if the vessels which bring them over were suddenly to founder and carry every creature on board to the depths of the ocean they would have a better chance of salvation than they have after they have lived in this country. So entirely convinced am I of the fearful havoc of souls which is the result of coming here, that were the Almighty God to give me power of building a wall of fire round Ireland to prevent its people from leaving it, it should be built before the ink with which I am writing this line would dry. For the love of Jesus try to keep your people at home, for every individual you keep you snatch a soul from hell."

Here is a specimen of their cruelty on a young convert to the religion of the Bible. This circumstance transpired in 1851, and it is in harmony with the so called Grand Duke of Tuscany's treatment to the poor Madais a few years since.

"CONVERSION OF A ROMISH PRIEST.—Under this heading, the New York Observer of the 17th, gives a private letter from a friend in Geneva, detailing the occasion, process, and consequences of the conversion of a young man who had been sent to the convent of Belley, (France) forty-eight miles from Geneva, that he might take priest's orders. The occasion was, the hearing of the words—Ye are saved by faith, not by works, read from the Romish breviary. This led him to seek a New Testament, which he read with eagerness. A fortnight afterwards, in the presence of 500 priests and monks, he declared that a change had taken place in his mind, and what he believed to be the errors of the Church of Rome; this he did with great dignity and firmness, abjuring all belief in the virgin and the saints. The priests then rushed upon him, stript him to the girdle, and gave him fifty lashes, with a whip formed of cords with balls of lead and iron at the end His body was completely lacerated—but he would not retract. A horse-hair robe was then put upon him, and he was thrown into a deep, damp dungeon filled with rotten straw, and his arms pinioned that he could not move. Three days after, some of the monks pulled with force the horse-hair jacket from his body to re-open the wounds; and having freed his hands from the cords that bound them, he projected and effected an escape, and reached Geneva in a state of the greatest bodily suffering, where he was directed to Dr. Malan. While in his cell, he had great reason to fear for his life; but he had peace in his heart, and a faith that persecution has failed to overcome."

Truly those tares are ripe—and O! what a crop! Some 80,000,000 all bound up in bundles, led blinded and willingly ignorant by a class of imposters to the day of burning and perdition of ungodly men.

Such is the vengeance of this mitred apostate to the Holy Scriptures. Now that he cannot burn the poor heretics, he must burn their Bibles. The following article, which I took from a Portland paper of Oct. 15, 1853, shows most conclusively that the spirit is in them.

"In the year 1649 the Legislature of Maryland enacted a law making a denial of the Godhead of any of the three persons of the Trinity punishable by death, and for reproachful words spoken of the Virgin Mary, the whipping post, and imprisonment at the pleasure of the Lord Proprietor. This act may be read in all its length and breadth in Bacon's laws, and is still in force in the District of Columbia, although abrogated in Maryland by the adoption of the new Constitution."

Hear the Duke of Richmond plotting for the destruction of our freedom and our Bibles.

"The Government of the United States is weak inconsistent and bad: it must and will be destroyed! So long as it exists, no prince in Europe will be safe on his throne. The sovereigns of Europe are aware of this, and are determined upon its destruction. They have come to an understanding upon this subject, and decided on the means to accomplish it.—"They will eventually succeed by subversion rather than conquest. All the low population of Europe will be carried into America. It will be a receptacle for the bad and disaffected. This will create a surplus, a heterogeneous population speaking a different language, of different religion and sentiments. They will carry with them their principles, will adhere to their former government, laws, manners, customs and religion. Discord and civil war will follow, some popular man will take the lead to restore order. The European sovereigns will aid him, all the emigrants will join, and the government will be subverted."

The closing part of the oath administered to the members of the Papal Secret Society of the Holy Faith as published by Signor Arduini in "Italia del Popolo" of March 1850. "I swear to hold myself in defending the cause which I have embraced, never to spare a single individual belonging to the infamous combinations of the Liberals, whatever may be his birth, parentage, or fortune; and to have no pity for the cries of children, nor of old men or women; and to shed the blood of the infamous Liberals even to the last drop, without regard to sex, age, or rank. Finally, I swear implacable hatred to all the enemies of our Holy Roman Catholic Religion, one and true!"

Such is the spirit of rancor in Rome throughout all its ramifications, from their blasphemous personified Infallibility, down to the degraded scavenger or hod carrier. But her days are numbered—there is wrath in store for Babylon—it approacheth swiftly, and it will be sudden— in one hour, Read it in Rev. 18: 7. There seems to be a fitness in the condition of affairs at this precise time to accomplish this purpose of God, if we may be allowed to use the above expression. O what a retribution awaits this unsuspecting people, so perfectly blind! They are so sunken in idolatry, that they are staggering, completely intoxicated with the "wine of her fornication;" and if we may now be allowed to apply the declaration of the Prophet, "they are walking like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord." Truly these are moments of the deepest interest. Wherever I turn mine eyes, all things bespeak the approaching doom of earth. The fields of grain, as the golden tinge appears beneath the rays of the sun, do not more clearly indicate the ripening harvest, than the facts I have detailed proclaim the harvest of the earth ripe, and ready for the sickle. O let us prepare for the coming storm, that we may be gathered with the wheat into the garner.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

God designs to refine His people by their afflictions.

BY ORRIN T. CLISBY.

God has often cast good men into the furnace of affliction. Many and great have been the afflictions of the righteous. Abraham was cast into the furnace of affliction, when he was commanded to offer up his beloved son Isaac, as a burnt sacrifice; Jacob, when he supposed Joseph and Benjamin were destroyed; Moses, when he was constrained to flee for his life and live forty years in banishment from all his former friends and acquaintance. In short, all the saints, who are mentioned in the Scriptures, were called to pass through many fiery trials. It is God's good pleasure to lead his people through the furnace of affliction. But his design is gracious and merciful towards His suffering saints: For He has taugh us, that He means to refine and purify them by their afflictions. He says to His people by Isaiah, "I have refined thee, but not with silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction."

Again: He says, "I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away thy tin." And speaking of the afflictions which He would bring upon His people in measure and in mercy, He says, "By this therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away his sin." The Lord tells His people by Jeremiah, that when nothing else would answer the purpose, He would refine them in the furnace of affliction.—"Therefore thus the Lord of hosts; Behold, I will melt them and try them: for how shall I do for the daughter of my people?"

But God's purpose to refine His people by affliction is still more clearly and forcibly expressed by the prophet Zechariah. "And it shall come to pass that in the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried; they shall call on my name and I will hear them. I will say, it is my people; and they shall say the Lord is my God."

In these passages God is plainly speaking of His purpose in afflicting good men; and He says it is to purge and purify them. This, therefore, we may justly conclude, is always His purpose in bringing real saints into the fiery ordeal. The dealings of God explain and confirm the declarations of His word upon this subject. He thus refined saints by casting them into the furnace of affliction. Of this we may find many clear and striking instances in the Bible. God intended to make Abraham a shining saint; and to accomplish this purpose He cast him into the furnace, where his faith and love were greatly strengthened, and laid a foundation for his being called the father of the faithful and the friend of God. God intended to make Moses an illustrious saint; and the means He used for this purpose were trials and tribulations for eighty years. God intended to exhibit Job as a perfect man; and for this purpose He put him into the furnace of affliction. "Ye have heard of the patience of Job," and it will be celebrated unto the end of the world. Caleb and Joshua were refined by the same process and attained to eminence in virtue and religion. Before David's heart was melted in the furnace he went astray; but after he had been tried as gold is tried he shone as a man of distinguished piety and devotion.

Mordecai and Esther would never have shone in such beauty and excellence, had they not been purified and made white by fiery trials.

While Daniel was in the den of lions, and Shadrach, Meshech and Abednego were in the burning fiery furnace, the beauty of their holiness astonished every beholder. And the Apostle tells us that all the ancient patriarchs became so illustrious in faith and holiness, by means of fiery trials, and scourgings, and a complication of the most severe afflictions.—And the sufferings of the primitive Christians tried and refined all their amiable virtues and graces. So the Apostle Peter says, "Though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations; (why in this heaviness, Br. Peter?) that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." (We have reason to thank the Lord for fiery trials.)

Thus it appears that God has always employed afflictions as the means of purifying the heart, and refining the graces of good men in every age. Hence it is natural to suppose, that whenever He throws such persons into the furnace of affliction, He means to bring them out vessels of honor and fitted for His own service. He can produce this result; and He declares this to be His desire in afflicting His own children. Besides, afflictions have a direct tendency to refine good men. The furnace has a direct tendency to refine silver and gold and other metals cast into it; and it never fails to produce this effect, provided the fire be continued, and the heat becomes sufficiently intense. So afflictions have a direct tendency to melt—soften and purify the heart. The hearts of mankind are by nature hard and stubborn, but afflictions have a wonderful efficacy in softening, subduing and humbling their hearts. Afflictions give saints a peculiar opportunity to distinguish between nature and grace. Like a furnace, they make a distinction and separation between sinful and holy affections. In prosperity they cannot so readily be distinguished. And they lead good men to God, as the only source of support and comfort. The afflicted, who are pious, give themselves to meditation. Such was the effect of afflictions upon David.—Said he; "Unless thy law had been my delight, I should then have perished in mine affliction." The afflicted give themselves to prayer. It is written, "Is any afflicted among you? let him pray," &c. And since God designs by their afflictions to refine His children, it is an act of kindness to afflict them, and that severely. They are apt however, to think otherwise. Job complained that God had set him as a mark. Jacob complained of the severity of his trials. He said under his troubles, "all these things are against me," and doubtless thought they would bring down his gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

God is kind in all our afflictions, seeking and promoting our highest good. In this light the Apostle represents the afflictions of good men. He says: "We have had fathers of our flesh who corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of Spirits and live? For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but He for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby."

Saints have reason to look upon the fatherly chastisements of God as marks of His peculiar kindness. Besides, there is nothing that has a greater tendency to fit men for the kingdom, than the proper improvement of affliction. It is written, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried, he shall, receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."—And again:—"Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial, that is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you. But rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy."

Afflicted saint, to Christ draw near,
Thy Savior's gracious promise hear;
His faithful word declares to thee,
That as thy days, thy strength shall be.

CONCORD, N. H. Jan. 15th, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

BY H. PRATT.

No. 7.

Heb. 10: 1. Paul, speaking of the law, says it was "a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, and can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect."

V. 2. "For then would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged (or cleansed) should have had no more conscience of sins.

V. 3. "But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year."

V. 14. "For by one offering he (Christ) hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."

We see by this reasoning that those sacrifices under the law were a type of the cleansing in the Gospel age. The blood of bulls and goats, &c., "sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh;" but it required a better sacrifice to cleanse from sins. Hence, the Prophet says, "In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and uncleanness."—Zech. 13: 1. If the law could have done this, or if the offering of the blood of bulls could have cleansed from sin, "then would they not have ceased to be offered?" But failing to "make the comers thereunto perfect," the one offering is made which "perfects forever them that are sanctified." If this fountain is not opened for sin and uncleanness, how can we be cleansed from sin? If we can be cleansed from sin before the fountain for sin is opened, what use in opening the fountain? But this fountain is to be opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Very well; is there no opportunity for the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to be cleansed from sin now? Why then look for another means of cleansing?

But who is David in prophecy? Ans. Christ. Who then compose David's house? Ans. Those that are Christ's. For says Paul, Heb. 3: 6, "But Christ as a son over his own house, whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end."

Again: Who are the inhabitants of Jerusalem? Those who dwell in the land of Palestine, or within the precincts of that ancient city? Paul says that Hagar typifies "Jerusalem [illegible] and is in bondage with her children." But Jerusalem which is above, is free, which is the mother OF US ALL." Now if Jerusalem is our MOTHER, [illegible] her? This then, settles the [illegible] all who will believe, belong to the house of David, and are represented as inhabitants of Jerusalem. Has there been a fountain for sin and uncleanness opened for them? If not, then we cannot be cleansed from sin, and must share the fate of sinners. But what are the facts? Says John, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to CLEANSE us from all unrighteousness."

Says Paul, Heb. 9: 13, 14, "For if the blood of bulls and goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, (who through the Eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God,) PURGE (cleanse) your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God."

In the mouth of two or three witnesses let every word be established. 1 Pet. 1: 19, 20, "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver or gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers, But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot."

Thus much we think should settle this matter in the minds of all believers; but lest this should fail to convince all, we quote again, and from the Revelation of Jesus Christ himself, "Hear Him!!!"

Rev. 1: 4, 5, "John to the seven churches which are in Asia; Grace be unto you and peace from him which is, and which was, and which is to come, and from the seven spirits which are before his throne, And from Jesus Christ who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten (born) of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and WASHED US FROM OUR SINS IN HIS OWN BLOOD."

Was not this then the fountain for sin and uncleanness? Has it not been opened for the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem? Praise the Lord, my poor heart says it is so, and let the whole Israel of God say, Amen. Sinners, come to the "fountain;" come now.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, FEB. 2, 1856.

For The Crisis.

To Our Patrons.

Dear Brn. and Srs: After mature consideration it is thought best by your committee, to move the Crisis office to Boston.

When the committee appointed at the Wilbraham camp-meeting, met last fall to enquire into the practicability of uniting the "Crisis," "Reformer" and "Prophetic Messenger" into one paper, they unanimously decided that Boston was the best place for its publication; but as the union was not then accomplished, no change has been made. We are satisfied that the best interests of the Crisis demand that we should make the change without delay. There are several reasons why we should move to Boston, a few of which we will mention.

1. The paper is now sent here for general distribution, hence many of our subscribers will receive the paper earlier than they do now.

2. Boston is the great news depot of New England, as well as every other part of the world; hence our editor will be able to give you the latest foreign and domestic intelligence.

3. Since Br. Berick left for the west with his valuable library, which was always open for examination by our editor, Br. Merriam has not been able to purchase books that he very much needed; but the public and private libraries in Boston to which he may have access, will be found valuable aids for reference.

4. Through the kindness of Br. Adams, 167 Hanover street, we have obtained rooms in his store, forty-one dollars less by the year than we have paid in Lowell; and in consequence of other arrangements we expect to be able to publish the paper some five or six dollars less per week than we are now paying.

On account of the above reasons, and others that might be mentioned, of equal importance, we have concluded to publish the first number of the next volume in Boston.

Now, brethren and sisters, we hope if you are pleased with the paper, that you will forward immediately the money for the next volume, that we may be able to meet all our bills, and owe no man any thing, but to love one another.

If you think the paper good, and calculated to benefit its readers, then let us urge you to do what you can to extend its circulation. We intend, by the blessing of the Lord, to make the paper so full of good things, that whoever reads it shall find something to kindle feelings of devotion towards our blessed Redeemer, and affection for our fellow-beings.

We are resolved in the strength of the Lord, that the Crisis shall be as it has been, free from all contention, hard sayings, and reproachful epithets; in short, we are fully decided that it shall continue to be a peace paper, giving light on the great truth of the Lord's immediate coming, as fast as it shines upon our minds, as well as every other truth of the Bible.

We have no iron bedstead on which to try the faith of our brethren, but wish every one to take the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice, and be free to think for themselves, and act as they think will best please the Lord.

We believe that we are very near the great day of the Lord, and that what we do must be done quickly.

M. Grant,
In behalf of the Committee.

Boston, Jan. 29th, 1856.

Our Removal.

All letters to the Crisis Office after Feb. 5th, will be directed to

Jonas Merriam,
Editor of the World's Crisis,
Boston, Mass.

The Millennium.

No. 3.

In all our discussions upon the great principles and dactrines, of Scripture—the sublime, soul-stirring truths contained in the sacred Oracles—we ought ever to consider our own weakness and liability to err, and to cherish such a veneration for the holy word of life proceeding from the throne of God, as never to indulge in selfish considerations, sectarian animosities, or a desire to gain a victory over our opponents in argument. I can but feel my own unworthiness and imbecility, as I attempt to handle the word of God—to expound the lively Oracles. I deeply feel, also, that others of more profound knowledge, and higher attainments in every respect, have taken a different view of certain portions of the word from that which I have embraced. With all due deference therefore to their piety and erudition I write. As, however, we cannot rely one upon another, but must dig for the treasures of wisdom, each one for ourselves, asking counsel of God, I venture to express my views on certain passages usually understood as teaching a temporal millenium.

Isa. 2: 1, "The word that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem."

The terms Judah and Jerusalem, when used in reference to the times of the old dispensation, must of course be interpreted as meaning literal Judah and Jerusalem; but the question arises, do they have the same significance when they relate to the times of the Messianic dispensation? or, in other words, when the inhabitants of old Jerusalem became so far alienated from God by wicked works as to be finally rejected, cast out from the enjoyment of His special favor as a nation, so that they were no longer regarded as the peculiar people, or Covenant people of God, the question arises, when the Prophets refer to these latter times, and speak of Judah, Jerusalem, Israel, Jacob, Zion, &c., do they speak in literal, or typical language?

That the Scriptures often use symbols, metaphors, similes, types and various figures of speech, cannot be denied by any intelligent reader of the Bible. I am aware that the professed Church of Christ have taken advantage of the poetic and symbolical portions of Scripture, and have resolved the plain, literal teachings of the word into metaphors and tropes, which might mean any thing the expositor was pleased to imagine; and of course he would imagine something corroborative of his peculiar theory. Thus have the literal, didactic passages of holy writ been spiritualized away till they were made null and void. The true meaning and force of Bible language in its native beauty and simplicity was lost. Such wresting of the Scripture from its primary, simple and natural meaning, is, indeed, a grievous error—it is a departure from the truth of God, and opens the flood-gates of spiritualism and delusion by which the Church has been nigh overwhelmed. But it does not follow because the popular theologians of our day have spiritualized away the truths of God, that there are no passages to be symbolically interpreted. We should depart on the other hand from the beauty and force and power of Scripture language, by interpreting the figurative portions of the word as literal. All language, either in Bible or out of it, ought to be understood agreeably to the design of the speaker, or writer. We gain nothing by spiritualizing the literal, nor by literalizing the spiritual. Some seem to imagine that if we receive every word of God in a literal sense it manifests a peculiar reverence for divine authority; but suppose an Indian Chief should say, "my tribe has buried the hatchet, and planted the tree of peace"—would it argue any more confidence in his truthfulness, or reverence for his character, to understand they had literally interred a weapon of war, and planted an Olive tree? Certainly not. He would wish us to understand him precisely as the idea was presented to his own mind; that is, that his tribe had entered into relations of peace with others. If you literalize the expression, you make his remark convey an idea entirely foreign to what he intended. The most revential and confidential manner of treating the discourse, is, to understand he is speaking in a figure which presents a striking emblem of a pacific state.

Thus when David says, "God is my rock," we could gain nothing by regarding the expression as literal. On the other hand, we should lose entirely the sense of the passage. It would not be shewing greater reverence or confidence in the word of God, but the contrary.

Again: when the Scripture says "He shall cover thee with his feathers and under his wings shalt thou trust," Ps. 91: 4, if we obey the injunction not to be children in understanding, we shall take such expressions in their figurative, or as we usually say, spiritual import. We are as much bound to take inspiration as it means, as to take a man's language as he means. Neither is it opening the floodgates of error and delusion, to understand the instructions of the word aright; for because I take a passage which is plainly intended to be figurative or symbolical, in the sense intended, another man has no right to take another passage in a figurative or symbolical sense, unless that too is plainly intended to be so understood. I do not thus create a law to be used in interpretation, any further than other passages are parallel. If this were the case, then we should be interdicted from all symbolical interpretation of prophecy, and compelled to take all Scripture in its literal sense. But do not the Scriptures themselves teach us to understand many portions of the word as figurative?

"Without a parable spake he not unto them," Mark 4: 34. "He spake many things unto them in parables," Matt. 13: 3. I need not quote more Scripture to show that a parabolical or allegorical style of communicating instruction was Jesus' favorite mode of teaching. He chose this method because infinite wisdom deemed it the most effectual, impressive and profitable; and shall puny man undertake to say that it is unworthy of the Oracles of God? or that because some of us understand certain portions of the word in a typical or figurative sense, because we cannot, after comparing spiritual things with spiritual, or Scripture with Scripture, see how it can be literal, but on the other hand, find a beauty and harmony and power in its figurative meaning, shall it be said we invalidate the authority of Scripture?

Once more: says God himself by the mouth of His Prophet Hosea, "I have also spoken by the prophets, and I have multiplied visions, and used SIMILITUDES by the ministry of the prophets," Hos. 12: 10.

Here then we have the Lord's declaration, express and unequivocal, that His choice method of communicating instruction was by means of similitudes, and who shall impeach the infinite wisdom of God in so doing?

Let us then accept the revelation of God as He has been pleased to give it, and understand the language as we would the language of man; for the Lord in giving a revelation has given it according to the ordinary acceptation of language among men. But it is important that we distinguish between the literal and symbolical—a distinction which, it appears to me, in general, is easily made. When the Lord, e. g. says, "the meek shall inherit the earth," it is easy to perceive that there is no metaphor nor symbol in such language. It is plain, simple, didactic instruction; and were the term "earth" in such connection to occur in any other work except the Bible, no one would ever think the earth was any thing but the earth. It could not be so misinterpreted as to express some other planet, or the sun, or moon, or any place in the etherial realms.

I have been led to make the above remarks, because I have been confident some of our Brn. carry the literal interpretation beyond what is natural and truthful in their expositions. I shall never forget a remark I once heard from the lips of Pres. Woods of Bowdoin College to this effect, "that the human mind was like a pendulum. Not only one mind, but often the mass of mind in community, would be swayed for ages in a particular direction, and then to the opposite direction." Thus the mass of mind among theological writers has for ages been swayed toward a spiritual interpretation of Scripture, till they have undermined the great, glorious, although simple doctrines of the word. Nay; till they have overturned the principles of common sense, and left the glorified Church of God without any other foundation to plant their feet upon but empty vacuity; where there is neither time for enjoyment or praise, nor space to exist in. Truly this is the maximum of spirituality, terminating in annihilation, not of the wicked, and their place, but of the kingdom of God, and all the subjects of the eternal reign. When the believers in Christ's coming at hand revived the stones of truth out of the rubbish, or, in other words, when they dissipated the fog that enveloped the most blessed and unspeakably glorious promises of God, the burst of sun-beams that blazed all around them, was so overpowering and entrancing to the vision, that they were wrapt and absorbed in the delightful contemplation of Bible truth in its native simplicity. The natural consequence was, that the pendulum began to oscillate in the opposite direction. When they came to understand the literal fulfilment of the prophetic word, they adopted the literal interpretation, and some held it so tenaciously as hardly to be willing to admit that any of the writings of Scripture were figurative in their application; particularly when such terms as Zion, Jerusalem, Judah, Israel, &c., occur. Now, for one, I feel willing to abide by the decision of the word, and let the Scripture itself be umpire in the case; for I realize that in all our investigations of the word, we ought to lay aside all preconceived opinions, and come to the naked truth, without regard to building up any theory of our own. If God has promised to build up the ancient covenant people of God in the future, amen. If, on the other hand, the partition wall is demolished, and the Israel of God, under the new dispensation, embraces all the true followers of Christ, amen.

Let us by comparing Scripture with Scripture, find whether those expressions alluded to are always to be interpreted in a literal sense.

"Zion heard and was glad." Was this the literal streets, and walls, and buildings of the city? or is the term used in a metaphorical sense as referring to the people? If it refer to people, then this expression is not literal, otherwise it would mean the buildings, &c., of the city.

"When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion." Was this the literal city that had been carried into captivity, or is the expression used to denote the people of Zion, who, though in a foreign land, were called Zion? "The Lord shall reign, O Zion," Ps. 146: 10; "Praise thy God, O Zion," Ps 147: 12; "Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, Isa. 1: 27.

"Put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city," Is. 52: 1; "Shake thyself from the dust, arise and sit down, O Jerusalem," Is. 52: 2; "O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved. How long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee?" Jer. 4: 14. I need not multiply quotations to shew that Jerusalem, as well as Zion, is used in a figurative sense, i. e. by metonymy, the city is put for the people.

"Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel," Am. 4: 12. Here the name "Israel" is used, not in its literal sense, but as expressing the descendants of that Patriarch. Were it used in a literal sense, it would refer simply to the Patriarch Jacob. "For they are not all Israel which are of Israel, neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children," Rom. 9: 6, 7.—How plainly is the fact here developed, that when God speaks of Israel, in certain cases, He does not mean the literal seed of Abraham simply, but all who are His children by faith; for they do not constitute ALL Israel who are the descendants of Jacob; neither do all who are the descendants of Jacob belong to the house of Israel in the sense here spoken of. The expression, "And so ALL ISRAEL shall be saved," Rom. 11: 26, proves the same thing. Now do not say that I pave the way for every one to interpret Scripture as they please, or that I have imagined a construction to be put upon the Israel of God. Not so; I have given God's definition of these terms, and I have no more right to reject the authority of God in His own exposition of Scripture than I have to disbelieve His word in other respects, and if it can be shewn that the Lord defines the new earth promised to the saints as located beyond the starry heavens as clearly as He recognizes the great and important principle that Zion sometimes typically represents the people of God, and that Israel sometimes includes the entire Church of Christ, then I should be bound to believe it. No such thing however can be shewn; and because theologians interpret certain passages wrong, it is no reason why I should not interpret certain other passages right; for we must let all self-will and all preconceived theories fall before the power of Bible truth. But to put this subject beyond question, turn to Is. 51: 16, "Say unto Zion, thou art MY PEOPLE."

Inspiration then itself settles the point which I wish to prove, viz: that the terms Zion, Jerusalem, &c., are not always to be interpreted in a literal sense. But perhaps it may be said this is evident; but then although the city is used to represent the people, yet there is a literal city referred to. Turn then to Rev. 11: 2, "And the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months." No one can doubt this refers simply to the Church under the Gospel dispensation. But the objecter rejoins—true it refers to the Church, but the new Jerusalem is their mother city. I know the Scripture says, "Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all," Gal. 4: 26. The only idea we can have of a mother city is that it is the place which gives birth to her children. But in what sense can the city above give either natural or spiritual birth to the Church? We were not born in her in either sense: consequently the expression, "mother of us all," must of necessity be used in a figurative sense.

Again, to make the thing clear and definite, the Lord explains the matter thus: "For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh: But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter," Rom. 2: 28, 29. In this passage it is clearly revealed, that what constitutes a Jew in the mind of God, under this dispensation, is not a literal descent from Abraham, but an inward or spiritual work of grace, constituting a man a child of God. If this be so in the divine mind, shall it be so in ours? This same sentiment is reiterated again and again in the Scriptures of the New Testament. "If ye be CHRIST'S, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise," Gal. 3: 29. "Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham," Gal. 3: 7.

For further light on this subject please read the interesting articles from the pen of Br. H. Pratt on the fulfilment of Prophecy.

More on this chapter in our next if the Lord will.

Erratum. In the article of Br. Bellows, No. 24, 3d page, 1st column, one of the numeral letters was not carried into the column of figures. It was the letter I signifying 1. This added to the column would have made the calculation correct.

For the Crisis.

Praise.

By B. Mathewson.

In a former article, I just hinted at the necessity and good results of rendering praise to God. And when I take a retrospective glance of the manifold mercies so bountifully conferred on myself—poor worm! and the human family at large—my very soul cries out with David, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men!" David often expresses this sentiment. In the 107th Ps, he expresses it four times in these very words—recounts God's favors bestowed in various circumstances—by sea and by land! and then expresses his heartfelt desire that the recipients of these mercies would render praise to the Author of them!

Nothing so easily breaks up the fountain of tears within my own soul, as taking a retrospect of past mercies! Especially of God's faithful tenderness in calling after me by His Spirit even when engaged in childish merriment. Full well do I remember those gracious calls succeeding one another as young friends were laid away in the cold and silent grave! But naturally gay and volatile, my childish nature would not brook the restraints imposed by the Gospel. My acts (ever more significant than words) said, "Go thy way for this time." O why, after such repeated calls, was I not left like Ephraim? He could have done very well without me! But O it is that amazing love that has followed me all the days of my life! that superhuman affection that compassionates enemies!! My tears of gratitude cannot easily be suppressed, but involuntarily flow at the remembrance of Infinity condescending to stoop so low as to rescue so weak a worm! Yes; a power that can completely transform the heart to love what it naturally hated, and hate what it naturally loved—that can so elevate the fallen nature of man as to become a fit associate for Angels! and Him whose very name is Holy!! that moral power contains sufficient efficacy to make poor, depraved human beings feel they are on terms of familiarity with "the high and lofty one One that inhabiteth eternity." In other words, to naturalize them to a holy society so that they will feel perfectly at home with Patriarchs, Prophets and Apostles—trancends human and must be ascribed to Infinite power! David says, "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul."

Christians should ever delight in testifying to the great things God hath wrought for them. In recounting the mercies of God I am often led to exclaim in the language of the poet,

"What shall I render to my God,
For all His kindness shown?"

Alas! my short arm cannot repay—but with David I am resolved to "sing praises unto my God while I have any being." Ps. 146: 2.

These thirteen years His loving-kindness has not departed from me, either in my necessary solitude, or when blest with the endearing society of companion and friends—therefore I feel that "praise is comely." It appears that David's prophetic eye discovered danger of deficiency on the part of God's children relative to maintaining a spirit of gratitude, therefore he often urges it upon them to engage in this most delightful exercise of Angels and men! And he sets us a corresponding example in the Psalms—over forty of them commence with the language of praise! and then this ennobling sentiment is plentifully interspersed throughout his writings.

I suspect this is one great reason why God blessed David so much—he never forgot to return a grateful acknowledgment for the benefits conferred. He seemed to be animated from above with that life whose alternate breath is prayer and praise. His devotion was not all prayer—always thinking of his wants—always uttering desire and never expressing gratitude—expending all his voice in supplication and none of it in song! No: he knew this was not the way to treat a benefactor, and we know it. We must be conscious that nothing prompts so earnest a desire to supply the destitute, as to know what we confer will be gratefully received. The spirit of praise appears in about the same ratio as in the days of the Savior's ministry—ten to pray, and only one to offer praise!

Ten lepers lifted up their voices together in the prayer—"Jesus, Master, have mercy on us"—but only one of the ten returned "to give glory to God"—the nine appeared satisfied with the benefit—only one thought gratefully of the Benefactor!

I cannot help thinking with Dr. Nevins of Baltimore, in his excellent little work entitled, "Practical Thoughts," that "praise is often more effectual in obtaining blessings, than prayer." He relates a circumstance in confirmation of this fact, which I will here insert.

"A person, being once cast upon a desolate island, spent a day in fasting and prayer for his deliverance; but no help came. It occurred to him then to keep a day of thanksgiving and praise, and he had no sooner done it than relief was brought to him. You see, as soon as he began to sing of mercy exercised, the exercise of mercy was renewed to him.—The Lord heard the voice of his praise! This sentiment appears in keeping with the case of Paul and Silas when their feet were made fast in the stocks of a Philippian jail! It was not enough that the midnight hour found them engaged in prayer! Their hearts were overflowing with gratitude, and they thought it expedient to offer songs of praise to God! I presume they had no fear of awaking the other prisoners, but opened wide their mouths and gave full utterance to the intense emotions of their souls.

"The prisoners did hear them—and this was not all. He that loves to be glorified with praise heard them, and immediately gave striking testimony of His approbation in loosing their fetters and opening their prison doors. Now mark, their prison doors were not opened when they prayed! But when they engaged in that Eternal Topic of redeemed men and Angels, Deity itself is moved, producing a great quaking on earth."

Some have expressed a desire to glorify God more: let such abound more in expressions of praise. 'Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me," is language too plain to be misunderstood. "Giving thanks always for all things, unto God," is the language of an inspired Apostle, and a command worthy the attention of all his Brn.

And shall not we, my Brn. and Srs., true our hearts and voices to praise God more and more?

While we wait for the coming of the Lord, let us not murmur because every thing is not just as we would have it, but thank God for all the way He has led us, let us not faint or complain of the way; for when once we enter the heavenly Canaan we shall find it ever a goodly land, flowing with milk and honey.

NEW HARTFORD, CT. Jan. 15th, '56.

☞ PARTICUAR NOTICE ☜

Eld. Edwin Burnham, having kindly responded to the voice of the Church in Shipton, C. E., will commence a series of meetings in Danville, on Sunday, Feb. 17th, and continue over the next Sabbath.

This visit of Br. B. will be hailed by the healthy, growing Church here, with no ordinary degree of satisfaction; for it was mainly indebted to his labors for its original existence; and his name with that of some others, stands associated with feelings of the deepest gratitude, being dear to the memory of many of God's enlightened saints in these parts.

As his stay in Canada is limited to the above period, Brn. at a distance who feel interested, will not need to be told what to do.

In behalf of the Church,

JOHN PORTER.

DANVILLE, C. E., Jan 18, 1856.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE AFRICA.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23. The steamship Africa, from Liverpool the 9th inst., arrived at her dock at 9 o'clock this morning.

Russia's answer to the last proposition cannot arrive before the 10th, and will probably be some days later, and it is expected will contain neither absolute assent nor refusal, but will make counter proposals to be settled by renewed conferences.

The feeling in England continues warlike, and France is again becoming so. Russia continues incessant preparations for war.

The grand council of allied generals is now is session in Paris

The proposed Council on the Danish Sound dues is postponed indefinitely.

Rumors are revived of Naples joining the Alliance.

Sweden is making active warlike preparations.

The Russian General is apprehensive of an attack upon Kars by Selim Pacha—consequently has concentrated all his available forces at that point. Selim Pacha was encamped in the Mountains Eereh Foynon.

A Russian attack on Erzeroum is not considered probable at present, in consequence of the exhaustion of the troops and the state of the roads.

No injury has been done to the warships by the recent storms.

ASIA MINOR. Omar Pasha had arrived at Batoum, his army had suffered much from lack of provisions before reaching Kutais, and being unable to proceed, he deemed it prudent to return. The fall of Kars had rendered Omar Pasha very unpopular at Constantinople.

Gen. Williams had arrived at Gumri.

The council of war at Constantinople are directing all their efforts to the defence of Erzeroum and Trebizond.

The railroad from Moscow to St. Petersburg is to be protected by redoubts placed at intervals along the line; each redoubt to be occupied by a battalion of militia.

Much excitement exists at Rome by a report that Mexico had suppressed its legation in Rome, and had withdrawn its minister The archives of the office are already packed up.

The Ottoman Ambassador at Paris has notified to Prince Napoleon, that the Sultan, desirous of giving a proof of his gratitude to the French army, offers to his Imperial Highness all the articles sent by the Ottoman empire to the Paris exhibition of 1855, to be sold for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the army in the East.

English papers, received by the Africa at New York, furnish a variety of details of considerable interest.

Destruction of the Sebastopol Docks. A correspondent of the London Daily News gives some particulars of the demolition by the French of one of the five magnificent dry docks at Sebastopol, at 2 P. M. on the 22d of Dec. About 2000 pounds of powder were used, and the whole structure was instantly reduced to a pile of sightless ruins. It is understood that the engineering operations are completed for the demolition of the whole of these structures, and that the object in demolishing one portion only was to test the accuracy of certain calculations with regard to the quantity of powder necessary for effecting the desired result.

An imposing military force was concentrated about Erzeroum, and it was not believed that the Russians could do anything in that direction. It was even said that they appeared disposed to evacuate Kars for the winter, after having previously taken away all the disposable materiel.

A letter from Constantinople, dated Dec. 26, says, that not less than 60 vessels of war had left that port within a few days for Suchum-Kaleh, in Asia.

From Sweden the reports are quite warlike. A letter from Stockholm, Dec. 14, says:—

"Activity unexampled reigns in every manufactory for producing articles necessary to the equipment of an army. The colonels of all the regiments have received orders to supply their troops with everything necessary to prepare them for marching at the first signal. Everybody here believes that in case the allies should open the war with vigor in the Baltic next spring, our government will feel itself compelled to take an active part therein."

A letter from Berlin, Jan. 7th, says:—

"The Swedish preparations are exciting great alarm among the partisans of Russia. Norway has been called on by the Swedish War Department to organize her forces. The Swedish journals are almost unanimous in their praises of the treaty with the Western Powers. The semi-official paper appeals to it, as a reply to the reproach that Sweden was under the control of Russia."

From Russia, the intelligence is as warlike as ever. Commercial letters from the Baltic ports mention the extraordinary activity displayed by the Generals in erecting additional works of defence on the land and sea side, and establishing intrenched camps for the troops, who are to operate in the three provinces of Esthonia, Livonia, and Courland. Communications by land are now easy on account of the ice and snow, and Revel, Riga, and other maritime towns have already been supplied with guns of long range, on an improved system, lately cast in the Imperial foundry of St. Petersburg, of which the learned engineer Jacobi has the direction, and where all the old copper guns are being melted and converted into rampart and siege pieces of the longest range.

Fourteen steam gunboats, of wood, are at present being built on the Mersey, at Birkenhead, and large government orders for cannon and projectiles keep the foundries in and around Liverpool in full activity. Thirty-five gunboats are in process of construction at Woolwich, besides numerous others at other ports.

Mr Layard has another work, on Asyrian Antiquities, in the press.

Three days later news from Europe. New York, Jan 24 The Collins steamship Baltic, from Liverpool 12th inst., has arrived.

The latest rumors speak more favorably of peace prospects.

Denmark announces her continued neutality, and that she has no connection with the Swedish alliance.

The Emperor Napoleon again threatens to go personally to the war.

London, Saturday Morning. Advices from Monte Video of Nov 25th announce a revolution The city, for four days, was the scene of a bloody conflict—100 killed and a large number wounded. Order was restored on the 29th, when Munos and his revolutionary party embarked for Buenos Ayres in a steamer, in conformity with the demands of diplomatic agents resident in Monte Video. Foreigners maintained a strict neutrality.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 3. Great Council of War Concluded. It has transpired that Russian tactics for the approaching campaign has undergone important modifications. The orders sent from head-quarters seem to indicate an intention to abandon the Crimea, a part of the troops having been ordered to reinforce Monrauvieff, and others to join the grand army of the centre.

London, Saturday. The Post has direct advices from Persia, which do not confirm the statement of the capture of Herat by the Persians.

The Greek Government has just ordered the construction of a war steamer and five gunboats

Letters from Vienna state that Gen. Mouravieff is to take the command in the Crimea, where it is hoped that the prestige of his success will be more useful to Russia than in Asia. A high command in the north of the empire is assigned to Prince Gortschakoff

From the Sulina mouths of the Danube, we learn that upwards of 400 vessels have been detained there on account of the small depth of water, which prevents their putting to sea. It appears that the English steamer Junius has been lost, as nothing has been heard of her for some weeks past.

A Glasgow paper says that a proposal has been set on foot for posting placards all over the city, containing passages from the Bible, printed in the largest characters, so as to arrest attention. Each placard to contain only one verse, and sometimes only one sentence; and to be renewed as frequently as the funds obtained will permit.

The Persian Gazette of the 24th November states that a large powder magazine at Casbin, near Teheran, had blown up with tremendous explosion. Twelve persons lost their lives by the accident, the cause of which remains a mystery. By the exertions of the inhabitants the fire was prevented from extending beyond the building itself.

It appears from a statement compiled by the London Shipping Gazette that one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine (1799) vessels have been wrecked during the past year. Of these, 238 were wrecked in January, 164 in February, 149 in March, 109 in April, 98 in May, 83 in June, 70 in July, 109 in August, 106 in September, 179 in October, 253 in November, and 241 in December.

The Copenhagen Faedrelandet states that a meteor varying at times from the size of the sun to that of a star of first magnitude, was observable in the south-western atmosphere, during some 12 or 15 minutes, on the night of the 10th ultimo This meteor changed its configuration several times, having appeared now in one mass, then in two, then again in three, and so forth alternately, lighting up the heavens to a considerable distance.

War Items. The English transport Themis, with munitions for the French has been accidentally burned at Eupatoria.

Sixteen ships were lost near Kamesh during recent storms.

A Constantinople letter, of Dec. 28th, says that the Russians have intercepted Omar Pasha's communications with Kutais, Suchum Kale, and with the coast, and that he has applied to the Allies for assistance. According to Russian accounts his troops were suffering severely from the weather, and their rear was much harrassed by the Russians.

Pelissier has notified the Constantinople papers that henceforth no mention whatever is to be made of the movements of French troops; and even the list of arrivals of transport ships is to be discontinued.

The Moniteur publishes a despatch from Marshal Pelissier of the 28th of December, announcing that the volunteers of General d'Auteemarre attempted a coup de main against the Russians on the night of the 26th of December. It resulted in 18 Russians killed and 18 made prisoners, and 20 Cossacks and 30 muskets captured. No Frenchman was either killed or wounded.

Odessa letters report (via St. Petersburg) the roadsteads of Odessa, Taganrog, Marioupol, Rostoff, and the rivers, frozen. Generals Osten Sacken, Liprandi and Catzebue had arrived at Odessa, to hold a council of war.

Another Storm in the Black Sea Reported Loss of Sixty Vessels. Accounts were on Saturday posted at Lloyd's from Constantinople, of another fearful hurricane having visited the Black Sea, on the 19th ult.; and it is reported (although we hope that the number of fatal losses will not be confirmed) that 50 or 60 ships foundered during the height of the storm, off the mouth of the Suline. Lloyd's agent at Galata states that in twenty-three instances the vessels went down with all hands, as also 52 lighters which were off the coast at the time. Not a soul belonging to them is supposed to have escaped. Most of the vessels were laden with corn. Three ships, (one from England called the Caledonia) were driven ashore near the harbór of Sebastopol, and were wrecked, the crew of the Caledonia perishing in the vessel. The Talavera, English transport ship, No. 98, (belonging to Mr. Duncan Dunbar, at Limehouse), is, among other vessels, reported to be lost on the East coast of Marmora, and that her Majesty's ship Oberon had been despatched from Constantinople to the spot to render assistance. A distressing shipwreck was also reported by the agent at Calcutta. An English ship, with 300 emigrants (Coolies), from Singapore, had struck on the south end of the Alguada Reef, on the 24th of last October, and with the exception of eleven, all had met with a watery grave.

A letter from Naples of the 28th ult, says:—"Vesuvius has been thundering, and a new mouth has been opened on the very top of the mountain, from whence lava is flowing out. At present all that can be seen is a vast column of smoke; but still the mountain is active, and menaces further demonstrations. Not far from Castellamare, too, I have observed an unusual agitation in the sea. The rocks in the neighborhood also were covered with a thick sulphurous deposit."

THE RUMORED DEFEAT OF THE EMPEROR OF HAYTI. From Capt. Darnaby, of the schooner Ellen, which left Port au Prince on the first of January, advices are received fully confirmatory of the previous accounts of the defeat of the Haytiens, with the loss of between 200 and 300 soldiers, with many of his best officers, besides all his munitions of war, provisions, and the Emperor's military chest, containing all the funds intended for the prosecution of the war.

Soloque had marched 30,000 men against the eastern side of the island, and his defeat is represented as most complete.

Reason and the Resurrection. The human reason is not a Judge, appointed to pass sentence on the Word of God, but a listening, waiting, intelligent servant, to receive, interpret and obey its precepts Of all things it is the greatest absurdity to think of having God speak to us, and then to stand aloof, and question whether what God says is right and true. And yet there are some men, and some sects, that are always setting what they call reason as a sentinel over God's Word, treating it almost as if it were insane, and to be put in a cell and guarded against. They say to their reason, "Now take care, be on your watch, look out, don't let any mystery pass, without questioning, and if it does not look rational, keep it off. Beware, or the Bible will get something into your mind that is not in accordance with science. See to it that you keep science ahead, for science is certainly true, but the Bible—why!—it may be true and it may be false, so stick to science."

This language is partly an importation from Germany, partly the growth of Socianism, but it is as natural as air to the unbelieving mind, everywhere. The mind is unwilling to acknowledge its dependence upon God; anything which it thinks it finds out or can find out for itself, it much prefers to that which is revealed from God, and thinks it more certain. The foot-prints of an Antediluvian alligator, or the marks of a creature with a lion's head and a lizard's tail in the mud of creation ten thousand years ago, it will believe at once, on the testimony of any respectable geologist; but if such a creature should be found described in the Bible, such a mind would probably reject it as a fable, or turn it into a myth.

Now it is remarkable how diametrically opposed all this is to the view of the authority of God's Word taken in his Word. God speaks, and it is done He is not to be judged; his truth is not to be brought to another standard of truth. His Word is our sun. With a winking taper as of our reason, poring into the corners of some dark cellar, we might find things that the sun does not shine upon, cockroaches, that cannot live in its light; but that would be no cause for running about the streets at noonday with this taper, and judging everything that the sun shines upon by its flame.

DIVINE TRUTH, not science, is our standard, our last resort. It is our source of light and knowledge Its voice is the voice of humble piety. "Give me understanding according to thy Word." The voice of an unsanctified reason is, Give me understanding according to science. I will run, by Sir Humphrey Davy's safety-lamp, Mr. Nichol's nebular hypothesis, and Emanuel Swedenborg's visions of angels. This is no new thing in the world; the Greeks were full of it in Paul's time; they sought after wisdom, but not after God.

Some time ago, in conversation upon the doctrine of the Resurrection, we received from a learned and intelligent clergyman at the South the following anecdote, which we ought to have recorded at the time, so as not to have forgotten any of its details. It is authentic, from the personal experience of the clergyman in England, and though we may fail in giving it shape, the point is accurate.

A man of intelligence, but of a very skeptical turn of mind, had had many conversations with this clergyman, and was always stumbling at the doctrine of the Resurrection, as a vexation and plague to his reason. He stumbled at that stumbling-block, being disobedient. His clerical friend did not succeed in reducing his skepticism; the swelling proceeded not so much from particular difficulties and incredibilities in the mystery before him, as from the king's evil in the heart, a proud, self-relying dependence, not upon God, but upon his own reason.

At length for a long time they were separated. The clergyman did not meet his skeptical friend, I think, for years. Meanwhile the grace of God came into his heart and he was converted, and became as a little child. All his skepticism departed, and now he listened only to God.

The first time he met his former friend after this great change, the clergyman said to him, "Well, my dear sir, and what do you think now of the doctrine of the Resurrection?"—"Oh, sir," said the former skeptic, "two words from Paul conquered me, 'Thou fool'? Do you see this Bible, (taking up a beautiful copy of the Scriptures, fastened with a silver clasp) and will you read the words upon the clasp that shuts it?" The clergyman read, deep engraven on the silver clasp, "Thou fool!"—"There," said his friend, "are the words that conquered me; it was no argument, no reasoning, no satisfying my objections, but God convincing me that I was a fool; and thenceforward I determined I would have my Bible clasped with those words. Thou Fool! and never again would come to the consideration of its sacred mysteries, but through their medium. I will remember that I am a fool, and God only is wise."

How striking, how affecting was this! Ah, this is the way to come to God's Word. Let every man put this clasp upon his Bible, "Thou Fool!"—and let him enter it, to sit at the feet of Jesus, and learn of him, just as a little child, remembering the saying of David, "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple."

THE INDIAN WAR IN OREGON. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has received a letter from Superintendent Palmer, dated Dayton, Nov. 12, in relation to the hostilities with the Indians. He says, in the popular phrensy, the peaceful as well as the hostile bands of Indians are menaced with exterminaton Should the present campaign in Washington Territory and Middle Oregon prove unsuccessful, it will be well nigh impossible to save the Indians of this valley from the fury of the inhabitants.—They will be slain, not for what they have done, but what they might do if so disposed.

"The bands now encamped at Fort Lane, numbering three hundred and thirty-four persons, who, immediately on the commencement of hostilities, placed themselves under the protection of the garrison, are in imminent danger of meeting the fate so boldly and recklessly threatened—that of annihilation. These bands comprise the original Rouge River Indians, and a part of those treated with on the 18th of November, 1854, and from their general good conduct merit a better fate.

"The Umpqua Indians are but little more secure; one village having already been attacked by a body of lawless banditti, who put to death men, women, and children."

From the above it will be seen that a portion of the white population, by their lawless deeds, have contributed not a little to incite the Indians to commit outrages upon the defenceless white population of these Territories, and the Superintendent points out the necessity of a disciplined military force not only to subjugate the hostile Indians, but afterwards to aid in ridding the country of lawless vagabonds who have provoked this state of affairs.

A Singular Phenomenon. We were shown, yesterday, by a gentleman living near Fairfax, C. H., a species of bug that fell at that place during the rain of Saturday night last. The snow for several miles was robbed of its whiteness, and made to resemble a vast field of colored velvet. What is still more surprising, the intense coldness of the weather cannot kill them. They apparently seem to be stiffened by the raw atmosphere; but, if placed near the fire, will relax and exhibit signs of life. They are very black, and are but little larger than a grain of coarse powder. Who can enlighten us on the "bug question?"—[Alexandria Gazette.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS. We have really no patience to record the varying phases of Mexican misrule and confusion. The present government is only the stronger of the numerous factions into which the people of Mexico are divided; or rather, perhaps we should say—into which the unprincipled leaders and managers of the people of Mexico, are divided. Distractions and dissensions are still rife in various directions, embarrassing the existing government, and disturbing the peace, and destroying the prosperity of the country. The utter absence of all serious religion and sound morality from the mass of the people, and the absolute demoralization of the leading men of the country, render the prospects of Mexico dark in the extreme.

The Reason Why. A little fellow came running into the house exclaiming, "Oh! sister Mary, I've such a pretty thing. It's a piece of glass, and it's all red. When I look through it everything looks red too, the trees, houses, green grass, and your face, and even your blue eyes."

"Yes, John," replied Mary, "It is very beautiful; and let me show you that you can learn a useful lesson from this pretty thing. You remember the other day you thought everybody was cross to you. You said father, mother and I were all the time finding fault with you. Now you were like this piece of glass, which makes every thing red, because it is red. You were cross, so you thought everybody around you was cross too. But when you get up in the morning in a good humor, loving and helping everybody, they too will seem kind and loving toward you. Now remember, brother, and always be what you wish others to be—kind, gentle, loving; and they, seen through the beautiful color of your disposition, will seem more beautiful than ever."

Luther's two Miracles. On the 5th August, 1530, an awful crisis for the Reformation, when the firmest seemed to swerve and the boldest to tremble, Luther wrote thus to Chancellor Bruch: "I have recently witnessed two miracles. This is the first: As I was at my window, I saw the stars and the sky, and that vast and magnificent firmament in which the Lord has placed them. I could nowhere discover the columns on which the Master has supported this immense vault, and yet the heavens did not fall.

And here is the second: I beheld thick clouds hanging above us like a vast sea. I could neither perceive ground on which they reposed, nor cords by which they were suspended; and yet they did not fall upon us, but saluted us rapidly and fled away."

These miracles, as Luther called them, filled him with unconquerable trust and joy in God. Well they might So may they us. We see them wrought before us every night and every day.

Singular Meteor. An unusual and extraordinary atmospheric phenomenon was witnessed in Southampton on Monday afternoon, the 7th inst., shortly before five o'clock. A huge red substance, commonly known as a fire ball, was seen to burst about 25 degrees above the horizon, in a south-west direction, and immediately fell with immense rapidity to the earth. The sky was quite cloudless, which rendered the effect very beautiful and peculiar. The light exhibited was so great that many persons who were busily engaged in their indoor business avocations were thereby attracted. For some time after the ball had disappeared an immense pillar of fire floated in the heavens, which afterwards dissolved itself in a great cloud of light, floating matter, resembling the tail of a gigantic comet, and gradually dispersed, being wafted by the wind in a northerly direction.

From Santa Fe and the Plains St Louis, Jan. 25. A fight had occurred between the Capote Indians and the Mormons, provoked by an attempt of the latter to drive the former off of their own lands. Several Mormons were killed, and much property taken.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 13th, Joanna, wife of Br. Freeman Flanders, aged 47 years.

Sister F had been sick for a long time, and gradually wasting away by consumption. A few days previous to her death, her mind that had been somewhat beclouded seemed to enjoy more confidence; and as I interrogated her with respect to her approaching dissolution, she exclaimed, "I have a good hope through Grace." She now sleeps in Jesus, waiting for the return of the Great Lifegiver—then that wasted, emaciated form we trust will awake from the dust of the earth, wearing the image of the heavenly. May this truly solemn and afflictive providence impress those daughters who now miss a fond, affectionate and loving mother from their midst, with the necessity of being ready to meet her in the resurrection morning; and may God grant his blessing on our Br. who now feels the loss of a bosom companion.

O come, thou lifegiver—the loving and the loved of earth are falling around like leaves of Autumn The Angel of Death is severing the fondest ties. O come—let the trumpet sound; give us back our loved ones. The tears course thick and fast down our faces as we think of our own tender, innocent, sweet babes, nipped by the monster, and locked in the portals of the gloomy grave. Thank God, the dead shall soon hear the voice of him who is the resurrection and life. O how blessed to feel the resurrection near, our lives in Christ concealed. Thy kingdom come, Amen. [Will the Reformer please copy.

Lawrence, Mass. S. S. BR.

Died in Holden, Mass., Nov. 25th, Br. Willard R. Fairbanks, aged 30 years.

Br. Fairbanks died of that flattering disease, consumption, which has baffled the skill of all physicians. But he was not insensible of his approaching end. He spoke of it with calmness and resignation, and rejoiced in the hope of Christ's speedy return to awake the sleeping dead. S. A.

Died in Plymouth Hollow, Ct., Dec. 27th, 1855, Br. Randall Warner, in the 41st year of his age.

He has left a wife and five children to mourn the loss of an affectionate husband and father.

About one year since Br. W. became interested in the Advent doctrine, which proved a great blessing to himself and companion. Both were connected with the Congregational Church in that place for a number of years; but on hearing the good news of the reign of Christ at hand, they renewed their covenant, and were so much blessed by the witness of the Spirit, they could say with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

I presume our dear Br. and Sr. Brewer well recollect their first visit to this poor invalid in company with myself and husband. Well, the instruction then given, I trust was not lost. Br. W. was never able to attend more than one Advent meeting. I presume Brn. Boutelle and Grant recollect speaking last spring in the schoolhouse near the residence of this dear Br. He then ventured to go, although very feeble. We visited him soon after, and well do I recollect the pleasure and animation that beamed from his countenance as he recounted the sayings of that meeting, so replete with interest to those who love the nearness of the kingdom, and to walk the narrow path that leads there.

Though that fell destroyer consumption many years since cut off the means of support which the helpless family surrounding him needed—and although suffering great pain and weakness of body, he was uniformly cheerful, enjoying the society and conversation of Christian friends until a few weeks before his death, when his sufferings became so intense that he conversed but little. In the depth of anguish he would raise his eyes to heaven and implore his Heavenly Father to "be with them," and then with a confident recollection repeated—"He has been with us," and with a faith that did not shrink, added, "He will be," &c. Then turning to his wife whom he regarded with the fondest affection, he said, "do not weep;" and with the spirit that characterized our Savior in the garden of Gethsemane said, "The will of God be done."

A large concourse of people attended his funeral, when he was interred on a spot selected by himself near his own residence. "Sweet be thy rest," dear Brother,

——"Till He bid thee arise
To hail Him in triumph descending the skies."

B. MATHEWSON.

Died in Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 7, 1856, of typhoid fever, Eld. Charles Crawford, Jr., aged 30 years.

Bro. Crawford has been a faithful preacher in the Advent cause for a number of years.—Three years ago last August he moved to this place from near Fredonia, N. Y. He came here for the first time about ten months previous to that. This was the first preaching on the Advent doctrines we had ever enjoyed. A few of us, however, by searching the Bible, had become settled in the Advent faith; but through the labors of bro. Crawford a society has been raised up here that have erected a large meeting-house, got it inclosed although not quite finished, and he has a large circle of friends here to mourn his loss. I cannot express the sorrow of heart we feel at this bereavement; but he died as he had preached, in full faith of the Lord's immediate coming to reward every man according to his works. He exhorted all to get ready for the coming of the Son of man, and the last night he exhorted, prayed and sung, and then fell asleep in Jesus to be waked on the morn of the resurrection. His father was here and removed him to his former residence, where his remains were deposited. I can say of bro. Crawford,—

"Thou art gone to the grave; but we will not deplore thee,
Though sorrows and darkness encompass the tomb;
For the Saviour has passed through its portals before thee;
The lamp of his love is thy guide through the gloom.

"Thou art gone to the grave—we no longer behold thee,
Nor tread the rough path of the world by thy side;
But the wide arms of mercy are spread to enfold thee,
And sinners may hope since the Saviour hath died.

"Thou art gone to the grave—but 'twere wrong to deplore thee,
When God was thy ransom, thy guardian, thy guide;
He gave thee, he took thee, and soon he'll restore thee,
Where death has no sting since the Saviour has

Died in Blooming Valley, Pa., Jan. 13, 1856, Cynthia Crawford, wife of Eld. Charles Crawford, jr., of typhoid fever, aged 32 years.

Sr. Crawford has been a devoted Christian for many years, and firm in the faith that the Lord will soon appear in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory, to judge the world in righteousness, when she expected to receive her reward She has left four orphan children, and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. Her remains were conveyed near to Fredonia, N. Y., where her funeral was attended, Jan 16, and an appropriate discourse was preached by bro. Low, of Fredonia, from Job. 14: 14,—"If a man die shall he live again?" She was then interred by the side of her husband, to wait until the last trump shall sound, when we believe they will be raised to immortal life.

WM. G. DAVISON.

Died in Venango, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 17, 1856, Cassius Davison, only son of Sillick and Mary A. Davison, and grandson of the subscriber, aged 7 weeks.

"How long shall death the tyrant reign,
And triumph o'er the just."

WM. G. DAVISON.

Appointments.

The Lord willing, O. D. GIBSON will meet with the church in Ashfield, as Br. Pulcifer shall appoint, Sunday, Feb. 10.

Ware, Mass., Jan. 26th, 1856.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the Brn. at Lee, N. H, Sunday, Feb. 10th, where br. Durgin may appoint.

Northwood Narrows, Wednesday, Feb. 13th, at 6 o'clock in the eve, where br. Watson may appoint, and stop a day or two if thought best.

BENJ. P. MANNING.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brn. in the following places:

North Adams, Wednesday eve, Feb. 13th.
Cheshire, Thursday eve, Feb. 14th.
New Lebanon, N. Y., Saturday and Sunday evenings, Feb. 16th and 17th.

HARRISON McCULLOCH.

By permission of Providence I will meet the Church in Springfield, Sunday, Feb. 3d.

Westfield, eve, Feb. 5th.
North Canton, eve, Feb. 7th.
Canton, eve, Feb. 8th.
Collinsville, Sunday, Feb. 10th.
Bakersville, eve, Feb. 12th.
Newfield, eve, Feb. 14th.
Litchfield, eve, Feb. 15th.
Plymouth Hollow, Sunday, Feb. 17th.
Waterbury, eve, 19th and 20th.
Bristol, Luther Tuttle's, 22d.
Bristol, Sunday, 24th.
Cheshire, eve, 27th and 28th.
New Britain, Sunday, March 2d.
Hartford, eve, March 4th.
Windsor, eve, March 5th.
Warehousepoint, eve, March 6th.
Scittico, eve, March 7th.
Springfield, Sunday, March 9th.

A. M. HIGGINS.

The Lord willing, I will be at the following places to preach the word.

Madison, Me., Feb, 2d and 3d.
Searsport, Feb. 9th and 10th.
Newburgh, Feb. 12th.
Bangor, Feb 13th.
Edington Bend, Feb. 14th.
Oldtown, Feb. 15th, 16th, and 17th.
Orrington, Feb. 23d and 24th.

A. ROSS.

The Lord willing, I may be expected to administer the word of life as follows.

Concord, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 3d.
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 10th.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Feb. 17th.
Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 24th.

S. S. BREWER.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at
Freeport, Feb. 3d.
Brunswick, Feb. 10th.

R. R. YORK.

By Divine permission, I will preach at Charlemont, Mass., Sunday, Feb. 3d.

W. SHELDON.

God willing, I will preach in The Advent Chapel, in Danville, Canada East, the two last Sabbaths in February, and in the vicinity, during the week, as the friends may arrange. I hope to see many of my former friends.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

The Lord willing, I will lecture at Bridgeport, Me., Jan. 30th.
Falmouth, Me., Jan. 31.

L. L. HOWARD.

☞ There is some mistake in the above appointments, but we give them as written, not knowing how to correct them.

By Divine permission, I will try to fill the appointments I lately withdrew, as follows.

Warwick, or Appanagg, Jan. 30th and 31st, Wednesday and Thursday, where Br. J. B. Wait may appoint.
Layfayette, Friday, Feb. 1st.
Peace Dale, Saturday and Sunday Feb. 2d and 3d.
Fair Haven, Ct., Monday, Feb. 4th.
Bridgeport, Tuesday, Feb 5th.
Waterbury, Wednesday, Feb. 6th.
Bristol, Thursday, Feb. 7th.
Friday, Saturday and Sunday, as Providence may direct.

If any of the above appointments conflict with others, please inform me by letter in season to alter my course.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th ch.'s of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts, postage 6 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell,

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts "	3 " "
Future Pnuishment, by Grew,	2 cts "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 cts "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
Voice of the Church $1	"	9 " doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.

Address orders with the cash to, ...

☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and by O. Hart, Concord, N. H., and D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

Br S. B. Munn's P. O. Address is Bridgeport, Ct.

A M Stark: we have not received any of Sr. Seymour's pamphlet for sale.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is Russell's Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

J Morse, N Latimer, J L Bassett, M Dodge, W Welch, J S Buswell, B L Clark, G West, F Flanders, J Q Moulton, E G Emmons, S Case, B P Manning, N Davidson, Z Boyce, S Fegan, M A Hodgdon, J A Stillman, A Avery, M B Potter, A Crabtree, J Blake, J Grover, $1 each. M Whiting, $2

H G Pote, T Cates, H Hoatland, E Hodges, S B Munn, C Bulckley, C W Hodges, M C Ladd, 50 cents each. A Cummings, 25 cts.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

N S Harris, $1; G T Adams, $1,50. Whole amount, $47,04.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, CORNER OF MOODY AND AUSTIN STREETS, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have myself proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public. ED.

For the Crisis.

An Apostrophe.

By S. S. Brewer.

Far, far in ages long since past,
A heavenly bark set sail,
Her banner floating at top mast,
Before an angry gale;
In kindness, innocence and love,
Her captain did excel,
Fairest 'mid all the hosts above,
As facts conspire to tell.

At Bethlehem in Palestine,
Upon a certain night
While shepherds watched, a light did shine
Around, exceeding bright;
"Fear not, (an Angel said,) behold!
Good tidings do I bring!
The Savior's come, so long foretold,
The promised Lord and King!

He, unto you is born this day,
And this shall be a sign,
To David's city haste away,
You there the babe will find;
In swaddling clothes His form is robed,
A manger is His bed!"
And there the Just and Holy One
First laid His sinless head!

Old Simeon, who had waited long,
Is gladdened with the sight,
The glory of the Prophet's song,
The Gentiles' rising light.
He went about, the poor to bless,
To dry the falling tear,
'Mid scenes of sickness and distress,
Afflicted hearts to cheer.

A Man of sorrows here below,
A suffering life He trod,
He wept at human grief and woe—
Meek, lowly Lamb of God!
Too pure and holy for this world,
'Mid envy, pride and strife,
The shafts of vengeance soon were hurled,
To take away His life.

Upon the cross, on Calvary,
Behold Him crucified;
There, crowned with thorns, in agony
The spotless victim died.
But then the star of Bethlehem rose,
And then He triumphed o'er His foes,
His griefs and pains all o'er.

Fair Zion's bark has had to sail
Through seas of purple gore;
But with God's help she will prevail,
And reach bright Canaan's shore;
She's homeward bound before the wind,
The highlands are in sight,
She's left the world and pride behind,
To gain that realm of light.

The land breeze freshens, and she nears
Her port of destiny,
Fair Salem, with its walls, appears,
In all sublimity;
Far—far extend fair Eden's plains
In vernal beauty clad,
There Christ, the Son of Jesse, reigns,
And every heart is glad.

There—there unnumbered millions stand,
In garments pure and white,
With palms of victory in their hands,
And crowns of dazzling light;
Hark! hear what music floats along
Upon the balmy air;
List to the loud, triumphant song,
Which ravishes the ear!

Fair Land! ere long, upon thy height
I do expect to tread,
And share in all thy glory bright,
With Christ, my living Head;
Thy blissful groves and vernal plains,
Thy mountains tinged with gold,
Where Christ the King in beauty reigns,
Mine eyes shall soon behold!

Thy smiling vales and fragrant bowers,
Each crystal stream and rill,
Upon whose banks the blooming flowers
The air with odour fill.
Come, Savior! let the trumpet sound,
Our home we long to see,
Come, raise the saints from under ground, ring Immortality!

Lawrence, Mass.

For The Crisis.

The First Resurrection.

By S. Ayers.

I have shown you I think, in a previous article, that there will be a GENERAL resurrection of all the dead from their graves at the coming of Christ.

Having still continued to obey the injunction of our Savior to "search the Scriptures," expecting that, according to His gracious promise the spirit of truth—God's only interpreter—will guide in the way of all truth, I will, with your permission give a few thoughts on the first resurrection.

A resurrection implies a resuscitation, or bringing back to life. Nothing is more plainly taught in Scripture than two resurrections. The character of the one is plainly declared, that of the other is left to be inferred from attending circumstances, and only to be understood by comparing Scripture with Scripture." As every tree is known by its own fruit, we may undoubtedly learn something of the first resurrection from its effects or results.—We are told, in the first place "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; for on such the second death has no power." So it would seem that he that hath this part is blessed and made holy. This must take place before the coming of Christ; for "without holiness no man shall see the Lord;" and besides, we must be presented "without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing." How can we be thus purified, and made holy, except it be by the blood of Christ which cleanseth from all sin? Since holiness is the fruit of the first resurrection, that resurrection must be the application of a Savior's blood. Again: Jesus says, John 6: 53, 54, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life. Here is presented the eating of Christ's flesh, and the drinking His blood, as the only means by which we may pass from a state of death unto life, which implies certainly a resurrection; and as the 54th v. above quoted, shows that this preceeds the resurrection of the last day, it must be the first resurrection.

Again: He that hath part in the first resurrection, is secured from the second death; for "on such the second death has no power." How are we taught to escape this death except by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ? Christ himself declares: "I am the resurrection and the life; and he that liveth and believeth on me shall never die." Here the righteousness which is of God by faith is presented as the means of escape from the second death, and as this righteousness must be obtained before the last great trump shall sound to wake the sleeping dead, it must be the first resurrection.

The Apostle John declares "we know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." Now as we cannot for a moment suppose him to be deceived, he must have already attained unto a resurrection; and as he had not been raised from the grave, having never been dead, but only had Christ formed within the hope of glory, that must have been the first resurrection.

Again: We have the Apostle James asserting, "Of his own will begat he us by the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures."—Since then being begotten by the word of truth makes us a kind of first fruits, (not the first fruits of the grave, for Christ is the first fruits of them that slept,) and since Jesus says, "the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life," the Apostle James must evidently teach a resurrection in this life which must be called the first.

Finally: we hear the commanding voice of Scripture saying, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." In John 8: 12, this light is called the light of life.—Here, too, Christ is represented as the Giver of life to the dead in this present world; and as this constitutes a resurrection, it must be the first resurrection.—Hence we see that when Christ says "I am the resurrection," He declares His two fold powers, viz., to raise the dead in trespasses and sins, and make them alive unto God now, and to raise all the dead from their graves hereafter; thus clearly defining the first and general resurrections.

Now since "blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection," let us hold fast whereunto we have already attained. Let us walk by the same rule—let us mind the same things—let us follow on, that we may apprehend that for which also we are apprehended by Christ—let us know nothing save Jesus Christ, and him crucified—let us go on unto perfection that we may share a part with those of whom Paul says, "they were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection."

Worcester, Dec. 23, 1855.

For The Crisis.

To Lukewarm Christians.

By W. Sheldon.

"I would that thou wert cold or hot." Rev. 3 15.

Lukewarm Christians occupy emphatically the worst position. They deceive themselves with dreams of future felicity, while, in reality, they are only stumbling-blocks to unbelievers, and destined ultimately to be spewed out of Jehovah's mouth. God would rather see us cold than lukewarm.

O! thou lukewarm soul, arouse thee from this deceptive spell of indifference, before the Archangel's voice shall salute thine ear, and pierce thy soul with bitter anguish, hopeless despondency and remorse! Arouse thee, thou careless one, and work out thy salvation "with fear and trembling," while mercy is generously proffered to you upon the terms of the Gospel; for thine everlasting welfare turns upon the wise improvement of the present rapidly fleeting moments of probationary time!

O! arouse thee, thou lukewarm Christian! Eternal life is pending! thou hast interests at stake as boundless as eternity. Canst thou longer remain secure while the "great day of God Almighty" is so near? Art thou willing to turn thy back upon thy best friend, and "crucify to thyself the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame," by becoming dilatory in His precious cause? Art thou willing to be captivated by the shrewd devices of the Devil, and ensnared by his plausible art of leading thee astray, degree by degree, almost unperceived, until thou art emphatically clad with a garment of intolerable indifference, and impenetrable stupor? Canst thou, after once having tasted the sweets of redeeming love, now consent to be allured from the cause of thy Redeemer, by the deceptive charms of this transitory world? Canst thou now consent to be blindfolded by Satan, and stray from the pleasant paths of peace, righteousness, virtue and rectitude, and wander from the fold of Christ? Canst thou satiate thy thirst in sipping the stupifying contents of that lukewarm cup? Wilt thou forfeit thy claim to the "crown," the "palm," the "harp," the "white robe," and the endless realities of a future Paradise?

Lukewarm Christian, if thou hast one lingering desire to obtain a passport into the realms of endless felicity—if thy once high raised anxieties are not utterly paralyzed—make no delay in retracing your steps, and re-enlisting in the delightful service of the Redeemer. Henceforth guard against that stagnating, and piety-depressing element lukewarmness! It is the Christian's greatest enemy, in disguise.

Are we lukewarm? Are we merely theoretical Christians? Are we reducing the precepts and principles of the Gospel to practice in our lives? Are the Christian graces abounding in us? Are we loving each other with "pure hearts fervently?" Are we "hungering and thirsting after righteousness?" Are we aspiring after the "mind of Christ?" Are we keeping ourselves "unspotted from the world?" Are we growing in grace?—Are we striving to build each other up? Are we fervently exhorting each other, as we near our destination? Are we living praying lives? Are we abiding in the vine? Are we doing the "will of our Father in heaven," in every respect?

We must possess vital godliness, if we are saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. An artificial Christianity will then be unavailing. Neither the "cold" nor "lukewarm" class will then be approved. "It is good always to be zealously affected in a good cause." May we ever possess an understanding zeal in the discharge of our duties.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. M. K. Heath.

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 17, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—As I take my pen, I am aware, in some measure, of your trying position as Editor, and would rather be a helper of your joy, if possible, than add to your many perplexities.

We have a mixture of sorrow and rejoicing in this world, and at times a little acquaintance with grief—hardly worth remembering, when we reflect on the suffering of the Man of sorrows, view Him in the garden of Gethsemane, as He passes up Calvary's mountain, and behold Him on the Cross. For us His precious blood was shed on the cross, on the cross.—Truly,

"Amazing pity, grace unknown,
And love beyond degree!"

In view of the change that will be realized so suddenly, when our Lord will appear in the clouds of heaven, to the joy and admiration of His people, and to the lamentation and destruction of His enemies, as I prize the gift of Eternal life through Him in the Kingdom to come, the Christian's peaceful, happy home, I desire to live with you there, Brn. and Srs. As I view developments on the right hand and on the left, perilous seasons characteristic of the last days, which render the Christian voyage so dangerous, as they are about to enter the haven of eternal rest, I think it not strange that the great Pilot wise, He who saw the end from the beginning, has given some admonition to His people, to take heed and beware.

In view of this subject, I am inclined more and more to cling to the inspired word, and that Spirit with which it agrees, to exhort my Brn. and Srs. to do the same, and invite my poor fellow men to repent and be converted, that their sins may be blotted out. Yes, beloved; how diligent we need to be to make our calling and election sure; as Peter says, 2 Pet. 1: 5–11, "giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity, (love.) For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.—Wherefore the rather. brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall; For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

Says Paul, Heb. 10: 24, 25, "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works. Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."

Some at the present time seem to think they are quite excusable for absenting themselves from worship on account of being few in number, or not having such preaching as they would like; but our Lord's promise does not fail to two or three, where they gather together in His name. Some seem quite content to withhold their exhortations from each other, which I think tendeth to poverty. I appreciate the counsel, "buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich, and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve that thou mayest see."

Brn. and Srs., I hope we shall discern between Gospel ordinances, and good works, which our Lord has enjoined upon His followers, giving them an example of meekness and lowliness. I believe the teachings of our Lord and His Apostle harmonize, and that He does not impose on His followers as an ordinance, that which His Apostle classes with good works, or Christian qualifications, to be diligently attended to as need might require. See 1 Tim. 5: 10.

There are some sheep and lambs in this place to be fed, and some who have ears to hear the truth. We were made glad and encouraged a few weeks ago, on account of the conversion of a profanely wicked man, who lives a short distance from us. For two successive nights he found no repose. The wicked course of his life was continually present to his mind. The third night he retired to rest, but still could not sleep. He realized his awful condition, and believed the Lord was calling him for the last time; but being impressed to rise from his bed and call on the name of the Lord, he obeyed, and found relief from his burden. The Advent meeting is now his meeting, and the coming of the Lord, he loves. Truly, if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Amen.

M. K. Heath.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. C. Blanchard.

Gaysville, Vt. Dec. 23d, 1855.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I want to tell you how thankful I am to God and to you for the privilege of reading the Crisis, which I should not enjoy were it not for the influence of a kind friend, and the charity of kind-hearted Brn. I am one of that company of poor, despised travelers that seem in the eyes of the world to be destitute of the common bounties of life. But

"I'm of boundless wealth possessed,
With hidden manna fed."

I am the child of a King, and believe that King will soon come to earth to take vengeance on them that know not God and obey not His voice. He will also call home His weary ones to rest.

O if Sr. Philena Marden could know with what emotion it filled my lonely heart to read what she wrote about her mother, she would not again hesitate to cast in her mite, as it seemed to her, but to me it was a large amount. I too had a mother that watched over me through long years of sickness. She would often pray, even while engaged in her domestic duties, I have heard her pray that my life might be spared. She taught me to put all my trust in the mighty arm of God, and I thank God to-day for such a mother. Although her body is mouldering in the dust, yet it will soon be raised incorruptible, blooming in immortal youth, and so will she forever be with the Lord. It is my desire so to live, speak and act in this life, that when our Savior comes, I shall not be a cast-away, but be received into the Kingdom, to dwell with all the sanctified ones where all tears shall be wiped from every eye.

To the afflicted children of God I would say, hold on to the promises laid down in the Bible; for they cannot fail. Although the times have passed by that men have set, be assured God's time has not yet come.

I believe that all who love God and bear the fruits of the Spirit, will surely reap life everlasting; and who shall separate us from the love of Christ? As our good brother Paul wrote to the Romans, "I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." "Who then is he that condemneth? or who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth, and if God be for us, who can be against us?"

I am determined, God being my helper, to stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made me free, and I intend to continue instant in prayer, as long as I stay upon mortal shores; and I hope my Brn. and Srs. will not get discouraged, but love God and pray always, trusting in the mighty arm of Christ that is able and willing to save to the uttermost all who put their trust in Him. Jesus "lifted up His eyes on His disciples and said, Blessed be ye poor; for yours is the kingdom of God."

I have written much more than I at first intended; but my heart is so full, I scarcely know where to stop.

Yours, in bonds of Christian love, hoping for redemption soon.

Celestia Blanchard.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. M. A. Cotton.

Pittsfield, Mass. Jan. 13th, 1856.

To the little company:—As we look over the Chirstian world, we find thousands professing to follow Jesus; but how few are, in reality walking in His footsteps, living out His principles, obeying His commands. There are a few, however, who are striving to obtain the promise, who love to obey; and although the world despise them, it does so, not appreciating their true value. The wicked forget that the righteous are the salt of the earth—a city set on an hill—a light which shineth in darkness. Although few in number remember there is strength in union. It was the few who fought the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill. Leonidas, with his three-hundred Spartans, withstood Xerxes with his thousands at Thermopylæ. The most brilliant victories achieved by earthly kings, have been on the side of the few. Likewise in Bible history, God always chose the few. See Gideon's victory over the Midianites.

Jesus came into the world in the most humble manner, chose twelve fishermen for His disciples. The true Church has always been in the minority. In whatever age of the world it has existed, it has always been the little company. But when they come to Mount Zion with songs, it will be an innumerable company.—Then let not the gloom of despair retard your progress; but ever keep your eye on the great good and the bright glory, which will accrue from your success.—And instead of despising those who do evil, seek by kindness to win them back to virtue's path. Throw around them the arms of your love—lead them to wisdom's fountain—bid them drink of its healing waters. Point them to the beauties of that better world; and oh teach them to live holy, to obey Christ, that they may inherit it.

Marion A. Cotton.

For The Crisis.

From Sr. N. M. Henry.

Blandford, Mass., Jan. 15, 1856.

Dear Brn. and Srs. of our Father's loving family: It is with a heart full to overflowing, that I seat myself to address you, feeling that what I have to say will not be read without a generous response. I have just learned the particulars concerning the distressed situation of one of our Advent Sisters. Alone in a dilapidated building, destitute alike of food, clothing and fuel, only such as is given her in charity—deserted by her husband some sixteen months ago, (at that time with an infant of only three weeks, beside three others,) is our Sr.

Srs., let me appeal to you. You who are mothers, think of that mother, suffering and feeble, as I know her to be, gathering her little ones to her loving heart, and shedding over them the scalding tears of a mother's love. Those "birdlings," how can she send them from her loving arms out into the cold, unfeeling world? Says one, "I have nothing to give; it is all I can do to support my own." Have you forgotten, Br. or Sr., that "pure and undefiled religion is to visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction?"—"Whoso giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord," and "I will recompense them at the last day." Give as the Lord has given you. Cannot our Brn. in the ministry collect something in her behalf? Perhaps Br. H. Pratt will remember my taking up a collection at the Springfield Tent Meeting, for a destitute sister, this is the same individual. Come, Brn. and Srs., come to her help, and make that worse than widowed heart sing for joy.

Her address is, Mrs. Julia Bates, Chester Factories, Mass., Care of Ira Webster.

Yours, in the bonds of Christian love,

N. M. Henry.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br J. T. Ongley.

Syracuse, N. Y, Jan. 20th, '56.

Dear Br. Merriam:—Just returned from from my appointment, about eight miles from this place. The good Lord is working in the hearts of believers in that neighborhood. They have not had any Advent preaching there since '44. I have been there twice. The enemy is aroused—Pilate and Herod have become friends; but the few that have been slumbering and sleeping came out and confessed their faults, and formed the resolution to arise and make the preparation for an entrance into the Kingdom of God, and try to gain others by their precept and example. We also witnessed the sighs and penetential tears of others.

If these few lines should meet the eye of others under similar circumstances, I would say, arise, confess your faults one to another and to God. Visit that long-neglected closet, and the God of heaven will hear and answer to the joy of your hearts.

To the praying ones I would say, hold on; He has promised to hear those that call on Him in faith.

The domination of the Beastly governments of earth has about ended. Soon Jesus will be seen descending the pathway of cloud, having on His thigh written, "King of kings, and Lord of Lords."—Who will be ready to hail Him as their descending Lord? May the Lord help us that have professed His name, and to be waiting for His coming, to have on the whole armor and be in full preparation for His appearing, is the prayer of your unworthy Br. in Christ,

John T. Ongley.

We cut the following excellent remarks from that matchless book, "The Voice of the Church."

Rutherford.

"Samuel Rutherford was Professor of Divinity at St. Andrews, in Scotland, 1643, and he and Bailee were styled "the greatest lights of their day." In his "Letters" he constantly refers to the nearness of Christ's day in language like the following: "Indeed our fair morning is at hand, the day-star is near the rising, and we are not many miles from home.'

* * * *

He says:—"The Lord hath told you what ye should be doing till He come; wait and hasten saith Peter, for the coming of your Lord. All is night that is here, in respect of ignorance and daily ensuing troubles, one always making way to another as the ninth wave of the sea to the tenth; therefore, sigh and long for the dawning of that morning, and the breaking of that day of the coming of the Son of Man, when the shadows shall flee away. Persuade yourself that the King is coming. Read His letter sent before Him, Rev. 22: 20, "Behold I come quickly." Wait with the wearied night-watch, for the breaking of the eastern sky, and think that ye have not a morrow; as the wise father said, who being invited against tomorrow to dine with his friends, answered, 'These many days I have had no morrow at all.' "

* * * *

"O day, dawn! O Bridegroom, post, post fast, that we may meet! O, Heavens, cleave in two, that that bright face and head may set itself through the clouds! Oh, that the corn were ripe, and this world prepared for his sickle.

"The wife of youth, that wants her husband some years, and expects he shall return to her from over sea lands, is often on the shore; every ship coming near shore is her new joy; her heart loves the wind that shall bring him home. She asks at every passenger news, O, saw ye my husband? What is he doing?—When shall he come? Is he shipped for a return? Every ship that carrieth not her husband is the breaking of her heart.

"The bush hath been burning above five thousand years, and we never yet saw the ashes of this fire. He cannot fail to bring judgment to victory. O, that we could wait for our hidden life! O that Christ would remove the covering, draw aside the curtain of time, and rend the heavens, and come down! O, that He who feedeth among the lilies would cry to His heavenly trumpeters, 'make ready, let us go down and fold together the four corners of the world, and marry the bride!' "

"Rutherford was born about 1600, and died in 1661, a saint of blessed memories."

"As the rays of the sun, notwithstanding their velocity, injure not the eye by reason of their minuteness, so the attacks of envy, notwithstanding their number, ought not to wound our virtue, by reason of their insignificance."

"Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, (COURIER BUILDING,) | ISSUED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NO. 27 CENTRAL STREET (UP STAIRS.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. | LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1856. | VOLUME 2.—NUMBER 26.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE SPEEDY COMING OF JESUS CHRIST.

S. J. VARNEY, Printer, . . 27 Central St.

TERMS of Subscription to be PAID in ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months,	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months,	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months,	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months,	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	14,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	18,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Lowell, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publications write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelop.

For The Crisis.

'I will bring distress upon men; and they shall walk like blind men.' Bible.

BY S. S. B.

No. 9.

ROME. The Romish Church—Its wealth, and nonsensical mummery.

The almost incredible amount of wealth of this Church induces me to present a few extracts from different sources which will correspond with the description the Revelator presents in the xviii chapter:

"And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication."

OF THEIR MASSES.

"As in the Romish church are several festivals, viz. those of our Savior Christ, Christmas, Circumcision, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Penticostes, and Transfiguration: Those of the Holy Cross; those of the blessed Virgin Mary; those of the angels, apostles, martyrs, confessors, virgins, &c. So there are several sorts of ornaments, and of divers colors; white for all the festivals of Jesus Christ, except penticostes, in which the ornaments are red; white also for the festivals of the Virgin Mary, confessors, and virgins; red for martyrs; violet color for advent and lent; and black for the masses of the dead.

"The same rule is observed in the front of the altar's table, or ara altaris, which are always adorned with hangings the color of the day's festivals. In every parish church and convent, there are many ornaments of each of the said colors, all of the richest silks, with silver, gold and embroidery. There are many long cloaks or palia of all sorts of colors, several dozens of alvas, or surplices of the finest holland, with the finest laces round about them, chalice of silver, the inside of the cup gilt, many of gold set with diamonds and precious stones There is one in the cathedral of St. Salvator, in the city of Saragossa, which weighs five pounds of gold, set all over with diamonds, and is valued at 15,000 crowns, and this is not accounted an extraordinary one.

"A possenet of silver, gilt all over, to keep the holy water and hyssop, with a silver handle, to be used in holy days at church, is an indispensable thing almost in every church: as also two big candlesticks four feet high, for the two accolits or assistants to the great mass. In several churches there are two ciriales, i. e. big candlesticks five feet high all of silver; which weigh two hundred pounds in some churches, and another bigger than these for the blessed candle on candlemas day. Six other middle silver candlesticks, which serve on the ara or altar's table, silver, and (in many churches) gold bottles and plate to keep the water and wine that is used in the mass, a small silver bell for the same use, an incensary, and stand for the missal or mass-book, and another stand of silver two feet high, for the deacon and sub-deacon to read on it the epistle and gospel.

"There is also in the great altar, the custodia, i. e. a figure of the sun and beams made of gold, and many of them set with precious stones to keep in the centre of it the great consecrated host, in the middle of two crystals: The foot of the custodia is made of the same metal; it is kept in a gilt tabernacle, and shown to the people on several occasions, as I will mention in another place.

"Besides this rich custodia, there is a large silver or gold cup kept in the same, or another tabernacle on another altar, which is to keep the small consecrated wafers for the communicants. Before those tabernacles a silver lamp is burning night and day. The altars are adorned on several festivals with the silver bodies of several saints, some as large as a man, some half bodies with crowns or mitres set with precious stones.

"In the Cathedral church of St. Salvator, there are forty-five prebendaries, besides the dean, arch-deacon, chanter, and sixty-six beneficiates, six priests and a master, and twelve boys for the music, and sixty clerks and under clerks, and sextons.—The church contains thirty chapels, large and small, and the great altar, thirty feet high and ten broad, all of marble stone, with many bodies of saints of the same, and in the middle of it the transfiguration of our Saviour in the mount Tabor, with the apostles all represented in marble figures. The front of the altar's table is made of solid silver, the frame gilt, and adorned with precious stones. In the treasure of the church they keep sixteen bodies of saints of pure silver among which, that of St. Peter Argues, (who was a prebendary in the same church, and was murdered by the Saracens,) is adorned with rich stones of a great value. Besides these they keep twelve half silver bodies of other saints, and many relics set with gold and diamonds. Forty-eight silver candlesticks for the altar's table, two large ones, and the third for the blessed candle, 300 pound weight each: thirty-six small silver candlesticks; and six made of solid gold for the great festivals. Four possenets of silver, two of solid gold, with the handles of hysops of the same. Two large crosses, one of silver, the other of gold, ten feet high, to carry before the processions. Ten thousand ounces of silver in plate part of gilt, to adorn the two corners of the altar on great festivals, and when the archbishop officiates, and says the great mass. Thirty-three silver lamps, of which the smallest is an hundred and fifty pounds weight, and the largest, which is before the great altar, gilt all over, is six hundred and thirty pounds weight. Abundance of rich ornaments for priests, of inexpressible value. Eighty-four chalices, twenty of pure gold, and sixty-four of silver, gilt on the inside of the cup; and the rich chalice, which only the arch bishop makes use of in his pontificial dress.

"All these things are but trifles in comparison with the great custodia they make use of to carry the great host through the streets on the festival of Corpus Christi: This was a present made to the cathedral by the arch-bishop of Sevil who had been prebendary of that church before. The circumference of the sun and beams is as big as the wheel of a coach; at the end of each beam there is a star. The centre of the sun, where the great host is placed between two crystals, set with large diamonds; the beams are all of solid gold, set with several precious stones, and in the middle of each star, a rich emerald set in gold. The crystal with the great host is fixed in the mouth of the rich chalice, on a pedestal of silver, all gilt over which is three feet high. The whole custodia is five hundred pounds weight; and this is placed on a gilt base, which is carried by twelve priests, as I shall tell you in another article. Several goldsmiths have endeavored to value this piece, but nobody could set a certain sum upon it. One said that a million of pistoles was too little. And how the Archbishop could gather together so many precious stones, every body was suprised at, till we heard that a brother of his grace died in Peru, and left him great sums of money, and a vast quantity of diamonds and precious stones."

The following is from an article published in a N. Y. paper, post-marked, Washington, May 13, 1847:

"The church property of Mexico—A collection of interesting facts and statistics, showing the tremendous mass of wealth of the Church. By an estimate before us, the Church property of Mexico is set down at the following valuation:

Real property in town and country,	$18,000,000
Churches, houses, convents, curates, dwellings, furniture, jewels, precious vessels, &c.,	52,000,000
Floating capital, with other funds,	20,000,000
Total,	$90,000,000

An estimate entirely too small; for Gomez Favias sets down the total value at $160,000,000, which is doubtless nearer the mark. No one, however, pretends to know the value of the coin, jewels and ornaments belonging to the various churches, which has been accumulating ever since the establishment of the Catholic religion; and their real estate has been constantly increasing in amount and value. They own many of the finest houses in the city of Mexico and other cities, (the rents of which must be enormous), besides valuable real estates all over the republic. Almost every person leaves a bequest in his will for masses for his soul, which constitutes an incumbrance upon the estate; and thus nearly all the estates of the small proprietors are mortgaged to the Church. The property held by the Church in mortmain is held at $50,000,000. * * *

"The clergy of Mexico do not, for obvious reasons, desire that their wealth should be made known to its full extent; they are therefore not disposed to give very full information upon the subject, or to exhibit their gold and silver vessels, vases, precious stones, and other forms of wealth.

Annual Salaries.

Archbishop of	Mexico,	$130,000
The Bishop of	Puebla,	110,000
"	Valadolid,	100,000
"	Guadalazara,	90,000
"	Durango,	35,000
"	Monterey,	30 000
"	Yucatan,	20,000
"	Oaxaca,	18,000
"	Sonora,	6,000"

I will close the account with Mexico by presenting a description of the Cathedral of the city of Mexico from the pen of the Hon. Waddy Thompson, late United States Minister to Mexico.

"The Cathedral which occupies the site of the great Idol temple of Montezuma, is five hundred feet long by four hundred and twenty feet wide—(larger than the Capital of the United States.) Like all other Churches in Mexico, it is built in the Gothic style. The walls of several feet thickness, are made of unhewn stone and lime. Upon entering it one is apt to recall the wild pictures of the Arabian Nights. It seems as if the WEALTH OF EMPIRES WAS COLLECTED THERE."

After speaking of the gold, precious stones, vases, vessels, &c., he remarks:

"Quite enough is exhibited to strike the beholder with wonder. The first object that presents itself on entering the Cathedral is the altar near the centre of the building. It is made of highly wrought and polished silver, and cover with a profusion of ornaments of pure gold. On each side of this altar runs a balustrade, enclosing a space of about eight feet wide and eighty or a hundred long. The balusters are about four feet high, and four inches thick in the largest part; the hand rail from six to eight inches wide. Upon the top of this hand rail, at the rate of six or eight feet apart, human images, beautifully wrought, and about a foot high. All of these—the balustrade, hand rail and images, are made of a compound of gold, silver and copper—more valuable than silver. I was told that an offer had been made to take this balustrade, and replace it with another of exactly the same size and workmanship of pure silver and give a million of dollars besides. There is much more of the same balustrade in other parts of the Church. I should think, in all of it, not less than three hundred feet. As you walk through the building on either side there are different apartments, all filled from the floor to the ceiling, with paintings, statues, vases, huge candlesticks, waiters and a thousand other articles, made of gold and silver. This too is only the every day display of articles of least value. The most costly are stowed away in chests and closets.

"What must it be when all these are brought out with the immense quantities of PRECIOUS STONES the Church is known to possess? And this is only one of the churches of the city of Mexico, where there are between sixty and eighty others, and some of them possessing little less wealth than the Cathedral."

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Deliverance Coming.

BY W. C. STONE.

Br. Merriam:—Waiting in this valley of sorrows and trials, I felt a desire to say a few words of comfort to the afflicted Pilgrims scattered abroad. Long have they waited, while their hearts are affected with such spectacles as their eyes behold.—They turn from one scene to behold another of sadness, and with grief they say, alas! the godly man ceaseth even. Who, that looks for evidence of the last days, can fail of seeing the very things that the Prophets and Apostles have foretold should obtain just previous to the setting up of the kingdom? Who wants to hear any truth advanced where a sacrifice is demanded, or a cross is required? "Let it pass," is the echo from the mass, while here and there may be found a humble child who has counted the cost of glory in the kingdom. Having been tempted by the gold, the pride, the fashion, the honor of this world, he turns away from them as so many besetments in his way, and says, "I leave all for a seat in the kingdom." As the value of one rises in his estimation, by so much is the value of the other depressed. He who loves this present world has but little desire for another; and he who has loved the truth and turned away from the cross, proves recreant to the doctrine of Christ's appearing.

But, dear Brn., let us suffer on a little longer, and it will be ours to rejoice. Our hope has been deferred several times, let us try and watch as the Master hath said. I believe he meant watching for his appearing. I had supposed the 2300 years would end in '55, in the spring; but that point has been proved, He did not come; still I look to the coming spring. And why? says one. Well, the host and sanctuary are still trodden down, and at the end of the 2300 years, the wonderful numberer told Daniel that vindication or justice should be rendered.

Some have tried to separate the 70 weeks from the 2300 year vision, of Daniel, 8th ch. I think it is evident they are inseparably connected; for the instructor (Gabriel) commences the 11th chapter with the time when the Persian kingdom was at the height of its power, to give an understanding of the vision, and runs down over the time of 70 weeks of years, and on to the time when Michael is to stand up. Now if it be said that the 70 weeks evidently commence with the 20th year of Artaxerxes reign; but that there is no proof that the 2300 days vision commenced there, I would like to enquire what the instruction of the 11th ch. was given for, if not for way marks of the 2300 years.—It is a fact that many in their reasonings forget the connection that is kept up by the Angel—that the great Beast power was to continue to the end. They seem to have the idea that a space may intervene between the end and the time when Michael begins His reigns. I think that is a mistake; for when the last day comes, then, says the Savior, "I will raise him up at the last day." And that day, as the evidence appears to my mind, will come some time in 1856. That the date of 445 B. C. is the time for the commencement of the vision of the 2300 years, I think looks most certain; for Ptolemy's canon gives 445 B. C. for the 20th year of Artaxerxes' reign, and this canon has been considered for 200 years among chronologers as an uncontested standard. It was drawn from the records of the Chaldean and Egyptian historians, in England, in 1613; and is now considered the most reliable of any. Never did so strong a point appear for "the desire of all nations" to come. But some say it makes Christ too old when he was cut off, to fit in to the determined time of 70 weeks. I think we shall find there is evidence that both John and Christ were older than has been generally supposed from Usher's chronology; for Christ must have been one year old, and perhaps two, when His parents returned with him to Bethlehem from Egypt, which was just after the death of Herod; and it must be kept in mind that Herod's sons had just then been settled in their tetrarchies by their father's will. According to his decree, these were Archelaus, Herod Antipas and Philip. Now keep in mind that John was cast into prison on account of what he said to Herod for marrying his brother Philip's wife. Here is proof that Philip was dead before John was cast into prison. How long it was, after his (Philip's) death, that John reproved Herod, we have no means of knowing; most likely it was soon after. Now Josephus says that Philip reigned 37 years, which makes John at least 38 years old when he reproved Herod Antipas, and which would make Christ of the same age, and gives us the age at which he commenced his ministry. Matt. 4: 12, "Now when Jesus heard that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee;" v. 17, "From that time Jesus began to preach and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." We have the account of three Passovers that He attended, and He must have been 40 years old when He was crucified, in the midst of the week, causing the sacrifice (Jewish) to cease. The remaining part of the week would make 45 years, which ends the time—70 weeks of years—determined upon thy (Daniel's) people. Jesus commands his disciples to "go" only "to the lost sheep of the house of Israel," which they continued to do until the eventful period had arrived; for Paul (Acts 13th chap.) preached to that people (Israel) the sure mercies of David, the promises "fulfilled unto us their children," a risen Saviour, "now no more to return to corruption," which they put from them by envy, blasphemy and contradiction, thus filling up the week. Then if we have 445 full years, B. C., and 45 full years, and 1810 added, the 2300 years will run out this year. This is certainly the clearest light on the Scriptures. I know many were so disappointed last spring that they come almost to the conclusion that they would have nothing more to do with prophetic periods. But were they given in vain? I should hesitate some time before I could take that ground; and yet how many practically do so. Did Gabriel come down by special command of God, to give an understanding of the vision, and give a definite series of facts, and when he spoke of time was he indefinite in this important matter? And yet how many believe it was so. Well, so it will be with the worldling until the great event shall burst upon their astonished vision. O for a preparation to meet the Judge when He shall be seen coming down the parting skies—His face ten thousand suns out-shining, with countless myriads of the Angelic host, to gather in those whom He will call the "the blessed of my Father," to receive their crowns of life and glory.

Oh what a day is rapidly hastening on! that will soon decide the doom of all.—How thankful we should be that God, in His abundant mercy, hath begotten us unto a hope of sharing in the glories of that auspicious day, and joining in the heavenly song, sung as never before. I long to meet you, my Dear Brn. and Srs., with whom I have taken sweet counsel these many years that are past. A little moment—and He will come to relieve us of our sorrows and trials; sickness and death will then be known no more. The sleeping ones will arise and praise the Lord. They, too, shall join the heavenly band. O hasten on the glorious day, when earth shall be filled with gladness, and joy will beam from every countenance.

"Then the mighty, thundering chorus,
As of many waters rise,
Swelling, rising—O, how glorious!
Strains Cherubic fill the skies!
Hallelujah—
Israel's King in glory reigns!"

Boston, Jan. 27, 1856.

For The Crisis.

John.

There is an especial loveliness connected with the character of this beloved disciple of our Lord Jesus, which is not so strikingly observed, in that of his brethren.—They are all the chosen companions and co-laborers of Jesus in his earthly ministry—each is honored, counselled and instructed, but John appears to be especially loved. And to be thus the favored object of the affection of one, whose heart was all purity, gentleness and heavenly-mindedness, we must consider him indeed a vessel of honor in the Temple of God.

When John first saw his Lord he was with his father and brother in a ship mending nets—Jesus called unto them, and immediately John with his brother left all and followed him. He found all his portion in his Lord. He was with Jesus in all his wanderings, teachings, miracles and sorrows; his ear caught the melting accents of love and mercy, which fell from the lips of that Holy One, and found a response in his own loving heart. He was one of the commissioned twelve who were sent forth, bearing the good news of the kingdom at hand, and upon whom was bestowed power to heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, &c.,—"as sheep in the midst of wolves"—of whom the world was not worthy.

The first miracles of Christ, which John witnessed after his leaving all to follow him were the cures of the demoniac, and Peter's mother-in-law, (and some others) in the little town of Capernaum. But these were only the beginnings of wonders and signs, which he was hereafter to behold, as confirmatory of the Messianic mission of his Teacher.

On foot, 'mid dangers of many a feature—now, on the rugged mountain,—now, on the tempestuous sea—beset by envious priests, and hypocritical Pharisees—his heart deeply sensitive to the wants and beseechings of the multitudes who followed them; we find the faithful John ever by the Savior's side, a sharer of the toils, and a friend of the "man of sorrows." He was one of the privileged three, who beheld the "excellent glory" on the Mt. Hermon—when Jesus was transfigured before them—and the enthusiastic Peter prayed that they might build tabernacles; for he felt, as he said, "it is good to be here." Once we find the Lord reproving John for his impetuosity, in desiring the authority to call down fire from heaven and consume the inhospitable village which refused to receive Him, he so ardently loved. But how gentle the rebuke; "ye knew not what manner of spirit ye are of!" As John became more familiar with the principles of the Messiah, and his heart imbued with that holy charity, of which he was daily observant, the bonds of tenderness and sympathy between the two were stronger, and John was the well beloved of Jesus, as He was of the Father.

It is not remarkable that a feeling akin to jealousy, should have been awakened in the hearts of the apostles, at the pre-eminence given to John in the affections of the Lord; especially, when the request was urged, that the brothers James and John might be exalted to sit by his side in the kingdom. The Scriptures say they were highly displeased—but their complaints were preferred to Jesus, not to one another. And if John had any ambitious feeling contrary to the spirit of love, it must have been banished forever at the inquiry of Christ,—"are ye able to drink of the cup, that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptised with?" A foreshadowing of the future must have passed over him, for the answer was—"we are able!" John did not strive for a superiority over his brethren—his whole life is a denial of such a suspicion; rather would it seem that his affectionate heart craved an eternal nearness to that One, by whose side in his earthly pilgrimage he ever found sweet sympathy and bliss. At the sad hour when the twelve gathered to eat the last supper with their Lord, we find leaning on his bosom, "that disciple whom Jesus loved;" by which modest expression the evangelist was wont to designate himself. What anguish must have filled his devoted heart during those torturing hours of the betrayal and sacrifice! How must his tender spirit have been afflicted at the wrongs perpetrated against his Savior.—Closely he follows him from the paschal supper to the garden of prayer and agony—where apart from the other disciples, with Peter and James, he listens to those words of confiding grief,—"my soul is exceeding sorrowful even unto death!"—Sadness weighs heavily upon them, and they sleep with overmuch sorrow, as their Lord drinks of the bitter cup, in mercy hidden from them. It was "that other disciple" who attended Jesus into the palace of the High Priest, when others "followed afar off,"—who stood by the cross in that dreadful hour, when bleeding and dying, the loving sufferer looks on John and entrusts his mother to his care and love. A legacy of affection—and proving to his stricken heart, that his dearest Master loved him even in death. Those three days and nights of gloom and uncertainty which followed, lessened not the fervency of his love—quickly he hastes to the sepulchre, on the news of his Lord's resurrection—intuitively recognizing Him on the waters of Galilee, and affectionately following Him even to the brow of Olivet, from whence he views Him in majesty and glory, ascending to Heaven. Hereafter "this same Jesus" becomes the theme and ministry of his life.

To a humility amounting to perfection, he united a zeal and ardor commensurate with his love. He was unbending in integrity and truthfulness; unassuming, but excelling in all that was noble and pure—having no greater joy than to hear, as he says in one of his epistles, "that my children walk in truth."

The blessed precepts he has left the church were gathered from his divine

Teacher, as they journeyed by the way; they breathe the same sweet spirit of kindness and entreaty; yet are words which burn, and search the heart's recesses.—Through his long and eventful life, he was distinguished for spiritual knowledge and fervent piety; and it is said by Jerome that even in extreme old age, it was his custom to be carried to the place of prayer, and not being able to say more, his message was—"My dear children, love one another."

Lastly, we find him on a lonely Ægean Isle, "placed far amid the melancholy main," banished for his fidelity to his crucified and risen Lord; and how does the Lord honor him there, in the sea-girt solitude! giving, through him to the church, His last revelations and promises, which have proved a comfort and ground of expectancy to many a believing heart.

Truly is he one of illustrious memory! He rests from his labors and his works do follow him! From the time we note him responding to the Savior's voice by the water-side, in every scene of his unexampled life, to his peaceful death, we can but love, admire and imitate. May his blessed spirit of gentleness and love, his piety and attachment to Christ, be ours, that we may be the beloved and chosen of Him whose dwelling is with the meek, and whose pleasure is in them who fear Him.

MARY.

Boston, January 17th.

The World's Crisis.

LOWELL, FEB. 9, 1856.

Our Removal.

All letters to the Crisis Office after Feb. 5th, will be directed to

JONAS MERRIAM,
Editor of the World's Crisis,
Boston, Mass.

For The Crisis.

Past—Present—Future.

BY S. S. BREWER.

In reviewing the past, what devastation the history of the world presents! We behold the pathway of time, strown with glory and shame; the rise and fall of empires and kingdoms. Those the world calls great and mighty, have made ramparts of the mangled carcasses of myriads of their fellow men, in order to elevate themselves in the scale of dignity and honor, so called by the votaries of that ignis fatuus, human glory and honor.

All those monsters, the Cæsars, Pompey, Hannibal, Napoleon, who have waded through seas of purple gore, desolating families, and making once happy homes scenes of mourning, lamentation and woe—who amid the shrieks of the wounded, the groans of the dying, the thundering engines of war, have driven the crimson car over the fairest portion of earth, laying thrones and kingdoms in ruin, where are they now? All their greatness could not keep their souls alive.—Their laurels are faded, a few particles of dust alone remain; and the rich, the poor, the base, the brave—in dust, without distinction, lie; and their names—an empty sound of imaginary glory and human folly, gone like the meteor's glare. Alas for human greatness!

In surveying the present condition of things, they most assuredly present a gloomy aspect. Myriads of human beings unconscious of their approaching doom, rush on to swift destruction with a reckless spirit that seems to dare Omnipotence, and defy God's righteous indignation.

And the Church! O the so-called Church—the glory of backslidden Israel, and the Laodicean's excellency—like Ephraim joined to their idols, unstable as water, excelling the world in nothing but pride, hypocrisy, and the most ambitious desire of popularity.

Silence reigns throughout her borders, hushed is every note of alarm. And what do we see? Instead of watchmen on the look-out, Doctors of Divinity administering opiates in order to still the least pulsation of excitement with regard to the question, "what of the night?"—"And so they wrap it up."

In surveying the ranks of those who but a short time since were aroused by the announcement, "Behold He cometh," desiring apparently, no standard but the Word, one God, one faith, one baptism, and one Leader and Commander, now exhibiting a resemblance to the Church at Corinth, some for Paul, some for Apollos, some for Cephas!

Happy, thrice happy, shall those be that are found ready when the Judge appeareth; and that must, in the very advanced condition of the prophetic word, be speedily!

On—on the moments speed, and swift the day of doom approacheth! Great and terrible day of burning, and perdition of ungodly men! O who shall stand in that great day? In viewing the perfections of the Divine Being, and my native imperfections, I tremble, and loathe myself before God; but O there is yet a voice of sovereign love still lingering, and mercy's hand is still extended.

Now are we surrounded by perils! O how they thicken! This, if ever, is the time to watch and pray. Now is the time to practise the 13th verse of Amos 5th.—O what a dull scholar I have been in the above respect! My prayer is, God in mercy give me grace.

Come, reader, let us look and see where we stand, what of the night, and what do facts declare?

The SIXTH SEAL is opened to our view, and the next event in the arrangement of God's economy seems to be the rolling away of the heavens as a scroll.

The SIXTH TRUMPET has long since finished sounding, and the seventh, according to all appearances, is about to sound.

The SIXTH VIAL has done its work, and very evidently, the world is now developing the effects of the seventh.

And look around and behold the SEVENTH—the last symbolic—the Laodicean Church!

In addition to the above, the signs in the sun, moon and stars, God's flaming signals crying from the heavens "Behold He cometh!" And yet amid all these admonitory agencies, we are compelled to exclaim, O the deadness and stupidity on the part of man for whom God has wrought all these signs and wonders!—And now, even now, as the last visible admonition is developing itself, viz., "distress of nations with perplexity," men close their eyes, and harden their hearts, and with all these solemn warnings, rush headlong into perdition!

But the worn and weary pilgrim, amid such disheartening scenes, turns his eye to the precious promises of God unto the fathers, and there rests in the full assurance of faith. Hope then beholds a land where light, life, joy and Immortality shall be a perpetual reality. O the ever vernal hills and plains of the heavenly Canaan! O Canaan, bright Canaan! "thy beauteous gardens and thy pleasant walks, my study long have been." O thou land where the afflicted and despised pilgrim mourning in this present world, shall find a rest, and after braving storms and tempests, heat and cold, poverty and shame, shall bask in the sunshine of felicity beneath thy cloudless skies. Hail! happy clime, where the glory is ever shining. Hail! ye hosts of seraphs bright, and you ye first-born sons of light, cherubim and seraphim, Prophets, Apostles, saints and martyrs, shall I ever join your numbers? O ye groves of living pleasure, vocal with the sweet warblings of the beauteous-plumed birds of Paradise. And ye smiling valleys, with your graceful rills and purling fountains pouring forth your pellucid streams. And you, ye floral beauties, adding grace to the landscape of Paradise regained!

O thou realm where the blood-besprinkled band washed and made white in Life's cleansing fountain, robed in spotless garments, wearing conquerer's crowns, shall wander far and wide, behold no tears, hear no sighs, feel no pain, see none sick, and find no graves!

O Beulah! thou home of the blest, where every sight and sound shall ravish the eye and ear, and all creation proclaim the grandeur and the glory of its Maker and its God!

O thou happy, eternally happy company! you have reached the consummation of glory! you now sing in the heights of Zion. From torturing pain to endless bliss, on persecution's fiery streams you have come. But you are safe now. Pillars in the heavenly Jerusalem, to go no more out forever. O thou Church triumphant! living, singing, shining, praising, shouting the triumphs of redeeming grace and dying love, wandering along the banks of Life's crystal river, and plucking ambrosial fruit from the delectable branches of Life's fair tree. O, I long to be there, to taste, and see, and live, and sing in these concerts of praise, and inhale the balmy zephyrs, fragrant with the odours of Eden!

O thou triumphant army of crown-wearers and palm-bearers, from mountain, lake, and river, racks, fagot fires, dungeons, inquisitions, dens of wild beasts!—Every jewel is there—not one left behind. The Great Shepherd and Bishop has them all in one fold. He will keep them all secure, and guard them by His side, arrayed in garments white and pure, His spotless Bride. "They shall hunger no more, nor thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat." O thou heavenly Land!

And thou fair City of the King! Thou citadel of earth and sky! built upon the twelve foundations firm against Rock of eternal Ages, with the pearly gates and walls great and high, with towering battlements flaming in sublimity, with the glory and the grandeur of God and the Lamb, where the ransomed of the Lord go up to worship in the beauty of holiness, there the redeemed shall behold the King in His beauty.

Well, the glory will soon be won or lost forever—the day of wrath and burning is just upon us—God incline our hearts to a preparation to meet it. Amen and Amen.

LAWRENCE, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. R. E. Wood.

CHESHIRE, Jan. 26th, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—Feeling lonely, this evening, I thought I would pen a few lines for the Crisis.

How much we ought to praise God for the provision He has made for our salvation.

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Do we, dear Brn. and Srs., really believe in God's beloved Son? Or do we say we have faith in Him, but in works deny Him? The Apostle James, a servant of Jesus, says, "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead." The world is looking upon us in a different light from any other class of people, because of the great profession we make. They know very quick, whether we adorn our profession or not. We not only profess to love God with all the heart, but also to love the appearing of our dear Savior, and that we shall soon see Him coming with power and great glory. Is it not true that some who have had the witness, and given good evidence that they were accepted of the Lord, are now conforming to the world, in some degree? Perhaps some may be indulging in dress that is not becoming for those professing godliness; some in conversation that is not convenient, or in reading that which is not profitable, or in the training of children which is not in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

O Brn. and Srs., are we unlike the world? or are we conforming to its fashions, maxims and ways? O let us take heed to our ways, in this hour of temptation, and time of great peril. We can plainly see the times are more and more perilous.

My heart is often made sad to see how little love there is for Jesus and His blessed truth. O for an increase of faith! for an increase of the love of God! for more of that weeping spirit of Jesus, for strength and courage to go forward, and for wisdom to direct us aright.

Where, oh where is that devotion?—and where are those whom we used to greet from time to time, and with whom we held sweet communion?

Where are they now?

Jesus said, "No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." Is it not to be feared then, that we may fail of the kingdom, if after we have set our faces Zionward, we even LOOK back with a lingering desire after the groveling things of earth?

O come, then, let us all be faithful and gird our armor closer on, keep our lamps trimmed and burning, and our vessels filled with oil, and stand all ready to go into the marriage supper, when our Master comes.

"Christian, ne'er forsake thy Master;
Ever to thy trust be true,
Though temptations come much faster,
Then they once were wont to do.
To go back is sure perdition;
Forward we must ever press,
If we would obtain admission
To the land of happiness."

The burden of my prayer is, by day and by night; come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

RELIANCE C. WOOD.

Letter from Br. David Wilson.

EAST SHELBURN, Jan. 26, '56.

Dear Br. Merriam:—It is through much affliction and tribulation that we shall be permitted to enter the kingdom of God; for whomsoever he loveth he chasteneth and scourgeth every son or daughter whom he receiveth. I feel that I have with my family been put into the furnace of affliction, and I trust the dross is being consumed, that the gold may be refined. I have felt, for a long time, a heavy burden resting upon my mind in regard to the salvation of my children. While engaged in secret devotion, the question arose in my mind, are you willing God should save them in his own way? My response was, yes, Lord, in thine own way. In a short time my son Darwin L., aged 19 years, was brought home from Shelburn Falls Academy sick with the typhus fever and black canker, and in two weeks we followed him to his narrow house, where he must rest until the trump of God shall sound, and then, I trust, he with our other children will come forth to a glorious immortality, no more to return to corruption.

His thoughts were wandering most of the time. I asked the Lord to take the control of his mind which I trust he did. He requested his younger brother and sister to prepare to meet Jesus immediately. His mind was led to a piece in the Columbian Orator, page 287, which he repeated a number of times just before he died.

How have mourning, lamentation and woe been heard, not only in Rome, but throughout every quarter of the inhabited earth. We contemplate the time when these bodies of ours, now full of life and motion, shall be cold; we elevate our thoughts to that scene when the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Then shall he who once said, "Lazarus, come forth," descend from heaven with a mighty shout—then shall the dead hear the voice of the son of God—then shall they burst the bands of death—then shall this mortal put on immortality, and death be swallowed up of life. We shall be present at this august scene. In contemplation of this subject, we are led to the language of the poet—

"See truth, love and mercy in triumph descending,
And nature all glowing in Eden's first bloom;
On the cold cheek of death smiles and roses are blending,
And beauty immortal awake from the tomb."

I have a good hope now of all my children. They have all professed their faith in Christ but one, by being buried with Him in baptism. I feel that the death of my son has been sanctified to the good of my family, and to the good of many of his associates. Some eight or ten in this neighborhood have been hopefully converted.

DAVID WILSON.

For The Crisis.

Rom. 13: 10. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."

Brn, and Sisters:—Let us first consider our subject, and see why love worketh no ill to his neighbor.

Love is that holy principle which emanates from God Himself; therefore, the more we improve in love, the more we shall become like God, the more we shall advance in the divine life, the more Christ-like we shall become, the more we shall see the beauties of holiness, and the better prepared shall we be to extend that love to others; and feeling the love of Christ in our own hearts, we shall try to dispel the darkness of error, and make those around us happy; and as like begets like, in their happiness we shall rejoice. Our example of Christian love, therefore, will not only do good to our neighbors, but bring joy to our own souls.

Oh my dear Brn. and Srs., when we can love our neighbors as ourselves, then shall we be free indeed. It is my heart's desire and prayer to God, that we who profess to believe in the speedy coming of the King of kings, may show to the world by our daily lives that we believe the eternal truth that "God is love."—Let us surround the world in embracing this truth, and try to do them all the good we can, and as little hurt as possible.—If "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish, but have everlasting life," how much more ought we who have believed, and felt the love of God, to try and give the light we have received to others? When I think upon this subject, I cannot wonder that the Apostle was led to remark: "love is the fulfilling of the law." "What manner of love hath the Father!"

O Brn. and Srs., let us do all the good we can, that we may enter that rest that remaineth for the people of God, and bask in the sunlight of His love in His everlasting Kingdom.

WILLIAM J. HALE.

COLLINSVILLE, Jan. 26th, 1856.

Sincere Confessions. It is to be feared that many persons utter expressions of penitence for sin, to which the heart makes but a feeble response. He who confesses himself a great sinner, ought to show a little humility; and he who acknowledges his weakness, should not show presumption. Charles Wesley once tested the pretended penitence of a professor of religion, who came to him with the expression on her tongue, "I am the chief of sinners—the worst of transgressors—utterly lost and helpless." "I have no doubt," he coolly replied, "that you are bad enough." She instantly flew into a passion, declaring she was no worse than her neighbors; scolded the preacher as a slanderer, and it is thought would have boxed his ears if he had not quitted the apartment.

From the Congregationalist.

Conversation about the Eye.

"O, mother, we have had such an interesting lesson to-day in Physiology," said Mary, as she took her seat by her mother in the drawing-room.

"Well, tell me about it, Mary."

"The subject was the eye. But I hardly know where to begin, there was so much that was curious and interesting."

"You might begin," said her mother, "by explaining the contrivances for moving the eye."

"Yes, that was very curious. There are six muscles fastened at one extremity to the ball of the eye, and at the other to the bony orbit which contains the ball in such a manner, that when we wish to look upward, for instance, we contract or shorten the muscle attached to the upper part of the eye-ball, while at the same time we lengthen the muscle fastened to the lower part. I can scarcely move my eyes without thinking what a wonderful contrivance there is concealed behind the eye. And the most curious part of the contrivance is that for turning the eyes in a slanting direction. Here muscles pass through little loops, something after the manner of the pulleys for drawing up our window curtains. And then to think, mother, that I have been using my eyes in this way for nearly fourteen years, and never thought to inquire how it was done."

"I am glad to see you so interested, Mary; and what else have you learned about the eye?"

"I have learned about the lenses of the eye. They serve to bend the rays of light as they pass through so as to form a perfect little picture of objects before us, on the back of the eye. That was exceedingly wonderful."

"You may have an illustration of that by examining the instrument used by daguerrean artists," said her mother. "It is so constructed as to form a perfect image of the person who sits for his likeness."

"And is the image inverted, as it is in the eye?"

"Exactly, and for the same reson. The rays of light, being refracted by the different lenses concealed in the instrument, cross each other, so that the rays from the upper part of the person who is sitting, go to form the lower part of the image, and the rays from the lower part of the person go to form the upper part of the image, leaving the picture inverted. What more have you learned about the eye, Mary?"

"I understand one thing that had often puzzled me, and that is, why when I go out in a dark evening, it appears lighter after I have been out a few moments than at first."

"Can you explain it?"

"I can, mother, for I studied it thoroughly. There are two sets of muscles, one circular, the other radiant. When we are in a room well lighted, the circular muscles contract, leaving the pupil, which is the opening for the rays of light, very small. Then on going out into the dark, at first there are but few rays of light received into the eye. But the circular muscles begin to relax, and the radiating ones to contract, so that in a few moments the pupil becomes large enough to admit so many rays of light, that it seems as if the stars actually shone brighter. Only see, mother, as I hold the light near Ella's eye, how small the pupil is! and as I draw it away, it grows larger and larger."

"You must be careful, Mary, about making such experiments. The eyes may be injured by being suddenly exposed to a very powerful light. They are injured by placing a light before them on awakening from sleep. And they are injured by using them for a length of time in a strong light. I knew a young lady who became blind in consequence of sketching from nature in a bright sunshine."

"Why, how was that, mother?"

"The back of the eye, which you know is called the retina, is an expansion of the optic nerve which connects the eyeball with the brain. If this nerve is injured or diseased, the sight is impaired, and may be entirely destroyed. Intense light is always painful to the eyes because they are not adapted to such light. The moment the light becomes painful, it should be avoided. It is the warning nature gives for the protection of the eye."

"Do tell me more, mother, for I have mentioned nearly all I have learned."

"The eyes, Mary, are sometimes called windows, because the mind, which occupies the body as its dwelling place, looks out through these upon surrounding objects Calling the eyes windows, what would you name the coverings of the eye?"

"O, I would call them shutters, or rather curtains, because they are so elegantly fringed."

"Yes, Mary, and there are little muscles which contract and relax, so that we can raise or lower these curtains at pleasure. But the fringe is not merely for ornament. It helps to graduate the light, and when the eyes are closed, the double fringe helps to keep out the dust."

"Are the eyebrows of any use, except for ornament?" said Mary.

"O, yes. By means of the oily substance at the roots of the hair, they prevent the perspiration from running down into the eyes. The eye is a very delicate organ, and the contrivances for its protection from injury are many and wonderful. You did not speak of the coats of the eye. The outer one, called the sclerotic coat, is very firm. It surrounds the eye except in front, and forms the white of the eye.—The front or colored part of the eye, is covered by the cornea, which is transparent like a watch crystal. The eyelids, or curtains, as you called them, are lined with a membrance which is turned back so as to cover the white of the eye and the cornea, thus preventing the least particle of dust from passing through. Thus the pupil, which in the Bible is called the 'apple of the eye,' is in every possible way guarded from injury. And you may now understand the force of the expression, where God is said to keep his chosen ones as the apple of the eye."

"The more you study Physiology," added her mother, "the more you will find cause to admire the wisdom and the goodness of the Being who formed us."

T. T.

Dead in Sin. How much is involved in that deadness of the heart or of the spiritual affections, which the Scriptural phrase "dead in trespasses and sins" conveys, is little realized. We see some instances of the deadness of the intellect, where animal life remains; and the spectacle is melancholy indeed. But what is this compared with a deadness of the heart where the intellect remains. A striking instance illustrating this, is given by an English minister who attended the deathbed of one whose life had been spent in the slave trade. The minister spoke to him of repentance. "Repentance"—was his reply—"I cannot repent! You have seen many sorts of men, sir, and perhaps you think you have seen the most wicked and desperate among them. But I tell you that you don't know anything about an African slave trader. His heart is dead. Why, sir, I know perfectly well—I understand it, fully—that I shall die in spite of everything; and I know I shall go to hell. There is no possible salvation for me. It is perfectly impossible but that I shall be damned. And yet it don't move me in the least. I am just as indifferent to it as ever I was in my life." And so he died; with despair perfected into insensibility and DEATH; the very fires of Divine wrath as they flashed upon his face, not starting a sigh, or a pulse of emotion. His heart was "DEAD!"

Christ's Teachings on Universal Salvation. On one occasion during our Savior's ministry the question was put to him, "Lord, are there few that be saved?"—If Christ had been preaching the final salvation of all men, it is strange that such a question should have been proposed to him. Yet he manifested no surprise at it. He did not reprove or correct the inquirer for having dishonored the goodness of God by the supposition that any would be finally lost. He did not refer him to his past teachings to learn that all would be saved. Nor did Christ then advance the doctrine of universal salvation. Never had he a better opportunity. The question was directly to that point, Are there few that be saved? What did he answer? Did he say, all men shall be saved? Did he even say, many—the great majority of mankind—shall be saved? Did he say, a just and benevolent God will never punish any after this life? His answer was, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate"—that is, agonize to enter heaven by an incessant warfare with sin—"for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." Whoever may preach universal salvation, and upon whatever authority, certain it is that Christ preached no such doctrine.

Early Religious Instruction. Thelwall thought it very unfair to influence a child's mind by inculcating any opinions before it should come to years of discretion, and be able to choose for itself. "I showed him my garden," says Coleridge, "and told him it was my botanical garden.—'How so?' said he, "it is covered with weeds.' 'O,' I replied, 'that is because it has not yet come to its age of discretion and choice. The weeds, you see, have taken the liberty to grow, and I thought it unfair in me to prejudice the soil toward roses and strawberries.'"

The celebrated Dr. Dwight thus speaks of the importance of early religious training: "The great truths of religion should be taught so early, that the mind should never remember when it began to learn, or when it was without this knowledge.—Whenever it turns a retrospective view upon the preceding periods of its existence, these truths should always seem to have been in its possession; to have the character of innate principles; to have been inwoven in its nature, and to constitute a part of all its current thinking."

The Universalist Silenced. A few years since, a Universalist in one of the western states, who did not pretend to be a moral man, met a minister of the gospel, and commenced addressing him, in the presence of a large number of people, on his favorite doctrine, saying a great deal about what Christ had done for all mankind. The minister heard him through, and then said, "Friend, if you are a reasonable man, I will convince you from your own words that Jesus Christ never did any thing for you. Now, what do you say Christ came into the world for?"—"To save us from our sins." "Well, he certainly has not done that for you, since you are committing sin every day." "He saves us from the punishment of sin."—"But you have just told me that you receive the punishment of your sins every day, as you go along; and he certainly has not saved you from hell, for you said, but a moment ago, that there is no such thing as hell!" The Universalist was glad to retreat in silence.

The Two Heaps. "I see in this world," said Rev. John Newton, "two heaps—one of human happiness and one of misery: now, if I can take but the smallest bit from the second heap, and add to the first, I carry a point. If, as I go home, a child has dropped a half-penny, and if, by giving it another, I can wipe away its tears, I feel that I have done something. I should be glad, indeed, to do great things, but I ...will not neglect such little ones as this."—Selected.

Hints to Young Men. Always have a book within your reach, which you may catch up at your odd minutes. Resolve to edge in a little reading every day, if it is but a single sentence. If you can give fifteen minutes a day, it will be felt at the end of the year. Regulate your thoughts when not at study. A man is thinking even while at work. Why may he not be thinking about something that is useful? Resolve in your mind what you have last been reading.

Religion at Home. "Let them learn first," says Paul, "to show piety at home." Religion begins in the family. One of the holiest sanctuaries on earth is home. The family altar is more venerable than any altar in the cathedral. The education of the soul for eternity begins by the fireside. The principle of love, which is to be carried through the universe, is first unfolded in the family.

Kindness in Conversation. "There is no way in which good can be done to others with so little expense and trouble as by kindness in conversation. 'Words,' it is sometimes said, 'cost nothing;' but kind words are often more highly valued than the most costly gifts, and they are always regarded as among the best tokens of a desire to make others happy."

Family Worship. Its effects will greatly depend on the sincerity of the head of the family, and on his mode of conducting the worship of his household.—Let the exercise be short, plain, tender and heavenly.

For The Crisis.

Rest for the Saints.

There is a rest for weary saints,
A home prepared in glory;
Though now they have their sad complaints,
They soon shall reign in glory.

CHORUS—O glory! O glory!
There's room for us in Paradise,
A Home for us in glory!

When Jesus left His Church below,
Borne on a cloud of glory,
His Angels all declared that so
He would RETURN in glory!

CHO. O glory, &c.

Then He ascended up on high
To claim the purchased glory,
And there will sit in majesty,
Till He returns in glory.

CHO. O glory, &c.

Then He as our High Priest appears,
Our Advocate in glory,
By Him our griefs the Father hears,
While toiling on to glory.

CHO. O glory, &c.

The signs He told us should precede
The Second Advent glory,
Have been fulfilled, as all concede,
And soon He'll come in glory.

CHO O glory, &c.

The faithful watchmen now proclaim
The promise of this glory,
The evil servants, to their shame,
Can see no signs of glory.

CHO O glory, &c.

As He ascended, we shall rise,
When He returns in glory,
And greet Him with immortal eyes,
And always see His glory.

CHO. O glory, &c.

And when this earth shall be renewed
In its primeval glory,
All who have here His path pursued,
Shall share with Him its glory.

CHO. O glory, &c.

Later from Kanzas.

On the 15th inst. the judges of election anticipating difficulty, adjourned the election to the house of T. A. Minard, in Easton, some twelve miles north-west from Leavenworth, on the military road towards Fort Riley. The polls were opened on Thursday, and the people of the district assembled to vote.

The night previous the pro-slavery men attempted to get possession of the house, probably designing, if they could do so, to control the election; but they were prevented from doing this; they then attempted to take the principal Free State men in the vicinity, and blocked up the highway leading to the place of election. In all these movements they were frustrated by the indomitable energies of the friends of freedom. All day Thursday the pro-slavery men were on the alert, watching the movements of the Free State men. The polls were closed at dusk, and the ballot-box was sent away under escort several miles distant. Early in the evening some thirty men made a charge upon the house to obtain possession of the ballot-box, but they were repulsed.

Supposing that difficulties were over, the Free State men disbanded and started for home about 1 o'clock Friday morning; but as Stephen Sparks, formerly of Rush county, Indiana, a candidate for the Legislature, with his son and nephew, was on his return, they were surrounded by a party of a dozen men, who demanded their unconditional surrender. This they refused to do, stationing themselves against a fence, and keeping their assailants off, who, with cocked revolvers, constantly threatened them with instant death.

The position becoming known to Mr. E. P. Braw of Leavenworth, a gentleman who signalized himself in the late war at Lawrence, went to their aid and rescued them. The Herald says:

"Immedately after, firing commenced between the parties, the pro slavery party in the meantime having been augmented to about thirty; and there were about fifteen with Mr. Braw. One of the enemy was mortally wounded, and another severely injured.

Mr. Sparks' son received two balls, one severely cutting his scalp, and another in his arm. He was stunned at first, and fell to the earth, but immediately regained his feet and continued the firing."

Mr. Braw was subsequently captured while returning to his home, and carried back to Easton, where a mob was assembled. The account is thus continued:

"At night they took Mr. Braw out, after releasing the others, for the purpose of hanging him, having their ropes and implements ready for the work. Some proposed a compromise—that they lynch him and let him go. This was agreed to, when several persons sprung upon him with hatchets and bowie knives, and commenced stabbing, chopping, beating and kicking him until he was felled to the earth, after receiving three mortal wounds in his head with hatchet, and numerous other injuries, any of which would probably have caused his death.

In commenting upon the above affair, the Herald says:

"It seems to be the determination of the ruffians to slay one after another of our prominent citizens, hoping by so doing to intimidate us from exercising our rights as freemen."

The Herald makes an urgent appeal for the immediate organization of Congress, in order that the affairs of Kanzas may be settled. It also anticipates another invasion of the Missourians at an early day, as appears from the following article:

"The Storm Rising. It appears evident from the signs of the times that we are to have another inroad from Missouri on the Free State settlers. Preparations are being made all along the border, and threats of extermination are continually heard. The people of the territory should be ready for the blow at any time. It may come in the shape of a guerrilla party, fifty or a hundred men on fast horses; their hellish work may be accomplished, and then they can retreat, as was the case with the expedition on Leavenworth a few weeks ago, when the press and fixtures of the Territorial Register was broken up and thrown into the river. It may come in the shape of a regular army with all the munitions of war, as was the case on the last of November. It may come in the shape of squads spread out all over the territory, demolishing private dwellings and killing the inhabitants; but come as it may, there is no doubt but a concerted scheme is on foot for the destruction of the bona fide settlers of the territory, and the only question which needs answering is as to the time. Some thing it will be on the fourth of March, when the State Legislature convenes at Topeka. Knowing ones among the Missourians say the Legislature will be broken up with violence. Others say that Jones, who writes "Sheriff of Douglas County," after his name, is now laboring to hasten another issue. He feels that there was an inglorious termination of the former invasion—so far as he is concerned—and he is now desirous of trying his hand again, to see if he cannot mend matters, and re-establish his reputation.

"Our friends in the East may continue their observations in this direction, for all is not yet quiet. The volcano is slumbering only to break forth with greater violence. If the clouds thicken; if the storm shall break upon the country; if Kansas shall be plunged into fraternal war, and blood shall actually flow here, one of the most sanguinary struggles recorded on the page of history will transpire. The end can only be seen when freedom and slavery shall have rolled together in deadly strife, and the question shall have been decided whether liberty or slavery is national."

☞ The following highly interesting article we extract from a valuable work entitled, "Illustrations of Scripture," by H. B. Hackett.

SITUATION OF SAMARIA. This celebrated capital of the ten tribes was situated on a hill, rising abruptly from the bosom of a beautiful valley to the height of some four hundred feet, and surrounded by a circle of hills still higher. A small Arab village hangs on the eastern brow of the eminence, called Sebustieh, a corruption of the Greek Sebaste, the name which Herod the Great gave to Samaria in honor of Augustus.

I spent several hours, on the twenty-ninth of April, in examining this interesting locality, and then crossed the mountains on the north of the valley, on my way to Nazareth I was thinking, as I proceeded, of a passage in the book of Amos, and was anxious to know how strictly it was to be understood. The prophet (Amos 3: 9, 10), by a bold poetic figure, summons the inhabitants of Ashdod and Egypt to assemble on the hills around Samaria, and to see with their own eyes the iniquity practised there. They are called upon as heathen to testify against the wickedness of the professed people of God, and to pronounce them deserving of the punishment which the prophet affirms that they are about to incur.

"Publish on the palaces* in Ashdod,
And on the palaces in the land of Egypt,
And say:
'Assemble on the mountains of Samaria,
And behold the great tumults in her midst,
And the oppressions in her;'
'For they know not how to do right,'
Says Jehovah,
'Who store up violence and pillage in their palaces.'"

It will be observed that the heathen witnesses in this case are supposed to take their stand on the hills which surround Samaria, and to be able from that position to look down upon the city as exposed to their view below them. To what extent, now, is this representation figurative? How far does it conform to the actual condition of the country?

In my ascent of the mountains which I had to cross, I cast back an anxious eye, from time to time, to see whether I was rising above the level of the ancient Samaria. It was not long before I found myself off against the summit; and then after this, as other heights still followed, I soon had the pleasure of beholding the site of the once flourishing town lying below me; of feeling that I stood where I could fairly overlook, not only the valley, but the mount, which imparts to it so much beauty. I am sure that, had the ancient capital still crowned its summit, I could have looked into it, and seen the people in the streets, and distinguished their occupations.

Discovery in Nineveh. We have a definite account of the origin of Samaria in the Old Testament. In the thirty-first year of Asa, king of Judah, "began Omri to reign over Israel; and he bought the hill of Shemer, and built a city on the hill, which he called Samaria, after the name of Shemer, the owner of the hill," (1 Kings 16: 23, 24.) Mr. Layard, in his recent work on Nineveh,† mentions a fact respecting Samaria, wonderfully corroborative of sacred history. Among the inscriptions on a tablet dug out of the ruins, he finds the city named as Beth Khumri, or Omri. As Samaria was built by Omri, it was entirely natural, and in accordance with an eastern custom, that it should be called after its founder, Beth Khumri, or the house of Omri. It will be remembered that the Assyrians, whose capital was Nineveh, destroyed Samaria, after the siege of three years, and carried the inhabitants into captivity, (2 Kings 17, 5.) On the same monument Mr. Layard found the name of Hazael, whom Elijah was directed to anoint king of Syria.

Prophecy Fulfilled. The subject will justify our turning aside to notice the striking manner in which the fate of Samaria has fulfilled the truth of prophecy. Micah (1: 6) foretold the doom of that city thus:

"I will make Samaria as a stone-heap in the field;
As places for the planting of vineyards;
And I will pour into the valley her stones,
And her foundations will I make bare."

*That is, on the roofs of them, which afforded the herald a convenient place for being heard.

†Discoveries in the Ruins of Nineveh and Babylon, p. 613.

A few miserable huts constitute the modern Sebustieh, on one side of the hill. A church of the crusaders, now crumbling into ruins, stands over the reputed grave of John the Baptist. Of the splendid edifices with which Herod the Great adorned his favorite city, three or four clusters of columns, many of them broken, or half buried in the earth, are all that remains. The rest of the hill has been ploughed for centuries. Here and there may be seen a cleared spot, used as a threshing-floor. The upper part of the hill terminates with a succession of terraces, which I found to be covered with grain and fruit-trees. It has thus become "like a place for the planting of vineyards." In clearing the ground for cultivation, the stones, so abundant there from the destruction or decay of ancient buildings, have been picked out and thrown into heaps. How exactly does the language which foretold this desolation describe it! The city "shall be like a stone-heap in the field!" Nor does the parallel between the prediction and the fulfilment end here. Stones, which belonged to the walls or houses, have rolled down the sides of the hill, or have been thrown over the brow of it, and lie scattered along the edge of the valley.

"I will pour into the valley her stones,
And her foundations I will make bare."

We are not to regard such particularity as essential, by any means, to the truth of prophecy; for minute descriptions are often employed in the Bible, which are designed to convey only general ideas. It is one of the laws of prophetic language that it makes use of specific traits or incidents as a means of impressing the mind more strongly. Yet, the foregoing instance exemplifies a class of predictions which, in the mode of their fulfilment, go entirely beyond the substance of the prophet's meaning, which accomplish remarkably the form, as well as the reality, of the events foretold.

☞ As a corroboration of Br. Brewer's article on the wealth of the Catholic Church, we give the following from the Boston Traveller:

The Mexican Church. The immense wealth of the Roman Catholic Church of Mexico is often spoken of on account of its influence in political affairs. While the annual income of the republic does not exceed $9,000,000, the revenues of the Church will amount to $23,000,000. The product of the tithes, on an average, is estimated at $1,835,000 per annum, and in addition to this, the clergy possess an immense capital in specie, the accumulation of three centuries, arising partly from bequests, and partly from surplus income. The ecclesiastical establishment consists of one archbishopric (that of Mexico,) and nine bishoprics, the income of which is derived chiefly from that portion of the tithes intended for the subsistence of the clergy, and amounts to $400,000—the archbishop receiving $130,000. The total number of convents is 150, the Franciscans having 68, the Dominicans 25, the Augustins 22, the Mercedarians 19, and the Carmelites 16. The entire number of individuals in these convents is 2,514; the number of curacies 40, and of missions 101. Besides this large number of friars and convents, the Propaganda Fide has five colleges, with 334 religious, and 60 missions.—No sects of religion differing from that established by law are tolerated. It does not yet appear that all this expensive machinery has contributed essentially either to the happiness or prosperity of the people On the contrary, the inhabitants are poor, illiterate, bigoted, ill-governed, and oppressed.

War Preparations in Liverpool. The principal engineering foundries in Liverpool have the whole of their hands occupied in the manufacture of immense projectiles and enormous pieces of ordnance. At the Mersey Steel and Iron Works, in addition to the monster wrought-iron gun, to weigh 24 tons, and to throw a ball of 300 lbs. upwards of five miles, they are constructing two wrought-iron mortars, capable of throwing a shell of 36 inches in diameter. At Messrs. Fawcett and Preston's they are executing an order for 90 mortars for 13 inch shells—about 50 for sea and 40 for land service. At the Vauxhall Foundry immense quantities of 8, 10, and 13 inch shells have been constructed for some time, upwards of 7000 tons of which have been made during the past six months; and during the last ten days they have shipped 1400 tons of shell to Woolwich. This firm are also making several dozens of 10 and 13 inch mortars for land and sea service, and two experimental cast-iron mortars to throw 18 inch shells, which, it is believed, are to be called the "Palmerston Pacificators." Mr John Laird is also building 14 wooden screw gunboats, of 240 tons and 60 horse power each.

Highway Robbery in France. A Paris correspondent of a London paper notices the remarkable fact, that highway robbery, one of the rarest crimes in France, has of late greatly increased, particularly in the vicinity of Paris. He says that on the way from St Denis to Paris, a very short distance, but one which constitutes the principal communication between the chief vegetable producers and the vegetable markets of the capital, the robberies committed are now perpetual; and not a week passes scarcely without the inhabitants of the districts of La Plaine St. Denis, as all that tract of country is named, hearing of some one of the neighboring cultivators having been stopped on his return from town, and eased of his load of coin. This road, however, has long been considered the most dangerous in the whole vicinity; and has only become much more so of late than formerly. But the danger is not now confined to this road Lately more than one attempt at highway robbery in the night has been made on the road between St. Germain and Mantes, heretofore regarded as the safest road in the whole region. Scarcity and want of food is assigned as the provocation to these deeds of violence.

Murder of Children to avoid Slavery. The Cincinnati Gazette gives the particulars of the tragical occurrence mentioned by the telegraph yesterday. It seems that sixteen slaves escaped from Kentucky on Sunday last, across the ice into Ohio. They were followed by their owners and their agents

A part of the fugitives were traced to the house of a free negro, near Mill Creek, Cincinnati. Warrants were obtained, and officers accompanied by the slave owners and their friends went to the house; being refused admission they forced open the door; a negro man and woman, and three children, claimed as slave property, were found within.

The man fired a revolver three times before he was overcome; and the woman succeeded in killing one of the children and wounding the other two, saying she had rather kill them all than have them return into slavery. The affair had produced intense excitement in Cincinnati, and had not been adjusted at last accounts.

Continued War Preparations. We hear that that the authorities of the War Department are not abating their efforts. At the Tower the embarkation of ordnance and commissariat stores is carried on with the same energy and despatch as heretofore; the operations in the small arms department proving this establishment is rather on the increase.

Instructions were forwarded yesterday morning to the commanding officers of embodied regiments of military notifying that volunteers from these corps will be accepted in light cavalry regiments, with the exception of the 10th Hussars and 12th Lancers, which regiments are complete to the war establishment, namely, 700 rank and file each.

AFFAIRS IN CONGRESS. The following is from a correspondent of the N Y. Journal of Commerce:

"Party issues having become obsolete or dead, section is now arrayed against section,—a geographical line dividing the two; the most bitter feeling engendered, and a flame kindled which, if it does not envelop and destroy the whole, must greatly weaken confidence in its stability. And the question may properly be asked, 'can a house or nation divided against itself stand?' And will the people, the honest, intelligent community, suffer itself to be thus led by a few designing political demagogues, to the very brink of the precipice to which they are now fast hastening, and from which there can be no escape?"

Latest from the Seminole War. The Tampa Peninsula of the 19th inst. contains the following paragraphs concerning the Indian war in South Florida:—

"The news from Fort Myers is very indefinite. Scouting parties have returned without discovering Indians or recent signs, having accomplished nothing but the destruction of several encampments and the live stock and all the Indian property they met with.

We understand that the Block House, burned by the Indians, will be rebuilt, as well as several others at important posts—three at Fort Myers.

The volunteer companies are organized on the Manatee River, under Capts. Gates and Addison."

THE 8 O'CLOCK eastern train from Portsmouth yesterday morning, was thrown from the track near Wenham. Henry Jones of Rye, N. H., had his leg badly fractured and was hurt internally. Several were more or less bruised. After the accident, Mr Daniel Rust, depot master at Wenham, rode to the scene of the disaster on a freight engine. In jumping from the engine he fell, and immediately expired, probably from heart complaint.

CHILD BURNT AT MANCHESTER. The Manchester Mirror of last evening gives an account of a little girl named Johanna Lyons, being burnt to death in that city on Wednesday.—The mother of the girl appears to have been intoxicated at the time. She behaved like a maniac, running about the streets and crying "me darling baby is dead." A great crowd collected round the house and beheld a little girl in the last gaspings of life, burnt and crisped so that she was a horrid sight to see.

Eruption of Vesuvius A letter from Naples of the 28th ult. says,—Vesuvius has been thundering, and a new mouth has been opened on the very top of the mountain, from whence lava is flowing out. At present all that can be seen is a vast column of smoke; but still the mountain is active, and menaces further demonstrations. Not far from Castellamare, too, I have observed an unusual agitation in the sea. There is always a considerable sulphurous exhalation in that site, but on passing it a few days since the water was boiling as actively as I have witnessed it in a tea-kettle. The rocks in the neighborhood also were covered with a thick sulphurous deposit.

Shock of an Earthquake. It is stated that Winchester, Va., experienced several shocks of an earthquake on Wednesday morning last, at the early hour of 3 o'clock. The shocks, some half dozen in number, the Republican of that town says, were distinct, and the reports were so loud as to awaken a number of persons in different parts of the town and in the country around. At one house the inmates ran out of their rooms, under the belief that the building was about to fall; and four miles north-west of town the children in a certain family were with difficulty persuaded to return to bed.

ITALY. The Government of Naples remains steadfast in refusing the wishes of the Pope. The special ambassador of the Pope, Archbishop Bizarri, has returned to Rome after fruitless endeavors for six months. The police will continue to hunt after the Civitta Cattolica of the Roman Jesuits with the same eagerness as after the pamphlet of Mazzini. The monastic orders, and in particular the Jesuits, will also hereafter be subjected to a vigilant superintendence of the government. All papers of the kingdom are forbidden to publish the allocution of the Pope concerning Spain and Sardinia.

A severe shock of an earthquake was felt at Taratuka on the 22d of October, by which several buildings were destroyed.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS RECEIVED BY THE ARABIA.

Halifax, Jan, 31. The royal mail steamship Arabia, from Liverpool about 9 A. M., Saturday, 19th inst., with 107 passengers, arrived here at half-past nine this afternoon.

The War News. The grand news of the week is that Russia agrees to negotiate on the terms proposed by the allies. The first announcement was made by the Vienna telegraph to the London Times, in these words—"Russia accepts the allied propositions unconditionally. This is authentic."

The announcement caused immense sensation in London. Funds rose 3 per cent, cotton one farthing, and a panic reigned in other markets. The next day government published a despatch from Minister Seymour at Vienna, as follows—"Russia agrees to accept the allied proposals as a basis of negotiations." This qualified announcement calmed the excitement and alarmists begin to fear that Russia merely seeks to gain time by deceptive negotiations.—Meantime funds remain steady. Previous to the above announcement, the Vienna papers represented the state of affairs as most serious, unexpected and alarming, and that all the personnel of the Austrian embassy had received orders to quit St. Petersburg, and the Russian embassy was ordered to leave Vienna.

The actual circumstances were, that, when Count Esterhazy handed to Count Nesselrode at St. Petersburg, the Austrian allied note of Dec. 2d, he said he was not authorized to enter into discussion; but, if the note was not accepted unconditionally before January 8th, he and all the Austrian embassy must leave St. Petersburg. To prevent this, Count Nesselrode communicated with Vienna direct, and, on Jan. 11th, Prince Gortschakoff, Russian minister at Vienna, had a talk with Count Buol, Austrian minister of state, in which Gortschakoff produced a memorandum, expressing a general inclination on the part of Russia to negotiate, but proposed certain alterations in the programme. Count Buol formally received the document next day, Friday the 12th, but, inasmuch as it did not contain an acceptance, pure and simple, of the propositions, Austria could make no reply without the concurrence of France and England.

The ambassadors of those powers accordingly sent to Paris and London, and received for a reply that the western powers had no motive to give up a decision which had been already carefully considered. Further, that if by January 18th, Russia did not accept the ultimatum, Esterhazy and the Austrian legation would leave St. Petersburg, and Austria would immediately seek to obtain the armed co-operation of the Germanic Diet against Russia.

During the week that elapsed between Russia's first and second reply intense apprehensions existed in Vienna, although without sufficient cause, for the Austrian cabinet had taken the precaution to notify the western powers, that notwithstanding a rupture of diplomatic relations, Austria would not be in a position to commence hostilities this year.

On the 16th apprehensions were set at rest by the announcement above stated, that Russia agrees to negotiate on the terms proposed.

The Northern Powers. Sweden continues warlike preparations.

The Copenhagen official journal denies the existence of any circular repudiating the Swedish alliance on the part of Denmark.

The French council of war continues in session at Paris. Two commissioners, one from the army and one from the navy, are appointed to prepare the report. Admiral Lyons and Gen. Canrobert, members for the army, and Admiral Dundas and Gen. Neal for the navy, had been in discussion relating to the withdrawal of the allied force from the Crimea, retaining only Kameisch, Eupatoria, and Balaklava, and making a campaign up the rivers of the southern provinces of Russia. The admirals opposed the plan, inasmuch as it would take six months to remove the material of the past campaign from the Crimea.

The Baltic. A Dantzic letter of the 11th, says the American ship Washington, that lay all summer at Copenhagen, had landed her cargo on the ice, and conveyed it in sleighs to Riga.

The American ship Telegraph is reported in Cattegat, and another American ship at Revel.

Asia. Constantinople intelligence of the 7th reports Gen. Mouraiuff advancing in Asia.—His advanced posts are within three hours' march of Ezeroum.

Omar Pasha's troops have begun to arrive at Trebizond. The Egyptian contingent has already embarked from Constantinople for Tresibunt. Omar Pasha tendered his resignation, but it is refused. He is in disgrace at Constantinople.

The Turkish government has published an account of the fall of Kars tending to throw the entire responsibility on Omar Pasha. He has sent Col. Simmons to defend him at Constantinople, but Simmons finding himself supplanted there has gone to England. Omar Pasha blames the Turkish ministry, especially Riga Pasha, for withholding supplies.

☞ PARTICUAR NOTICE.☜

Eld. Edwin Burnham, having kindly responded to the voice of the Church in Shipton, C. E., will commence a series of meetings in Danville, on Sunday, Feb. 17th, and continue over the next Sabbath.

This visit of Br. B. will be hailed by the healthy, growing Church here, with no ordinary degree of satisfaction; for it was mainly indebted to his labors for its original existence; and his name with that of some others, stands associated with feelings of the deepest gratitude, being dear to the memory of many of God's enlightened saints in these parts.

As his stay in Canada is limited to the above period, Brn. at a distance who feel interested, will not need to be told what to do.

In behalf of the Church,

JOHN PORTER.

DANVILLE, C. E., Jan 18, 1856.

Obituary.

Died in Williamsburgh, N. Y., Jan. 17, Sister Mary M. Phillips, aged 46 years. Sister Phillips was firm in the faith that we stand in proximity to the Kingdom of God. It was ever her theme, but the many who have heard her warning voice will hear it no more. She sleeps in Jesus, and until the trump shall sound, she is locked in the cold embraces of death

O thou tyrant Death, thou hast robbed me of my kind father and mother, and now my dearly beloved sister. But thy days are numbered, destruction is thy portion forever. Amen

Sister Mary was with me in all those soul-cheering doctrines of the bible, as held by most Adventists. She was with me in this last proclamation, "Behold the bridegroom cometh" We were together planted in the likeness of Christ's death, and ere long, I trust, we shall together rise to meet Him in the air. Praise the Lord, O my soul, let all within me praise the Lord. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."—Come quickly.

H PRATT.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE AT HILLSBOROUGH, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Hillsborough, to commence Friday, Feb. 22, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the Sabbath. Eld. B. Locke and the writer are expected to attend.

For the brethren, T. M. PREBLE.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at Brunswick, Feb. 10th.
West Falmouth, Feb. 17.
Freeport, (Flying Point), Feb. 24.
Durham, (Parker School House), March 2.

R. R. YORK.

I will preach, if the Lord will, at the following places:
Portsmouth, N H., Sabbath, Feb. 10.
Portland, Me., Feb. 17
From Iortland I purpose to go East. Appointments given hereafter. J. COUCH.

The Lord willing, O. D. GIBSON will meet with the church in Ashfield, as Br. Pulcifer shall appoint, Sunday, Feb. 10.

Ware, Mass., Jan 26th, 1856.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the Brn. at Lee, N. H, Sunday, Feb. 10th, where br. Durgin may appoint.

Northwood Narrows, Wednesday, Feb. 13th, at 6 o'clock in the eve, where br. Watson may appoint, and stop a day or two if thought best.

BENJ. P. MANNING.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brn. in the following places:
North Adams, Wednesday eve, Feb. 13th.
Cheshire, Thursday eve, Feb. 14th.
New Lebanon, N. Y., Saturday and Sunday evenings, Feb. 16th and 17th.

HARRISON McCULLOCH.

By permission of Providence I will meet the Church in North Canton, eve, Feb. 7th.
Canton, eve, Feb. 8th.
Collinsville, Sunday, Feb. 10th.
Bakersville, eve, Feb. 12th.
Newfield, eve, Feb. 14th.
Litchfield, eve, Feb. 15th.
Plymouth Hollow, Sunday, Feb. 17th.
Waterbury, eve, 19th and 20th.
Bristol, Luther Tuttle's, 22d.
Bristol, Sunday, 24th.
Cheshire, eve, 27th and 28th.
New Britain, Sunday, March 2d.
Hartford, eve, March 4th.
Windsor, eve, March 5th.
Warehousepoint, eve, March 6th.
Scittico, eve, March 7th.
Springfield, Sunday, March 9th.

A. M. HIGGINS.

The Lord willing, I may be expected to administer the word of life as follows.
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 10th.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Feb. 17th.
Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 24th.

S. S. BREWER.

The Lord willing, I will be at the following places to preach the word.
Searsport, Feb. 9th and 10th.
Newburgh, Feb. 12th.
Bangor, Feb. 13th.
Edington Bend, Feb. 14th.
Oldtown, Feb. 15th, 16th, and 17th.
Orrington, Feb. 23d and 24th.

A. ROSS.

God willing, I will preach in The Advent Chapel, in Danville, Canada East, the two last Sabbaths in February, and in the vicinity, during the week, as the friends may arrange. I hope to see many of my former friends.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

By Divine permission, I will try to fill the appointments I lately withdrew, as follows.
Bristol, Thursday, Feb 7th.
Friday, Saturday and Sunday, as Providence may direct.

If any of the above appointments conflict with others, please inform me by letter in season to alter my course.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th ch.'s of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts, postage 6 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell,

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

The Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or The Doctrine of N D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

TRACTS AND BOOKS.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 cts "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 cts "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 cts "	3 " "
Future Pnuishment, by Grew,	2 cts "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 cts "	1,50 " "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 cts "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 cts "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 cts "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 cts "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 cts	1,50 " "
Voice of the Church $1		9 " doz

John Cumming's works, 75 cts per volume.
Romanism by John Cumming, $1,00.
Address orders with the cash to
H L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.
☞ Free for the poor.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage if prepaid is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Crisis and the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by br. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass., and D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra if prepaid.

Business Items.

Br S. B. Munn's P. O. Address is Bridgeport, Ct.

Br. Samuel Bragg's P. O. Address is Ware Village, Mass.

George W. Barnes' P. O. address is Russell's Corner, Sauk Co., Wisconsin.

Br S G Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br Miles Grant's P. O. address is East Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

F Smith, D H Caverly, A Bowles, D J Ball, E S Mudgett, E C Field, L Baker, H Campbell, B Jennings, L Jones, C H Cotton, N Safford, M Crane, D Wilson, C H Rust, E Dinsmore, A W Shaw, J Bayley, J H Sleeper, W McCulloch, R Pendleton, A Smith, W Brown, J Taylor, W M Holland, W Stark, E R Merrill, N S Porter, J Damon, S Guild, G D Hatch, J Steer, J R Allen, M L Curtis, J Berry, J Brooks, D T Scammon, S Tucker, H N Wiggins, W Tuttle, A Lawrence, E H Case, W Lyman, S B Titcomb, G Hale, W C Peck, M Loveland, C Lamberton, S Ingalls, $1 each.

M Holden, $2, L P Russell, $2, C L Barnes, $5, M H Tottingham, $2, A Hotchkiss, $2, M M Markham, $2

J C Munson, S P Goodsell, W Slade, E M Haggett, J Harris, Sr Woolee, M O Pray, M A Hoxie, A Bonney, T N Palmer, S Ingalls, D Ingalls, 50 cents each. J F Jackman, S Taylor, 25 cents each.

FOR OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.

C M Cotton, $1, S S Brooks, $10, A Hotchkiss, $2. Whole amount, $60,04.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, CORNER OF MOODY AND AUSTIN STREETS, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have myself proved, to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public. Ed.

For The Crisis.

"Help Thou me."

Keep me near Thee, O my Father,
Dark is my way!
Thickening perils round me gather,
Oh hear me pray!

Angry clouds in darkness lower
O'er my lone path;
Keep me safely through this hour
Of Satan's wrath.

Scoffers now are growing bolder,
Thy truth they mock;
Hearts once warm are growing colder,
Oh save thy flock!

O'er the world deep slumber's stealing,
Closed are their ears;
And the watchman's trumpet, pealing,
Wakes not their fears!

Satan spreads his wiles alluring,
My steps to snare,
While thy Word, of all assuring,
Bids me beware.

Burning tear-drops fast are falling,
Danger I see,
Oft I fear lest earth enthralling,
Win me from Thee.

Still my lonely way I'm wending
Through this dark land;
Countless ills my faith attending,
How can I stand?

By Thy potent arm protect me,
Oh make me strong;
Give me wisdom to direct me,
Keep me from wrong.

Lead me till the Day unending
Breaks on my sight,
Till the Prince of earth, descending,
Shall claim His right.

Then may I His image bearing,
No more distressed,
In His glorious Kingdom sharing,
Forever rest.

MARIA.

For The Crisis.

I long to go Home.

By W. J. DENNIS.

I long to go home—I am sad and am weary,
I'm weary of earth and am longing for rest;
A Pilgrim I wander through scenes dark and dreary—
I sigh for the home of the pure and the blest;
O come, absent Jesus! I long for salvation!
I long from earth's sorrows and cares to be free,
O hasten the dawn of the New Dispensation,
When pilgrims shall dwell in thy kingdom with thee.

Temptations are thick'ning, and perils surrounding,
And nothing below can the aching heart cheer,
For love waxes cold, and all sins are abounding,
And all things betoken a crisis is near.
But hope of redemption my sad heart is cheering,
The bright star of hope doth illumine my way,
O come, blessed Jesus! O haste thine appearing,
O hasten the dawn of a happier day!

I'll soon rest at home in the Kingdom of glory,
Your sorrows, lone pilgrims, will soon all be o'er;
With Angels we'll tell o'er salvation's blest story,
And sing Jesus' praises on Canaan's fair shore.
No sorrow or sighing shall enter those regions,
That bright land of glory, our blest Eden home,
Forever we'll dwell with the angelic legions,
Then haste, blessed Jesus! O come, quickly come!

NORTH DANVERS, Mass.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. B. P. Hildreth.

WESTFORD, MASS., Jan. 28, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—When I read the Crisis I find many communications that are very interesting, and feel to praise God for the spirit and light which He has given to the writers. How soon we can see the lineaments of our Father's face in their articles, and feel assured that they are the genuine offspring of Heaven, when holiness pervades the heart and prompts them to "feed the flock." The light of the Bible still shines; the prophecies are fulfilling, and I rejoice to see a new interest in the hearts of several, relative to the prophetic periods. I have no manner of doubt that the decree concerning them went forth from the court of Persia in the twentieth year of the reign of Artaxerxes; and I feel as fully assured that that year was A. M. 3700, because it reaches to the resurrection of Daniel, and end, which will be "at the time appointed," and "the Sanctuary be cleansed." I believe the period of 2300 days contains seven smaller periods, defined in the prophecy, and that the first four were completed, (viz.) 490 years after, when the "Kingdom of God" was taken from the Jewish nation and given to the Gentiles; for then their transgression was finished, their cup of iniquity was filled up, equal to "the measure of their fathers;" the last sin-offering was made that could ever be accepted of God; expiation was made for iniquity; everlasting righteousness was brought in for the elect; the prophecies were closed, the vision sealed with the blood of Christ, when the sword pierced Him on the cross; the most Holy One was anointed, assumed His priestly office and entered the Holy of Holies, with His own blood, to appear in the presence of God as advocate and High priest for a world of sinners. And I still believe the last three periods commenced together; that the end of the tribulation was marked by the darkening of the sun. But as for our chronology, either B. C. or A. D. I have not much confidence in it. Some of it we know is wrong; the era of Messiah's birth was not begun till over 400 years after He appeared in the flesh; and was not used in the public registers till 1431; and how can we have confidence in it unless we can find an authenticated record of some remarkable astronomical phenomenon, well vouched, for authorship? But as it is the best we have, we must use it, but not call it certain.

It has been supposed that the preaching of definite time has caused Advent societies much suffering; it is true that some have gone out from us, and I do not deny that some weak brethren and sisters may have been confused by the conflicting opinions of professed Advent believers; but I do not think the preaching of time, and its passing by, ever overwhelmed one soul that was born of God. Solomon says, "If thou faint in the day of adversity thy strength is small." God forbid that we should cause a true brother or sister to stumble or offend; and I do not think one such can be produced in christendom, (at least none has come to my knowledge,) that has fallen from grace, by the preaching and passing of definite time. We are fallible creatures, and our errors on that head are manifest, have been acknowledged, and I trust forgiven. But I rejoice that the chaff is being separated from the wheat; for I had much rather be in a meeting of three who live, and can claim the promise, through the blood of Christ, than ten thousand who are dead to every thing but profession; who, like the fruitless fig-tree, though covered with leaves, and standing "in the way," only await the master's curse.

"From that time many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him." "Then said Jesus to the twelve, will ye also go away?" "Then Simon Peter answered Him, Lord to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life." So it is with all the true followers of Christ, they find that His words are spirit and life to the soul; and though they are subject to many mistakes, they still cling to the word, without which they must perish. I do not think the separation will be made any too soon; their works must become manifest, for soon "the vision will speak and not lie."

The clarion of war is pealing upon a startled world; the sword is unsheathed; the nations are gathering; thrones are tottering; kingdoms are contending; hosts are embattling; men's hearts fearfully failing; and it seems as though the proclamation of war, from the mouth of the Lord, was sounding its dread summons in the ears of a fire-doomed world. From this scene of confusion I turn my eyes and look up, with a supplicating Hosanna, and cry, "My Father! my Father! the Chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof!" O save, O come and save thy waiting, suffering ones, for Jesus sake. Amen.

Children, be faithful, watchful, prayerful; for soon, very soon, you will receive your reward in the smiles and approbation of "the Chiefest among ten thousand," who is altogether lovely.

B. P. HILDRETH.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. V. N. Cudworth.

To the dear children of Abraham (by faith) I would say,—"Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for He is faithful that promised," Heb. 10: 23. The truly enviable condition of those that have been fulfilling the parable of Matt. 25, I am not capable of portraying fully; but I can say with Daniel, "blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." Yea, blessed are those that have borne the scoffs and jeers of a cold and heartless world, and have bid farewell to ease, honors and salaries, wealth, pleasures and homes, for the truth's sake. Should Queen Victoria offer me to-day her crown and kingdom, for the privilege of the part that I have acted in the parable, it would be no temptation to me. No, no; when the lamps are trimmed effectually, the foolish cry for oil, then the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem are seen opening, that the righteous nation that keep the commandments of God may enter in. O blessed consummation of the pilgrim's hope!—The light shines from the past, as well as the future, and truly in the movement of the past I hear a voice saying, "this is the way, walk ye in it." Who is it that has been moved by the time cry, saint or sinner? the Church or the world? Truly the world has trembled, and after a few convulsive starts, sunk into a dreadful slumber, there to sleep on till probation closes; then some that have been with us in the movement, or a part of it, will ask the real Christian for help in some way; but what will extort this portentous cry? It appears to me that the Church must arise to an eminence, so conspicuous that all will plainly see the difference between a man of faith and one without it. The world has already seen the meekness, the humility, love and brokenness of heart, of the contrite; but what care they for this? Let them practice self-denial; let them be abased, they deserve it for their egregious mistakes, and the false alarm, say they, which they have given the world. And shall we, Brn., call it a false alarm, too? Never; the power of God was in it. It has accomplished its work. We expected the Master to follow immediately upon the cry; but He comes when the parable is fulfilled, undoubtedly desiring to give the world a chance and a snare. But when God puts a helping hand and justifies the truth, anoints the Church with power, the gifts shining as in olden time, then the hypocrite will be manifested, the foolish will tremble and acknowledge God is with His people of a truth. Then "they shall worship at thy feet, and acknowledge that I have loved thee."

When I consider the character of those that have been constrained to preach the cry, (with some exceptions of course), it is convincing to me that God called them to the work, for their praise was justly in all the churches. One, who was a a pattern for sobriety, candor and conscientiousness, I heard exclaim, "O that I could creep away to some lonely spot and retire from the conflict." His whole being cried out for rest and seclusion, and the responsibility was so great, the consequences so fearful, that like Jonah he would feign flee to Tarshish; but the woe was on him if he withheld the truth, yet after he had delivered the message, he was reproached with being wilful, because he could not pull down what he had built, at a great expense, in the fear of God. May God reward him at the resurrection of the just; for a few poor pilgrims have been comforted and kept from sinking in the dark waters of despair, by his constancy and faithfulness. Some of the watchmen have been saying "it is all a mistake." Like David they have shamed our faces, as he did the people that had followed and fought for him. Still he seemed to think more of a profligate son than all the brave and warm-hearted followers that had jeopardized their lives for the Lord's anointed. Still they have been honestly trying to feed the sheep; but the sheep could easily see that they had nothing and were not half fed themselves. Now they need not be surprised if many should run into age to come, and many other theories contrary to the word of God. But glory to God, the Shepherd's voice is heard in a few, and the sheep will follow. "It has the wheel within a wheel." "It is a shining way, and as clear as day," and I can thank God still for the truth that makes the recipient free. Now, dear children, the evil servant is smiting, the work is going on, trim the lamp that you may be ready to meet the Bridegroom, and pray for your Sr. that she may with you be prepared to enter into that rest that remains for the people of God.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

Claremont, Mass.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. M. Greenough.

NORTH EDGECOMB, Jan. 14, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—It seemeth good unto me to write and inform the Brs. and Srs. of like precious faith, how I get along while passing through this vain and gainsaying world. I can say that I never felt stronger than I do now to contend earnestly for that faith which was once delivered to the saints, viz: the resurrection of the dead. I have passed through many trials and afflictions since last spring, when I thought the Lord would come and change my vile body, and fashion it like unto his glorious body. But I can say these trials and afflictions have wrought in me a far more and exceeding weight of glory.

I attended a conference at Woolwich on the last of June and first of July, enjoyed much of the presence of the Lord; also a conference in Richmond. first of November, felt much of God's holy and blessed Spirit, and I trust it will be remembered by the dear Brs. and Srs. that assembled there. I have been writing some on the sleep of the dead, have held a discussion in the Boston Cultivator on the sleep of the dead. I cannot conceive how there can be any resurrection if the dead sleep not. We might as well eat and drink, for tomorrow we die.

I would say to you, Brs. and Srs., I am looking for Christ to come speedily. I cannot put far away the evil day that will be to the ungodly. And dear Brs. and Srs., let me say to you, "as you have received Christ Jesus so walk ye in him, being rooted and grounded" in that faith that was once delivered to the saints. Let us have our loins girded about and see that our lamps are well trimmed and burning; so that we may enter in and receive our blessed Lord's approbation, "well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Dear Br. Merriam, I feel truly thankful to you for sending me the Crisis. I can truly say, as the hunted hart panteth after the water brook, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. It is the only channel that I have to get any information from my Brs. and Srs., likewise how truth prospers.—There are no Brs. or Srs. of the Advent faith living near to me—the nearest is Woolwich, about ten miles. I hope, Br. Merriam, the paper will be continued till Jesus comes to give us immortality.

I would say to those Brn. who administered to my necessities last winter, you have my heartfelt gratitude, and I humbly trust God will compensate you at the resurrection of the just.

I have a lame side this winter, am not able to do but little, and I have not a dollar at my disposal. If any of the Brn. in Maine that know me and have enough and to spare, feel free to contribute a mite, let it be ever so small, it would be thankfully received.

From your unworthy Br. who expects to receive immortality when Jesus comes,

MOSES GREENOUGH.

Post office address, North Edgecomb, Lincoln Co., Maine.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. M. Grant.

Br. Merriam,—For the comfort of my friends in the Lord, I will say a word about our meetings in Boston. Well, praise the Lord His good Spirit is in our midst. There is no root of bitterness among us, no strife or contention; but peace, harmony and love prevail in all our borders. We have no poor meetings, although we meet every evening in the week for the worship of our Lord, except Saturday.

We love to get together and talk of the blessed hope, so soon to be consummated. Although we are scattered some distance from each other, we frequently have from forty to fifty at the prayer meetings, and on the Sabbath several hundred. Our congregations are continually increasing in numbers and interest. Two have been lately converted who were brought up in the bosom of the Roman Catholic church; and backsliders are awakening from their death slumbers, and enquiring for Jesus. Several from the different churches are becoming deeply interested in the great truth so dear to us, and join with us in praising the Lord for removing the dark fog and mysticism, which has so long hung over their minds, on account of the popish dogmas that have crept into the Protestant churches.

O, thank the Lord for the truth that is now blazing forth from the sacred page.

Yesterday about a hundred sat down to commemorate the sufferings of our Savior, and we felt that the Lord smiled upon us, and blessed us with sweet peace of mind.

The Lord is good; "O, that men would praise him for his wonderful works to the children of men"

We have a very pleasant chapel at the corner of Lowell and Causeway streets, where we have meetings every Tuesday and Friday evening, commencing at 7 1-2 o'clock. When our friends come into the city, we shall ever be glad to see them at the meeting, and join with them in worshipping our Creator and Redeemer.

Any who wish farther intelligence relative to our meetings, can inquire of Br. Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street, who will gladly give any information desired.

Yours, in Christian love,

M. GRANT.

Boston, Jan. 28, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. E. Burnham.

NEWBURYPORT, Jan. 29, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—I am again at home—no, not truly, but all the home I have on earth as it now is. But I tell you, we cannot be but a very, very short distance from our real home. O it is so! The dark, fearful, political storm-cloud, which rolls its complicated form up the national horizon, surcharged with the horrid elements of universal battle, waxes thicker, blacker, and more frightful every moment. Now it is that troops of angels are preparing to come down at length, at the proper moment, and deliver those "whose names are written in the Book!" The first "Woe" came on the Eastern empire of Rome, (that was such formerly,) and the second "Woe" followed in the same location; and, behold, the third "Woe" has already fallen on the same part of the world—the Eastern or Turkish empire—and how fearfully is it wasting or "drying up"! The effects of this "Woe" are to be finally universal. Do not startling prospects strangely hasten? Now, then, immediately, under the sounding of the seventh angel, comes God's destroying vengeance, and those who fear Him shall be rewarded. Friends of God and truth, now gird your armour! now set a vigilant watch! now, and still on, "remember Lot's wife! now "lose" your "life," and "keep it." O who shall endure unto the end? who shall fight through the entire campaign?

"O who will be a traitor, knave,
And to Satan be a slave—
Let him turn and fly!"

But hath not my God his chosen ones in the strife engaged, and will they not stand?

Come, come, my brethren, gather up once more, and move to the work in earnest. Pray, exhort, preach, sing, read, study, spend money to scatter truth, and above all, live holy! But I sat down to say one word, to many friends, who have written to me to visit and preach with them. I have received so many letters, for the last few months, that I do not remember who has written, nor what answer I have returned precisely, only that my appointments were for some time forward. I now remark, my appointments will all be run down on the first of March. I should be glad to hear from such as desire my feeble efforts among them, and will try to do my Master's will.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Sr. H. C. Berick.

Dear Br. Merriam—As many of the friends requested me, on leaving the East, to write to them, it occurred to me that it would perhaps be better to address them through the Crisis, than to write to each separately.

Dear Brs. and Srs.—For the first time in my life, I attempt to address a few lines to you through the columns of the World's Crisis. It is quite a task for me to write; not because I do not esteem you highly, but because I am wholly unused to writing for the press.

It is now three months since I left the East, in company with my companion, to take up our abode in this western country. Circumstances are quite different here from what they were at the East. The country and the climate are different, and there is, also, some difference between the people of Indiana and those of New England. The diversity, however, is not so much in character as in custom. There are those here who love the Lord and His truth, and are earnestly desiring the "coming of the day of God"—those, whose prayer has been, and still is, that this state may soon be exchanged for that which is eternal, and "fadeth not away." How pleasant it is to associate with those who hold this faith in its purity, whose "affections are on things above, and not on" the fading scenes of earth.

But while there are a few who are thus serving the Lord, we are compelled to say that the many are going to destruction. The world, with its cares and pleasures, has engrossed their minds, and they are rushing to the Judgment regardless of consequences. How fearful the doom that awaits them!

I would say before closing, we like the country much. Our health has been good as usual, with the exception of about three weeks, during which time, I was afflicted with the quinsy.

Although we have kind friends here, we have not forgotten our friends at the East. Their memory we still cherish, notwithstanding we are separated by many hundreds of miles; and though we may not in this world have the privilege again of enjoying their society, we trust to meet them in the kingdom of God, to part no more forever.

H. C. BERICK.

Laporte, Ind., Jan. 19, 1856.

For The Crisis.

Letter from Br. B. Cook.

ROCHESTER, N. Y. Jan. 17th, '56.

Dear Br. Merriam—My conviction is clear and abiding that the prophetic periods and the "appointed day"—which terminate "the times of the Gentile," are so revealed as to assure us, that we are near "the end" of this age, and about to enter on those scenes which will characterize "that which is to come."

The proof is more positive than ever before, that the seventh trump—the resurrection life—the "Kingdom of God is about to be realised. Yet never before was there such unbelief, such misbelief—as that which has been exhibited among those who once preached faith in God's plain truth. "When the Son of Man cometh shall He find faith on the earth?"

The varied forms that perverted faith assumes against God's plain word, is the most affecting evidence that we are all "as grass"—in whom no trust can be placed. But the Bible—God's word—is an Ever-lasting "Rock" on which we may safely build.

Never did I feel more elevated del[illegible] in occupying our position on the Adve[nt] near, and its kindred themes of immor[tality] in the bliss of the Kingdom's glory than now. But whatever may be o[ur] feelings, or experiences, the evidence [is] accumulating that the grand crisis is ju[st] upon us. Most will be caught in "th[e] snare"—Yes; I too but for the grace [of] God! But daily do I try to pray that [as] my day is, so my strength may be. [I] feel no abiding impatience over the incon[sistency] or apostasy that abounds. [It] was to be expected—for the Scriptur[e] could not be broken in our age—nor i[n] any other.

I have been to a new place—"th[e] New York Central College, Courtland C[o.] and had a good hearing. They took n[o] exception to the Scripture view of earthl[y] governments and Ecclesiastical organiza[-]tions, or their foretold doom at the Lord's coming—nor anything said, till we cam[e] to our need of immortality." On th[is] point I am to go again to hear and mee[t] objections. Lord bless.

Yours in hope. B. COOK.

Probable Destruction of Modern Rome

"Many authors have asserted, as thei[r] interpretation of some parts of the Apoca[-]lypse, that Rome will be destroyed by fir[e] from heaven, or swallowed up by earth[-]quakes, or overwhelmed with destructio[n] by volcanos, as the visible punishment [of] the Almighty for its popery and its crime[s]. I am unwilling, having had so many book[s] on the interpretation of the prophecy, t[o] deduce any argument of this kind from th[e] prophecies which are unfulfilled; but I be[-]held everywhere—in Rome, near Rome and through the whole region from Rom[e] to Naples—the most astounding proofs, no[t] merely of the possibility, but the probabil[-]ity, that the whole region of central Italy will one day be destroyed by such a catas[-]trophe. The soil of Rome is tufa, with [a] volcanic subterranean action still going on. At Naples the boiling sulphur is to be seen bubbling near the surface of the earth.—When I drew a stick along the ground th[e] sulphurous smoke followed the indentation and it would never surprise me to hear o[f] the utter destruction of the southern pen[-]insula of Italy. The entire country an[d] district is volcanic. It is saturated wit[h] beds of sulphur and the substrata of des[-]truction. It seems as certainly prepare[d] for the flames as the wood and coal on th[e] hearth are prepared for the taper whic[h] shall kindle the fire to consume them. [I] again read the remarks of Dr. Cumming. Rome, he believes, is to be overthrown b[y] judgment, not to be converted by the agen[-]cy of the gospel, nor to be exhausted b[y] political assaults. It is literally to be con[-]sumed by fire. Whether he is correct i[n] regarding such an event as the fulfilmen[t] of the prophecies and the demonstration o[f] the anger of the Creator against the incor[-]rigible assumption of an erring and influ[-]ential church, I know not; but the divin[e] hand alone seems to me to hold the ele[-]ment of fire in check by a miracle as grea[t] as that which protected the citizens of th[e] plain, till the righteous Lot had made hi[s] escape to the mountains."—[Townsend's Tour in Italy in 1850.

How strikingly the above corresponds [to] the expression of the Prophet Dan., 8: 2[5]: "He shall be broken without hand."

Selected For the Crisis.

Discharge of Duty.

"Let it be observed and forever held that the right and true happiness of every creature is in the discharge of its func[t]ions, and in those efforts by which i[ts] strength and inherent energy are develop[-]ed; and that the repose necessary to a[ll] beauty is not of inanition, nor of luxury, nor of irresolution, but the repose of ma[g]nificent energy and being; in action, t[he] calmness of trust and determination; [in] rest, the consciousness of duty accom[-]plished and victory won. And this repose and this felicity can take place as well [in] the midst of trial and tempest, as besid[e] the waters of comfort; they perish on[ly] when the creature is unfaithful to itself, or is afflicted by circumstances unnatu[ral] and malignant to its being, and for [the] contending with which it was neither fitt[ed] nor ordained. Hence that rest which [is] indeed glorious, is of the chamois couch[ed] breathless on his granite bed, not of [the] stalled ox over his fodder; and that happ[i]ness which is indeed beautiful, is in t[he] bearing of those trials—tests which a[re] appointed for the proving of every cre[a]ture, whether it be good, or whether [it] be evil; and in the fulfilment to the utt[er]most of every command it has receive[d], and the out-carrying to the uttermost [of] every favor and gift it has gotten from God."

No Remedy. That is a very moving pictu[re] of God's long-suffering and of man's desper[ate] wickedness, and of the terrible judgments w[hich] follow the exhausted patience of the Most Hi[gh]. "The Lord God of their fathers sent to th[em] by his messengers, rising up betimes, and se[nd]ing; because he had compassion on his peop[le] and on his dwelling-place; but they mock[ed] the messengers of God, and despised his wo[rds] and misused his prophets, until the wrath of [the] Lord arose against his people, till there wa[s no] remedy," 2 Chron. 36: 15, 16. Every imp[eni]tent man is daily and hourly approaching a [con]dition in which there is no remedy.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET (BOSTON, MASS.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1856. | VOLUME 3, NUMBER 27.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

Published by Believers in the Immediate Coming of JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Jonas Merriam, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

'I will bring distress upon men; and they shall walk like blind men.'—Bible.

By S. S. B.

Rome. No. 10.

Having closed my remarks on the Protestant and the Greek Churches in a previous number, I will close also on the Roman Church with a few brief remarks. The character of this Church has been set forth as blasphemous, murderous, and abounding in wealth, by the Revelator. We have seen also with what precision history speaks of the Blasphemy and cruelty of Rome. We see her arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication. Every nation on earth that is strictly Popish, is not only ignorant of the Scriptures, but idolaters, cruel, ignorant and degraded. Take a glance at Spain, Portugal, Austria, South America, and wherever the foot prints of papacy are to be found, there is hatred to every thing that has principle to impart light, and a true knowledge of God and his word.—Here is a specimen of Roman Catholics keeping holy day in Havana:—

"Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.
Havana, Sunday, April 8, 1855.

We are closing 'Holy Week,' and thanks to heaven, have had no time for more political murders.

The division of Holy time to-day—the procession of welcome to the Savior from the tomb at 7 o'clock, A. M.; cock-fighting at the arena at 10 o'clock; bull fights at Beslarcoain at 5 o'clock P. M.; theatre at 7 1-2 o'clock, and masquerade balls at 9 o'clock at night. So ends our religious disposition of Holy Week or Easter Sunday."

Truly they are ripe and ready for the harvest; and such is Catholicism the world over nothing but a system of expediency catering to the morbid appetites of its devotees. To the Spaniard it allows bull fights—to the votary of pleasure, the ball and the theatre—to the South American and Mexican cock fighting and racing.—The Indian is instructed to believe that Jesus was a Great Indian warrior. Well. Romanism is ripe for the Harvest. The blood of 60,000,000 martyrs crieth for vengeance, and soon will the righteous Judge recompense every one as his work shall be.

We shall now close with a general view of the condition of the world, producing a number of Articles from various sources—all testifying that we are on the eve of some great crisis. A writer in the old world made the following remarks in reviewing the threatening aspect of the political horizon in the old world:—

"All around us the world is convulsed by the agency of nations; governments which lately seemed like to stand for ages, have been on a sudden, shaken and overthrown. The proudest capitals of western Europe have streamed with civil blood.—All evil passions, the thirst of gain, thirst of vengeance, the antipathy of class to class, of race to race, have broken loose from the control of Divine and human laws. Fear and anxiety have clouded the face and depressed the hearts of millions. Trade has been suspended, and industry paralyzed; the rich have become poor, and the poor poorer. Doctrines hostile to all sciences, to all arts, to all industry; doctrines which if carried into effect, would, in thirty years, undo all that centuries have done for mankind,—and would make the fairest provinces of France or Germany as savage as Guiana or Patagonia, have been avowed from the tribune, and defended by the sword."

Here are some of the doctrines in all probability he refers to which I took from a N. Y. paper.

"From the following creed of many Socialists, what hope of human perfectibility can be entertained? 1. 'Do you believe in the existence of God?' If the candidate hesitates, his admission is deferred until he can bring his mind to deny this fundamental doctrine.

2. 'Faith in an essential and living Deity is the origin, the fundamental cause of our present miserable social state.'

3. 'As long as mankind hold to the hope of heaven, if it be only by the tenure of a thread, they cannot expect happiness on the earth.'

4. 'Christianity, and the state of things it induces, are the eating canker worms of society.'

5. 'God has need of man, but man has no need of God.

'Blasphemous songs are chanted in many German cities. Such are some of the sentiments, which, from the German schools of Atheism, are circulating in our land, and poisoning the minds of the rising generation. Such being the nature of the Social elements which many believe, are about to convert the world, we can decide whether the true lover of our race can joyfully anticipate the introduction of their new era."—Blackwood's Magazine.

George Law of N. Y. in his article defining his position makes the following remarks:—

"We have arrived at a very important crisis in the history of this Republic. Parties, principles and men—statesmen and politicians, all seem to be in a rapid state of decomposition, transition and reconstruction. Indeed, the same aspect of confusion and discord in the public affairs and public parties which afflict this country, seems to be a common disorder or epidemic over the whole earth. Europe is laboring in the same condition, What is it? It is the close of one great cycle of revolution and the beginning of another in the world's civilization. Even Asia, that mysterious country, with which steam is linking us, is filled with confusion, war, disorder and revolutions. Happily, however, for this country, we are possessed of too much religion, intelligence and common sense to cut each other's throats, in order to settle differences in religious questions or politics."

The following is by the Spanish minister:—

"In a speech delivered by General O'Donnell, Minister of War, at the sitting of the Cortes on the 12th of October, he said: 'Great events are taking place in Europe which may bring on a general war, more than people think or desire. A day may come when our interest may compel us to take part in the struggle. If M. Oriense imagines that a nation can remain isolated when Europe is engaged in a sanguinary contest, he deceives himself."

Now while Russia, Turkey, France and England are in turmoil; poor benighted China is strewing her cities, villages and territory with dead carcasses, every one by the sword of his brother. This is at the latest date:

PIRATE FLEETS.

"By the last mail we have account of the pirate fleet being seen outside, with a square-rigged vessel in their possession, of what nation could not be discovered. All ships now leaving port are forced to supply themselves with additional guns, as the danger is so great. When this state of things will be remedied no one can tell, as the rebels are no sooner crushed in one point than they spring up in another. To-day all is excitement, as news has just arrived that they have appeared in great force ninety miles north of Canton, taken two large towns and three men-of-war junks, and are marching on to Canton. The Mandarins are trembling for fear that they may take the city; and they know if they do, it is all day with them, as the rebels will avenge themselves for the thousands they have beheaded during the last six months. At Canton alone 80,000 men, women and children have been beheaded within that time.

HORRID EXECUTIONS.

"Many of the Europeans go to see the executions, as they are performed outside of the walls of the city. The ground has become so completely saturated with blood that the stench is sickening for a considerable distance. There are three executions a day—one at morning noon and night—fifty at each time. Two long sticks of timber laid parallel to each other, with just room for the executioner to pass between them, form the blocks. The prisoners are driven into the inclosure like so many sheep, not chained or bound in any way.—In fact they seem to look upon the whole thing with apathy, owing, I suppose, to their religion, or irreligion, which is fatalism.

"At the word from the Judge, they all kneel and place their necks on the logs, each row with their heads inwards and the face of each turned towards his neighbor's back on one side, while the next on the other faces his. At another signal the executioner grasps his heavy two-handed sword, and beginning at the end of the row towards which all faces are directed, strikes right and left. But one blow to each is required, the head flying across the space and striking the opposite victim, but ere he has a chance to shrink the sword descends upon his own neck. There are two executioners. Each has twenty-five to behead at each execution. The whole operation does not consume over five minutes—at the end of which time the whole fifty trunks are in their last struggle, spirting the blood and throwing their limbs convulsively about. Such a noisy rabble is there present that you find it difficult to persuade yourself that they are human beings whom you see thus hurried into eternity"

A CRUCIFIXION.

"Two weeks since, to vary the scene, they had a crucifixion. A woman was sentenced to be crucified for having given birth to one of the rebel chiefs. If a father is a rebel, his family is considered the same, and the whole family, from the old man of four-score to the child of four years, share the same fate. The poor woman was nailed to the cross while living, a gash made across the forehead to the bone, and the skin pealed down so as to hang over her eyes; after which the breasts were cut off; they then proceeded to break every bone in her body; a large knife was next thrust into the throat and passed downward, cutting the chest open. The executioner then thrust in his hand, and grasping the heart, tore it from its socket and laid it beating and reeking before the Judge. At Shanghae they drown them by dozens. You may well think that any Government practicing such atrocities must ex sperate its subjects to avenge themselves and so it is; and the present dynasty must soon fall to give place to a worse or better, as time will show."

Truly spoken, time will soon show. The blood-crimsoned Dynasties the world over will soon fall, and give place to the mild reign of the Prince of Peace. Soon shall the Eternal age of rest and blessedness commence—soon shall we know by the favor of uncreated benevolence the import of the heaven-imparted name, Immanuel—God with us.

We have now endeavored to present in these series of articles a brief view of the condition of religion of the 19th century; and truly it is a heart-sickening picture. O, would to God that it were otherwise! But such are the facts, and to my mind a tithe of the sad condition has not been produced. Nothing but the all penetrating eyes of the Divine being will bring to light the hidden things of darkness.

Truly this is the climax age of wonders—the spirits of demons are working prodigiously—they have wrought miracles—it is the last hour—the powers of darkness are combined.

The Editor of the New. York. Herald, made the following remark in regard to the European War:

"A Curious Mixture.—They sung a Te Deum at the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris, in honor of the recent achievements of the Allied armies in the East. The flags of the Allies were intertwined—and in this Roman Catholic cathedral the standards of Mahomedan Turkey and Protestant England were displayed side by side with the Eagles of France—a nation which remains faithful to the Romish Church, for the present. Think of a social party made up of the Pope, Martin Luther and Mahomet, and you can have some idea of the changes which a few years make in war, religion, politics, creeds and diplomacy."

We have now before us the last scene of prophecy, before the opening heavens reveal the son of God in the clouds of heaven. The three Frog Spirits of Revelation XVI; like great recruiting parties, have about accomplished their work. We now wait the opening of the day of God Almighty, distinct altogether from the days of the son of man—and mark well, the Battle of the Great day of God Almighty cannot commence until the day commences. Get ready—keep ready—we are on the solemn confines of that awful day. The Harvest is ripe, and men are so blind they cannot discover it. O, that they were wise! O, that they would consider their latter end!

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

By H. Pratt.

No. 8.

Before proceeding to show that Israel in prophecy denotes the Church of God, whether Jews or Gentiles, I wish to shew that they were a typical people, and to do which effectually, I present the following from George Storrs:

The Jews a Typical People, or, their National Restoration not a Scripture Doctrine.

1. What is a Type? Ans. An emblem and representation, by which one thing is used to represent another; or, it is but the shadow of the reality. It is an example, pattern, or similitude of a person, event, or thing to come. When the thing typified has come, the type must cease. It differs from a memorial, which commemorates an event past.

2. Was the whole Mosaic Economy, so far as it was peculiar to a particular people, typical?

Let us first look at Gal. 3: 17–19, "And this I say, That the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect." Here it is clearly stated that the "covenant, confirmed before in Christ," was 430 years before the giving of the law; of course, the literal descendants of Jacob were not specially in the covenant; and their being in a state of peculiarity afterwards did not make them the peculiar people of God. The promise was made aside from, and before they had a peculiarity in any sense: and what peculiarity they afterwards had, did not, and as Paul says, "cannot disannul" the covenant which had reference not to the seed of Jacob, as such, any more than it had to any other class of men, as we shall see before we have done with this subject; "for," says Paul, v. 18, "if the inheritance be of the law," (and that law was what gave peculiarity to the posterity of Jacob,) "it is no more of promise." As if he had said—To suppose that the, so called, Jews had the peculiar title to the inheritance is to "disannul" the promise, and make it of none effect;" but it is not so; for God gave the promise to Abraham, not as the father of Jacob's posterity, but of all them that believe from many nations. Then some would ask—"Wherefore then serveth the law?" that is, the peculiarity under which the posterity of Jacob was placed? He added—"It was because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made."

Here several things are worthy of note. 1. The Jews were not the promised seed; for they were constituted what they were "till the seed should come; hence were not the seed, for they had already come. 2. They were put under the law, or made a peculiar people only for a specified time; viz. "till the promised seed should come." Now, whether "that seed was Christ," or they that "be Christ's" by faith, it has come. 3. That seed having come, all that was peculiar to the Jews is at an end; for the law of peculiarity for Jacob's posterity was to exist no longer. That, it appears to me, is clearly the Apostle's argument. When the purpose was accomplished for which the Jews were peculiar from other people, their peculiarity was abolished.—They were put in a peculiar state because of the abounding of transgression in the world, that God might demonstrate to the world, that his promises of the coming of Messiah had been exactly fulfilled. This could be done only by making some one people the keepers of those promises, and preserving the genealogy of some one family through which "the seed" should come; and it was finally the case, even before the seed came, that the largest portion of that people were lost; viz: the ten tribes.

We will now look at a few texts that show still further that their system was one of types and shadows. Heb. 7: 11, "If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?" This shows that the Jewish system was not the system to abide; and in the next verse he says,—"For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." If the law was necessarily changed, the peculiarity of the Jews necessarily ceased; and a restoration of the Jews, nationally, would be to change back again, and be, also, a practical denial that "the seed" had "come." In other words, it would be to establish the literal descendants of Jacob in their infidelity.

See Heb. 8: 1, 2, 4, 5, "Now of the things which we have spoken, this is the sum: We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man,"—"For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law: who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See (saith he) that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount." Here the truth is clearly set forth that the whole Jewish Economy was one of types and shadows.

Again, Heb, 9: 8–10, "The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing: which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience; which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation." Here the same truth appears; and Paul assures us that these types and "figures" were only designed to be continued till "the time of reformation;" that is, till Christ came, as the next verse clearly expresses it.

In Gal. 2: Paul speaking of what Christ did, says, verse 14, "But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the Gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of the Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?" He adds, verse 17, "But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid." That is, the Jewish ordinances were only types pointing to Christ, and they that be Christ's.—

This he more fully states in Eph. 2: 14–16, "For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances: for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby." This is plain and positive. The peculiarity of the Jews is done away—the middle wall is broken down; and all this, not to build up again the Jews, but to make out of "all nations," according to the covenant of peculiarity made with Abraham, "ONE NEW MAN;" and bring into "ONE BODY" all the peculiar seed; which is Christ, and they that "be Christ's."

These and many other texts go to show that the whole Jewish Economy was one of types. To my mind it follows, that the Jews were themselves, so far as they were a peculiar people, merely a type of another people, who are the "heirs according to the promise." This idea is strengthened by the Apostle's reasoning, when he speaks of Isaac as a type. See Rom. 9: 6–9, "They are not all Israel which are of Israel: neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children: but, in Isaac shall thy seed be called." That is, they which are the children of the flesh (by natural generation, or the natural seed of Abraham,) these are not the children of God; but the children of promise are counted for the seed. Compare this with Gal. 4: 28, 29, "Now we, brethren, [believers, without regard to previous national distinction,] as Isaac was, are the children of the promise. But as then he that was born after the flesh [the natural seed of Abraham] persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, [viz: Isaac, the type,] even so it is now." How plain that Paul makes Ishmael, the natural seed of Abraham, a type of the present Jews, and Isaac a type of true believers. He further teaches the same doctrine with regard to the people that were made a peculiar people by the law, viz: the Jews as they are called.—Examine Gal. 4: 21–26, "Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, that Abraham had two sons: the one by a bond-maid, the other by a free-woman. But he who was of the bond-woman, was born after the flesh; but he of the free-woman was by promise. Which things are an allegory; for these are the two covenants; the one from mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all."

How plain does the Apostle here teach that they that are born after the flesh, i. e. natural generation, are not in the true covenant made with Abraham: and that the natural seed of Abraham are represented by Agar, and not by Sarah; consequently the literal Jews are no more, at the best, than a type of the true people of God. In whatever light the subject is viewed, they are but a type; and are now in "bondage" to their own unbelief.

If then they were really a typical people, and not the real seed of Abraham, but only allegorically representing the true seed; I ask, is there any more reason for the notion that they will be restored, nationally, than that any of the other types will be restored? If it would be absurd to teach that the ordinances under the law are to be restored—and if such a restoration would be a denial that the antitype had come, how can the Jews be restored, nationally, without a denial that Christ has come, and a denial that "Abraham's seed" are they that "be Christ's?" For how can the Jews be restored, nationally, and their peculiarities, which distinguish them from other people, not be restored also? And would that not be, to "build again the things" which Christ died on the cross to destroy? See again Eph. 2: 14, "For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us." Compare this with Gal. 2: 18, 19, "For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor. For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God." To "live to God" the Jews must be "dead unto the law" which makes, or constitutes their national distinction. If any such national restoration is ever to take place, Paul knew it as well as any in the present age of the world. If he believed it, why did he not labor to promote such an object, by defending their peculiar institutions, instead of leveling all his powers to pull them down? He every where, and on all occasions, went against their national peculiarities; and declares, Gal. 5: 2, "That if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing." He evidently considers a return of the Jewish peculiarities a renunciation of Christianity fatal to salvation.

The Jews, then, were but a type of the seed of Abraham by Christ. Christ being "the seed," and those who are Christ's, by faith, being the promised heirs, according to the design of God. See Gen. 22: 8; "In thy [Abraham's] seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Compare this with Gal. 3: 8, 16, 29, "And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all nations be blessed," &c.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, FEB. 20, 1856.

☞ In consequence of our removal and the difficulty of procuring compositors, we were under the necessity of suspending the issue of the Crisis for one week.

☞ Our correspondents would oblige us much, if, whenever they send money for new subscribers, they will just state that they are new subscribers: otherwise we have to examine our books to ascertain whether their names are on or not.

DATE OF THE PAPER.—We have hitherto, perhaps too much in conformity with the custom of other papers, dated the Crisis on Saturday, although it has usually been struck off on Wednesday. We have concluded it would be more consistent and unexceptionable to date it on the day of its publication.

Our friends will remember and direct all letters for this Office to Boston, Mass., instead of Lowell.

Our Change of Locality, etc.

As we have now removed to the Metropolsi of the State, it may, perhaps, be thought by some that we shall conform to the fashions and customs of Metropolitan life, and thus depart from the simplicity of the Gospel; but if ever I felt a deep solicitude in behalf of the Crisis, that in every line and letter it might harmonize with the mind and will of Christ, it is now. If ever I have enjoyed the freedom of the Spirit in commending the case to God—submitting all to His control, it is now. O, I do feel a great solicitude that the glory of God and the edification of the Church may he promoted, and the good of souls be the happy result. It makes my heart burn within me when I hear from different sections of the vineyard, such as that in which Sr. Geirlow resides, the urgent appeals for light and truth in relation to the great and glorious doctrine of the Redeemer's coming and Kingdom. I feel anxious that the Crisis should go forth as on wings of light—blazing with the fire of love—illuminating all in its course—cheering the heart of the saint—comforting the way-worn pilgrim with the glad and triumphant intelligence, "Behold thy king cometh." The bowers of Eden with their blooming glories—the vinyards of Canaan with their pendent clusters of fruit are in view—the olive spreading its luxuriant foliage to the sunlight of heaven—an emblem of peace to which there shall be no end!

O that every correspondent of the Crisis may seek first the honor of Christ, the glory of His name, the adornment of His doctrine, the diffusion of His peaceful, blessed Spirit among men. Let this be the first, greatest, nay the only object of all who write. Let their eye be single that their whole bodies may be full of light—that they may be the organs of divine communication to their fellow men. Let others, if they choose, strive to be great; we will strive to be the least, sitting at the feet of Jesus, learning words of Him, to the consolation of our hearts, and the edification of our souls in the divine life. O, that every portion of meat that is dealt out to the household through the columns of the Crisis, may be such as shall strengthen the weak, encourage the wavering, and confirm the confidence of Christ's little ones in the promise of eternal life.

On the one hand, let no one write to gratify self, or display talent in communicating truth; and on the other, let none who have the truths of God's word burning within them, which it is their duty to present through the medium of the paper, keep back from feeding the little flock.—"He that watereth shall be watered." "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Come, Brn., let us form in God's order of battle. Let us come up a consolidated phalanx of faithful soldiers, having on the whole armor glittering in the sunbeams of divine light. Let us organize after the economy of God's house, bound together by the covenant of grace, instituted between God and the soul, ratified in heaven and witnessed on earth by a godly life and conversation. The spirit of Christ is not, as some think, a disorganizing, scattering, distracting principle; it contains the elements of heaven's order; it promotes an organization of God,s house through the sanctification of the word, by the belief of the truth and the harmonizing influences of the Gospel. These elements are not explosive in their character, causing disruption, alienation and confusion in the body of Christ; they are attracting, cementing, binding together the hearts of men in chains stronger than adamant. The influence is not a spirit of repulsion, but of attraction; not of discord but of harmony; not of division, but of cohesion. It is not a spirit of contention and strife, but that which says, "peace be within thy walls." Now, Brn., shall we come into harmony in feeling, concentration in action, oneness of spirit, unity of the faith, and love unfeigned? The names of the first-born Church whose record is in high, will be soon disclosed to the universe, and shall we, when heaven shouts, and the glorified saints sing on Mount Zion, find our names written among the living in Jerusalem? If we would join in the triumph and unite in the song, let us do what we can now for the spread of light and truth in the earth—that the Church may be united in one common bond of love, and thus an electric circle of communication causing heaven's electric fire of love to run from heart to heart, be enjoyed among all the members of Christ's body, and every heart to vibrate in unison with all the rest; so that every whisper of sorrow may be responded to by sympathetic hearts throughout the circle, and every note of praise thrill through the entire ranks of the associated body. Let this spirit be manifest, and light will break forth like the sun, an effulgence of moral glory such as has not been seen since the age in which the sovereign Head manifested His glory on the earth.

Brn. pray much—pray always—pray FERVENTLY—pray WITHOUT CEASING—keep the communication open between your souls and heaven—a free and constant intercourse between yourselves and the Author and Finisher of your faith—the Life-giver to the Church. Such a spirit of devotion refines the moral sense, awakens the latent energies of the soul to spiritual action, creates supreme love to Christ and the interests of His Church, promotes spirituality and heavenly-mindedness; in short, re-creates the man, diffuses its benign, softening, cleansing influence throughout the entire being. O, let us strive to overcome—wait on the Lord—renew our strength—mount above the earth like the eagles—soar toward heaven in our affections—and be the light of the world and the salt of the earth. Thus, when all our moral powers are brought into action, and all that we possess is fully consecrated to God, peace will reign within, joy will animate the heart, love will fill the soul, and the full development of the power of Christianity will be realized. Such examples will utter tones of thunder to the transgressor—will address heavenly consolation to the Church, and adorn the doctrine of our Saviour. May God help us thus to live and sacrifice for Him, that we may be remembered with the jewels in the Great Day.

Affairs of Kansas.

As the spirit of war which has so long pervaded the Eastern continent, and thrown the governments occupying the territory of the old Roman Empire into commotion and distress, is beginning to diffuse itself alarmingly within our own hitherto peaceful borders, I have deemed it advisable to give what information I could on the subject which is likely now to become the all-absorbing theme in our land. It is pressing upon the attention of Congress, and all the officers of government, as well as the members of both houses, are beginning to feel that a crisis is impending, and danger of civil war is imminent.

Implements of death are being purchased for Kansas, even in Massachusetts. Last Sunday evening a meeting was called on this subject, in this city, at which we learn some $4 or 500 were raised for the purpose.

Preparations are made, if reports from Washington may be relied on, to arrest the members of the Legislature in Kansas at its meeting on the 4th of March. Should this measure be carried out, it would come upon the nation like an earthquake shock, that would shake the pillars of the Union. What scenes are now before us, we know not; but it would not be strange if our ears were made to tingle with the report of American citizens engaged in deadly conflict, in which torrents of blood may flow. Provided civil war should ensue, what would restrain the savage ferocity of bondmen goaded to desperation, from sweeping all before it in many sections of the slave-holding States? We would willingly pray that God's providence might avert such a catastrophe, but blood cries for vengeance—"Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin," is written on the walls of the palace, and the long-delayed judgment must come. Let us, Brn., take heed that we be not overtaken in the snare, but stand aloof from the spirit of war which is fast spreading over our country, and be prepared to escape all those things that are fast coming on the earth.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. Roworth.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11, 1856.

Bro. Merriam:—I am happy to say that the brethren and sisters here are strong in faith, looking for deliverance the coming Spring. I cannot see how we can carry the prophetic periods beyond that point. I had thought that they ended last Spring, reckoning the going forth of the commandment 445 years before Christ, and 1855 after Christ would make 2300 years. This would be true if we were to commence Anno Domini 1, one year after the birth of Christ; but if we call it Anno Domini 1 at the birth of Christ, then it must run to the Spring of 1856 to make the full 2300 years. So the argument is good for the days to end in the month Nisan, and our Deliverer to come, the host to be delivered, and the sanctuary to be cleansed. O, my dear brother, is it so? Are we so near home? Will the vision speak and not lie? O, happy thought, to all the tried and tempted ones! My soul says, Amen! let it come; and my daily prayer is that all my dear brethren and sisters may be found ready for the great event—without spot or wrinkle or any such thing.

I am happy to say that there is a waking up amongst the virgins here, and an anxious desire for all the Advent brethren and sisters to become united in one body, Jesus Christ being the Head—as we acknowledge no other. This is just as it should be; for Jesus prayed that his Church might be one as he and the Father were one. We are truly living in a very solemn time, when they who are in darkness are now crying, "peace and safety," when "sudden destruction shall come upon them, and they shall not escape." But, brethren and sisters, we "are not in darkness that that day should overtake us as a thief in the night;" we "are not of the night, but of the day." Let us "be sober and hope to the end." When a few more weeks shall have passed, I trust our deliverance will come.

Yours, looking for Immortality and Eternal Life, this year,

ELD. WM. ROWORTH.

Letter from Br. R. Wakefield.

NEWARK, Feb. 14, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—Last week I wrote you to send us thirty copies of the Crisis, next volume. Enclosed is the amount of our subscription.

I hope, dear brother, the Lord will bless you and prosper you in your work of faith and labor of love, and give you an abundant reward in his everlasting kingdom.

Let the Crisis continue to be, as it has been, a messenger of peace and love, freighted with Gospel truth and grace, independent of parties, a free medium for the transmission of those heavenly rays which the Father of lights may in mercy communicate to His Church. Then will it be, as also it has been, a blessing and a comfort to the toiling traveller, and a source of instruction to the enquirer after light and truth.

Yours, in hope of soon obtaining the crown of life that fadeth not away, at the appearing of Jesus our Lord,

R. WAKEFIELD.

☞ Inasmuch as we have found it difficult to obtain compositors, since our removal to Boston, the thought has struck our minds, that there may, perhaps, be some of our sisters in the faith of Jesus, residing at a distance, who might like to work in the office of the Crisis, in setting type.

We want immediately two experienced hands, and for such we would pay the highest prices paid for female compositors. Please address a line to the Editor.

☞ Our friends will observe that the Committee have altered the terms of subscription for those who receive 30 copies to one address, for 6 months, from $18 to $22; and for those who receive 20 copies to one address, for 6 months, from $14 to $15. The object of making this change is that the terms may be made more equal for all our subscribers.

For the Crisis.

The Lamb and the Lion.

BY WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

Once on Calvary's rugged brow
The Lamb of God was slain;
Unlike this Lamb He's coming now
In majesty to reign;
But as the Lion of Judah's tribe
He comes—the Conquering One.
Great day of God; who shall abide,
When Nations meet their doom?

Brn. Beloved of God; When John the baptizer emerged from the "deserts" and began in the wilderness of Judah to discharge fearlessly the high and holy functions of his divine commission in calling upon mankind to "Repent, for the kingdom is at hand," with that solemn authority so characteristic of the inspired messengers of God; perhaps in all his ministry he never uttered a more glorious sentiment, or one containing a more important truth to a perishing race than the following: "Behold the lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." This was a heart-consoling exclamation of John's, more especially to the guiltless Israelites as they alone were capable of comprehending the depth of its meaning, and fully appreciating the important truth which it contained. They saw in Jesus the perfect sacrifice which had been prefigured for so many centuries in those sacrifices, "which can never take away sins." They understood the law of sacrifice would be consummated by and through him who was the Lamb of God. How beautifully appropriate the emblem under which the Son of God is here introduced to the world in his first advent. When we reflect upon the innocence and moral excellence manifested through the entire period of his suffering and laborious mission, we are ready to inquire Where in all creation could be found an emblem more befitting than an innocent Lamb, both as regards the purity and perfection of his character, and his offering himself once for all? He ever exemplified a lamb-like meekness of character, he "gave his back to the smiters." Examine, if you please, the developments of his character and see if he was not "without blemish and without spot." Behold him in the manger (strange birth place for the Son of God); in all the loveliness of his infancy—his flight into Egypt, under divine direction, from the face of Herod the destroyer—his return to the land of Judea—behold him in the temple (still but a child) confounding the most learned of the Rabbi's with the abundance of his wisdom—observe him in his public ministry, his contacts with the enemy, by whom "when he was reviled, he reviled not again," "enduring the contradiction of sinners against himself." On all these trying occasions did he not ever evince a spirit of the utmost kindness and forbearance? Behold him dispelling the fears of the timid, imparting joy to the sorrowful, understanding to the simple, strength to the weak, hope to the disconsolate; binding up the broken-hearted, healing the wounded, feeding the hungry, bidding the lame to leap forth, cleansing the lepers, giving sight to the blind, unstopping the ears of the deaf, causing the dumb to speak aloud in praise to God, and with his simple fiat raising the dead! Behold him in his temptations with the devil, his victory over that arch-fiend.

"Cold mountains, and the midnight air,
Witnessed the fervor of his prayer;
The desert his temptations knew,
The conflict, and the victory too."

Behold the Lamb of God in Gethsemane—before his false accusers in the judgment hall, condemned to be crucified—see him scourged, clothed in purple, his sacred head disfigured with a "platted crown of thorns"—mark him smitten on the "head with a reed"—see his accusers "spit upon him," "and bowing their knees, worship him" in derision. Behold him conveyed by the vociferous multitude to Calvary's mournful height. Look upon him nailed to the bloody cross,—see the blood oozing from his forehead, his hands, his feet, and from his side pierced by a soldier's spear—"wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace laid upon him," cut off from the land of the living, pouring his soul out unto death; and lo! amid the painful scene creation is moved in sympathy with fearful heavings of emotion sad. And in the midst of this fearfully exciting and terribly sublime scene, behold the Lamb of God in his last expiring moments, and listen to his dying utterance, "Father forgive them; for they know not what they do." And here we remark that the Son of God never offered a prayer, but such as was in harmony with the Father's will; hence even for those poor wretched beings, who laid cruel hands upon him, and who actually put him to death, even for such there is a ray of hope! O, what a fullness of love dwells in the bosom of the Redeemer! Should this article fall under the eye of some wanderer from God, may this thought deeply penetrate his heart, and result in that genuine repentance which gives peace with God through our Lord Jesus the Messiah; and in this connection we cannot but add, that should a man perish under such infinite benevolence, how great must be that loss.

But we proceed—here at the crufixion, Jesus virtually fulfils the character presented under the figure of a Lamb by the one offering of himself for all, and while he virtually ceases to appear under this emblem, he assumes the more majestic and imposing character of a Lion; though as the first will not actually cease until the close of this dispensation, (which is very near its terminus,) so the second will not be "made manifest" until the establishment of the heavenly administration at his Second Advent.

Through all the dispensation of the Gospel, this beautiful sentiment has ever been prominent in its sweet and melting influence, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world!" O sinner, behold the Lamb of God as presented to you in the volume of inspiration, and live forever. Behold him in his humiliation, his ministry, his agony and death. Behold him here, and let the bloody scene of Calvary penetrate your inmost heart, that you may feel willing at once to "die unto sin," and by the Eternal Spirit be "made alive unto God." View him now as in the Gospel, Jesus the Lamb, and secure thy salvation; for soon, very soon, it will be too late. The hour of probation will be past and gone forever; and thou shalt be summoned to witness another scene of awful grandeur which shall bring terror and dismay to an unbelieving world: for "Behold he cometh, with clouds, and every eye shall see him; and they also which pierced him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him, even so, Amen. He will not come as "the Lamb of God;" ah, no, but as "the Lion of the tribe of Judah."

The difference of character presented under those figures, you will observe, is of the most stsiking nature. The transition from a Lamb to a Lion, all must admit, is remarkable. The Lion in Scripture usually designates a great warrior, or conqueror. It also symbolizes dignity, exaltation, and power, which we shall find comports in every particular with the descriptions ot Jesus in his second coming as set forth by the inspired writers.

"Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise; thy hand shall be on the neck of thine enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee. Judah is a lion's whelp; from the prey my son, thou art gone up; he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?" "The Lion is come up from the thicket, the destroyer of the gentiles is on his way. He is gone forth from his place to make thy land desolate; and thy cities shall be laid waste without an inhabitant." "Behold he shall come up as a lion from the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong." "O God, thou art terrible out of thy holy places, our God shall come and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. A fire goeth before him and burneth up his enemies round about." "He shall break them with a rod of iron . . dash them to peices like a potter's vessel." Again: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? . . . . (so) glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength! I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat? I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me; for I will tread them in my anger, and trample them in my fury, and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment. For the day of vengeance is in my heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. And I will tread down the people (his enemies) in mine anger, and make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth. Behold the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him." "God came from Teman, and the Holy One from mount Paran, Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. And his brightness was as the light. He had horns coming out of his hand; and there was the hiding of his power. Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet. He stood and measured the earth; he beheld, and drove asunder the nations; and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow; his ways are everlasting." Finally: "And I saw heavens opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war, His head and his hairs were white, like wool, as white as snow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire; And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace, and his voice as the sound of many waters, his countanence as the sun shineth in his strength, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written that no man knew, but he himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood; and his name is called The Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and the wrath of Almighty God, and he hath on his vesture, and on his thigh a name written: King of Kings, and Lord of Lords." Behold the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, he hath prevailed.

We have in as concise a manner as is consistent with the nature of the subject contemplated Jesus, both in his lamb-like and lion-like characters. We might have adduced numerous other Scriptures bearing on the subject, but we trust a sufficient number has been presented to show that there is a striking difference in the manifestation of Jesus as first he came, and that manifestation which is yet future.

In the capacity of the Lamb of God, at his first advent, the divine purpose was accomplished; and his humiliation, his life, and his work, all sweetly harmonise without a jarring note: so in the capacity of the Lion of the tribe of Judah, at his glorious second appearing (now impending) "the eternal purpose" of God will be fully consummated; and Messiah's herculean "work before him," will equally accord with the royal character under which he is symbolized.

Let us now briefly view the Son of God in these two aspects, and carefully mark the contrast. As the Lamb, he had "not where to lay his head"; as the Lion, he comes the rightful heir of "the purchased possession"—"the earth and the fullness thereof." Once he suffered, and the powers of darkness seemed for "a little while" to triumph, for that was the day of men; now he endures no longer; it is the day of God. Then he extended to sinners the golden sceptre of mercy, which they might touch and be preserved; now he comes wielding the iron rod, with which he breaks his foes and "dashes them to pieces like a potter's vessel." Then he was derided, spit upon, clothed in purple garments, and worshipped by a few in derision; now he comes adored by many, and robed in the ineffable glories of the divinity—amid the joyous hallelujahs of innumerable, holy and happy intelligences—worshipped by "the whole family in heaven and earth." Hallelujah to God, in view of such scenes of grandeur and glory.

Again, at his first coming he had but few attendants and fewer followers; now ten thousand times ten thousand swell the triumph of his train, "And the armies which are in heaven, follow him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, clean and white." Then upon that sacred head "a platted crown of thorns" was placed by wicked hands, symbolical of his rejection as King; now

He comes! adorned his brow,
"And on his head are many crowns;"
"The Lion of the tribe of Judah."
Who can endure his frowns?

Then he prayed in behalf of his enemies, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do;" now the stern and authoritative mandate proceeds from his lips, "Those of mine enemies which would not that I should reign over them, bring them hither and slay them before me." And finally, then he came but to tarry a little season; now, blessed be God, he comes to take up his abode forever and ever. The trump of God has sounded—the sainted dead are raised—the living are changed to immortality—the wicked are destroyed—the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Anointed—the curse is removed—all tears are wiped away—there is "no more death, neither sorrow nor crying"—no more pain,

"for the former things are passed away." The Apocalyptic declaration is fulfilled. "And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."

"Shout, all the people of the sky,
And all the saints of the Most High;
Our Lord, who now his right maintains,
Forever and forever reigns."

Beloved, in view of this great day impending—in view of the glory to be revealed—in view of the joys that are set before us, O, let us be faithful—keeping the commandments of God and the testimony of Jesus—improving all the privileges and blessings offered through him as "the Lamb of God," that we may ultimately realize all that happiness and glory which will be bestowed upon the saints through him as "the Lion of the tribe of Judah."

"Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly, above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end. Amen."

Elizabeth City, N. J., Dec. 1855.

Letter from Br. Anson Little.

Macomb, McDonough Co., Ill., Feb. 4, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I thank you for your kindness in publishing and sending the Crisis, not only to me, but also to the world. It is my wish that the Crisis might be sustained, and I send you * * * to help you in your good undertaking to arouse a slumbering Church and a guilty world, to awake and trim their lamps and be prepared to meet our coming Lord; for without doubt the two thousand three hundred days, or years, will soon run out; and then we have the promise from Him that cannot lie, that the sanctuary shall be cleansed. Therefore, the next great prophetic event may be the Day of the Lord which hasteth greatly. May you and I, my dear brother, be prepared to meet that day with joy and gladness, is the prayer of your unworthy servant, Anson Little.

Letter from Brother Horatio Slater.

Granby, Feb. 7th, 1856.

Dear Brother Merriam:—I enclose one dollar for your paper, and should be glad to send five, if I were able to labor.

It seems as though I could not be deprived of reading the Crisis. It truly cheers my heart, while passing through the last day perils, to read the soul-stirring letters from the brethren and sisters scattered abroad. I believe that our work is almost done. I don't expect to continue long, unless Jesus comes very soon; but if I fall I believe I shall rise again, and put on immortality, O, may the spirit of the Lord rest upon you, that you may be able to feed the flock of Christ. May the Lord bless you in all your labors, is the prayer of your

Unworthy brother,
Horatio Slater.

Letter from Sr. S. J. Higgins.

Ware, Feb. 5, 1856.

Br. Merriam,—Will you please to recall my husband's appointments, as he is sick with a fever. He had thrown it off, but exposing himself too soon, is obliged to yield to a second attack. He appears to be doing well. We, through the blessing of God, hope for the best. Say to the brn. that he will endeavor to meet them when able.

Your sister, looking for that land "where the inhabitants will never say, I am sick."

S. J. Higgins.
For A. M. Higgins.

P. S. Will the Christian Reformer please copy?

☞ Gen. Lane of Kansas in a letter to President Pierce, dated Jan. 21, calls on the federal government to interpose and protect the free State citizens of Kansas from an overwhelming force of the citizens of Missouri, who seem bent on destroying both life and property.

☞ Will Br. Linus Wilcox give us his Post Office address?

☞ We have received orders for Br. Z. Campbell's works which we cannot, at present, fill. Hope to have more on hand soon.

A letter from St. Petersburg says that in the course of the last campaign in Asia, more than 60,000 images of saints were dispatched from that city for the edification of Gen. Mouravieff's army. Prince Paskiewitch is still alive, but beyond the possibility of recovery. His disease is internal cancer.

Kansas Calls for Help.

The Governor of Ohio has sent to the Legislature of that State a special message on Kansas affairs. This message was occasioned by the following circular, which, it appears, has been sent to the Governors of the other States, and which Gov. Chase communicated to the Legislature along with his message.—The same circular has been received by Gov. Clark of New York, and was communicated to the Legislature of that State, on Saturday the 9th. A similar communication, we presume, has been received by Gov. Gardner:

Lawrence City, K. T., Jan. 21, 1856.

To His Excellency the Governor of Ohio:

Sir: We have authentic information that an overwhelming force of the citizens of Missouri are organizing upon our border, amply supplied with artillery, for the avowed purpose of invading our territory—demolishing our towns, and butchering our unoffending free State citizens. We hope to be able to hold out until assistance can reach us. We respectfully request, on behalf of the citizens of Kansas, that such steps may be taken by the people of the States as humanity suggests, to prevent the successful carrying out of so inhuman an outrage.

Respectfully,
John H. Lane, Chairman Ex. Com. K. T.
C. Robinson, Governor elect of Kansas.
Geo. Deitzler, Secretary.

In his message relative to this appeal from Kansas, Gov. Chase gives a brief history of the proceedings in that territory, and describes the present alarming condition of things there. He states that he has information from various sources which fully confirms what is stated by Messrs. Robinson and Lane. On the reception of this message there was a short and exciting debate.

It appears that the people in several of the counties of Ohio were already doing something to aid the settlers in Kansas, and this official appeal from that beleaguered territory, will doubtless quicken their movements. The Plainville Telegraph of Feb. 6th, has the following paragraph:

"Help for Kansas—Is coming in quite freely; Guns, Rifles, Pistols, Swords, and some Money. Mr. Seth Marshall has been associated with us upon the Committee for the County, and during the present week will call upon our citizens. It is now the turning point with Kansas! In our next paper we must be able to report what help the people of Kansas may expect from Lake County.—Our neighbors of Ashtabula County, the past week, sent on arms sufficient for two companies—and we hear rumor that Gen. Bierce of Summit County, has already enlisted a regiment of 300 men! While we still labor and hope for a peaceful issue of this struggle—it will be well to 'keep our powder dry.'"

It is very certain that Atchison and Stringfellow are diligently endeavoring to organize a force in Missouri, with which to murder the free State settlers in Kansas and destroy their towns; and they feel encouraged to do so by the special message of President Pierce. The New York Courier and Enquirer has a letter from Lawrence dated Jan. 26, from which we take the following:

"While these things are transpiring in the territory, we observe that our neighbors in Missouri are preparing for a death struggle. All along the border of that State military companies are forming, and are daily drilling and qualifying themselves for service. There is not a doubt but that another expedition is being fitted out for an invasion of the territory. Several expresses have arrived within the past few days bringing information of the movements of the enemy, and urging us to be on our guard against surprise. So numerous, and from so many different points has this intelligence come, that Generals Robinson and Lane have commenced making preparations for their reception. The several fortifications which were thrown up during the late invasion, have been fitted up, barracks built within them, and each one is now garrisoned by a company of volunteer soldiers, who exhibit all the tactics of regular service. Sentinels are constantly on duty, and no person is allowed to enter or depart without the strictest surveilance.

'Couriers have been dispatched through the country, requesting the people to organize military companies, and hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's notice; while others have been sent to the border towns in Missouri to purchase ammunition. A half a ton of lead was brought into town yesterday, and several hundred pounds of powder, and more is expected to-night. Measures will also be taken to collect a large supply of provisions at this point, for it is evident we have more to apprehend from want of provisions and provender for horses, than from any other cause. We are also short of arms. A thousand Sharp's rifles would be the greatest boon which could be conferred on us at this moment. These implements of warfare, in the hands of a coward, would convert him instantly into a brave man. Our friends in the States should take measures to send us a quantity at once. No one need be afraid they will be used improperly, as we have as cool men as there are in the world, to direct when they shall be used. The few arms among us already have saved us from destruction. We also need mrney. The people are poor. They have expended large sums in getting here and in getting located, and can but poorly afford to spend their time and money to fight the battles of freedom, where every true-hearted American is alike interested with themselves."

Preparing for War.—The recent rumors set afloat by the Washington correspondent of the New York papers of a suspension of friendly intercourse between the United States and Great Britain, have alarmed the good people of Canada, and they are making preparations for war. The Rochester Union is informed by a gentleman direct from Toronto, that fourteen loads of ammunition are now on the road from Kingston to Toronto. Each load is drawn by four horses, and Mink, the stage proprietor, is to receive $1200 for the transportation service. This looks warlike—as if the people of the province were alarmed. The transportation of ammunition by land such a long distance is unusual, and must cause some excitement among the people along the frontier towns.—Buffalo Daily Courier.

The national debt of Russia amounts at the present moment to 1,158,988,000 silver roubles; in the year 1844 it was only 833,024,000 silver roubles.

Extracts from a Kansas Letter.

We copy the following interesting paragraph from a letter published in the Traveller, written at the Free State Hotel, Lawrence, Kansas Territory, Jan. 25, 1856:

"As I write, the heavy and measured tread of the sentinel, as he paces his beat on the roof above my head, in the midst of a blinding snow storm, reminds me that I am at the very focus towards which all eyes are now turned. And well they may be. This nation, at least the northern portion of it, are not aware that they are standing on the very brink of a volcano, just ready to belch forth its destructive torrents. Recent events, of which you are already cognizant, indicate a desperation on the part of the slavery propagandists which will lead them to any length. Since the termination of the Shannon war, so called, outrages have been committed which indicate a savage ferocity which puts to shame the atrocities of early Indian wars.

The immediate condition of affairs is on this wise. The South are determined to have Kansas at any hazard short of self-destruction. The people of this territory at least, and I hope of a part of the North, are determined she shall not, unless by fair means, and on those terms she cannot get it. The climate, the soil, the scenery here, everything combines to make men and women prefer to die here rather to live elsewhere. Multitudes of true-hearted men and women have planted themselves here as champions of freedom, on a soil they mean to defend against the curse of slavery. To a man, aye to a woman, they will die rather than yield. If you would see an exhibition of the spirit of '76, come here.—Men are to-night in the midst of an inclement storm, not surpassed by a New England north-easter, sleeping on their arms in the trenches, or pacing with silent and muffled tread their rounds on guard. The women two have been busily at work running the bullets and making the cartridges; and not a few of them take for their recreation a turn at the target to gain skill in the use of the revolver.

The truth is we are liable to a surprise at any moment. Bands of picked men are being quietly organized in Missouri to rendezvous at different points and then to rush in upon us like savages, under cover of night, and destroy our town and seize the leaders.

Gen. Robinson does not sleep at his own house, but takes his quarters here in this fortress, and sleeps sometimes in my room, while a company of soldiers are quartered in another near by. The roof of the building, three stories in height, has a parapet running all around it, pierced with loop holes, from which in a street fight there could be poured a most destructive volley of rifle balls. The thorough lookout which is being kept, will, we think, prevent us being taken by surprise, and so long as we are supposed to be well and completely armed and determined to die rather than be taken, to be hacked to pieces by demons with wood hatchets, they will not meddle with us. But we need arms. We must have them. Ammunition, men; all the needs of war. To be prepared for war is the best guarantee of peace. A large commission has been sent West, North and East, to urge the necessity of immediate action.

I have for a long time felt that the crisis had come, and that the question had to be decided here; but I did not know the desperation which the slave power would throw into this her last struggle, and the final decision of her fate."

Desperate Affray in a School House.—The Lebanon (Tenn.) Herald of the 24th ultimo gives the following account of a terrible and fatal fight in a school-room in Wilson county, in that State:

"The most distressing homicide we ever heard of, occurred in this county, about seven miles northeast of Lebanon, on last Monday morning week, between Rufus Watson and his three sons on the one side and two sons of John New on the other. The unfortunate difficulty occurred in a school-room.—Young New, aged about 19 years, was shot through the heart, and expired immediately; and his little brother, some 13 or 14 years of age, was almost literally cut to pieces, receiving no less, we learn, than seven dangerous wounds, every one of them penetrating to the hollow. Strange as it may appear he is still living, and hopes are entertained of his recovery. Rufus Watson received the contents of a pistol loaded with bird shot in his breast, but was not seriously hurt. The difficulty grew out of an old grudge that had existed between the heads of the respective families.

"Watson and his sons were tried at Taylorsville on Friday last. On hearing the evidence the court held them to bail in the sum of four thousand dollars. One of the boys was bailed out, but the other two and the father, failing to give bail, were committed to jail to await their trial at the next term of the Circuit Court."

Hawaii.—Eruption of Mauna Loa.—We have received a letter from a correspondent residing at Honolulu, dated the 4th of December last, which gives interesting particulars in relation to the eruptions from this volcano. About the 1st of November last, strong apprehensions were felt by its citizens that Hilo would be destroyed by the lava flowing from near the top of Mauna Loa. At the date of this letter these apprehensions had been revived; and it is stated that, unless the eruption now ceases, or is greatly diminished, there seems hardly a hope but that the worst fears of the inhabitants of this place will be realized.

The termination of the stream of lava on the 16th of December last was eight miles west-south-west from Hilo, and its course was directly towards Byron's bay and the town. On the night following, it made an unusually rapid progress and spread over a much wider space than before, which circumstance was probably owing to the structure of the ground.

Our correspondent expresses the opinion that the next advices from the seat of danger will be of such a character as to indicate with some degree of certainty the fate of the finest portion of Hawaii. The destruction of Hilo would, indeed, be a great calamity to these islands.—Washington Union.

Kansas Emigration—Octagon Settlement.—A company has been formed in this city, composed of fifty-five families, and numbering in all about two hundred persons, who will emigrate to Kansas the coming Spring. They have a subscribed capital of $29,500. A site has already been selected—a place on the banks of the Neosho river, near the southern boundary of Kansas.—N. Y. Evening Post.

We shall, in all probability, hear in a few days that a civil war rages in Kansas.

Fate of the Murderers of Lovejoy.—A correspondent of the Ravenna Democrat, writing from Alton, Illinois, says:

"An old and intelligent citizen, formerly of the [illegible] who was present at the death of Lovejoy, stated to me that as he was acquainted with the two men who shot him, he resolved to mark their after history. The first, a Dr. Beall, went to Texas, was taken by the Indians, and chopped to pieces and divided among the tribes. The other man by the name of Jennings, went to New-Orleans, and in an affray in a gambling-house was cut to pieces with a bowie-knife. Thus perished the miserable murderers of Lovejoy. The fall of Lovejoy was the death-blow to the growth and prosperity of Alton. Many business men became disgusted, and abandoned the place, and others who were seeking homes and business places in the West passed it.—Thus for more than twelve years, Alton was a hiss and a byword, and it is only very recently that it has exhibited signs of life and growth. It is a fixed fact in the minds of the people of Alton that no such occurrence would be permitted to transpire in their midst again."

Washington Rumor.—A Washington correspondent of the Herald telegraphs, 16th inst. as follows:

"Gov. Shannon left this afternoon for Kansas. He will travel night and day until he reaches Shawnee Mission. The President desired him to arrive there before the State Legislature assembles at Topeka on the 4th of March next. He has full power, I understand, to arrest the members of that Legislature, as its meeting is deemed by powers that be an over act, and as such deserving of severe punishment. If he carries out his instructions, it is thought by gentlemen now here, who are residents of Kansas, that there will be a collision between the federal authorities and the Free State men."

Washington, Feb. 16.

Gov. Shannon.—Gov. Shannon will leave this afternoon direct for St. Louis, and thence to Kansas. Immediately on his arrival, he will remove his office from Shawnee Mission to Lecompte, the centre of the prevailing difficulties.

Orders will be issued from the War Department this afternoon, and will probably be conveyed by Gov. Shannon to Col. Sumner, of Fort Leavenworth. These orders will no doubt be in accordance with the President's views, as expressed in his late Kansas message and the recent proclamation, with the design firmly to enforce them. There are 800 troops at Fort Leavenworth, and 400 at Fort Riley, who are to be called out if circumstances shall demand it.

From Kansas.—The Leavenworth Herald of Feb. 9th says that a pro-slavery meeting was held there on the 2d inst., at which it was determined to offset the influence of the Free State agents sent abroad by dispatching Gen. W. McLean to the Southern States to give the people the pro-slavery aspect of the case and to urge Southerners to emigrate to the territory and aid in rescuing the control of affairs from the hands of the abolitionists of Lawrence.

Robinson, Lane, Brown & Co. are doing everything possible to bring on a civil war. They apprehend that many Free State men will refuse to follow them into rebellion against the federal authority and the laws of the territory.

The Topeka Herald appeals to the friends of the North and East to hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's notice, that the struggle begins to show itself in earnest, and invokes the people to die in preference to surrendering.

The Herald of Freedom says that Messrs. Robinson and Lane have adopted precautionary measures and organized a regiment; that the forts are guarded day and night and that munitions of war were being collected in readiness for instant service, an attack being expected.

The President's special Kansas message had reached Leavenworth but not Lawrence.

India and China. Bombay dates are to Jan. 22. The Santhal insurrection was suppressed, and quiet exists throughout India.

Great Britain is about to seize Oudue to to allow its King a pension of half a million of dollars, to reduce its army from 80,000 to 15,000 men, and appoint the English General Outram, Governor of the country.

A very angry correspondence is said to be passing between Rome and Austria on the use of the concordat in Lombardy.

One week later from Europe.

Halifax, Feb. 17.

The royal Mail Steamship Canada, from Liverpool on the afternoon of Saturday, the 2d, inst., arrived here at 4 o'clock this morning, en route for Boston.

The London Morning Advertiser has the following announcement:—

"We regret to hear that at an interview which Lord Clarendon and Mr. Bachanan had together at the foreign office on Tuesday, very angry words passed between them relative to the Central American Question.

Peace Negotiations. The dispatches of the Russian Government completing and confirming the telegraphic announcement of the unconditional acceptance of Austria's propositions, were received at Vienna on the 23d ult, and a courier immediately conveyed them to Paris and London.

A memorandum embodying the proposition has been signed at Vienna, sent to Paris and London, and it is reported that the Congress will meet in Paris Feb. 16th; that very little time will be lost in the discussion, and that the whole will be brought to a conclusion by Feb. 25th. The signing of preliminaries prior to opening the Congress, now only awaits the arival of the Turkish Plenipotentiary.

Baron Burnow and Count Orloff are the Russian Plenipotentiries, assisted by Messrs. Titoff and Fenton; Lord Clarendon represents England; Marquis Daszelio, Sardinia; Count Buol, Austria; M. Waleski, France; Dennis Posha, Turkey.

Obituary.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Died, in Brunswick, at the residence of Br. Allen Getchell, on Saturday, Feb. 2, Br. Ranson Getchell, aged about 22 years.

A few months ago, Br. Getchell gave his heart to God, and was made happy in the faith of the Gospel. His sickness, which was consumption, he bore with great patience and resignation. Never was he heard to utter a murmuring word, but always seemed joyful in the thought, that all things worked together for his good. Before his death he gave directions concerning his funeral and selected a place for burial. He then calmly fell asleep in Jesus, rejoicing in the blessed assurance that he should sleep in the grave but a little while, before the Saviour that he loved to the end, would awake him to immortality.

May the same hope and faith that sustained this dear brother, be the consolation of all the mourning relatives and friends, that they may be prepared to meet him him where partings shall be known no more.

The funeral of Br. Getchell was attended by the writer, who endeavored to present the word of life from 1 Cor. 15: 54.

R. R. York.

Yarmouth, Me, Feb. 8, 1856.

For the Crisis.

The Righteous Dead.

Thoughts suggested on hearing of the Death of brother and sister Crawford.

How blest are the dead, who die in the Lord!
How sweet they sleep in their rest undisturbed!
The cares, woes and tumults of life all are hushed,
And lowly they sleep, as they moulder in dust.

So truly we loved them, we fain would have prayed,
O death, cruel death, let thy cold hand be stayed—
O, pray let them linger, our sad hearts to cheer,
To guide, love and cherish their fond children dear.

But death, the last foe, has not yet been destroyed—
Soon, soon, he will be, at the voice of the Lord;
Then, then, comes the triumph, our friends will come forth,
To meet the redeemed, in the glorified earth.

O may the dear Lord, in his power and his might,
Help us onward to move in life's pathway aright;
And when the last trump of his angel shall sound,
With his glorified saints, may we all then be found.

Eliza Whitford.

Washington, Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 26, 1856.

APPOINTMENTS.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at
Freeport, (Flying Point), Feb. 24.
Durham, (Parker School House), March 2.
R. R. York.

The Lord willing, I may be expected to administer the word of life as follows:
Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 24th.
S. S. Brewer.

The Lord willing, I will be at the following place to preach the word:
Orrington, Feb. 23d and 24th.
A. Ross.

Providence permitting, we will preach at Waldo Hall, Worcester, as follows:
J. Hemenway, Feb. 24.
H. Pratt, March 9.
E. Burnham, March 16.
S. S. Brewer, March 30.

God willing, I will preach in
The Advent Chapel, in Danville, Canada East, the two last Sabbaths in February, and in the vicinity, during the week, as the friends may arrange. I hope to see many of my former friends.
Edwin Burnham.

By divine permission, I will preach at West Hawley, Mass., Sunday, Feb. 24.
W. Sheldon.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Manchester, N. H., Thursday eve, Feb. 21.
Nashua, N. H., Friday eve, Feb. 22.
Lawrence, Mass., Wednesday eve, Feb. 27.
Salem, Mass., Thursday eve, Feb. 28.
Lynn Dye House, Mass., Sunday, March 2.
D. E. Moulton.

The Lord willing, Br. Boutell will preach in Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, Feb. 24.
Bro. S. S. Brewer, Sunday, March 2.
Bro. John Couch, Sunday, March 16.
In behalf of the Committee,
F. Flanders, Chairman.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Brimfield, Sunday, Feb. 24.
Clinton, Tuesday eve, Feb. 26.
Westford, Wednesday eve, Feb. 27.
Lowell, Thursday eve, Feb. 28.
Lawrence, Sunday, March 2.
Exeter, N. H., Tuesday and Wednesday eve, March 4 and 5.
Salem, Friday eve, March 7.
Lynn Dye House, Sunday, March 9.
Westboro', Tuesday eve, March 11.
Samuel Bragg.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chap.'s of Matthew, by I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts. single,		$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "	"
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 "	"
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50 "	"
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 "	"
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Outline of the Coast,	3 "	"	1,50 "	"
Voice of the Church,	$1 "	"	9 "	doz.

John Cumming's works, 75 cts. per volume.
Romanism, by John Cumming, $1,00.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P. O. address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

J M Dodge, S Leonard, R S Currier, S Hall, S Woodruff, C J Brown, L Storrs, F W Hutchins, J W Gilman, E J Gilman, B P Braley, C H Child, G Barrows, E A Martin, J Clough, M C Webster, E Heath, J J Johnson, T Baily, L Morin, N McCulloch, W S Devereux, O Dunham, J Armstrong, D Ford, A Smith, S Harding, N Woodcock, J Gale, B C Bancroft, Thos Williams, J G Smith, J Clark, S Boardman, T Chase, D Howell, J Blaisdell, E Piper, Mrs H Wilson, Amy Anthony, Seth Smith, B Jones, C Newell, J E Healy, O F Cain, F Clark, L Parmlee, B F Steeter, C Perry, T P Hodgdon, R Chase, C Stark, A B Andrews, C Lewis, W Howard, T Glover, R Whipple, J W Beckwith, S Dodge, A Burnett, P A Rice, D Veazey, W Shaw, G F Fowler, S K Fenton, E Garland, D W Spear, N Branch, S Sales, S Gault, A Richardson, M Garland, J S Beers, R Lyman, J Reeves, W Flanigan, D T Halstead, J S Weeks, W G Davison, A Tracy, H Perkins, P W White, T Chambers, A Maglue, Isaac Bartlett, Wm Bubeck, C Willet, M A Perkins, Chas Shattan, J Merriam, Seth Stone, E Harrington, S Cook, R Avery, L Osborn, S Terry, H Pratt, W Howard, L Haskell, L T Moses, T Wilkins, E Babbitt, E Graves, R Valentine, J Silkworth, Wm Perry, G N Marvin, S Marvin, A Bush, R C Jackman, B Fifield, A Hunt, G W Hunt, A Hazen, D Chase, G L White, M G Dunham, J Woodruff, D Kendall, J F Harden, Ira Quimby, J Morrill, N Keene, N M Henry, S N Laugly, L F Dodge, G F Turner, A S Kimball, W Lanhorn, H O Day, J Burt, J Brown, T Lee, T Fox, W Leach, A Hunt, H Burridge, R Neal, G W Mitchell, D Shaw, M Reynolds, A Little, J Morrison, C Miller, D L Stokes, N L Ribie, A Magregor, N Brown, M Hobart, F Converse, H Slater, C W Richards, S R Ward, J Capin, J Darling, M Burrell, A Pinney H Way, L Bristol, D G Stiles, O Bennett, S Plummer, J Achorn, T B Potter, M Broga, A Waterman, T Waters, S Palmer, E Jackson, L Smith, J Bodge, B Little, M A Stevens, B Hooper, R Morton, F S Axe, J Schlager, J Nash, A Hitchcock, S A Nicholas, H Thayer, F S Blake, D Aldrich, M Choate, C Haskins, J Stevens, P M Weaver, W Brown, L Elder, J West, D Morston, Wm J Ripley, J. Hutchins, F M Berry, J M Andrew, W J Hoyt, A Gifford, N McCullock, A Friend, N Parkhurst, J Spaulding jr, J Armstrong, J Linard, A Logan, G Butt, W Niles, W T. Harding, A Freeman, A P Wells, S E Clark, J Atkins, P Sanborn, E Knight, N Staples, W S Moulton, J Pulsifer, E A Cook, J M Andrews, A Jenney, $1 each.

E C Mack $2, A Hastings $2, H Wheeler 84 cts, Job Moody 30 cts, D Kinsman $4, E Mitchell $10, L Mills $2, E H Dennett $20, A F Bliss $3, Mrs McGregor $2, T Hardy $19, C A Warner $8, H W Pray $10, P White $4,80, T Chase $1,60, E Dexter $6, R Wakefield $18, J M Chaffee $2, E Vanalstine 25 cts, L Tuttle 68 cts.

For the poor—M C Webster $1, L Mills $1, E H Dennett $1, S Dodge 50 cts, D O Hart 50 cts, T Wilkins $1, S Marvin $1, F Converse $1, A Waterman 50 cts, F S Axe $1, J Armstrong $1, P White $1,60.

D Ingalls, N Fowler, M Mooney, J Johnson, C Doane, J W Ireland, J Canterbury, N D Wight, P Tandy, A Youngman, D O Hart, C Tuttle, Eli Wakeman, T Anderson, R Robbins, A W Griggs, S P Babcock, H Goodell, S Cook, J B Brown, J E Ainsworth, H Gray, A Wait, M Austin, D R Bale, P Z Carpenter, J Scott, J Chandler, H Finn, J Raymond, L Monk, W Pittsinger, J C Libby, A P Hyde, R Thompson, Wm Collier, H B Cross, M M Ross, A D Smith 50 cents each.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to publish his advertisement to the public.

From the Georgia Citizen.

Advent Hymn.

By Mrs. J. Gibrlow.

We're a little band of pilgrims,
  Seeking for a better land;
We've forsaken all for glory,
  Guided by our Saviour's hand.

Though we've oft been disappointed,
  Hoping soon His face to see;—
Yet in accents sweet He whispers:
  "As thy day, thy strength shall be!"

Truly He is ever faithful;
  All our wants have been supplied!
From His all-sufficient fulness,
  The good Lord will still provide.

Soon our trials will have ended:
  We shall reach that peaceful shore,
Where no sighs with joys are blended:
  We shall weep and want no more.

O, how joyful to be with Him!
  Share His honors and His throne;
Lean upon his faithful bosom:
  Feel that He is all our own!

Then the saints, who long have waited,
  With their lamps all burning bright,
Lose their hope in glad fruition,
  As they "walk with him in white."

And the loved ones who are sleeping
  In the cold and silent ground,
We shall meet in that glad morning,
  When th' archangel's trump shall sound.

Fellow-pilgrim, are you weary
  Of the roughness of the way?
Does your strength begin to fail you,
  Or your vigor to decay?

Keep your garment free from blemish;
  Ever be engaged in prayer:—
When the "book of life" is opened,
  You will be remembered there.

"Come, ye blessed of my Father!"
  Hark! it is the Saviour's voice:
"Enter through the crystal portals,
  Having made my paths your choice.

"I've prepared for you a city,
  Fairer, brighter than the sun;—
In my presence live forever—
  Victory's gained and glory won!"

Macon, Jan. 1856.

The Eastern War.

The following remarks we take from the Bible Examiner. The writer displays great ability and acuteness of thought in relation to the course of Napoleon III.:

"An English writer on prophecy, from whom we quoted in April, 1854, in relation to the "Projects of France," still continues to issue Tracts on the same subject. In one issued October last he speaks of "The Eagle" as the "legionary standard of the old Roman Empire;" which, after it was overwhelmed by the other invasions, rose again at the end of fourteen hundred years under the auspices of Napoleon I., but was again overwhelmed at Waterloo. Forty years then passed, and the Roman Eagle soared again with wings as firm and youthful as before. After dwelling in a few words on the English for having now trusted this new development under Napoleon III, he proceeds as follows:—

"The Roman Eagle is aloft again, and now let us see the direction of his flight—let us descend to plain matter of fact. The Eagle standards are first concentrated in Paris, around one dark, silent, and impenetrable man—the representative of the First Napoleon. This man has invariably announced himself as the Man of Destiny—under the influence of some fatal star—predestined to avenge his predecessor, and to revive his empire. With far greater wisdom than the former Napoleon, he proceeds, step by step, and regulates the flight of his eagles by some magic influence.—Rome, as the capital of the Roman world, was fixed upon as the first object of his ambition. With profound sagacity, he discerned that Rome is the only starting point of universal dominion. It is, indeed, most marvellous to observe, that for 2500 years, under all the changes and revolutions of the world, the centre of influence and empire has been connected with Rome. He saw this well; and the first flight of his eagles was directed upon Rome. Before he had been six months President of France he was master of the Seven Hills; he had secured the seat of empire before he seized the title of "Emperor." His eagles rested for awhile on the summit of the Seven Hills, and looked around for another prey. The second capital of the Roman Empire was the most appropriate subject for his next adventure. He got up an artificial excitement, and an artificial war, and led England to join him in his aggression.

"We have chosen the title of the "Eagle Standard," in order in the first place to express the rapidity and decision of the Imperial progress; and, in the next place to point out the extraordinary circumstance, that the New-Napoleonic empire is assuming all the attributes of the ancient Roman one! It had, long ago, assumed the Roman standard. It is now taking the exact outline of the empire of the Cæsars. Beginning on the shores of the Western Ocean, and within the limits of ancient Gaul; it is so far strictly a part of the old empire of Rome. But when the third Napoleon ascended the throne, his empire being nearly confined to France, was no more than a province of the ancient Roman world. He at once secured Rome itself, and from that moment he became the representative of the ancient Cæsars. But still he knew well that he was only a shadowy representative—the mere ghost of the Cæsars. It was necessary that the shadowy outline should be filled up with flesh and blood. He had already got Algeria, the ancient Roman Numidia, the classic territory of Marius and of Sallust. He must proceed, step by step, to complete and fill up the whole body of the empire. Having advanced from Paris to Rome, his next most appropriate advance was from Rome to Athens—from the renowned capital of ancient arms to the equally renowned capital of ancient arts. Athens he has seized; and he next advanced to Constantinople—the gateway of the East, and the capital of all the empires of Islamism! the representative of the whole Mahometan world. He is thus, this moment, the master of all the sources of influence and power which sway the human mind. The spiritual despotism of Rome—the historic fame of Athens—the superstitious veneration which binds the Eastern world to Constantinople—the elegance, genius, and splendour which attaches the Western world to Paris—all these, at once, are placed at his command, and used as weapons in his conquests; while his alliance with England, and our complete dependence upon his smallest caprice, have made him master of the last and only obstacle which could have retarded his designs—the naval and commercial power of Great Britain.

But he has advanced, and is now advancing much further than this. In the last number it was remarked that he had made a treaty with Persia. This has since been confirmed; the treaty has been signed and sealed, and his influence extended directly across the two continents, from Paris to Ispahan. Nor is this all. For the King of Birmah is about to send an ambassador to the court of the Tuileries, the first embassy that he has ever sent to any European court. Observe! the Birmese have not sent an ambassador to England, although we are their nearest neighbors, in the East. They send their ambassador to the French Emperor, not to us, as if they had discovered (with their well-known sagacity) that the destinies of the East are as much dependent upon France, as the destinies of the West. This is a very significant event in itself; but it may be far more important in its consequences. The Birman Empire closes in upon the Eastern frontier of British India. Persia approaches the British territory on the North-west. The Affghans, who lie between India and Persia, most justly hate us, because, without the slightest offence or provocation, we most basely invaded their country, and killed (without provocation) 20,000 men! This awful crime, which can never be forgotten before God, is well remembered among men, and the Affghans hate us as we hate the Russians, only that they have some reason for their hatred. Now let us look to the results. Constantinople, Persia, the Birman Empire, all in league with France, the Affghans ready to join the league at the slightest invitation. Look at your map and you will see that British India is threatened in front and flank by this ominous league! North, North-west, and South-east, the allies of France close in upon British India, and offer both an auxiliary contingent and (far worse) a military road to a force advancing from the Dardanelles! And the Dardanelles are in possession of France. Truly! we are a sagacious people. For want of a better excuse for killing 200,000 of our fellow creatures, we pretend that we went to war for the preservation of India, lest Russia should make her way to Hindostan across the Turkish and Persian territories. And now we have so bungled the war, that we have handed over Turkey, Persia, and even the Birman empire to the French Emperor, to a man whose very name of "Napoleon" is the exponent and war-cry of Oriental conquest; with whom to conquer the East, and avenge the defeat of Acre is an hereditary principle, a religion more sacred than the Cross. Do you think he does not see his opportunity? Or do you doubt that while you are shedding torrents of blood to save India from Russia, you are not by that very bloodshed, giving India to France? The case is too evident to require proof.—Scripture tells us of a woman who betrayed her husband's secret, in order to save herself from being burnt, and the immediate consequence of this treachery was, that Philistines came up and burnt her and her family with fire. (Judges 14 and 15.)—We have shed the blood of myriads in order to save our Indian possessions, and by the very act of shedding that blood we are giving them over to France. Nothing but infatuation sent by God, for our enormous Indian crimes, can account for the idiotcy of our conduct. In every case we are doing, by means of war and bloodshed, the very thing which we have gone to war in order to prevent.

But this is not all. There are other points to be considered in the Oriental question. If you look at the map you will find that there is a wide interval between the Dardanelles and Persia, and so wide an interval would be a serious military defeet without some intermediate point of connexion. In all great military operations, there must be connecting points between the extreme ends of the line; strong positions and reserves to fall back upon; magazines and stores at practicable distances. To an army advancing from the West, Syria and Palestine present these requisites in perfection. Syria, the Euphrates, and Persia, form an unbroken line of military communication. A better line, at least, than Russia ever could have found, in advancing from the Crimea. Syria runs up to Euphrates, the Euphrates falls into the Persian Gulf, and Persia borders upon Affghanistan. Palestine is remarkably strong, full of military positions, and in fact Palestine is the key of the East, as Constantinople is the key of the North-East.

Fully alive to these considerations, our beloved Ally, who longs to embrace his friends in every part of the world, is now manœuvering to get immediate possession of Jerusalem and Palestine. Not satisfied that he has already got the key of the Dardanelles, he is determined likewise to secure the keys of the East. A French ambassador is, at this moment, in Rome, in consultation with Pius the Ninth, for the purpose of completing an arrangement with reference to the Keys of the Holy Places of Jerusalem. The French envoy is next to proceed from Rome to Jerusalem, in order to carry the measure into effect. Having thus secured the keys of the Holy Places, it will be necessary, and even laudable, to send a French force to Palestine, since very serious collisions have lately occurred between the holy men of the Greek and Roman Churches in Jerusalem. With the praiseworthy design of preventing this in future, our benevolent Ally will despatch a few regiments to Palestine—by and by a few more—until he has got complete possession of the Holy Land. And having secured the Holy Land nothing will be more natural than to restore the Jews, for the Jews can fight stoutly in their own territory, and will serve as a reinforcement to the French army of occupation; while the wealthy Jews who are on the most intimate terms with Napoleon, will furnish millions of money to support the man who restores them to their native country. Indeed the seizure of Palestine, and the restoration of the Jews, would be the wisest course which the Emperor could pursue, not only politically but financially; for his wars are unusually expensive, and the Jews have more disposable capital than any other people in the world.

One thing, however, is certain, that after the fall of Sebastopol, the French envoy was sent at once to secure the keys of the Holy Places. Rome itself was the first position secured—Rome was the first act of the Great Drama; Athens was the second; Constantinople was the third; Sebastopol the fourth; and now Jerusalem is the fifth! What will be the next act of this many-scened tragedy?

Nor has a single measure been overlooked which could strengthen is hold upon the East. Whereever we look everything is provided for with unerring sagacity.—Abdel Kader, the greatest hero of the age, the chieftain of the Saracen race, has been attached to the Emperor by every act of liberality and munificence. For life or death the Arabian Emir is the vassal of Napoleon. Terrified by the earthquake at Broussa, the Emir could find no place of security but one; no place was secure from earthquakes but Damascus, which was a strange discovery, as Syria is most particularly liable to earthquakes. But though strange, it was convenient. Damascus is the heart of Syria, and the very best position for a military vassal of the French Emperor. And now Abdel-Kader is on his way to the renowned city of the White Caliphs, to assemble to his standard all the warlike tribes of Mount Libanus and Syria and to make their innumerable cavalry tributaries to France. Nothing can be better planned than the transmitting of Abdel-Kader to Damascus. It is neither more nor less than placing a French Marshal at the head of fifty thousand cavalry and half a million infantry, in the most central position of Western Asia—and its results will appear in due time.

But this is not all. The last Turkish loan has been most dexterously secured upon the revenues of Syria and Egypt. The Turks are insolvent, they cannot pay the interest upon the loan beyond the first year. The French government has guaranteed the loan; when the interest cannot be paid, the French government will come down upon Syria and Egypt; the mortgage will be foreclosed! and Syria and Egypt, or one of them, at least, will become the property of France! But the Turkish loan will be taken by the Jews, and the Jews, being the creditors, will be repaid by getting possession of the Syrian territory or of Palestine, which is a part of Syria; so that, in the most natural manner in the world, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Abdel-Kader, and the Jews, will slide into the hands of Napoleon the Third; and all without the slightest moral obliquity—all in defence of the slavery—we mean the liberties of Europe, which being threatened by the approach of Russia to the Danube, will now be beautifully defended by the occupation of the Turkish empire by France. Virtue is its own reward! * * *

So far the French Emperor has advanced or is advancing, in the direct route to India. And while we are guilty of the most atrocious bloodshed in order to secure India from Russia, Almighty God has, most righteously, decreed that we shall sell our lives and colonies to France! The justice of God is unmistakable—the sagacity of our enemy is miraculous. Observe how he is acting; He does not waste his time in getting possession of the intermediate and subordinate points; he leaves them to themselves, and passes on to the vital positions, the command of which gives him the command of the intervenimg territory. Having first secured France, he then passes on, at once, to Rome. From Rome to Athens, from Athens to Constantinople, from Constantinople to Damascus, from Damascus to Jerusalem. These positions command the intervening territory, and make him master of the whole line of march, without any necessity of intermediate conquest; just as a man who had got possession of London, Chatham, and Dover, would be virtually master of the whole intervening district. This economy of conquest shows how well he understands his trade, and will add greatly to the rapidity of his progress. * * *

We ventured to remark in February, 1854, on the dexterity of France in procucing an eternal enmity between you and Russia. Russia was your only ally. You had alienated the rest of Europe, by exciting the people to insurrection. You had alienated the "people" themselves by leaving them in the hands of the executioner, without one effort to save them after you yourselves had excited them to revolt! You had no ally upon earth but Russia, and now you have lost her for ever; and all the world will look on well-pleased should your pride and self conceit be brought down by France. Do you think that America would help you? America would join in alliance against you to-morrow, for the sake of your West Indian Islands—and is, in fact, waiting, this moment, the first opportunity for seizing them! You have not now one friend left upon earth: and do you dare to hope for aid from God, whose holy name you have defiled by hypocrisy and blood?

The Franco-Roman eagle has now spread his wings for a bolder flight than he ever essayed even under the first Napoleon.—From the towers of Notre Dame to Rome, from Rome to Athens, from Athens to the Hellespont, from the Hellespont to Damascus, from Damascus to Jerusalem. There appear to be no limits to his flight until he have reached the Euphrates or the Indus—and he seems to realize the words of Scripture:—"Wheresoever the carcase is, thither will the Eagles be gathered together." (Luke 17.) One thing is certain—that you yourselves have carried the French eagles much nearer to India, at the expense of your own blood, than ever the Russians could have reached in the same time, had you completely abstained from going to war. And though your mockp-reachers have told you that slaughter is the duty of a Christian, not one of them has had penetration enough to discover that you were fighting against yourselves. "Like people, like priest," says Hosea; and so it is now. Priests and people alike, are blundering on in the mire of ruin, as much as in the mire of national crime.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. A. Crabtree.

South Hope, Jan, 24, 1855.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—It is with pleasure that I write you a few lines; but much more gladly would I see you all, grasp the friendly hand, and hear you talk about the coming of Christ—that blessed hope that has so long sustained the Church. May the Lord bless you abundantly, and keep you from falling in this perilous time, is my prayer. With many others I believed that the Lord would come in the fall of 54, and again in the spring of '55, but though they passed, I shall believe that same Jesus that ascended bodily into heaven, will come again in like manner.

I often think of the Brn. and Srs. from whom I heard such fervent prayers and exhortations at that time, and wonder if they are still striving to be ready to meet Jesus, or have they turned back and given up the heavenly journey? I hope not. Jesus is coming, and that event may be nearer than some of us anticipate. Let us watch and pray much, that we may not again get ensnared with the friendship of the world which is enmity with God. Remember if we get lukewarm, and the Lord finds us so, we shall be spewed out of His mouth. Let us live near Jesus and tell Him all our trials and temptations.

"He knows what sore temptations mean;
  For he has felt the same."

Does the world mock us on account of our glorious hope, let us remember He said: "Marvel not if the world hate you; for it hated me before it hated you." Are we poor in this world's goods, tell Jesus the cattle of a thousand hills are His.

Cheer up, lonely pilgrim, we are homeward bound. A few more struggles with sin, a few more prayers offered for an infatuated world, (may God grant that some more sinners may be gathered into the fold of Christ,) and the last saint will be sealed and you and I, if faithful, will be where

"Not a wave of trouble rolls, Across the peaceful breast."

Then shall we inherit the New Earth in all its surpassing loveliness; and over that peaceful Kingdom no earthly monarch will sway the sceptre of power; but He whose right it is shall reign, even Prince Immanuel, the Son of the Most High. Prophets and apostles will be there, martyrs will behold Him who died for them. Zion's watchmen there will rest, and the weary pilgrim will be at home.

Dear reader, you and I may be there; it is left with us to decide. Then let us "lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." How expressive this language! Were we to see a man running for a prize, and loaded with useless weights, we should think him very unwise; but how many we see that profess to be running the Christian race, loaded with pride and covetousness which is idolatry. Dear Brn. and Srs. I hope we shall not fall here. Trials and temptations will come, but they will not always last. Soon the crown will be ours. Many that were with us once have gone, some to their farms and merchandise and some to the ballroom and cardtable; iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold; but He that endureth unto the end the same shall be saved.

Finally, farewell; be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and may God grant to bruise Satan under your feet shortly, is the prayer of your sister in Christ,

Amelia Crabtree.

From the Advent Herald of Mar. 28, 1848.

Dear Bro. Himes:—Suppose a number of vessels were sailing into a given harbor; and having the favor of neither wind nor tide, they can only advance by slow and imperceptible degrees. The prospect of home and friends, and all the endearments of society, are, however, sufficient to stimulate them to every exertion by plying the oar. Every stroke diminishes the distance, and summoning all the energies of their being, they resolve to persevere till they arrive at their point of destination, and find themselves within the circle of endeared friends. But while toiling with all their power, a sudden breeze fills the sails, and onward the fleets moves with great velocity. Some of the crews keep all sails furled, and choose rather to row than spread their canvass to the wind; but others stretch every nerve, and ply every sail to enjoy the full benefit of the propitious gale. Thus wafted by the breezes of heaven, they sail on with joyful hearts and cheering songs till the remainder of the fleet is almost lost in the distance, and the towering hills of their native land rise in prospective before them. Nothing can exceed the pleasure that now animates their bosoms. Their voyage has been long and tedious. The hope of rest from the toils and perils of marine life, and of greeting friends in their long-desired haven, is raising their feelings to a point of extacy, when all at once the zephyrs die away, the sails are pendent and powerless, a clouded horizon wraps the delightful prospect in obscurity—the sun withdraws his shining, and the scene is completely reversed. In some cases the hands, after devoutly praising the Lord for the rapid advance their vessel had made, again apply themselves to the labor of the oars, rejoicing and refreshed. For although they connot direct their course by the eye, yet they have the chart and compass as before; and having seen the land, they expect soon to reach it. But in other cases, the hands give up all for lost—their resolution fails,—their courage sinks, and if they cannot sail, they will not row, more especially as they are now unable to see the distance of the harbor—their vessel floats on the tide in the opposite direction, till they pass the remnant of the vessels in their outwardbound course. Brother editor, which of the two courses is the wiser?

The Brethren here feel a cordial sympathy in all your trials. They rejoice that God has sustained you spiritually thus far in your labors, and their fervent prayers and co-operation may be relied on, for the crew on board this vessel are not of the class to be blown about by every wind that sweeps the eecan; neither do they intend to "about ship" because they have had a fine sail, or because they cannot see the land; but by diligent use of the oar, they are steadily nearing the harbor, and what is better, they occasionally feel the celestial breezes wafting them homeward with accelerated speed. ——, ——.

Rye, N. H., March 7th 1848.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. R. Wakefield.

Newark, N. J. Feb. 8, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—The pilgrims pathway still is thorny and rough; his watchword, "onward!" O how shortsighted is human wisdom, how feeble is the help of man.—But though led in unknown pathways, where every object is strange and every circumstance trying—he that puts his trust in the living God shall be as mount Zion which cannot be moved but abideth forever. His name is an everlasting foundation.

Strange and trying as is the situation of God's dear children, who, as we believe, have been fulfilling the parable of the virgins, yet the comforts of His grace do not fail us; we claim the promise; "Surely I come quickly," and rejoice in hope.

Dear Brn. and Srs., sad and weary, waiting and watching, let not your hands become slack, nor your faith faint; still wait on the Lord. If we have been going wrong, God will soon discover it to those that wait on Him; if right, it will be vindicated and confirmed in due time. Let us walk in the light as He is in the light—have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son shall cleanse us from all unrighteousness; and present us without blame before Him at His appearing.

Your Br. in faith, hope, and love,

R. Wakfield.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Srs. E. I. Abbott.

Manchester, N, H., Jan, 9, 1856.

Dear Brn. and Sr.—I rejoice in a whole Savior, who can save us from all sin and make us ready to receive an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom.—Beloved in the Lord, be strong—lift up your heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh. My soul says, praise the Lord for his goodness. O, that I had an angel's wings! I would see my Jesus and be in his embrace. Praise the Lord! My soul is filled with his praise and love. O, glory to God—

"O what a happy meeting,
  When salvation is completed!"

Dear brother and sister, are you ready and waiting for the blessed hope? If not, I warn you in the name of my God, to get ready, and make no delay; for the trumpet is about to sound. O sinners, seek a Savior's love—a shelter from the storm that is about to be poured out on this ungodly world!

Yours in hope, E. I. Abbott.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET (BOSTON, MASS.)

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF

JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V, DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

The "Seven Times."

By B. P. Hildreth.

No. 1.

In our meditation on the duration of the long period, which heads our article, we are reminded of the declaration of Peter, "We have also a more sure Word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place; until the day dawn and the day star arise in your heart." "Knowing this first, that no prophecy of scripture is of any private interpretation: For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake, as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

The imperative necessity and importance of thoroughly investigating and embracing the truths of prophetic scripture is fully sustained by the above passage; and I fully believe that all who bear the name of Christ, will be more confirmed in faith, and illuminated in mind, by a close application to the study of prophecy. "Them that honor me (saith the Highest,) I will honor; but they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed;" but how can we honor God if we disregard His word, "fold our hands" and cry "a little more sleep!" God will vindicate his word, which is so much neglected; not one jot or tittle of which will fail of accomplishment. "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein; for the time is at hand."

It requires a gift superior to any that I can lay claim to, to classify or sort texts alluding to, or embodying this long chain of prophecy; but to present a few of them in connexion with scraps of history, and other parts of scripture, showing their fulfilment to have been in the past, is the design of this article; and though I do not promise myself perfect success, "such as I have, I give;" and if any light is shed on the prophecies by this article, to God be all the glory.

God's purposes of mercy towards His chosen people, were fully demonstrated when he took them by the hand and led them out of Egypt, held their enemies at bay till he had divided the Red Sea; and with an high arm brought them through on dry land, and sunk their enemies "like lead in the mighty waters." He made a solemn covenant with them, to preserve them from every evil, and the only condition of that covenant was obedience. "He gave them water out of the rock, and satisfied them with meat." They magnified his name with songs of praise and thanksgiving, and gratefully communicated all that the Lord had done unto Pharoh, and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had come upon them by the way; and how the Lord delivered them." "And Moses went up unto God, and the Lord called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel; ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bear you on eagle's wings, and brought you unto myself. Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.

And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the Lord commanded him. And all the people answered together, and said, All that the Lord hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the Lord.— Exod. 19; 3–8. Thus far the covenant between the Lord and the children of Israel; which, did we not know the deceitfulness and desperate wickedness of the human heart, we should suppose sufficient to confirm them in obedience. He then gave them the law, and appointed a Sanctuary to be erected in their midst, and instituted divers ordinances, that their own worship might be agreeable and pleasant; and to keep them from mingling with the surrounding nations! and all their prosperity and happiness was suspended on their fidelity and obedience to God: "ye shall keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my Sanctuary; I am the Lord, it ye shall walk in my statutes and keep my commandments, and do them, then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase; and the trees shall yield their fruit. And your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing-time, and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely. And I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid; and I will rid evil beasts out of the land, neither shall the sword go through your land. And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword. And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight, and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword, for I will have respect unto you and make you fruitful and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you, and I will set my tabernacle among you, and my soul shall not abhor you. And I will walk among you and be your God, and ye shall be my people. I am the Lord which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bondsmen; and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go up right." Lev. 26: 2–13. The foregoing promises, though conditional, were prophetic, and were primarily fulfilled under the reign of David and Solomon. At that time they were emphatically "a kingdom of priests, or holy nation," as appears by David's offerings and use of the ephod; and Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple. They were prophets and kings, and eminent types of Christ, and kept strictly the Sabbath, and the tabernacle and the temple service. Their enemies fell before them, their land yielded them rivers of oil, their fields corn, and their trees fruit. They were greatly multiplied, and God was with them. But did this prosperity continue? No, for they sinned and were often brought low for their iniquity. Terrible denunciations and curses awaited the transgressors and breakers of His covenant.

"But if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments; and if ye shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant: I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it. And I will set my face against you, and ye shall be slain before your enemies: they that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall flee when none pursueth you.— And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, then I will punish you seven times more for your sins. And I will break the pride of your power; and I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass: and your strength shall be spent in vain: for your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits.

And if ye walk contrary unto me, and will not hearken unto me, I will bring seven times more plagues upon you according to your sins. I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number; and your high ways shall be desolate. And if ye will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me; then will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins. And I will bring a sword upon you, that shall avenge the quarrel of my covenant: and when ye are gathered together within your cities, I will send the pestilence among you; and ye shall be delivered into the hand of the enemy. And when I have broken the staff of your bread ye shall eat, and not be satisfied. And if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me; then I will walk contrary unto you also in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins. And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat. And I will destroy your high places, and cut down your images, and cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you. And I will make your cities waste." Lev. 26: 14–31.

The foregoing fearful threatenings were prophetic, and many of them have been literally executed on the seed of Jacob; and some are even now in the actual process of execution, in the dispersion and sufferings of the house of Israel. Often has their seed been sown for their enemies to eat. Five times has their capital City been beseiged and taken: first, by Nebuchadnezzar, about B. C. 588: second, by Antiochus Epiphanes, about B. C. 168; third by Pompey, B. C. 63; fourth, by Socius and Herod Antipater, B. C. 34; and fifth by the Romans, A. D. 73. Twice their temple has been burned to the ground; first by Nebuchadnezzar, and last by the Romans. Tongue cannot describe the miseries which they suffered from famine, pestilence and sword; pen cannot paint the calamities and horrors of that devoted people. Truly they that hated them reigned over them with tyrant sway. Often in the times of the judges, they were given into the hands of the oppressor. "Nevertheless, he regarded their affliction when He heard their cry, and remembered for them the covenant, and repented according to the multitude of His mercies" "Many times did he deliver them, but they provoked him with their counsels, and were brought low for their iniquities." He passed over their frequent rebellions in the wilderness, with temporary punishment, and settled them in Canaan, "the place which He chose to put his name there." He gave them many good and righteous judges and kings, and peace and plenteousness followed obedience. Long, long did He suffer the wickedness of the kings from Rehoboam to Ahaz, (who perhaps may all be included in this class, with the exception of Asa and Jehoshaphat.) But Ahaz was worse than all the rest, a gross idolater, who removed the altar of God, and the great brazen sea which Solomon had consecrated to God, and built another altar after the pattern of one which he had seen at Damascus. The king of Syria invaded his land, and took a part of his dominions from him. "But in the time of his distress, he did trespass yet more against the Lord." "The Lord brought Judah low, because of Ahaz, for he made Judah naked, and transgressed sore against the Lord." "This is that king Ahaz." 2 Chron. ch. 28. And still the iniquity of the Jews was not yet full. History says, "Tiglathpileser made Judah tributary, (to the Assyrians,) though Ahaz had hired him" to go against the kings of Syria and Israel. 2 Chron. 28: 5, 6. And as the king of Israel slew one hundred and twenty thousand valiant men of Judah, in one day, we may suppose that the calamities of Ahaz shortened his life; and his son Hezekiah succeeded to the throne of Judah He is called the best king, who trusted in the Lord and kept his commandments. What a contrast we here find between a wicked father and a pious son. His first work of opening the temple, (which his father had shut up) and reforming religion, testified to his zeal for the honor of God; and he doubtless restored to the temple those consecrated things which his father had displaced; and then invited the ten tribes to come and keep the passover, which the generality of them scorned to do, and mocked his messengers. But in the sixth year of his reign, those same Israelites who scorned to celebrate their deliverance from bondage in Egypt, by keeping the passover, were taken by Salmanaser, and doomed to slavery and dispersion; wherein their posterity continue to this day. But great as the contrast was, between Ahaz and Hezekiah, it was far exceeded between the latter and his successor. But before we present the bad deeds of Manasseh, we have a scrap of history to quote. Raleigh says, "Hezekiah refused to pay the tribute to Senacherib, king of Assyria, which his father had covenanted to be paid to Tiglathpileser, his grandfather; and labored to purchase his peace, by paying three thousand talents of silver, and thirty of gold;" "but Senacherib intending to set down the conditions, with his sword * * invested Jerusalem." "Then the angel of the Lord went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians, an hundred and four score and five thousand; and when they rose early in the morning, behold they were all dead corpses," Isa. 37: 36. Thus the vengeance of heaven fell on the armies of that blasphemous king, which nullified the covenant of tribute, from the kingdom of Judah to that of Assyria; and Judah continued an independent kingdom till Manasseh succeeded his father in the throne of Judea. But when he came into power, he practiced the grossest idolatry, and built altars in the house and courts of the Lord; "caused his children to pass through the fire, observed times, used enchantments and witchcraft, and dealt with familiar spirits, and wrought much evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger." "He set a carved image * * in the house of God, of which God had said to David, and Solomon his son, in this house and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name forever." But he sinned yet more, and "seduced the people to do more evil than did the nations whom the Lord destroyed before the children of Israel. And the Lord spake by his servants the prophets, saying, because Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and hath made Judah also to sin with his idols: Therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel, behold I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle. And I will stretch over Jerusalem the line of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ahab: and I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down.

And I will forsake the remnant of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies; because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day." 2 Kings 21: 10–15.

The awful fiat has gone forth from the mouth of Jehovah, let it be done! He had spoken to Menasseh and his people, "but they would not hearken;" but "shed innocent blood, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another." Wherefore the Lord brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among the thorns, and bound him with fetters and carried him to Babylon." 2 Chron. 33: 11.

It is generally agreed by expositors that the "Seven Times" commence at this epoch; that their measure of iniquity was full, that Judah was then laid under tribute, from which she never rose; that oppression succeeded oppression; and dispersion and slavery, wretchedness and misery, have attended the house of Israel, from that day to this. Nehemiah doubtless refers to this in his prayer, ch. 9: 32, when he speaks of their suffering "since the time of the kings of Assyria."— Though the Assyrians empire was dissolved in the days of Hezekiah, and swallowed up in that of Babylon, still the latter reigned over all or nearly all the Assyrian empire. Thus Manasseh "filled Jerusalem with innocent blood, which the Lord would not pardon," and the crowning act of his wickedness was the base and horrid murder of the reverend and holy prophet Isaiah, which he accomplished with a wooden saw, when he was eighty years of age.— This is confirmed by Eusebius, and several other historians. (Ral.)

To be Continued.

Question.

Br. Berick:—I wish you would give in the Crisis an exposition of 1 Cor. 1: 7, 8; and Chap. 13: 8 to 10. Do not these texts show that the gifts spoken of in this Epistle are to be manifested in the Church when our Lord comes? I find these passages are much relied upon by those preaching such views. Paul seems to show that tongues &c., would continue till that which is perfect is come. What say you to that? R. R. York.

Reply.

In answering the above question, we shall notice the passages separately.

"So that ye come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The question before us is, "Are the gifts alluded to in the above passage to be manifested in the Church at the coming of Christ; or, does the above passage show that there will be such a development at, or just before the end?" My answer to the foregoing question is an unqualified negative.

My reasons for taking the negative of this question are, first, the apostle is not speaking of what the Church should be seventeen centuries after his day, but of what the Church was already; not of those gifts to which they should attain, but of what they had already experienced. That this is the idea is, second, proved from the context. "I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ; that in everything ye are enriched by Him, in all utterance and in all knowledge."

Here the apostle positively affirms, that the Church at Corinth were "enriched in everything; i. e. they had every gift "in all utterance and in all knowledge," so that they came behind in no gift. No one of the gifts were lacking; they had a perfect development of all those spiritual endowments. Hence we remark, that the first clause of the seventh verse is not an expression of what he would have them be at some future time, but an affirmation of what they were already. They did not at the time he wrote his epistle "come behind in any gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." All of their hopes centered in the coming of the Lord, at which time they expected to realize the promises. I do not understand that the apostle intimates in the foregoing passage that the Church will be blessed with those miraculous gifts and supernatural endowments at, or just before the coming of Christ. If it be taught in the Scriptures, it certainly is not taught in the above passage.

The second passage referred to in the question is, Cor. 13: 8 to 10; "Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there [illegible] we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."

I once thought that the above passage referred to the world to come; i. e. the time when prophecies, and tongues, and knowledge would pass away, would be in the world to come, when the kingdom of God should be fully established; but I am now satisfied that that view is erroneous. I therefore submit a few thoughts for those who may wish to read, and leave the matter for further consideration.

I understand the Apostle is drawing a contrast between that part of the dispensation in which he lived, which he represents as imperfect in knowledge; that is, a knowledge of God's purpose in the plan of salvation, and that which was to succeed when the whole plan should be brought out, and the canon of Scripture should be complete.

"Whether there be prophecies they shall fail." Not that the predictions of the Prophets and Apostles shall fail to be fulfilled, but the gift of prophecy shall fail to be exercised in the Church; it shall be abolished. This gift, in connection with others, was bestowed upon the primitive Christians. First, to confirm and establish the Gospel among the nations. Christ had commenced preaching, and the Apostles were to confirm the same, while God bore "witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will." Second, to bring out certain great developments in the economy of heaven, "which in other ages were not made known to the sons of men, as it is now revealed to his holy Apostles and Prophets by the Spirit."

"Whether there be tongues they shall cease." When Christ came the world was filled with unbelief. The Jews and Gentiles were looking for some great person to arise who should teach true knowledge, and reclaim the world from vice and error. It was necessary that Christ should give indubitable evidence of His claims to the Messiahship; and as He was not to remain upon the earth to promulgate His own system of truth but was to commission others, even those who were illiterate, it was necessary that they receive wisdom from on high, and be endowed with miraculous power. Hence, when they received the gift of the Holy Ghost, they were enabled to convey the glad tidings of the kingdom to the nations of the earth, and to make every man hear the wonderful works of God in the "tongue wherein he was born." The great diffusion of light, and the rapid spread of the Gospel in the days of the Apostles, can only be accounted for on this principle. The sound "went into all the earth, and their words to the end of the world." In Asia, Africa and Europe, churches were established. What need now of tongues

"When every nation now proclaims
Their Savior and their God."

"Whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away." This does not signify that the Church shall become destitute of knowledge, but that the gift of knowledge spoken of in Chapter 12: 8, shall vanish away. Men are not endowed miracuously with knowledge as in the Apostle's day. The Bible is the fountain of knowledge. Men are to study the Scriptures, and if they would find out wisdom they must "seek for her as silver, and search for her as for hid treasure. Then shall they understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God." We believe, then, that these gifts have vanished, and that men are to live by "every written word of God."

"We know in part." The Church to whom Paul was writing, could not know but in part. Christ told the disciples He had many things to say which they could not bear then, but should know hereafter; that is, when the whole purpose of God was brought out.

"When that which is perfect is come." When the canon of Scripture is completed, then this partial knowledge shall be done away. The same idea is kept up in the 11th and 12th verses. In verse 13th he declares that faith, hope and charity now abide; these three principles are to continue. Prophecies may fail, tongues may cease, and knowledge may vanish; but faith, hope and charity, remain. These are the basis principles of the Christian system, and so long as we have faith to believe the word of the Lord, and charity enough to live out the same, we shall have a hope big with immortality, "that entereth into that within the vail, whither the forerunner for us has entered.

F. H. B.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, FEB. 27, 1856.

The Millenium.

No. 4.

I wish to make a few remarks in addition to those in No. 3, on the Israel of God.

St. Paul, in summing up his most instructive argument on the priesthood of Christ as surpassing that of Aaron, says: "Now of the things we have spoken this is the sum; We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens: a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man." Heb. 8: 1–2. He then goes on to speak of the ministry of Christ as being more excellent than that of the Mosaic ritual. He alludes to the deficiencies under the Old Covenant, and the superior blessings of the New Covenant. He then quotes Jer. 31: 27–34, in which the Lord promised to make "a New Covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah." "For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord: I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people: and they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest. For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." Heb. 8: 8–12.

Now this whole matter is so plain respecting the change of the priesthood, and consequently of the law or covenant, which change the Apostle then recognized as having transpired, I know not how it is possible for any one to deny that the New Covenant was then formed. And with whom was it formed? With the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. Now as all Israel and Judah here spoken of were personally to know the Lord by experimental acquaintance, it could not have been made with the literal tribes of Judah and Benjamin; much less with the kingdom of Israel containing the other ten tribes. Nothing can be more obvious than that all they with whom the New Covenant is made, whom he designates by the terms Judah and Israel, are to be the true children of God; and by consequence the true children of God constitute the houses of Judah and Israel. No true believers in Christ can be excluded; no others can be admitted.

"And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it."—Isa. 2: 2.

When shall this exaltation take place? "In the last days." What period is that? The term, "last days," critics inform us, refers, according to the original import of the Hebrew, simply to future time; but, at length, it was used to denote the times of the Messianic dispensation. We therefore learn from this verse, that under the Gospel dispensation the mountain of the Lord's house will be greatly elevated above all surrounding hills, occupying the highest position among the mountains. Is this a literal elevation of Mount Moriah upon which the temple was built? or is this expression used in a figurative sense? Certainly it is absurd to suppose a literal elevation of that mountain; consequently it is evident the passage implies an elevation in a moral sense; and if we have taken the right view of the terms Judah and Jerusalem as referring to the Church, the sentiment of the passage is, that in a moral sense, i. e. in relation to moral power and influence, the Church will be exalted in the Gospel Age.

What are the facts in the case? Under the Mosaic economy the covenant of God was made with the one people of Israel—one nation against the world. The Jews and Gentiles were the grand divisions of the globe in respect to population. And that one people often fell under condemnation, and were led away captive and trodden under foot by their enemies—the more numerous and powerful nations of the earth. But in the last days, the promise is recorded by the Prophet, that the Church, or covenant people of God, shall be exalted to more extended influence among men. I apprehend that this refers to the general influence of Christianity without regard to the purity and simplicity of the Christian faith. That it is not the true, vital power of the Gospel is evident from the fact, that they are condemned (vs. 6–9) as a corrupt and idolatrous people, although called "the house of Jacob."

Just glance the eye for a moment over the history of the nominal Church, and see whether her influence has been extended—her power exercised over the great and prominent nations of the earth. Look, if you please, at Russia and France—the most powerful nations in existence, and see them waging war for the defence of their peculiar faith. Look at England, the German powers, Italy, Spain, the European nations in general, the Republics of America, and behold nearly all the great powers of earth under the influence of Christianity by profession, although, according to the description of the Prophet, they have departed from the vital principles of religion. It is for the most part an empty form, a nominal profession, but the profession of the Christian faith governs their counsels—marshals their armies, and controls their revenues: and this is just the kind of religion described in this chapter.

Again: the influence of Christianity is not confined to enlightened and Christianized nations, but through the instrumentality of Missionaries, Bibles, Tracts, &c., it is being diffused among the nations of the heathen, and the sound thereof has gone forth almost throughout the whole habitable globe. Thus we perceive a vast contrast between the nominal Church of our age, and that of the Mosaic dispensation. Then they were, at best, but an isolated people, having no control or jurisdiction beyond the boundaries of their own circumscribed territory; but now they hold the sceptre, wield the sword, and carry the purse of the mightiest nations. Then they were often conquered and captivated at the pleasure of other monarchs, now such crowned heads as the Czar of all the Russias, the Emperor of France and the Queen of England bow to nominal Christianity, and wield all the authority and power of their respective thrones for its support.

"And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isa. 2: 3–4.

This is the most graphic description conceivable of the doctrines which have been industriously propagated in our day. From the dawn of life, not only have the sentiments here contained been ringing in my ears, but the identical phraseology here used has been oft reiterated, as though it were the language of inspiration, and consequently must be fulfilled. If this be indeed the word of God, then will it stand more firmly than the pillars of heaven. If we can decide this point, viz: whether it be the language of inspiration or not; or, in other words, whether it be the word of God or MAN, it will be sufficient for our purpose.

"But," says one, "I thought all Scripture was given by inspiration." It is true that inspiration declares that men shall utter these predictions, but the predictions themselves are the predictions of men.—The fact of their being thus uttered has certainly had a most remrakable accomplishment in our day. It was doubtless designed by the providence of God, that a new order of things should be developed during the existence of the last generation that was to arise on the earth. The Lord designed that there should be a more general diffusion of divine light and truth prior to the scenes of the judgment: hence after the Church come out of the wilderness state—after she became so disenthralled as to be able to put in requisition her moral power, she began to act for the enlightenment of the world. A missionary spirit was developed. Bible Societies were formed for the avowed purpose of placing the word of God in the hands of every family on the earth. Tract, Temperance, Moral Reform, Anti-Slavery Societies, &c., &c., have sprung up throughout Christendom, and the moral energies of the Church have been drawn out and concentrated for the dissemination of Gospel light, and the diffusion of its benign principles throughout the earth. With this movement, brought about in the providence of God, much of ardent piety and stirling moral worth has been identified, and the expensive benevolence of the age is in itself worthy the commendation of all true lovers of Zion; but most unhappily there has been connected with this general movement too much reliance on human machinery and human instrumentality for the salvation of the heathen—the conversion of the world. Such has been the strength of this confidence, that they have not doubted the agency of man would accomplish the universal diffusion of the spirit and principles of Christianity among men. And understanding the prophecies to teach that the world would be converted, they have believed the time had arrived for the dawn of millenial glory. They have therefore reiterated, times without number, the language of the Prophet, "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

But may not this prediction be truthful? I think not; for it does not harmonize with other scriptures. This prediction is positive and unambiguous, that the nations shall LEARN WAR NO MORE; but the word of God declares as positively and unambiguously, that the scenes of earthly history will terminate in carnage and blood. In Joel 4 we read: "PREPARE WAR; wake up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near. Beat your ploughshares into swords; your pruning hooks into spears," &c. Now, this prediction of God reverses the prediction of man; and, as this preparation for war stands in immediate connection with the judgment of the heathen (or the wicked) in the valley of Jehoshaphat (or the valley of Judgment,) also with the Day of the Lord in the valley of Decision, it is evident that the history of earthly kingdoms closes in war.

The same sentiment appears in Jer. 25th ch., where the nations are represented as drinking the wine cup of fury preparatory to their overthrow by "THE SWORD which the Lord would send among them." The same also appears in Rev. 16th, under the action of the three frog spirits "which go forth to the kings of the earth, and of the whole world to gather them to the BATTLE (or war) of that Great Day of God Almighty." But the closing part of the present dispensation, if the prediction of Is. 2d be true, will be under the universal prevalence of the Gospel, and international peace and good will. These predictions, being wide apart as the poles, cannot both be true; and as one is the prediction of man, and the other of God, I choose to rely on the word of God.

I therefore do not rely on the truthfulness of this annunciation by "many people," from the fact, that while the whole representation of Scripture as given by God himself is, that the sun of earthly kingdoms goes down amid the shock of belligerent hosts, amid the carnage of the battle-field and the thunder of war, which converts the earth into one universal Aceldama, the representation of man in this case is, that the sun of worldly empires sets in glory—amid the reign of Christian principles, and the universal brotherhood of nations.

"O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD."—v. 5.

This is a continuation of what "many people" say.

"Therefore thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they be replenished from the east, and are soothsayers like the Philistines, and they please themselves in the children of strangers."—v. 6.

We perceive from this verse, that, although the Church stands in an exalted position, having a general influence, sustained by the national governments, although reaching forth after the subjugation of the world to nominal Christianity, she is condemned as impure and worldly-minded.—They aim at the universal prevalence of the Christian faith, but there are intermingled with these high and holy efforts designs of worldly grandeur, and a desire for numerical strength, which induces them to admit to their communion men of a worldly stamp.

"They be replenished from the east."—Marg. "more than the east." That is, as as I apprehend the text, they are replenished with silver and gold, horses and chariots; and, in general, the treasures of this life. They possess the riches, grandeur and glory of the world, even to an extent surpassing the golden treasures and splendid equipage of those nations who have ever been famed for their love of display and worldly aggrandizement.

"And are soothsayers like the Philistines?" This implies, to my apprehension, that the prediction here recorded is a false one—that its origin is human and not divine; that they prophesied not by the word of the Lord, but as the Philistines and other heathen nations, who observed times, using divination, or enchantment. I understand this to be one of the charges presented against the house of Jacob, that instead of consulting the word of the Lord, they had had recourse to other means, and hence came to a conclusion in relation to the future not warranted by Scripture, but diametrically opposed to all its teachings. God forbid that we should cherish an unkind or uncharitable spirit toward those who believe in and labor for the conversion of the world. I doubt not, much of true piety, as already remarked, has been identified with the movement; but the great mass of the church have trusted too much to human machinery and numerical force to conquer the world; and they have also departed from the rock of Scripture truth, and misinterpreted the prophecies in such a manner as to hold up to view a triumph and glory for the Church in the present age, while the word of God makes it plain that the triumph of the Church will be in the world to come. By this interpretation an alluring prospect is presented to the Church which attracts the eye from the coming glory at the revelation of Christ from heaven, and draws away the desires and expectation of the Church from the consolation of Israel at the resurrection of the dead and the organization of the immortal Kingdom, and places them on the enterprises of the present age, as ushering in the glories of the Kingdom of Christ. And it has been the bane of the Church in all ages, to seek her glory in the present world.

This thing has operated somewhat as has the movement on the subject of Slavery.—In the providence of God attention was arrested to the sinfulness of slavery, and the necessity and duty of emancipation. Those who were most ready to heed the admonitions of providence, and the requirements of the divine law, were aroused to action, and were led to expect the overthrow of the system, and the deliverance of the bondmen. But that expectation appears now to be vain, and the prospect held out before the Church is an "enlargement and deliverance from another quarter." The anti-slavery sentiment is based upon the principles of eternal rectitude; but although essentially just, yet many advocates of the cause have departed from the truths and spirit of the Gospel, and even resort to violent measures to accomplish their object. God's hand moved the wheels, at first, in order that men might be forewarned of the coming crisis; but there has been, in too numerous instances, a departure from the purity of the Gospel. Just so I understand many things to have been right and truly excellent in the movement for the conversion of the world; but an erroneous faith has been fostered by it, and many of its advocates have departed from the purity of the Christian faith; and as the great mass of the Church who are engaged in these benevolent enterprises are conformed to the customs and spirit of the world, nay, indulging in the fashions, luxuries, and extravagance of the world, therefore the Lord has forsaken His people, the house of Jacob.—When the Church is rising to preeminence among the nations of the earth, exalted in political power, she falls under the displeasure of God.

"And they please themselves in the children of strangers." That is, they form alliance with people of the world—they become associated in their religious worship with those who have no saving knowledge of the true God. Thus those who are strangers to God, and aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, are admitted to the communion of the Church, and identified with God's people.

"Their land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures; their land is also full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots. v. 7."

In this verse the idea is clearly presented that the professed people of God are engrossed in accumulating the treasures of this life. Look at the Catholic countries in Europe and America, and see what vast stores of wealth have fallen into the hands of the Church. Look at England, and even our land, and observe the aggrandizement of the clergy, the adornments of their churches, &c., &c. In fact let any one read the continued articles of Br. Brewer, recently published in the Crisis, and he will need no further proof on this point.

Please read the remainder of the chapter under consideration, and it will be perceived, that while the nominal Church is thus exalted in pride and popularity and the grandeur of the world, vainly imagining "they are rich and increased in goods, and have need of nothing," the Lord speaks in the following language: "The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.

For the day of the Lord of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up; and he shall be brought low." vs. 11–12.

Again: "In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats:

To go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth." vs. 20–21.

This passage is often quoted to prove the temporal millenium theory. Because the Scripture says they shall cast their idols to the moles and to the bats, it is maintained that the worshipers of idols. i. e., the heathen, will all be converted. In my profound ignorance of prophecy I used formerly to quote this very passage, as expressive of the diffusion of Gospel light; but from the very face of the subject it is evident, that fear and not love is the cause of this casting away of idols to the moles and to the bats. These idolaters are not captivated by the dawning glories of a millenial morn, but terrified at commotions in the earth that usher in the Judgment of the Lord.

Now let the reader turn to Micah 4: 1–5, and he will find a prophecy almost precisely parallel to that in Isaiah 2d. In this passage it is declared that MANY NATIONS shall say these things. Now does any one believe that people in these last days speak by inspiration, and especially that many nations are inspired to predict future events? True, it is said, (v. 4th,) "for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it;" but the question arises, who says the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it? Not the Prophet evidently, but "many nations." Now if many nations say this, where shall we find the proof that they are inspired to speak in the name of the Lord? Does it lie in the fact that the Lord "has forsaken" them, that they are replenished in worldly goods and magnificence more than the east? that they please themselves in the children of strangers?—Does it lie in the fact that God here calls them SOOTHSAYERS while they are uttering such prophecies? or in the fact that the Lord denounces the fiery indignation of Judgment against those very heathen of whom they prophecy that they will submit to the yoke of Christ? Does it lie in the fact that while they predict every man shall sit under his own vine and under his fig tree without molestation or fear, that God predicts such a time of terror at the coming judgment that they shall flee to the fastnesses of the mountains—into dens of the earth—for refuge from the fearful commotions and horrors of the scene? or is to be found in the fact that this prediction of "peace and safety" is one of the signs given of the last days? Thess. 5: 3, or in the fact that this prediction is diametrically opposite to the representations of the word in other portions of the sacred writings?

But let us glance once more at the passage in Micah. We are told in Isaiah of the doom of a proud and aspiring Church, here we are informed what is the destiny of the humble, meek and lowly, oppressed and suffering people of God—outcasts from the world, but beloved of God. We have been told what many nations say, we now learn the word of the Lord. "In that day, SAITH THE LORD, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted." Micah 4: 6. How different this description of the true Church from that given of the nominal Church by the two Prophets, Isaiah and Micah! "And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever. And thou, O tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." Micah, 4: 7–8.

Now whether the position I have taken in relation to the Church being represented by Jerusalem and Judah be admitted or not, it is immaterial, so far as the coming of Christ is concerned, (as brought to view in this connection;) for it cannot be denied that the Lord has said by the mouth of Ezekiel, (ch. 21: 27,) "I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." So that when the KINGDOM comes to the daughter of Jerusalem, it will be at the "appearing and Kingdom" of Christ.

Now to sum up the subject—I understand these passages in Isaiah and Micah, to have reference to the Church under the Messianic dispensation. The predictions here uttered in reference to the universal prevalence of peace principles, I understand to be human, and not divine: and for the following reasons: 1. It is uttered in the "last days," at a period when we have no evidence that any man is to be inspired of God.

2. It is uttered, not by a few devout men, but by "many people" or "many nations."

3. It is uttered by those whom the Prophet Isaiah declares the Lord had forsaken.

4. It is uttered by those whom the Lord pronounces "soothsayers."

5. It is uttered by those who are identified with the children of this world.

6. It is uttered by those who are of a lofty spirit, aspiring after the glory, and accumulating the riches of this life.

7. The picture of the Church here presented is just the reverse of that drawn by the divine hand.

8. When the Lord does judge among the nations, and rebuke many people, it will not cause every man to sit down under his vine and under his fig tree where none shall make them afraid, as many nations say it will be, but it will cause men to hide themselves in terror and confusion for fear of the stupendous events then transpiring in the earth.

9. When the cry of peace and safety shall have been made, it brings us into proximity, not to a universal reign of peace and piety, in the earth; but to the time when "the first (or original) dominion," "shall come to (Christ) the tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion," and "the Kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem."

10. These predictions conflict with the representations of the word in other portions of Scripture.

The above reasons are sufficient to satisfy my mind that these annunciations are neither inspired nor truthful, although the fact of their annunciation, as recorded by the Prophets, is of God, and has had in our day a most literal and wonderful accomplishment, which affords us one of the many signals presented in the Bible that we are nearing the final day.

☞ It will be recollected that, some time since, a report was in circulation—that Br. J. Cummings first received the idea that the darkening of the Sun in 1780 marked the termination of the 1260 days of prophecy—from brethren residing in Canada. This report, we learn from Br. Thurber, who has recently visited Boston, was incorrect. Through some misunderstanding it was inserted in the Crisis, which we sincerely regret.

MILES GRANT.
J. MERRIAM.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. O. T. Clisby.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 1856.

Br. Merriam:—While amid life's changing scenes, I am heavy-laden with sorrow and grief; all around there is strife, yea, hatred, variance, envying, debate, deceit, malignity, whisperers, backbiters, grudging one against another, &c. Truly, I am led to exclaim, It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed; because his compassions fails not. O, Brn., and Sisters, I (with you) have been sadly disappointed in not seeing Him whom I love, yet can say I truly believe it is good that a man should (even now in 1856,) both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. And while waiting, O how important it is that we let love be without dissemination; also, that we are holy, and without blame before Him in love. The stress which is laid on this word, love, in the Word of God, sufficiently proves its powerful influence on the communion of believers. It is enforced by our Lord as the identifying law for his children. "This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." John 15:12. By this we learn that the subjects of Christ are to be known and distinguished amongst men, by their mutual affection. This injunction is denominated the new commandment; not that love was no duty before the coming of Christ; but it is now placed more prominently amongst the duties of believers: is urged on fresh grounds, enforced by a more perfect example, and excited by stronger motives.

The dispensation of Jesus Christ is a system of most wonderful, most mysterious grace; it is the manifestation, commendation, and perfection of divine love. It originated in the love of the Father, and is accomplished by the love of the Son. He was love living, breathing, speaking, acting amongst men. His birth was the nativity of love—His sermons the words of love—His miracles the wonders of love—His tears the meltings of love—His crucifixion the agonies of love—His resurrection the triumph of love. Hence it was natural, that love should be the cardinal virtue in the character of his saints, and that it should be the law to regulate their conduct towards each other. It is a grace so important, that, like holiness, no measure of it is sufficient to satisfy the requirement of the Word. It is the basis and cement and beauty of the Christian union.

In the best and purest ages of the church, this virtue shone so brightly in the character of its members, was so conspicuous in all their conduct, was expressed in actions so replete with noble, disinterested, and heroic affection, as to become a proverb with surrounding pagans—as to call forth the well-known exclamations, "See! how these Christians love one another!" "Alas! that it is true that the professed church should have lost its loveliness by losing its love. Love will lead us to bear one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ. "Distributing to the necessities of the saints" is mentioned amongst the duties of Christians. How just, how forcible, is the interrogation of the Apostle.—John 3–17th, "Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" It must be a singular affection which is destitute of mercy.

Forbearance is a great part of love.—"Forbearing one another in love," Eph. 4–2. There are all gradations of intellect, and all varieties of temper. Under such circumstances great forbearance is absolutely essential to the preservation of harmony and peace. The strong must bear the infirmities of the weak. We should ever be cautious not to give offence. Some persons are rude, dogmatical, or indiscreet; they never consult the feelings of those around them, and are equally careless whom they please and whom they offend.

Again: love will not allow Tattling and Backbiting. Many who would be afraid or ashamed to mention the faults of others in the way of direct affirmation, or report, easily find, or attempt to find, a disguise for their backbiting disposition in affected lamentations. "What a pity it is," they exclaim, "that Bro. B. should have behaved so ill!" Says another, "how sorry I am to hear this report of sister C.! how the world will talk, and the cause of Christ suffer by such unwarrantable things in the conduct of a professor! It will not be a secret long," or I would not mention it.—"Oh!" says a third, "I have heard whispers of the same kind in times past, I have long suspected it, and mentioned my fears some months ago to a friend or two. I thought she was not the person she appeared to be." In this way is a tattling disposition indulged, under the guise of lamentation for the sins of others. Others, again, indulge this disposition by running about to inquire into the truth of a report which they say has reached them respecting a brother. Have you heard anything of Bro. H., lately? they ask with a significant look. "No," replies the person.—"Then I suppose it is not true." "Why, what have you heard?" "Nothing, I hope, affecting his moral character, not very materially; but I hope it is not true." The tattler cannot go, however, without letting out the secret, and then sets off to inquire of another and another.

I can no longer write about this sad and lamentable state of things, even amongst those who are professing to be looking for Christ soon to come. True, because iniquity doth abound, the love of many waxes cold. O, "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."

As for one I am lonely, and weary of staying; but I believe deliverance is near; I sigh for rest.
Orrin T. Clisby.

For the Crisis.

Tracts.

Dear Brethren:—I attempt to write a few lines with reference to the issue of Tracts. I need not refer to my past labors in this department. The tens of thousands of Tracts and books which God has enabled me to issue the few months past, and which have been sent to various parts of this country, to Canada, Nova Scotia, England, Scotland, Ireland, the Pacific Ocean, and the southern coast of Africa, must speak for themselves. I am painfully conscious of having done but little. The field widens with every survey. I have tried to do what I could, I have done I am told too much for my strength, still I mean to see much more done, and I know of no present method of seeing it done but to do it myself.

I have, you are aware, a considerable number of Tracts of various kinds. I purpose to have more. We need variety and something new. I hope to issue at least some six or eight within a few weeks if God permits me to do so, on topics connected with the great fact of the Kingdom of God at hand.

I intend that these Tracts shall be brief, pointed, graphic, truthful and eminently practical. Some will be from our own pen, some from other able writers. Shall these Tracts be circulated? Shall we do what we can to alarm the slumbering and save those that are going down to death?

I ask God's servants to take hold of this work. I ask them to make sacrifices for the truth's sake. I do not ask for donations. I have frequent calls for Tracts for gratuitous distribution. I refuse none.—More are called for,—they will be sent. Any who wish to aid me thus to circulate the truth can have their offerings appropriated as they desire; but the great object is to make every man, woman, and child, a Tract distributer in their own neighborhood. Build over against your own houses.

Who will take hold of the work? I wish that Brethren desiring some hundreds or thousands of these new Tracts would forward their orders to me immediately, and they shall be sent without delay as soon as they are issued. I wish to hear from all interested at once, that I may know what to do in the matter.

My health is not very good. Last Sunday, for the first time in several years, I was unable to go to the house of prayer, or even to leave my room. I am gaining slowly, still I am not able to write more at length now. Nothing but interest I feel in the matter could prompt me to this exertion.

I hope in a few days to resume any wonted labors. Meanwhile, let me hear from many on the subject.

Let the poor, and those preachers needing Tracts to circulate in new fields, send in their orders without delay. Pray for us.
H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.

P. S.—If the person who sent for Tracts from Mechanichs Falls, Maine, will send his NAME I can send the Tracts—not otherwise.

For the Crisis.

Buffalo, Feb. 22, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—Please give the Brethren the following notice through the Crisis:—

PAMPHLET FOR THE TIMES.

Br. Decker is, through the advice of some of the Advent Brethren, publishing in pamphlet form the articles which lately appeared in the Crisis, on the 12th, 13th and 17th chapters of Revelation, with seme few exceptions, as they then appeared; and has added an article on the 2300 days and 70 weeks in which their connection is clearly established, beyond controversy.—And has also shown that the darkening of the sun in 1780 still stands as an immovable mark for the end of the 1260 years of tribulation. It will contain about 36 large and very condensed pages. The cost price will be six cents each. Free for the poor. We hope that all who desire them will not fail to send immediately, and what is done must be done quickly. Those who do not want it for themselves—being already convinced of the fact of the immediate coming of Christ—may have friends to whom they would be glad to send the good news of the coming King.

Address W. C. Peck or Dr. A. Decker, Buffalo, N. Y.

From Washington.—A correspondent of the Tribune telegraphs from Washington:—

"Intelligence was received by the government this morning, containing assurances that the border companies of Missouri would acquiesce in the present state of things in Kansas, and make no aggressive movement.

The President instructed Gov. Shannon before leaving to visit the companies personally, and say if an invasion was attempted, it would be resisted by all the power he could command; also to say to the people of Kansas that the same authority would be exerted if any insurrectionary demonstrations occurred.

If the Topeka Convention assembles, a civil process will be sued out against the Governor and other officers, on the ground of the territorial law, that they are assuming functions to which they have not been legally elected or appointed. The same law prevails in most of the States.

No military force will be employed unless the civil process is resisted. Republican instructions have been sent out by a special messenger, who started on Wednesday night, to members of the Topeka Convention, desiring them merely to organize and adjourn, so as to be prepared for other movements hereafter. With these precautions on both sides, no collision is now apprehended.

No answer has been received by Government, concerning the request for the recall of Mr. Crampton. An interview has been held between Lord Clarendon and Mr. Buchanan, but the British Minister indicated no positive determination. It is quite probable that Lord Clarendon assumed strong ground, and asserted strong opinions, such as the English press mistakenly connected with the Central American Question. There is evidently a disposition to risk consequences by declining a compliance with the demand of the Administration; but this or any other attempt will not avail. If Lord Clarendon should finally refuse to accede, passports will most assuredly be given to Mr. Crampton; there is no other recourse after that has happened; still this step will not involve any serious difficulty, though it may lead to a temporary suspension of diplomatic intercourse.

Lord Clarendon sent Mr. Marcy a despatch to Mr. Crampton who had never seen it before, and it reached here yesterday morning, by special messenger in advance of the mail. The probability is that it may lead to further correspondence, and through it to an amicable adjustment, as there is no ground for quarrel.

New York, Feb. 22.

From Hayti—the Emperor and his Plans.—The Evening Post has a letter from Port au Prince, dated Jan. 27. The writer says:—"Political matters stand about the same as on the 15th. No one seems to know what to expect. The Emperor is still on the lines with the remains of his army, say 6000 men. We know but little of them, but fear he will attempt to renew the expedition; should he do so, we do not know what would become of it. The Emperor is the only man in the Empire who is in favor of this expedition, and if he can succeed in it against all this dead weight of opposition, he must be a very able man.

It is very sickly here; I never saw it worse; it has now (the last spell) lasted fifteen months, and it seems as if it would never cease. Vessels are losing nearly half of their crews; hardly a man escapes the fever who has not already had it."

Contrast.—A Congregational Home missionary at Leavenworth, Kansas, entrusted letters for the post-office to a slaveholding neighbor, who carried them to the office of the pro-slavery paper, where they were opened and read in search of anti-slavery sentiments. The missionary afterwards upbraided the slaveholder, when the latter knocked him down, bruised him severely, and was attempting to gouge out his eyes, when some neighbors came to the rescue and saved him from such a calamity. The wounded missionary writes: "We live without arms, and our door is only fastened by a small wooden pin, but the Lord is on our side. I will not fear."—Press.

The Three Emperors.—A letter from Berlin, of Jan. 25, says:—"We learn from Vienna that the Emperor Alexander has addressed a most friendly letter to the Emperor of Austria relative to the negotiations, and expressing in the most unequivocal manner his desire for the immediate restoration of peace. It is added that the Emperor Alexander at the same time expressed a wish that the contents of his letter should be communicated to the Emperor Napoleon. It is further confidently stated that the French Emperor in answer wrote a friendly letter to the Emperor Francis Joseph, the contents of which had been communicated to the Court of St. Petersburg."

Anticipated Fight in Kansas.—St. Louis, Feb. 25. Advices from Lawrence, Kansas, under date of 13th, say that the Kickapoo Rangers again threaten hostilities at Easton, having avowed a determination to avenge the death of Cook by killing the friends of the murdered Brown. The Free State men are preparing for the conflict. Ten mounted companies had already left Lawrence for Easton, under the command of Col. Dickey and Major Grover. A fight will probably take place.

A letter from Rome, of the 16th, says—"Vesuvius is in labor. The signs which precede a violent eruption are apparent. There is an esplanade upon the summit, which usually can be reached without danger, but at present one would be stifled with the sulphurous odor, and the noise is anything but reassuring."

An Exciting Trial.—At Austin, Texas, a great excitement existed on account of the trial of the persons charged with burning the auditor's office. The court was attended by an armed guard. The citizens were also arming, and a conflict was feared.

The government despatches from England contain nothing of a definite character, neither is there any prospect of an early settlement of the matters in dispute between that government and the United States.

Exciting times in Kansas Territory.

Russia.—A letter from St. Petersburg of the 18th ult., in the Debats, says:—Since the departure of the allied squadrons, all the gunboats which were built last year at Biorneborg have been able to cross over to Abo, and nearly 200 of them are now there. After the loss of Bomarsund, it has been found necessary to give more attention to Abo, which is thought to be in a state to replace that fortress. Since the present war such new experiments have been made in the art of fortifications, and the prompt fall of Bomarsund has raised such serious doubts as to the resistance which an isolated fortress can offer for the present means of attack, that the old plan of establishing an advanced post on the islands of Aland has, it is said, been given up, and a fortress will be built in its stead on the coast of Finland. The construction of vessels is going on with great activity at Archangel and Nicolaieff, and if the present war should completely close the Black Sea to Russia, the greatest efforts would be made to create a formidable navy in the north.

Attempt to Assassinate the Archbishop of Cuba.—The Havana Prensa of the 12th inst., gives a letter from Holquin, Feb. 1st, which says:

"As the archbishop left the church, the people flocked around him as usual, and among others several pious women, all waiting for an opportunity to kiss the ring on his finger. At this moment a man elbowed his way through the crowd up to the archbishop, expressing by his looks and manners a desire to receive the holy father's benediction. As he was in the act of stooping to kiss the ring, he suddenly drew a clasp-knife, and stabbed the archbishop in the face. The venerable prelate fell senseless to the ground."

The assassin was about to inflict a second stab, when he was seized by a private soldier and carried off to prison. His name is Antonio Torres, a native of the Canary Islands, and about 35 years of age. His motives are unknown. It is hoped that the Archbishop will recover.

One week Later from Europe.

Arrival of Steamships Atlantic and Asia.

NO TIDINGS OF THE PACIFIC.

Mr. Buchanan Demanding his Passports.

WARLIKE TONE OF THE PRESS.

New York, Feb 24.—The steamship Atlantic arrived off Sandy Hook at ten o'clock last night, and came to her dock at 9 o'clock this A. M. She has experienced strong westerly gales ten days successively. She was three days in a large field of ice. She brings no news of the Pacific.

Summary of News.—Lord Palmerston promises to lay part of the Central American correspondence before Parliament.

Peace apparently progresses favorably.—The preliminary protocol was signed at Vienna on the 1st by the representatives of France, England, Turkey, Russia and Austria, agreeing to open conference at Paris within three weeks.

Lord Clarendon is appointed English plenipotentiary.

The report that the Emperors of Russia and Austria will visit Paris during the Conference is doubted.

The last of the docks of Sebastopol have been destroyed.

An armistice by land only will doubtless be agreed upon to last until the end of March.

The most important news is that which relates to the extraordinary excitement in England on the subject of war with the United States.

The Difficulties between the United States and Great Britain.—It was again confidently reported on the Liverpool Exchange that the American minister had demanded his passports, and his absence from Lady Palmerston's soiree was attributed to the personal misunderstanding between Lord Clarendon and himself. We have no particulars of the reported misunderstanding, as the English papers maintain complete silence on the subject. Lord Clarendon, however, is reported to have spoken in a most imperious manner to Mr. Buchanan, which Mr. Buchanan promptly checked by closing the interview. It is also reported that the Derby party intend to bring forward a motion in Parliament, on the subject of the omission of all allusion to America in the Queen's speech.

It is also reported that France and England have jointly sent envoys to Brazil to seek to enlist the interests of that country against the United States in Central America. In the meantime the general tone of the English press is threatening and presumptuous toward the United States. The purely commercial presses, however, form an exception, and the Chambers of Commerce, both of Manchester and Liverpool, protest earnestly against any interruption to the amicable relations of the two countries.

The funds have been unsettled by these threatening aspects of affairs.

The London Dispatch says: "A good deal of pardonable irritation is felt here, that the sympathies of a Republican people should have been so unaccountably manifested during the present war in behalf of the great mainstay and sheet-anchor of European despotism. If the people of the United States permit their rulers to plunge them into a war with Great Britain, they will receive the most terrible lesson ever administered to national envy and quarrelsomeness."

Arrival of the Asia.—New York, Feb. 24.—The steamship Asia, from Liverpool morning of the 9th, arrived this evening.

There is but little important news to add to the Atlantic's advices.

A severe storm occurred on the English coast on the night of the 7th, in which many American vessels were damaged.

The London Morning Advertiser states that Sir Henry had intimated that he would like to act as a sort of mediator between the British Government and Mr. Buchanan. This movement is said to be at the desire of Lord Palmerston. An interview was to take place at the Embassy, when Bulwer would explain at length to Mr. Buchanan the compromise which he is prepared to recommend. All other papers maintain profound silence on this matter.

The peace plenipotentiaries were beginning to assemble at Paris.

The British steam-frigate Polyphemus was totally lost on the North-West coast of Jutland.

Latest—By Telegraph to Liverpool.—Saturday Morning.—The Times censures the course taken by both English and American Cabinets, in reference to existing difficulties, and after remarking that even the humanity we have shown must have its limits, concludes as follows:—"We are as desirous of peace as Mr. Cobden can be, but we know that when a nation becomes too proud to listen to reason, the only appeal is to arms."

The Peace Congress.—It is pleasant to know that the peace propositions are progressing favorably, and the opinion is general that the war is at an end. Nevertheless, the British Government are not in the least relaxing in their exertions. The Great Britain sails from this port to-morrow morning for Malta and the Crimea, and will carry out additional troops and munitions of war, just as if the campaign was likely to continue for years. This is the surest method of attaining the end which Russia professes to desire.

It is expected that the Congress will assemble in Paris about the 16th inst., and there is every reason to hope that the negotiations may be finally concluded within such a moderate and reasonable period as may be fixed upon for the duration of the armistice.

The Constitutionnel has a semi-official article, written apparently with the object of consoling France for the resolution, which, unfortunately, there can be no doubt has been taken, not to demand from Russia one shilling of compensation for the enormous expenditure that her aggression has inflicted upon the Allies.

The butchers of Paris have undertaken to furnish gratuitously, for the next two months, 2000 lbs. of meat per week to the new charitable kitchens, called the Fourneaux de Imperatrice.

It is said that the Emperor Napoleon has written a letter to the Emperor Francis Joseph, in which he promises that the Fifth Point shall be interpreted "neither in the spirit of an attorney nor of a tradesman."

The Peace Negotiations.—A protocol of the acceptance of the Austrian five propositions as the basis of peace, was signed on the 1st inst. at Vienna, by the ministers of Russia, France, England, Austria and Turkey.—By this document it is agreed that the plenipotentiaries of the several powers signing the protocol shall meet at Paris within three weeks from the date. The following plenipotentiaries have been selected by their respective governments:—

For France—Count Walewski and Baron de Bourquency.

For Austria—Count von Buol-Schaeunstein and Baron von Huebner.

For Great Britain.—The Earl Clarendon and Lord Cowley.

For Russia.—Count Orioff and the Baron de Brunow.

For Sardinia—The Chevalier Massimo d' Azeglio.

For Turkey—Ali Pasha, the Grand Vizier, and Mohammed Dfemil Bey.

Prussia, it would seem, is to have no part in the conference; though it is said that intrigues are going on in behalf of Prussia, and vigorous efforts will be made to introduce her plenipotentiary into the conference. If Prussia should gain admittance to the conference, her representatives, it is said, will be, M. d' Alvensleben, and M. de Savigny, the Prussian Minister at Carslruhe. M. Walewski, as Minister of Foreign Affairs of the country in whose capital the conferences are to be held, will preside on the occasion.

A letter from Rome in the Univers, giving an account of a visit of the Pope, on the 29th ult., to the English college and the College Pio, says:—"The Pope afterwards admitted to the honor of kissing his feet the superiors and pupils of the two colleges, and different other persons, amongst whom were some who had belonged to the University of Oxford, but who have recently been converted to Catholicism.

The American Catholic Church at Constantinople fell down on the 27th. About thirty persons were either killed or wounded.

Dreadful Collision in the Channel.—Great Loss of Life.—A dreadful collision took place in the English Channel, off Folkstone, on Sunday evening, February 3d, between the Josephine Willis, Captain Canney, one of the London and New Zealand line of packet ships, and a powerful iron screw steam ship called the Mangerton, Capt. Boucher, bound to the Thames, from Limerick, which resulted in the foundering of the former ship, and, it is feared, a lamentable sacrifice of life.

The Josephine Willis was a first class ship of 1000 tons burthen. She cleared out from St. Katherine's Docks on Friday, laden with a valuable cargo, ten first class passengers, sixty steerage passengers, and a crew, officers and men, of some thirty-five in number, upwards of one hundred on board, all told. She had passed the South Foreland, and was proceeding satisfactorily, when about half-past seven o'clock, a cry was raised by the look-out forward of a light ahead. Whether the steamer saw the Josephine Willis, or miscalculated the distance she was off, are facts yet to be ascertained, however, she came on, and struck the ship amidships with such tremendous force as to cut her down to the water's edge.

A scene of the most painful description immediately ensued among the passengers on board the Josephine Willis, and a rush was made to get on board the steamer. Unhappily, from some unexplained cause, Captain Boucher almost directly backed his vessel out from the wreck. Only a few managed to scramble on board the steamer; others were accidentally picked up some time afterwards. It is known that she has gone down, as her topmasts were to be seen just above water, not far from the spot where the collision occurred.

A perfectly accurate list of the drowned has not been made up; but as nearly as has been ascertained, 20 cabin passengers, 36 steerage passengers, and 14 of the crew were lost—in all 70, and 36 were saved.

APPOINTMENTS.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at
Durham, (Parker School House), March 2.
At Biddeford, Sunday, March 9.
At Brunswick, Sunday, March 16.
R. R. York.

Providence permitting, we will preach at Waldo Hall, Worcester, as follows:
H. Pratt, March 9.
E. Burnham, March 16.
S. S. Brewer, March 30.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Salem, Mass., Thursday eve, Feb. 28.
Lynn Dye House, Mass., Sunday, March 2.
D. E. Moulton.

Br. Edwin Burnham will preach at Salem, on Sunday, March 2.

I will preach at
West Falmouth, Sunday, March 2.
Richmond, (Reed Meeting House,) March 9.
J. Partridge.

The Lord willing, Br. S. S. Brewer, will preach in Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, March 2.
Bro. John Couch, Sunday, March 16.
In behalf of the Committee,
F. Flanders, Chairman.

If the Lord will, I will meet with the Brethren at Cheshire, (Mass.) on Saturday eve, March 1st, and remain over the Sabbath.
E. Blanchard.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Lowell, Thursday eve, Feb. 28.
Lawrence, Sunday, March 2.
Exeter, N. H., Tuesday and Wednesday eve, March 4 and 5.
Salem, Friday eve, March 7.
Lynn Dye House, Sunday, March 9.
Westboro', Tuesday eve, March 11.
Samuel Bragg.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chap.'s of Matthew, by I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts.	single,	$10	per 100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "	"
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 "	"
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50	"
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 "	"
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Outline of the Coast,	3 "	"	1,50	"
Voice of the Church,	$1 "	"	9 "	doz.

John Cumming's works, 75 cts. per volume.
Romanism, by John Cumming, $1,00.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"Wellcome's Treatise on Matt., 24th and 25th chapters.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Math. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."
"D. T. Taylor."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J. M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P. O. address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

T. F. Leavitt, your subscription will expire with number 34.

Cash Receipts.

L P Drake, S Barton, A Hill. C Staples, C Flint, G L Rice, E H Dennett, H W Norrville, O T Clisby, T Edgerly, L Houghton, M J Clark, W Wood, P Tandy, P Dow H Jack, T M Storer, J B Paine, G W Annis, M M Eastman, W Farrow, J Boomer, A M S Bement, A Worth, M Shannon, S Goodhue, J Cobern, G D Stewart, S Cotton, G Gould, E Harvey, S Starr, $1 each.

J P Sanders $6, Friend $2, J Ewell $2, E Dyer $2, West Poland $2, R R York $2, J Emerson $4, J Thompson $2. J Blanchard, J McKenney, S H Leavitt, 50 cts. each.

For the poor—S Edgerly, L Houghton, $1 each.

For the old debt of the Crisis—S Dodge $1, C Flint $1, H Smith $2, J Boomer $1 A M S Bement, 50 cts.

Whole amount, $65.54.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public. Ed.

For the Crisis.

O, I sigh to be Thine.

By S. S. Brewer.

Tune—"Ye objects of sense."

O come, dear brethren, it's time you arise,
The kingdom of God draweth near,
We soon shall see Jesus descending the skies,
In clouds of bright glory appear.

I long, dearest Lord, O, I sigh to be thine,
And never again to remove
From home, where the blood washed eternally shine,
And feast on the smiles of thy love.

The shades of the evening are gathering around,
And soon the glad morning will break;
Soon Jesus will come and the trumpet will sound,
And bid all the dear saints awake.

Adieu to old Earth, with thy sorrows and pains,
My Savior invites me to come;
Farewell to this land, where the tyrant, Death, reigns—
I haste to my fair Eden home.

Farewell, thou poor sinner, I'll bid you adieu,
Your pleasure and mirth will be o'er,
The scenes of the Judgment you shortly must view,
And the Savior invites thee no more.

O come, my dear Savior, no longer delay,
Fair Eden we long to behold—
To bask in the sunshine of unclouded day,
And walk through the city of gold.

O Canaan, bright Canaan, though land of delight,
Where glorified millions shall sing,
With harps tuned celestial on Zion's fair height,
With anthems of praise to their King.

For the Crisis.

The 2300 Days.

By Dr. A. Decker.

Bro. Merriam:—Please permit me to say a few words through the Crisis, to the brethren scattered abroad, on the 2300 days in addition to what has already been said. By the following from the seventh volume of the Second Advent library, which was taken from Furgerson's Astronomy, it will be seen that the seventh year of Artaxerxes, occurred in the Julian period 4256. "Now by the undoubted canon of Ptolemy, and the famous era of Nebuchadnezzar, which commenced B. C. 747, the seventh year of the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus, is fixed in the Julian period 4256." (See Furgurson's Astronomy and Enc. Amer.) Now from the seventh to the twentieth year of Artaxerxes, at which time the commandment went forth to restore and to build Jersualem, it is just thirteen years. Now, if we add these thirteen years to 4256, it fixes the twentieth year of Artaxerxes in 4269—thus 4256 and 13 make 4269. This gives the true Julian period, at which we are to date the 2300 years. Now if we add the 2300 years to the Julian period of the twentieth of Artaxerxes, 4269, it gives us 6569.—Thus 4269 and 2300 make 6569. This is precisely the Julian period of the present year, A. D. 1856, as all will see by looking at any Almanac. This is straightforward work, and leaves no ground for mistake. Thus we see that the 2300 years could not have ended in 1854 or '55, but that A. D. 1856 is the true year of their termination. We might show the same result from other periods; but we think it unnecessary, since they all correspond with the Julian period. We should deem anything we might say in addition to what has already been said through the Crisis, at different times, to prove the connection of the 70 weeks with the 2300 years, entirely surperfluous. Indeed, if the 70 weeks are not a part of the 2300 years, then there is nothing in the book of Daniel or any other part of the Bible, that gives us any event at which we can commence them; and to suppose that God has given us 2300 days, that reach to the cleansing of the Sanctuary, without giving us any event to mark their beginning, is utterly absurd. God requires us to have intelligent faith in what he has revealed; this, however, would be impossible, upon the ground that there is nothing definite given for the commencement of those days.

But it is supposed by some, that Nehemiah was 12 years in building the walls of Jerusalem, and that the daily sacrifice did not commence until after the wall was built, and therefore the 2300 days did not commence until 12 years after the going forth of the commandment; since the 2300 days is supposed, to commence with the restoration of the daily sacrifice. The following, however, from Benson's Commentary, is quite sufficient to disprove such a position. "The wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, answering part to our August, and part to September, in fifty and two days—to be computed either from the time of Sanballat's sending this letter to him; or, as the most judge, from the beginning of the work, which, though a great thing, yet it is not at all incredible, considering.—1, That the walls and gates were not wholly pulled down by the Chaldeans; for to what purpose should they make that waste of time and labor? 2, That when the walls were thrown down, yet the materials remained, which they now used. 3, That, in building the walls, they regarded not ornament, but only strength and safety. 4, The great numbers of the builders, and the prudent distribution of the work among them, and their admirable zeal and diligence therein. 5, That there is no want of parallel instances, even in heathen authors; for both Quintus Curtius and Arian relate, that Alexander the Great, built the walls of new Alexandria, which were seven miles in compass, within twenty days space. 6, That the hand of God was manifest in carrying on this work, which their enemies here acknowledged."

Now when we take into consideration, in addition to the above, that Nehemiah tells us that he started to go to Jerusalem in the first month, (Nisan) and then in the last verse of the seventh ch. informs us that when the seventh month was come, all the people gathered themselves together as one man, into the streets to have the law, &c.; it is clear that was the first seventh month that occurred after going up to Jerusalem; and, moreover, since the temple had been previously built, and they were from the first in possession of every thing that was necessary to offer sacrifices, the mere fact of their building the wall, could not have excused them from keeping the law. Indeed, we are informed that when they first went up to build the temple, after the decree by Cyrus, that as soon as the seventh month was come, they set up an altar and commenced offering sacrifices, before they had even laid the foundation of the temple. (See Ezra, ch. 3.) And most certainly, it would have been a direct violation of the commandments of God, to have postponed keeping the law for over one year, much more twelve, on account of any work they might have had to perform; and especially so, since, as before stated, the temple and all things necessary were in readiness; and sacrifices had been offered there ever since the commission of Artaxerxes to Ezra. But ever since there had been no temple, it would have been their duty to have set up an altar, as they did at the first, before the foundation of the temple was laid. Indeed, if we were to make the commencement of the daily sacrifice, the point at which to commence the 2300 days, we should be compelled to commence them with the commission to Ezra in the seventh of Artaxerxes; for Ezra was sent up to Jerusalem, and supplied with all things necessary, for this express purpose, (see Ezra ch. 7.) The fact is as clear as noonday, that the ninth ch. is a key to the eighth; and that the commencement of the daily sacrifice and the 2300 days, are to be reckoned from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem. If it could be determined merely from the restoration of the daily sacrifice, when the 2300 days commenced, the ninth ch. seems to have been entirely unnecessary. But if the ninth ch. is a key to the eighth, then the commencement of the daily sacrifice and the 2300 days must be reckoned from the going forth of the commandment.

The declaration of the angels in the ninth ch.—"I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding," is a clear confession, that he had not done so before; and therefore had not fulfilled the command as given him in the 16th v. of the 8th ch.—"Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision." It must be clear, we think, to every one, that there is no possibility of commencing the 2300 days this side of the 20th year of Artaxerxes, and therefore they must end this present year.

Now we have previously shown that the 1335 years must end this year; also, it will be seen that there is a perfect harmony between them. It is clear then, that both periods end together, since they both end with the "transgression of desolation."

Now, with this light on the prophetic periods, connected with the signs of the times, we are fully satisfied that it is dangerous in the extreme, to put off the coming of the Lord 10 or 12 years in the future. Indeed, as we have before shown, there is no event, either connected with the 2300 or 1335 days, that can harmonize with such a position. The facts are, that the "midnight cry" has sounded; and all the signs of the coming of Christ have taken place; the three unclean spirits have not only gathered the nations to the battle of the great day of God Almighty, but they have gathered them to a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon, and in the Greek Sebastopolis!!

In conclusion, I would say, that the Brn. in Buffalo are fully settled in the faith, that the coming of the Lord will take place this year; and have no faith whatever in any other time. Let all stand ready with their loins girt about with the truth, and their lamps well trimmed and burning; for the time has now come, and the Saints will soon, very soon enter in to Marriage Supper of the Lamb. Amen: "ever so, come, Lord Jesus."

Buffalo, Jan. 30, 1856.

For the Crisis.

First Resurrection.

By M. Grant.

The subject of the resurrection is one of deepest interest to our race, and but for the Bible, we should be in total darkness in relation to the future existence of the dead.

We read in the word of the Lord of a "better resurrection," Heb. 11: 35; and of "the first resurrection, Rev. 20: 5–5.

The expression, "better resurrection," implies another not so good, or one which does not bring such glorious results.

Again, the fact that there is a first resurrection, clearly shows that there is also a second, otherwise the expression is meaningless. As there is then to be a second resurrection, it must resemble the first, or it would be a first of another kind; or in other words, if the first is literal, the second must be also; but if the first be spiritual or the conversion of an individual, then it follows that the second must also be spiritual or another conversion. Both theories cannot be right. Let us compare scripture with scripture that we may know the truth.

We are aware that there are many in the different denominations, who believe that the first resurrecton is at conversion.—Well, let us suppose this to be trae, and test this belief by the Bible. Rev. 20: 6, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." If the first resurrection be spiritual, or at conversion; then the first death must be death in sin, or moral death as it is usually termed; and the second death would consist in being dead a second time in sin, or in the state of a backslider. Let us look this matter in the face, and see if we do not discover the darkness and confusion of error, instead of the light and harmony of truth..

It is evident none can die the second death, but those who have been once dead and had a resuraection. Then it follows, that if the first resurrection be conversion, none can die the second death but backsliders, or in other words, backsliding would be the second death; then of course, this being true, all unconverted persons will be free from the second death, because they cannot be reckoned among the backsliders, not having had part in the first resurrection, or conversion.

We think it is clearly taught in the Bible, that the second death is the final punishment of all the wicked, that were never converted, as well as the backsliders. In Rev, 2: 11, we read, "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." Does the Savior mean to tell us the self-evident truth, that he that endureth to the end, shall not backslide? We think all must see that second death is not becoming a sinner the second time; then the first death cannot be going into sin the first time; consequently, the first resurrection cannot be the first rising out of sin; for if it is, the second resurrection must be the second conversion.

We have seen that none can die the second death but those who have been once dead, and have had a resurrection; and if this first reeurrection be conversion, none can die the second death but backsliders; but the Bible declares in Rev. 20: 6, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the firat resurrection: on such the second death hath no power;" then it follows, if the spiritual theory be true, that those who have been converted, which we are told is "the first resurrection," cannot backslide, or die the second death. Then it follows no one can die the second death; for the unconverted cannot because they have not had part in "the first resurrection," or conversion; and the converted cannot, because they have part in the first resurrection already, and 'on such the second death hath no power."

Now if we follow the simple truth, that the first death is literal, the first resurrection literal also; then it appears plain that the second resurrection and second death are literal. This makes all clear and harmonious.

Boston, Feb. 20, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. M. S. Taylor.

Gilmanton, N. H., Jan. 30, 1856.

Dear Bro. Merriam:—I once more resume my pen, praying for the influences of the divine Spirit, that I may write those things that shall be pleasing in the sight of God. While feeble health has confined me at home, and I have not enjoyed the privilege (that many others do) of meeting with God's children, I have felt very grateful for the privilege of perusing the columns of the Crisis. The interesting and instructive letters published therein, have seemed quite a welcome repast to me, from week to week. I have been refreshed and encouraged by its timely admonitions and consolations. Although I do not agree with all the sentiments presented, yet I find many that coincide with my views of Gospel truth, and much which may feed the soul.

I have thought what a privilege do those enjoy who have an abundance of this world's goods, sufficient to supply some of those with the paper, who are not able to pay for it themselves, and thus afford some of the children hours of pleasure and consolation. They have also the means of affording the necessaries of life to the needy around; and may not the poor also enjoy the privilege of adding somewhat to the enjoyment of others? Our Lord would not despise even a cup of cold water offered in the name of a disciple. He says to those on his right hand, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." Then what a privilege, what an honor, to be allowed to satiate the thirst of "one of these" with the cooling liquid. Let us bless and praise our God, that even the widow's mites were not despised; but esteemed of more value than all that the rich and great cast into the treasury. If we have but little to bestow, let us give that with a willing heart and pure motives, desiring only God's glory.

In my wakeful hours during the night-season, I have mused on the favors bestowed on the poor. As we read the blessed word we can easily discover the preference given to the poor and humble of this world. Who was the messenger sent to proclaim the coming of the Son of God? Was he taken from the honored and gifted of earth? No. To whom was the Angel sent to inform her that she was to be the mother of the Anointed One? Was it to one of noble birth? Ah, no! To whom did the host of Angels appear and announce a Savior's advent? Was it to Cæsar and his retinue? No! Behold, how highly favored were those humble shepherds that were watching their flocks by night in that "same country"! The Angel tells them that a Savior is born unto them. But where shall they find him? Are they directed to some splendid mansion? Is he cradled in a richly furnished apartment? Not there—his bed is a manger, "where horned oxen fed."

Was there nothing but a manger,
Wretched sinners could afford,
To receive the heavenly stranger?
Did they thus affront the Lord?

May not this cause those professed followers of Christ to blush, who expend so much for costly habitations and expensive furniture and dress, when they consider their Savior was born in a stable, and cradled in a manger—when they consider how much more acceptable it would be in the sight of that Father they profess to love, to give what they can spare, (besides supplying the necessaries of life,) to help sustain the various means for doing good, and glorifying God, that are in operation in the world. When the Savior arrived at manhood, did he chose the society of the honored, the talented? Did he make his abode with the aristocracy? Do not we read that he eat with "publicans and sinners"? And when weary with the noise and bustle of the city, he retires to seek repose and quietude with the little family at Bethany. Yes! the poor have great reason to praise God, that our blessed Savior chose the situation of such, when he came to earth. "The Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." When he is questioned concerning paying the tribute, he sends to seek the money in a fish's mouth, to meet their demands. What though the poor may not have wherewith to procure the necessaries of life? What though they may not have a comfortable house to repose their wearied frame?—they can console themselves with the thought that the Savior suffered the same privations for their sakes, and if they but enjoy his favor, how blest are they—how much better off—how much to be prefered is their case to that of those who have the means of procuring all that heart could wish of earthly good, and yet are destitute of this blessing.

O, brethren and sisters, let us strive for that "charity which suffereth long and is kind, hopeth all things, and endureth all things;" and without which we are nothing, let our profession be ever so high.—Let us beware how we surmise this and that concerning our brethren. Let us not judge one another, but love with "pure hearts fervently." Yes, love all in whom we can find the spirit of Christ: although they may not agree with us in all our views, perhaps they act as much in accordance with the dictates of their conscience as we do in accordance with ours.

Now brethren and sisters, if I have written anything worthy of your consideration, praise the "Father of lights," and give him all the glory, for from him "cometh every good and perfect gift."

From your unworthy sister,

Mary S. Taylor.

Letter from Sr. S. B. Titcomb.

Holyoke, Mass., Jan. 31, 1856.

Dear Bro. Merriam:—I send you the enclosed for my blessed paper which I prize very highly, inasmuch as it gives meat in due season.

I must say a few words in regard to Bro. Allen's and Bro. Wetherell's letters in the last Crisis, on the 2300 days. I think they show us why the Lord has not come, and, also make it plain when He will come. I have even believed the 1335 days ended last Spring, and all that came up to that time got the blessing promised. (Daniel 12: 12.)

Now as we have light and can see where our mistake was, oh let us be careful that we cast not away our confidence, which hath great recompense of reward.

I cannot see any reason why we should not come up to the month Nisan, with all the confidence we did last Spring.

I for one, can see no light beyond, and it does seem that the nations will be all ready to move in the Spring.

Dear Bros. and Srs. what gratitude do we owe to God for permitting us to know these things, and get ready for His coming kingdom.

Oh! how blessed it will be to hear the King say, "come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

S. B. Titcomb.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. D. H. Caverly.

South Wolfborough, N. H.,
Jan. 22, 1856.

I feel very thankful to my heavenly Father that I have had a dollar given me that I can forward for the Crisis, which, in my estimation, is the most valuable paper in the land. It cheers my lone heart from week to week, as it comes richly laden with meat in due season. May the Lord reward you, dear Brother, for your arduous labors of love to the little flock. May you, while here, receive a hundred fold, and in the world to come everlasting life.

It appears to me that if I had this world's goods, as some of our brethren have, I should delight in cheering the hearts of the poor—in relieving the sufferings which poverty causes many to endure, and gladly would I aid in sending the Crisis to such as have not the ability to pay. But poverty is my lot, and I have to endure the privations of many of the necessaries of life. Still I do not complain, feeling willing to submit to the will of my Father in heaven. I believe that Jesus will not tarry long, for he that is to come will come, and will take his own chosen ones to himself. If I am faithful and endure unto the end, I shall then, with all Father's family, possess durable riches that will last forever, in the presence of the Lord, where there will be "fullness of joy and pleasures forevermore."

Your Sister, in hope of eternal life,

Dorothy H. Caverly.

From the New York Observer.

Arch of Titus, at Rome.

It was night when I first entered the "Eternal City." Darkness and silence hung alike over its ruins and its modern works, and though all impatience to be standing among the former I could see them only in imagination, and must wait for the morning light. When the day returned I salied out alone, bending my steps in search of one of its ancient monuments, one which was to me most interesting of all because erected in the purpose of God, though by heathen hands, to stand through ages as a confirmation of his holy word. I passed the column of Antonine, and the Forum and column of Trajan, and reaching the Roman Forum spied an old friar, whom I asked in Italian to point me to the Arch of Titus. He seemed never to have heard its name, although he had doubtless passed under it a thousand times; and this was a fair specimen of the intelligence of the great mass of the monks of Rome and Italy. A priest who came along, directed me to a triumphal arch at the foot of the Capitoline Hill as the one, but I found it inscribed with the name of Septimius Severus. Seeing another upon the summit of the ancient Via Sacra, I made my way to it and read the following inscription:

Senatvs.
Popvlvsqve. Romanvs.
Divo. Tito. Divia. Vespasiani.
Vespasiano. Avgvsto.

There is no monument of ancient Rome that possesses equal interest for the Christian. Its proportions are considered more faultless than those of any other, while its position adds greatly to the effect, but it has a far higher interest in the sculptured records which it contains It was erected by the Senate and Roman people, to commemorate the conquest of Jerusalem by Titus. The memorable siege of the Holy City was begun by Vespasian the father of Titus, a siege the horrors of which have never been equalled. While at the head of the army before the walls, Vespasian, upon the death of Nero, was proclaimed Emperor by his troops. He hastened back to Rome, leaving Titus in command, who, upon the fall of the city and the destruction of the temple, made a triumphal march into Italy and to the imperial city, bringing with him a long train of captive Jews, together with the spoils, among which were the sacred vessels of the temple. It is this triumphal procession which is commemorated in the bas reliefs of the beautiful arch. They have suffered somewhat from the hand of time, still more by the hand of Vandalism, but the main features are still well preserved to supply a place in the illustration of the Bible which can be filled from no other source. They are the only visible representations that exist of those sacred vessels, the patterns of which were received from heaven. The fate of the sacred vessels themselves is not positively known at the present day. They were carefully preserved among the trophies of the Capitol, where they were copied, and it is generally believed that the originals were removed by Maxentius and lost from the Milvian bridge in the Tiber, in his disastrous flight from Constantine.

The frieze of the arch is ornamented with sculpture representing a procession of warriors leading oxen to sacrifice: Upon a side panel of the interior is a group representing Titus in the act of celebrating his triumph over the Jews. He is in a chariot drawn by four horses abreast, accompanied by the Senators of Rome, and officers bearing the fasces. The sculptured form of Victory stand holding a wreath of laurel with which she is about to crown him. Upon the opposite side, on a similar panel, is the celebrated group bearing the sacred vessels of the Jewish temple. First comes a standard-bearer leading the way, with a canopy or arch supported above his head. The table of shew-bread is borne on staves, with a cup and the silver trumpets used by the priests of the temple to proclaim the year of Jubilee. Other bearers followed carrying chaplets of laurels, and the golden candlestick with its seven branches. In size and form these bas reliefs correspond precisely with the descriptions of the sacred record, and the minute descriptions of Josephus.

Little did those ancient heathen, the Roman Senate and the Roman people, when decreeing and erecting this monument to a deified warrior and Emperor, imagine that they were erecting a monument to the true God in the verification of prophecy and divine history; and little did they suppose that, after nearly two thousand years, the disciples of that faith which they had already begun to persecute, even unto cruel death, should come from distant lands to read the record, and to be confirmed in their faith. God worketh wondrously when he employs such methods to accomplish his own purposes. Titus was but an instrument in God's hand in the destruction of the unbelieving city, and in the fulfilment of the prophecies of our Saviour relating to the temple, of which he said: "There shall not be one stone on another which shall not be thrown down;" and the Roman nation completed this remarkable fulfilment of the divine purpose by making a monumental record of the events. There it stands, after the lapse of eighteen centuries, to testify for the living God.

The Jews of Rome, of whom there are about six thousand, are said to be the descendants of the captives which Titus brought from Jerusalem to grace his triumph. They have at least inherited their bondage, suffering oppression at the hands of a nominally Christian and ecclesiastical government. They are confined to a small and filthy quarter of the city, and are compelled to pay tribute to the government for the privilege of living even here. Until the pontificate of Pius IX., they were shut up within the Ghetto every evening, and not allowed to leave it until morning, under a heavy penalty. Not one of them will even, at this day, pass under the arch of Titus, although it spans one of the thoroughfares of Rome. They shun it as a memorial of the subjugation of their nation, a fall which has never yet been retrieved, and regard it always with aversion. I met in the street one day a Jewish Rabbi, who had often been at my room, and asked some information respecting this interesting arch, wishing also to know how it was regarded by his people; but he suddenly became oblivious of the English that he had just been speaking, and could not comprehend my inquiry. How wonderfully does everything connected with this people confirm the truth of the Word of God.

Eusebius.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 29.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF

JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months,	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months,	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months,	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months,	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

The "Seven Times."

BY B. P. HILDRETH.

No. 2.

Thus the wickedness of Manasseh became so extraordinary, that the wrath of God rose against Judah, "till there was no remedy." Here, we believe the period of the "Seven Times" commenced; during which, the Lord threatened the Israelites at Mount Sinai, that He would punish them, if they broke His covenant, and kept not His commandments, which has, thus far, been strikingly fulfilled. It is called "Gentile rule;" "the times of the Gentiles; or "Gentile oppressions;" during which the Jewish nation has (with few exceptions) been trodden under foot.

It may be asked, "upon what authority do you make the 'Seven Times' a definite period?" To this we would reply, (to say nothing of what has been quoted, on the authority of its division and subdivision into smaller periods,) the whole period is 2520 solar years; and the first division that we find in Scripture is, Daniel 7: 25; "a time, and times, and the dividing of time." This is one-half of the great period, and is noted as 1260 years, or reign of "the little horn." Again, we find the same period (Rev. 11: 2) where "the holy city is to be trodden under foot of the Gentiles, forty and two months." Again, in v. 3, "the two witnesses prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days clothed in sackcloth." Agrin, (Rev. 12: 6, 14,) the woman was in the wilderness, "a thousand two hundred and threescore days," and nourished from the face of the serpent, "a time, times and an half." Again, Rev. 13: 5, the beast has power to continue, "forty and two months." Each of these passages, expressing prophetic time, represented one-half of the "Seven Times." There are other periods divided, and again subdivided; such as the "2300 days;" the "Seventy weeks;" the "Seven weeks;" the "Sixty-two weeks;" the "one week;" the "twelve hundred and ninety days;" and the "thirteen hundred and thirty-five days"—all of which must be comprised in the "Seven Times." But the measurement of this period was given by an inspired prophet as a punishment to the whole house of Israel for the great sins which it was seen that they would commit; and it was left to Manasseh to fill up the cup, to overflowing. And when the Saviour foretold Jerusalem's desolation, (Luke 21: 24) He said "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles." How long? "Until 'the times' of the Gentiles be fulfilled." This implied that there was a certain period, called 'times,' which the Gentiles were to fulfil; and we have seen it, in the history of the nations, from Babylon to the present day. The great image of Nebuchadnezzer seems to contain all these "Seven times;" for although Babylon was not described as a universal monarchy, when Manasseh was taken; yet it had subjugated Assyria, the greatest empire that had existed then, in the world; and Manasseh was not taken to Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, but to Babylon; from which it appears that the dream comprised all of "the Seven Times." The head of gold was Babylon; which from the captivity of Manasseh, lasted about, or a little less, than 130 years. It was called by Isaiah, "The golden city," which represented its great riches. But the eagle-wings of this mighty lion were clipped when its king was "driven from among men; and had his dwelling with the beasts of the field, till seven times (seven literal years,) passed over him;" after which his empire was overthrown by Cyrus; and Belshazzar, his grandson slain, B. C. 538. Thus the head of gold, the first universal monarchy fell, and was succeeded by Media and Persia united; represented by the breast and arms of silver. Silver is less valuable than gold; so the Medo-Persian empire, though possessing great riches, had been greatly exceeded by Babylon. Cyrus had a more extended empire, but less riches, and splendor; and it was no less ravenous and cruel, as appears by its representative, the "bear, with three ribs in its mouth." It continued about 207 years to B. C. 331, when it was dissolved, to give place to Greece. Thus the second universal empire was overthrown by the hand of Alexander the great, whose kingdom is represented by brass, of still less value than silver; the belly and sides, or thighs, of brass. They were harnessed with greaves of brass, and were called, (says Bishop Newton,) "the brazen-coated Greeks." Their speed and ferocity were represented by a flying leopard, which leaves us to infer that they superabounded, both in conquest and cruelty. Greece is here represented in a triple, or three fold division; and it will be recollected that it was in that state when Rome conquered Macedon, B. C. 158. It continued to exist till Anthony and Cleopatra fell by their own hands, and Egypt became the last province that was attached to the Roman empire, under Augustus Cæsar; and the third universal kingdom became extinct, B. C. 30, having lasted about 301 years. Thus time had passed, in its descent, from the belly and sides. (I have chosen the marginal reading, because Rome was a consolidated empire, when Egypt tell; and likewise at the birth of Christ; and at that time not so fitly represented by the iron legs of the image as afterwards; though Bishop Newton thinks the two consuls were symbolized by the legs of iron. But as no two consuls ever had the supreme power or control over Rome, after Augustus came to the throne, I must beg leave to differ from him;) Augustus was vested with full power, over the destinies of the Roman people; both in their political concerns, and in their ecclesiastical interests; for he was their high priest, (Raleigh) or Pontifex Maximus; which office he assumed on the death of Lepidus. He lived nearly 79 years, 58 1-2 of which he sat on the imperial throne. He adopted colleagues, but retained the supreme power himself; which was the case with all, or nearly all of the tollowing emperors, till that monster of wickedness, Diocletian, was chosen emperor. He, finding things unsettled, and doubtless thinking his own burden too heavy, chose Maximian associate emperor, and they each adopted a colleague, which, by common consent, they declared Cæsars; and these adoptions confirmed the imperial alliance between the senior emperors. Never before had Rome two reigning emperors, each independent ot the other, till then; and these two reigned in unison with each other, though they were death to the religion of Christ. Rome had been before an iron power; but this "era of the martyrs" was superlatively an iron age, which trampled the Church to death. In the days of the two emperors, they suffered the "tenth general persecution; which continued ten years." (Ch. Hist.) They were equally hostile to the religion of Christ, and all who embraced it; and it appears that the two legs of the image were here completely developed. In one month's time, there were slaughtered seventeen thousand, by the sword, the plague, the rack, and the cross; and neither age, sex, nor condition availed with these inhuman tyrants. (Hist. of the world.) Some suppose the eastern and western empires were represented by the legs of iron; but as the eastern had been represented by the brass, it is not at all probable.

Sir Isaac Newton's remarks are very much to the purpose, relative to the three first beasts, (Daniel 7: 12,) "As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away; yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time." The rest of the governments had lost their supremacy; yet their territory and successive inhabitants were still existing. Newton says, "Babylon was still the first beast;" Medo-Persia the second, and "Greece was still the third," and Rome the fourth. "Seeing, therefore, that the body of the third beast is confined to the nations on this side of the river Euphrates, and the body of the fourth is confined to the nations on this side of Greece; we are to look, for all the eleven horns of the fourth beast on this side of Greece." And so it is with respect to the image; the head of gold is still Babylon; the silver breast and arms is still Persia; the brazen belly and sides, is still Greece, and the iron legs are still Rome; and as we must look for the eleven horns of the fourth beast on this side of Greece, so we must look for the development of the legs of iron, when two reigning emperors independent of each other, stand united in the western empire of Rome. This we find when Diocletian and Maximian each swayed an independent sceptre over the western Roman empire. These legs, or the government represented by them, continue till the "Church and State" are united; or the civil and ecclesiastical power of the papacy supersedes it; when the spotted feet show themselves, "part of iron and part of clay." The pope and emperor may be symbolized by the two feet, and the temporal and spiritual power may be symbolized by the iron and clay, which was mainly vested in the pope; when "the abomination that maketh desolate" was set up in the begining of the sixth century. This Antichristian beast with all his Gentile oppressors has power given him to "tread under foot the holy city, forty and two months," or 1260 years, when the toes begin to show themselves, composed of the same material viz. iron and clay. Some reckon the kingdoms of Italy, as being symbolized by the toes; such as Naples, Sicily, Tuscany, Sardinia, Lucca, Modena, Monacca, Lombardy, Venice and St. Mareno. This looks plausible; but whether they were the identical kingdoms represented by the ten toes, I leave others to judge; and only say, that some have confounded the kingdoms represented by the ten horns of the fourth beast, with those represented by the ten toes of the image. The horns of the fourth beast rose up, between the third and fifth century; and to make these kingdoms to be symbolized by the toes, would destroy all just proportion of the image, as a human figure.

As the different metals composing the image, though all seen in a vision at one time, are not represented as contemporaneous, we must look for each of the parts mentioned to be consecutive. Beyond all doubt those kingdoms represented by the toes, appeared at the end of the 1260 years; and they will exist till "the stone" smites, and breaks them in pieces. "The Stone," cut out of the mountain without hands, is the Lord Jesus Christ, or His Kingdom: "who by the brightness of His coming" will destroy "the man of sin," and by the same process, "smite the image on the feet, which are of iron and of clay. Then will the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver and the gold be broken in pieces together, and become like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor, and the wind carry them away, that no place be found for them," "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces, like a potter's vessel." Ps. 2: 9. "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; (and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers,) even as I received of my Father." Rev. 2: 26, 27.

It has been suggested that as the different metals representing kingdoms are broken in pieces together, that the resurrection of the wicked must necessarily occur before the nations are destroyed. But if Babylon is still the body of the first beast, it is still the head of gold; and as each of those kingdoms were only superseded, not obliterated, I see no reason for an argument against the nations symbolized being broken in pieces together, even before the wicked are raised. They were conquered, but not blotted out; they still exist, their successive posterity are still among the wicked nations of the earth.

The chronology of the captivity of Manasseh has been variously computed, and who his captor was, has been questioned and disputed.

Some suppose that Esarhaddon had a long and prosperous reign of 39 years, at Nineveh, and 13 over Babylon, and that he was the king who took Manasseh. Others, with more reason contend that Esarhaddon reigned no more than ten years; that he was "weak in wit, and molested by his elder brother;" and moreover, that the loss of his father, Sennacherib's army of 185.000 men, by the divine displeasure, and all their spoil, greatly weakened his empire, of which, Merodach Baladan, called in profane history, Mardocempadus, or Mardok Empadus, took advantage and made himself master, "and was rewarded by a great part of Assyria, if not all." This was the king who sent an embassy, with letters and a present, to Hezekiah, king of Judah, to congratulate him on his miraculous restoration to health, after he had been "sick unto death;" (when fifteen years were added unto his life.) This was in the 14th year of Hezekiah, and the same year that Sennacherib invaded him. He was king of Nineveh. Merodach was king of Babylon. Is. 39: 1. Now which of these accounts look the most reasonable? The various historic accounts are so contradictory that our only safety is in adhering to that which is most consonant to Scripture. Says Rollin, "It is difficult to lay down any opinion about it as certain and incontestible; but where certainty is not to be had, a reasonable person will be satisfied with probability." He says, "there were two lines of kings in Assyria." It may not be uninteresting to the lovers of such history as is in accordance with Scripture, to trace both the lines of the kings of Assyria, and by a chronological table, have a brief view of their cotemporary years, with those of the kings of Judah and Israel; together with the words of cotemporary Prophets, and their fulfilment, which, (if I may be justified in a digression from the main subject of the article,) I will give from the 21st year of Amaziah to the captivity of Judah in Babylon.

To be Continued.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. J. Reeve.

UNION MILLS, Laporte Co., Ind. January 28th, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—I have thought much on the Apostleship—whether that gift ceased with the death of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb or not. I find two commissions given to the twelve. The first appears to be a specific work, or rather for a specific time, which was fulfilled, or ended with our Lord's literal reign on earth, (if I may be allowed to call it a reign.)—Hence a new commission just before our Lord's ascension that they do not fully enter upon until they receive power through the Holy Ghost. Now most of our preachers hold that the Apostleship ended with the decease of the twelve. If so, did not the validity of the commission end there too? I know that our preachers claim to go out under the last commission given to the Apostles. Now I have thought that the commission must end with the Apostles; but if the other is a correct position, are they not successors to the Apostles? and, if so, should they not do the work of an Apostle?

From one who has a longing desire to walk in the old paths. JAMES REEVE.

For the Crisis.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

BY H. PRATT.

No. 9.

Many are the promises to ISRAEL recorded by the holy prophets. And the question arises, Who are Israel? Are the Gentiles included, or does it embrace only the literal seed of Jacob, Isaac or Abraham? Paul says, "All Israel shall be saved," and it is a matter of no small moment for us to know who are Israel? One thing is certain; if it means the literal seed, then ALL the LITERAL seed will be saved. But as we have been shown in a former article that the Israelites were a typical people, we will endeavor by the word of the Lord to find out who are the antitypical Israel.

If David in prophecy represents Christ, and he is to be the prince of Israel forever (Ezek. 37: 25,) then Israel will be those that make up the house of Christ. Hence says Paul (Heb. 3: 6,) "But Christ as a son over his own house: whose house are we if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." But he is speaking to the Hebrews; yes, and if they compose the house of Israel, and ALL Israel are to be saved, why these conditions? "If ye hold fast, &c."

But we are not to grope our way in darkness here. "The light" has come into world; but many "choose darkness rather than light." Nevertheless, we will hold this subject up to the light, and see if we can discover its true import.

As we might be tedious by noticing the import of the phrase (Israel) in all its connections, we therefore proceed at once to the test that settles this matter. And to make it so plain "that he may run that readeth," it will be necessary to quote somewhat at length from the prophet Hosea. In the 1st. chapter of this prophecy commencing with the first verse we have the following:

"The word of the Lord that came unto Hosea, the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel. The beginning of the word of the Lord by Hosea. And the Lord said to Hosea, Go, take unto thee a wife of twhoredoms and children of whoredoms; for the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the Lord. So he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim; which conceived and bare him a son. And the Lord said unto him, Call his name Jezreel; for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel. And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel. And she conceived again, and bare a daughter. And God said unto him, Call her name Lo-ruhamah; for I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; but I will utterly take them away. But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen. Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son. Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammi; for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God. Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them ye are the sons of the living God."

Here it is plainly declared that God will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel, but will utterly take them away, that he will cause to CEASE the kingdom of the house of Israel. That this was fulfilled, is plainly taught by the Saviour who says: "Therefore say I unto you (Israel,) the kingdom of heaven shall be taken from you!"

And again, says the prophet: "Ye are not my people, and I will not be your God."

V. 10th: "YET the number of the CHILDREN OF ISRAEL shall be as the sand of the sea."

Here, then, we have a thus saith the Lord that the natural seed are not the children of God. They as a people are rejected,—their kingdom is to cease. Yet the children of Israel will be innumerable. Now from what people is this great family to arise? Let inspiration tell the story. Let the Gentile apostle answer. Hear him!

Rom. 9: 23—"And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the vessels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory."

V. 24: "Even us whom he hath called not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles."

For the Crisis.

From Br. L. P. Hastings.

HAWLY, Dec. 24th, 1855.

Br. Merriam:—If ever there was a time when the few that held the faithful word were precious, it is now. Oh! how full of meaning the word of Jesus, "he that endureth unto the end the same shall be saved." I never have seen a time so trying to our faith as the few months just passed. But I remember that inspiration has penned it, "many shall be purified, made white, and tried." May the Lord help us to endure the trial, for then we shall come forth as gold, and a crown of life shall be ours Surely nothing but true love to God and his word, and the hope of that heavenly inheritance, can enable one to keep unspotted from the world in this hour of temptation. But those that have given all, and have had such enrapturing views of the better country, and the bliss to be enjoyed there, can never be satisfied with the worthless phantoms of this ruined world. Yes, ruined indeed it is, and if ever I realized the truth of that prophecy, "the earth is defiled under the inhabitants thereof," it has been of late. It seems that iniquity of every kind is abroad in the land, and that soon the Lord will appear to destroy the workers of iniquity, and reward his humble, faithful followers.

Our position has been and is a trying one, but not more so than that of ancient Israel in their journeyings to the typical Canaan. The wickness of that land waxed great, and so now their sins reach to heaven and call for vengeance. May the Lord help us to be of the pure in heart who shall see God, and of the meek who shall inherit the earth.

Yours, in hope,

L. P. HASTINGS.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. J. Weston.

Lowell, Ms., Feb. 22, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—You and all the saints who read the "Crisis," will rejoice to know that we are having good meetings in Lowell. Bro. Thurber commenced his labors here on Thursday evening. The Lord was with the "meat in due season" he presented. Friday evening he preached from Rev. 2: 1—6. He spoke of the Lord's approval of the Church of Ephesus, of their works, their labors and patience. But nothwithstanding all this, though they had labored so much—though they had had so much patience—though they had continued on in their good works with so much patience, and had not fainted under discouragements, "yet," said he, "Jesus says, I have somewhat against thee, because thou has left thy first love." "Remember, therefore, from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do thy first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent."

He dwelt very feelingly on these points, and then he asked:—"Have we not, brethren and sisters, forgotten our first love, though we may have labored much and had much patience? Let us look into our own hearts and see if we have the same love—the same kindness, &c., that we had when we first gave ourselves to the Lord. And if the Lord would remove his candlestick away from a Church that had been so good, that had done so much—unless they repented and returned to their first love, will He save one of us at His coming, though we have done much for Him, unless we return to our first love."

The argument was so reasonable—the appeal so pathetic, it had a powerful effect.

At the close of the meeting, when he asked, "who will resolve to repent and do their first works, and return to their first love?" nearly every one who professed to love the Lord stood upon their feet. God grant that the brethren in Lowell, and in every other place, may return to their first love. In a few short weeks, I believe the Lord will come. J. WESTON.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, MARCH 5, 1856.

☞ Hope all will read Brother Sheldon's "call for aid." It is a privilege to live in an age when there are so many objects of benevolent enterprise. Let us remember "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

☞ Read Br. Burnham's article on being Christ-like—yes, Christ-like—as he says, how sweet it sounds! to be like Christ. PUT ON CHRIST. But in order to do this, we must first PUT OFF SELF. Oh, how momentous is this subject! how eminently important that we put off self, and put on Christ! If we work in Him—declaring His truth—laboring for His cause—to advance His interests—to build up His people—to glorify His name—to adorn His doctrine, we shall find our heads covered in the day of battle with His shield—armed with His strength—clothed with His righteousness—filled with His love—sanctified to His glory—lights in His Church—and heirs of His kingdom. Bless the Lord.

The Millenium.

No. 5.

Isa. 11: 6–9. "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cocatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

This passage has been supposed to teach the doctrine of a temporal millenium: but the context shews that the judgment, or destruction of the wicked precedes the events here described.

How do modern theologians believe the spiritual reign of Christ will be ushered in? By the use of the ordinary means of grace. They do not believe in supernatural occurrences, but in the progress of spiritual influences that are now in operation, or the universal diffusion of Gospel light by human instrumentality. But how is it in the passage to which I have referred? The glory of the Kingdom described is a consequence or result of what precedes, and this we shall find to be, not the operation of the ordinary means of grace, but the outpouring of God's wrath even to the destruction of an ungodly world.

What events are recorded in this passage as introductory to the Kingdom of God here described? First, Jesus Christ appears on earth. vs. 1–4.

"And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots. And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth."

Here we have portrayed the moral excellence and infinite wisdom of the Savior, which characteristics seem to be given to prove His qualifications for the high office of Supreme Judge of all the earth.

"And he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins and faithfulness the girdle of his reins." vs. 4, 5.

These are the scenes that usher in the delightful state described in vs. 6–9; and mark well this fact, that in this description of the prosperity, and peace, and glory of the Church, the Judgment scene transpires FIRST. Indeed so prominent is the same fact in other Scriptures, that many theologians of sound and discriminating minds, who had embraced the temporal Millenium theory, such as Pres. Edwards, have maintained that the Millennium would be ushered in by calamities and judgments that would sweep away a large proportion of the ungodly from the earth. Thus instead of its being a Millennium of peace and safety to all, it was regarded as the period of destruction to the violators of God's law. But modern writers on the subject teach that the man of sin himself is to be converted—the nations of the heathen to be brought into the fold of Christ and thus the whole world are to rejoice together in the salvation of God. The Scripture, however, represents the preparatory scenes that usher in this glorions epoch, as scenes of judgment and destruction to the wicked.

"And he shall SMITE the earth with the ROD of his mouth." This does not look like the conversion of the heathen by the spread of truth and righteousness and peace and joy in the earth. When that rod "smites" or "breaks" the nations, it will "dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Ps. 2: 9.

What the result of thus smiting with a rod is, appears evident from Rev. 19: 15, "Out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God."

"And with the breath of his lips shall He slay the wicked." This language is too simple and plain to require comment.

After this fearful annunciation of Divine judgment, comes the delineation of that delightful scene of harmony and loveliness in the Kingdom of God. Nothing could be more beautiful, whether it be taken in a literal or figurative sense, than the idea of the most ferocious of all animals being associated with those that are domestic and peaceable, and even the most perfect natural enemies grazing in harmony together.

But the question may be asked, how do we know this is in the everlasting Kingdom of God? We know from the following reasons:

1. Its antecedent is the destruction of the wicked by such a catastrophe as is to occur at the end of the world, and at no other time.

2. The harmony and peace of that scene is such as is to be enjoyed in the world to come, and not in this present evil world. It corresponds to descriptions of the glorified state in other portions of the oracles. Take, for instance, the description of the "new earth" given in Isa. 65: 17–25, we shall find its correspondence with the passage under consideration is very striking, particularly in the last verse: "the wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: and dust shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord."

3. It is denominated God's "holy mountain." This expression is used to denote the Kingdom of God. When that kingdom is spoken of in Dan. 2, it is represented as a stone "cut out of the mountain without hands;" also it "became a great mountain and filled the whole earth." In Is. 25, the Kingdom is spoken of thus: "And in this mountain shall the Lord of host make unto all people a feast of fat things." &c. Also in v. 10th of the same ch.: "For in this mountain shall the hand of of the Lord rest," &c.

4. It is said, "they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain." If there be nothing there to hurt nor destroy, it seems evident it cannot be while the tares and wheat grow together; but Jesus taught that they should "grow together until the harvest; and the harvest is the end of the world."

Now it is obvious that the Scriptures portray a scene of glory to the Church in the future, to occur on the earth, and as it has been supposed, according to the popular theology, that the earth would be annihilated at the Judgment, those delineations of glory and triumph and immaculate purity and undisturbed harmony were placed in this mortal state, instead of the immortal; and herein lies the great starting point of erroneous interpretation of prophecy. It is in not understanding the locality of the Kingdom. But when we come to believe that the saints, in their glorified state, will "possess the Kingdom under the whole heaven," and not above it; "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth," and not "beyond the bounds of time and space;" then we perceive how those glorious predictions can be fulfilled on the earth; not in the present evil world, but in the world to come, and amid the glories of immortal life.

In our next, we shall, the Lord willing, refer to a parallel passage in Is. 25th ch., from which the light shines so clearly, that it would seem no one can avoid seeing it.

For the Crisis.

Christ-Like.

O how much human nature there is in us, and how little of the "divine nature" of the Lamb of God! Well, well, what groaning, crying, sighing, wrestling, praying, fighting, disciplining, mortifying, agonizing, moral and spiritual dying it costs us! Shall we finally overcome after all? O dear! this question is more easily asked than answered. We hope. Yes, we hope, and were it not so, our hearts indeed would break. But we set our will in us to do the will of our heavenly Father again, and still again, and yet, like the feeble insect climbing the hill of rolling sand, down, down from time to time we tumble! O poor human nature, how feeble art thou! Yea, and ever hast been! In the case of Eve, thou must have that pretty fruit. In the case of Adam, thou must have a taste of it, if pretty Eve offer it, at all hazards. In the case of Noah, the sweet juice of the vine must be drank to excess, and strange crime must follow. With Abraham there must be evasion and deception amounting to falsehood, no doubt. And Isaac followed in the same fault. Jacob must listen to weakness, and tell an absolute untruth to gain the birthright. Moses, usually meek as an angel almost, must get into a passion and break the tables of God; and again must smite, instead of speak, to the rock—and feel so angry as to call the people "rebels."

Gideon must refuse to believe the angel of God without double signs. Samson must lay his head down in a woman's lap, and like a fool, utter all his mind, after doing wonders of a most astonishing character all through his life time before. Jephthah must make a very rash vow to the Almighty. David must turn from his generally holy course and number the people, and thus anger God; and then do worse than the heathen rulers to crown the whole. Job must curse the day of his birth. Solomon must play the fool with all his wisdom. Jeremiah must also curse his birthday, and refuse to speak for God. Peter must deny his Lord, and seal the denial with bitter oaths. Paul must contend sharply with a ministerial brother. The Corinthian Church must become carnal and act like men of the world; nay, some among them must commit a crime not known in Gentile society! The Church at Ephesus must leave their first love. The Church of Pergamos must retain among them the doctrine of Balaam and of the Nicolaitanes. The Church of Thyatira must suffer that woman Jezebel in their midst. The Church of Sardis must be dead while she professed to live. And the Church of Laodicea must be guilty of lukewarmness. Martin Luther must also spoil the work of God in his hands by reason of rash words and actions. Carlstadt must quarrel with Luther, and almost fight for "the truth." Calvin must consent to the death of Servetus for holding fast what he supposed to be truth.

George Whitefield must wink at, and almost or quite apologize for the sin of American Slavery. Wesley and Whitefield must almost fight, (certainly contend sometimes bitterly,) about the doctrine of "predestination." And where shall we stop? Nowhere short of the Kingdom of God. For human nature was the same—is the same—and, in this state, ever will be the same. Let us praise God that the plan of salvation is to save us by grace; otherwise we must all perish forever. We can, we will repent of all our wrongs, and cast ourselves down into the dust of the earth, at the feet of Jesus, and hope in the mercy of God. We can, we will make our covenant with him thus: O Lord God Almighty, I do consecrate unto thee my whole soul, body and spirit, with all that I am, and have, and ever shall possess, totally, and unreservedly, and eternally—accept of me, and save me, I beseech of thee, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. And will he not hear us? Yes, verily. We can—we will set our face against every evil thing, and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. We can—we will hold no communion with evil-minded persons who go among the flock as lambs, while inwardly they are ravening wolves, to divide, devour, distract and corrupt the simple. Human nature is ever on extremes. While it attempts to prune, it often rashly cuts the tender branches, and thus spoils the crop. Or, to avoid this evil, it passes over the useless and noisome productions, and clips so lightly here and there, that the tender vines are choked and spoiled. God rebukes us on the one hand for offending the little ones, and on the other for suffering "grievous wolves" to enter in to devour.

He cautions us for seeking to be over much righteous, as well as warns us in regard to tardiness in duty. Well, it is one thing to do right, and another thing to do it in the right way. Jesus did right, but He did right, like Jesus. He knew how and when to say "thou fool," "thou hypocrite," "ye serpents," and He also knew how and when to say, "daughter, be of good cheer," "go in peace," "fear not, only believe." We will—we can be like Jesus to some happy extent. We will, then, be like Him to seek the honor of God alone. Like Him we will rebuke the wicked, comfort the good in all their feebleness, and thus magnify the grace of God. Like Him we will use holy words, and like Him we will keep the spirit of sweetness and grace. To be sure, sometimes it seems to us we can bear no more—we must become impatient—indeed, we have cause to feel displeased, irritated, angry—we are misrepresented, traduced, belied, slandered. Yes, well, bear a little more—be like Jesus. O yes, be like Jesus. I can preach this to you, dear brethren and sisters, but O what is poor human nature when I come to the practical test! But I must preach and practice also. I will—in the name, and by the grace of Christ, I will! Like Jesus! how sweet that sounds! Well, we will set Him up for our standard, and hasten to conform ourselves to all His examples. We will, we will! Look—He is a boy 12 years old—He must be about his Father's business—be like Him. He is at Jordan—He goes down into the water and is baptized—be like Him. He enters His ministry and goes about doing good—be like Him. He endures spitting, mocking, smiting, in silence—be like Him. He hangs in agony on the cross and prays God to forgive His tormentors—be like Him. He will, within a few short months, come again and we shall BE LIKE HIM.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. Sheldon.

WEST HAWLEY, Mass.
Feb. 5th, 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—We are still "pilgrims and strangers," in a "strange land," earnestly "desiring a better country," even the everlasting Kingdom of God. As we wade through the unparalleled perils of these last days—perils of diverse kinds—our hearts beat high for the land of rest, the delightful paradise of God. Yea, "we groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption—to wit—the redemption of the body." We desire to be "clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life" eternal at the coming of the great live-giver.

Nothing should induce us to take a retrograde step. We started for a glorious prize, a valuable treasure, which is still ahead. Our hearts, or affections, should be entwined around our treasure till we obtain it in reality.

As we survey the history of the kingdom of this world, we know that the Kingdom of God is almost due. Permit me to append the following private letter from Bro. Tandy to myself, to stir up the pure minds of some by way of remembrance:

My Very Dear Brother Sheldon:—

May God help me to be truly thankful to him for the privilege of once more addressing you, my dear Brother, in the name of the Lord. We are living in a grand and awful time! And thrice blessed is he who watcheth and keepeth his garments. We cannot be too faithful, in the service of God. No, there is no danger o satiety here. "Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing." May we be so wise and happy as to belong to that favored few! The provisions of the Gospel, made by kind heaven, are abundant, and they are free for all!! "God so loved the world, that whosoever believeth in him, may not perish, but have everlasting life." So that none need to be lost. But, alas! few are chosen!!

"N. B. I believe that Nebuchadnezzar's dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure. First, the "head of gold" symbolizes Babylon. We do not find our position here; for, she arose 667 years B. C. Secondly, we see "the breast and arms of silver," which symbolizes Media and Persia. We do not find ourselves here; for, she succeeded the Babylonians 538 years B. C. Thirdly, we behold "the belly and sides of brass," which symbolizes Grecia. Our position is not found here either; for, it succeeded Medo Persia 332 years B. C. And in the fourth section of the image are "the legs of iron," representing Rome in its undivided state. Do we find ourselves living here? We do not! Jesus of Nazareth was crucified in the days of Pagan Rome, and that event, you know, took place more than eighteen hundred years ago. This empire succeeded the Grecion empire 30 years B. C.

Now we come down to the feet and toes of the great symbolic image,—or the divided state of the Roman empire. What is the next event for which we are to look? Dan. 2: 35. "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them in pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces, together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors, and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them. And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth." All of the above prophetic declarations have been fulfilled, except the last, and that, we humbly believe, will have its fulfilment right speedily.

Dear Bro. S., seeing we look for such things, "What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?"

"I firmly believe that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh!" "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven." This same Jesus shall come again.

The testimony of two Patriarchs and David, four Prophets, five Apostles, three Angels, and the Lord himself, places this subject beyond the least shadow of a doubt.

The vision will speak and not lie! although it may tarry for a little season.

Now, my dear friend and brother in Christ, how very important that we see to it, that our lamps are trimmed and burning, ready to go and meet the Bridegroom at His sure coming! May the good Lord help you and me, and all the wise virgins to be faithful until Jesus comes to set up his glorious kingdom on the earth.

Here we stand upon the last inch of the present dispensation. May we stand with our loins girt about with truth, and not "grudge one against another."

Love to all the saints, especially to those to whom I have administered the word of life in former days.

W. SHELDON.

For the Crisis.

LANDAFF, N. H., Feb. 18, 1856.

DEAR BR. MERRIAM:—While reading the late numbers of the Crisis, we felt truly comforted and strengthened in hearing from those of like precious faith. It forcibly reminded us of very many pleasant interviews we had enjoyed together, while we were looking for the same "blessed hope,"—together we had mingled our songs and rejoicings—we had sympathized in each others joys and sorrows; and expected ere this to have been together in the sorrowless state, sharing the ever new delights of the New Creation. But while we find ourselves in this world of shadows, exposed to sickness, pain and death, we would be comforted by the words of the Saviour, "If I go away, I will come again." And just as certain as those angels testified that "this same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so soon come in like manner as ye have seen him go into Heaven, so certain will he come personally and visibly to this earth again. And though we have been sadly disappointed in not seeing the object of our hope, as we had fondly anticipated, yet we are not discouraged; we believe his coming is "nigh even at the doors;" that the long-looked-for day—a day so much desired by the holy of all ages, is but little in the distance. We believe the signs are mostly in the past, which were to precede his coming. And says our Saviour, "when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." And we would be admonished by His precious words: "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, so that day come upon you unawares." While we see so much anxiety manifested in the coming election, absorbing all the thoughts and interests of men, we are ardently desiring the coming of Him "whose right it is to reign." How much more desirable is the peaceful reign of Christ, when the world will be "judged with righteousness, and the people with equity." I do not wonder David said, "Let the sea roar and the fulness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein. Let the floods clap their hands, let the hills be joyful together before the Lord; for he cometh to judge the earth," &c. If all these inaminate things are called upon to rejoice because Christ is coming, how much greater reason has poor dying man to rejoice in prospect of His coming to give life and immortality, to wipe away all tears, and swallow up death in victory! Truly my heart responds, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." We truly sympathize with all who are looking for and loving the appearing of Jesus.

Yours in hope,
M. M. EASTMAN.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sister Cordelia A. Robinson.

MINNESOTA, TERRITORY,
Feb. 10th, 1856.

DEAR BROTHER MERRIAM:—I have felt it a duty for a long time to write a few lines to the scattered flock, and have Advent friends who are looking for a letter through The Crisis from me, so I seat myself to-day, for the first time, to address them with my heart full of praises to the Lord, and a glorious hope of meeting them at the resurrection of the just. Oh let us be faithful until Christ shall appear, and meet in that better world where there will be no farewell note heard—where there is no sickness, pain nor death. If we suffer, let us count it all joy for Christ's sake; for He has suffered before us and for our sake. Oh let us think of Him on Mount Calvary—how He suffered the shame of the cross. Was it all for us? Yes; and now He is in Heaven interceding for us. Soon He'll finish all his pleading and come again and redeem us from this world of sin and sorrow. Oh, dear Brn. and Srs. if any of you suffer from poverty, think of your Master, who said he had not where to lay his head. Cheer up, and believe His Word. We shall reap in due time if we faint not.

I can sympathise with those that are far from their native land, and are deprived of the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith; for I have not heard the sound of the Gospel since I came to this Territory. I can say with Sister Gierlow, Oh, that some of God's watchmen would come this way. We need one very much to arouse the attention of the people. The Sabbath is not regarded here. May the good Shepherd cause his voice to be heard even in this valley. I am not pained with seeing elegant churches, nor elegant mansions, nor gay dress, with worldly conversation, and laying up of treasures on earth without a thought of the future. What a snare! But may God keep me from it, and preserve me unspotted from the world. I am almost alone in this place; but it is cheering to converse with even one, on the subject of Christ's coming kingdom. Oh, ye watchmen, are there none to come to help—that they may be instrumental of saving a few more souls before that great day? There are people here, I think, that have not heard the sound of the Gospel for three or four years. Oh, must they receive their doom without hearing the alarm—hearing of Jesus and him crucified, and of his coming and kingdom; God help us to be on our watch and bear our cross and manifest the spirit of our Master, is the prayer of your unworthy Sister.

I would like to hear through The Crisis from those Brn. and Srs., that I am acquainted with at the east. Now take up your pen, and cheer your lone Sister, a pilgrim far from home. Remember me and mine at the throne of Grace.

From your Sister still looking for the Lord, C. A. R.

☞ We hope no one will fail to read brother Wetherell's article on holy living, entitled, "Practical rules of Life;" and when they have read and studied and digested the same, we hope a reform will appear in our lives wherever it may be needed.

☞ We often have calls for back numbers which we are happy to supply when we have them, but of No. 28 we have none on hand. We have a few of Nos. 26 and 27.

☞ Will the Br. who sent us the names of Wm. Hamlin and Amos French please give us his NAME?

For the Crisis.

The Coming Crisis.

Men of thought and observers of the moral, national and political movements of the present day, live in momentary expectancy of some mighty change which is to mark a new era in the history of the world. Wise men of the world destitute of the grace of God, need no spirit of divination, to discern an approaching conflict; but what shall be the state of the world when these contending elements shall have spent their fury, is a matter upon which grave philosophers look, in many instances, with serious apprehension. But the student of prophecy discovers, in the present restless state of the world, a sure precursor of the destruction of the Gentile nations, and the end of the Gospel age.

The tendencies of the present day are truly alarming; characteristic only of the last days. Men are professed Christians but without confidence in God. Blinded by the deceitfulness of the world, they reject His word. Prophecy, by many teachers in Israel, is considered beyond our comprehension, and consequently perfectly useless; whilst the plain teachings of Christ and His Apostles are openly rejected, giving place to vain philosophy and the traditions of men. Men's characters are fast being developed; hurried to and fro by hidden impulses, they seem striving for some unseen, unknown object; stifling the voice of conscience amid the bustle of the world. They see not those signs which tell of the coming strife; they hear not those voices which speak of earth's last conflict. "But ye, brethren," says an inspired Apostle, "are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." No, thank God, they are those amid all the darkness of the present time, who discern in the passing events, scenes marked in God's word as transpiring in "the time of the End," indicative of the close of this Age.

Is God's book one of harmony, measuring earth's history, marking its changes, and revealing its destiny? Are the various national and moral changes which have transpired, so many stages in a grand drama, marked, with inspired precision, placed as beacon lights by the Governor of the Universe, marking our proximity to the end of the Age? What, then, are the next great overturns noted in God's word? What means the mighty march of intellect manifested in the improvements of the day, and in religious and scientific research, but the fulfilment of the "predictions of God's prophet," "In the time of the End knowledge shall be increased?" Why this restlessness of the nations? this stirring up of strife? unless the dynasties of earth are about to fall, and the everlasting reign of Christ to commence? The cup of an ungodly world and apostate Church is fast filling up; whilst the syren song of peace by the professed followers of Christ, has reassured them of safety. This woful state of the world is to continue till the dread announcement is made, "it is done." "Evil men and seducers will wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Then, too late, will blind, mistaken man awake from dreaming; dreaming of honor, of pleasure, of long years of peace and enjoyment. But Jesus comes arrayed in robes of royalty—King of kings, and Lord of lords—to execute His Father's will, and claim the Kingdom purchased with His blood. Who would not share the glories of His reign, and hear the welcome from His lips, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world?" Who would not taste the joys of paradise, and walk the golden streets of the city of God, and cast his crown at Jesus' feet, and unite in that song of triumph and redemption, sung by the redeemed myriads? Who would not not eat of that tree, whereof if a man eat, he shall never hunger, and drink of that water, whereof if a man drink, he shall never thirst?

O awake, then, while probation lingers; put on the robe of righteousness; then in common with all the righteous dead and living, you soon shall share those lasting blessings promised to all those who love the appearing of their Lord. Amen.

DANIEL HUTCHINSON.

West Poland, Jan. 23, 1856.

Request.

HINSDALE, N. H., Feb. 24th, 1856.

BROTHER E. BURNHAM:—Can you come to Vernon, Vt., and labor some with us, before long? I visited the brethren there to-day—they are very anxious to have you come, if it is in keeping with the will of our Heavenly Father. Some of the brethren of Brattleboro' were present, who were also much interested in the subject, and desired that you would make calculations to preach there also. Come, my dear brother, come over and help us. We feel that our work is almost done for this world; but some poor souls may yet be reached. Oh God, save, is my prayer. Will you give notice immediately through The Crisis, whether you can comply with this request, and if so, when?

In behalf of the Church,

B. F. STREETER.

A CALL FOR AID.—Being upon the point of settling in the far West, I call for aid to assist me in publishing a Tract upon the Advent faith, for free circulation in that new region. The thing must be done, and I am unable to do it alone. It is certainly the duty of somebody to assist. Every cent received shall be faithfully appropriated. Will ministering brethren interest themselves to collect something? Forward your freewill offerings to me without any delay, at West Hawley, Mass.

W. SHELDON.

For the Crisis.

MINNESOTA CITY, Winona Co. M. T., Feb. 1856.

Dear brothers and sisters in the Lord: I still feel to praise the soon-coming King, ever and anew, and claim to be one of the scattered flock, holding on to the promises by faith through the goodness of our blessed Redeemer. Oh, glorious hope, of meeting with those of like faith, if faithful—it lifts my fainting spirit up. Oh, brothers and sisters, how much we need grace and watchfulness in this day of trial to keep us unspotted from the world. Ah, yes, glory to God! it is our privilege to live in readiness to hear the welcome news, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom," and my prayer is, that I may live with the saints, worthy to be called His child at His coming.

In distant Minnesota wilds,
My glorious hope lives still;
Christ soon will come, the earth renew,
And banish every ill.

Yes, ever blessed, glorious hope!
For Christ we then shall greet;
He'll raise our friends that sleep in dust,
Oh then we all may meet.

The Crisis in my home is found,
An ever welcome guest;
And to this far off western land
Bears news of coming rest.

A stranger in a distant land,
Few means of grace I share
With bretheren or sisters known,
Who love the peace of prayer.

I hope to hear the watchman's voice,
If time continues long;
Proclaiming truth to erring ones,
In this far distant home.

From a sister, hoping for redemption,

L. E. B.

DIED in Lynn, Jan. 31, Sister Mary Fitch, aged 36 years. Sr. Fitch was formerly connected with the Baptist Church in Nova Scotia—moved to Lynn in 1840, and on hearing the doctrines of the Advent faith, she became interested, cordially embraced them, and continued until her death, firmly to believe the proclamation of the Redeemer's coming and Kingdom. She believed the Midnight Cry had been sounded, and that soon the opening heavens would reveal the Son of God.—FITCH.

LYNN, March, 3, 1856.

DEMOLITION OF THE DOCKS OF SEBASTOPOL.—Jan. 14.—The demolition of the docks proceeds. On Saturday the side of one was blown in. There were 11 mines, and 8000 lbs. of powder were employed. At about half-past one o'clock the fusee was lighted, and the engineer officers ascended the high ground in the rear of the docks to await the explosion. Owing to the mistake of a subordinate officer in charge of the wires, three of the mines were let off prematurely. Five minutes elapsed and then the others exploded, not all of them quite simultaneously, but in very rapid succession. The effect was most satisfactory. To re-construct what was overthrown would give more trouble than to build a new dock, for the removal of the ponderous rubbish would of itself be an Herculean labor. The quantity of powder used would suggest the idea of a prodigious explosion, fragments flying high into the air, and strewing the land around; but it must be remembered that the force of these mines is directed laterally, and its first apparent effect disappoints expectation. It is only when the smoke clears away, and one beholds the huge masses of granite that have been riven from their beds, that one forms a just idea of the power applied.

At the moment of the explosion, however, some blocks of very respectable size were seen flying through the air, in a direction, fortunately, where their fall was innocuous. Amid and within the gray smoke a dust cloud appeared. There was a tremendous motion of the ground, and some stones fell off the dock-yard wall. The engineer officers were highly satisfied with the effect produced. Few spectators were present, for it is never known beforhand, with any degree of certainty, when these explosions are to take place. A few French officers were present, some of them with a photographic apparatus, to catch the effect of the explosion. The Russian batteries were silent. Shortly after the explosion, as I rode up through the Redan, a few shots were fired, but they were chiefly directed at the French part of the town. For the last few days the Russian fire has been very slack—They have probably found out that they merely wasted their powder and shot. When the destruction of the docks is completed, which will not be before the end of the month, I hope to send you a detailed sketch of the operation.—Corr. London Times.

DESTRUCTIVE GALE IN SCOTLAND.—By the Asia we have received the Edinburgh Weekly Herald of the 9th of February, which abounds with accounts of a destructive gale of wind which swept over Scotland on the 6th inst. It began on Wednesday evening and continued until Thursday morn. It raged with about equal violence on the East and West coast. Its track was everywhere marked by the overthrow of chimneys, the unroofing of houses and the prostration of every variety of exposed objects. In the vicinity of Glasgow alone the estimated loss by the storm is placed as high as half a million of dollars. Among the damaged buildings in Glasgow, Normond's power-loom factory was laid in ruins, and almost every house in that vicinity was more or less damaged. In Pathhead, several houses were unroofed, chimnies thrown down, and whole streets thrown into confusion. St. Clairtown suffered fearfully. The large chimney of Malcolm's Mill was prostrated, and the machinery completely damaged, so that it was thought that $15,000 or $20,000 would be necessary to put things in order again. Other mills, foundries, manufactories, &c., fared in like manner. Methven's Pottery, Links, is particnlarly mentioned, as having been greatly damaged. The Railway station at Glasgow was also considerably damaged, the north side of the station house being torn down and the platform broken in pieces.

In the country around, trees were torn up by the roots and driven hundreds of yards through the air, falling on roads and rendering them impassable, and on houses and crushing them down. Several hundred workmen in Glasgow alone have been thrown out of employment. The like of this hurricane it is said has not been experienced in Scotland for many years.

THREATENING ASPECT OF AFFAIRS IN KANSAS.—Chicago, Feb. 26. The Saturday's Missouri Democrat has three letters from Kansas, dated 14th, 15th and 18th, indicating the probable renewal of hostilities on the 4th of March, which is the time fixed for the inauguration of to new State officers.

Judge Elmore has advised the officers elect not to take the oath of office, as to do so will be treason.

Robinson declares that he will take the oath if he is hanged the same hour.

The merchants of Kansas publish an appeal to the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, to use their influence to prevent further incursions into the Territory, as they will be obliged to open avenues of trade with the East through other States, if their trade through Missouri continues to be interrupted.

ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES.—The London Athenæum for February, in a review of Mr. Squier's recent work on Central America, takes occasion to refer to the present misunderstanding and threats of war between England the United States:—"Surely such a rupture is unlikely! Yet the air grows heavier day by day. The idea is becoming familiar to many minds. Passions are rising. Every mail appears to bring us nearer to the cataract; and unless the good and moderate men of both hemispheres come to the rescue of their governments, a collision may take place. Under such an aspect of events, every voice to which the public will listen should be raised. The more cautiously we ourselves abstain in ordinary times from pronouncing on the course of our national policy, the more we feel bound in this solemn moment to appeal to the true feeling and sedate understanding of our readers on both sides of the Atlantic against the levity, the pride, or the incapacity which would urge the two nations into war."

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION IN NEW ORLEANS.—In New Orleans on the 16th inst., an Irish ex-policeman, named Nath. McCann, made a cool blooded attempt to assassinate Recorder Seuzeneau, of the Third District. McCann wished to be reinstated on the police, and called on the Recorder to obtain his influence for that purpose, but the Recorder gave him little encouragement. At this McCann grumbled, and accused him of being "down on him." During the interview, the Recorder left his office to go to another room in the building, followed by a police officer. McCann pursued, and pushing the officer aside, discharged a pistol at Mr. Seuzeneau, the charge, buckshot, taking effect in the Recorder's neck just below the base of the brain, inflicting a severe and dangerous wound. The police officer then seized McCann's pistol and felled him to the floor. Besides the pistol which he fired at the Recorder, he had hidden in his shoes another single-barreled pistol and a large spring bowie knife, showing that he harbored desperate intent against the life of Mr. Seuzeneau.

FEARFUL EFFECT OF AN AVALANCHE.—During a recent rain storm at Cape Breton, an avalanche of snow, impelled by a large body of water, overwhelmed the dwelling house of a Mr. Campbell, about thirty miles from Sydney, destroying the house and burying in the ruins Mr. Campbell, his wife, mother, three children and two young girls. Mrs. Campbell, her three children, and one of the girls perished by the catastrophe, but the others were rescued alive. The avalanche occurred in the night. A barn was also overwhelmed, and eighteen head of cattle were killed.

FROM SALT LAKE—IMPORTANT FROM KANSAS.—Chicago, March 1.—At Independence a dispatch had been received to send the military to the border counties, and they would rendezvous at Fort Scott.

Intelligence from Kansas to the 29th ult., states that the Kickapoo Rangers had commenced making preparation to drive the Free State men from their claims.

WASHINGTON, March 3.

The bill authorizing the construction of ten sloops-of-war was taken up.

After a debate, in which Messrs. Seward, Hale, Bell of Tenn, and Houston participated, the passed.

The estimatod cost of each vessel is $507,000, including equipment and steam machinery. $,000,000 are now appropriated.

PREPARING FOR WAR.—NEW YORK, March 1. Capt. Whitely, of the Ordinance department, received an order on Thursday from the War department to put Governor's Island in this harbor in a state of war defence.

WOOLWICH ARSENAL.—A very extensive paper mill is now being constructed for the manufacture of cartridges upon an improved principle. Hitherto cartridges have been made from paper, but by the new process they will be manufactured from pulp, and be entirely seamless. The labor required for their production will be infinitely less by the new system. A new building for the manufacture of small arms is to be commenced forthwith, on a site near the east wharf, and plans have been approved for a new foundry for large guns, which is to be built near the new saw mills.

Extract of a letter from Kossuth published in the N. Y. Independent:

"My own decided opinion on the turn affairs have taken, I have explained in my last week's article to the New-York Times. I decidedly believe that the peace in prospect does not constitute an issue, but will only be the means to another issue, and that is a continental coalition of despotism against constitutional England. This opinion is universal on the continent, though of course you will neither hear it confessed in the impending diplomatic conferences, nor see it recorded in the manacled continental press, which absolutely does not represent anything, not even the private opinion of the editors. The fact is notwithstanding true, and receives further confirmation from an expression Czar Alexander is reported to have uttered on accepting the propositions. The word is this: "I despise Germany, hate England, and admire France." He may have said so, or not, it does not matter. The saying will remain historical, like many apocryphal sayings attributed to Mirabeau, Talleyrand, Cambronne, Wellington, because it is a correct description of the situation, which is evidently drifting towards a despotic coalition against England."

FROM WASHINGTON.—New York, March, 4. The following was telegraphed to the Herald last evening:

A good deal of excitement was created in the Cabinet to-day by the reading of an article which appeared in the London Morning Post of Feb. 12, proposing an alliance between France and England to suppress American Filibusterism. The article proposes to increase the fleets of England and France in the vicinity of Central America, and pnt in force the right of search of all suspected American vessels in the same manner as it is exercised in the case of African slavers. This is looked upon as more significant from the fact that the Post is regarded here as the organ of Lord Palmerston.

The Cabinet had a protracted session, when the article above referred to received their attention.

Mr. Greeley, of the Tribune, telegraphs from Washington:—The members of Congress who stand by free Kansas, and are opposed to Mr. Filmore for President, are considering the policy of issuing a call for a peoples Presidential Convention, probably to meet at Philadelphia simultaneously, or substantialy so with the Republican Convention. The movement will be carefully considered, and no step taken without extensive preconcert and some deliberation.

THE RELATIVE INTERESTS OF ENGLAND AND FRANCE IN THE QUESTION OF PEACE.—It is evident from the tone of the English press that the prospect of a conclusion of peace with Russia, on the basis of the propositions recently submitted to the Government of that country, does not afford very general gratification in England. There is a prevalent feeling that thus far England has gained nothing by the war, but that all the advantage to be derived from its prosecution has been reaped by France. There is indeed no doubt that in the present position of matters, England is a serious loser by this contest. Her war expenses have been enormous, averaging fifty millions of pounds per annum since the commencement of the war. To raise money to meet these expenses she has imposed extraordinary and oppressive taxes upon her people, and has contracted a large loan; and yet her expenditures exceeded her income last year more than twenty-one millions of pounds. She has lost not less than fifty thousand men at the seat of war, and many of them her best trained and most efficient soldiers. The prestige of her military greatness has not been maintained by the achievements of her army on the field of battle, but she has been forced to endure the humiliation of seeing the most brilliant and decisive victory of the war gained by the valor and skill of her ally.

Prominent among the motives which induced England to enter upon this war was a desire to protect her East Indian possessions, by the interposition of some barrier which might prevent Russian encroachments in that direction, and to secure a safe and direct route of transit to those possessions, by establishing a highway across Asia Minor, over which she might exercise a permanent control. Jo far from these objects having been accomplished, Russia has made new encroachments and conquests south of the Caucasus, and has obtained an important foothold on the Turkish territory lying on the route to India. She has also obtrined an ascendancy over Persia, and entirely crushed out British influence in that country. England, therefore, has been doomed to have all her hopes of obtaining an advantage in that region signally disappointed.

Under these circumstances it is no wonder that England is not particularly disposed to listen to overtures of peace, and that she is desirous of proceeding with the war until better terms can be obtained from her enemy than can now, with any semblance of reason, be demanded. Immense preparations for the continuance of war have just been completed by the Government of Great Britain. Never, it is said, was there a time in the history of that country when her naval or military forces were so great or so efficient. It is believed, and not without reason, that brilliant successes must attend the British arms in another campaign.

Notwithstanding the terms of peace now proposed are no better than might have been obtained—and in fact were obtained—last Spring; and notwithstanding England has not gained, and if peace is now concluded, will not gain any of the objects which mainly induced her to enter into the war—yet she consents to take part in the negociations for peace on the basis of the above-named propositions, because in this matter she is compelled to yield to the wishes of Louis Napoleon. He is now desirous to effect a peace on almost any terms, provided the honor of France is seemingly preserved. He has made all the use he wishes to of the English alliance—an alliance, so far as he is concerned; hollow and insincere from the beginning. He has gained all he can expect to gain from the war. He has achieved an influential position among European potentates; he has revived the glory of the military power of France; and he has secured material advantages for that country by the extension of its commercial and maritime relations with the East. His resources for the further prosecution of the war have long since begun to fail him; and he cannot continue it without resorting to extraordinary measures for raising funds. Indeed he has nothing to gain by its further continuance, and his alliance with England is not of a character to induce him to make any sacrifices on her account. England, abandoned by her principal ally, cannot long prosecute the war. She must therefore submit to such terms of peace as may satisfy that ally, though they may be far from gratifying to her national pride. She has "drifted" into war, and must drift out as best she can, with the humiliating reflection that she has gathered no glory, and obtained no advantage from the contest.—Boston Trav.

One week Later from Europe.

Arrival of Steamship America at Halifax.

HALIFAX, Feb. 29.—The Royal mail steamship America, from Liverpool on the afternoon of Saturday, 16th inst., arrived here at 2.30. The Liverpool and Philadelphia line of steamers will resume sailing next month.

RUMOR ABOUT THE PACIFIC.—Passengers per America at Halifax report seeing a steamer, supposed to be the Pacific, in the English Channel, with signal of distress. As the Baltic arrived out safe on Wednesday, there appears good reason to hope that the report may prove correct.

THE NEGOTIATIONS.—The Peace Congress conferences were expected to open on Monday the 18th, but the non-arrival of Count Buol and Ali Pasha, will postpone the meeting probably till Wednesday, the 21st. Baron Brunow has arrived at Paris, and the Russian embassy is once more brilliant.

Marquis D'Azeglio has declined the appointment of Sardinian plenipotentiary, in favor of Count Carour.

Lord Clarendon leaves London to-day, (16th) for Paris. Ali Pasha had left Constantinople, and was shortly expected.

The London Advertiser says that Austria and France both wished for the admission of Prussia, but Palmerston absolutely insisted on her exclusion.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times professes to know that France and Austria have come to an understnnding of the fifth point, and that England will be outvoted in the conferences, if she attempts to make a sine qua non of the disarming of the eastern coast of the Black Sea.

France and Austria are likely to concur with England as to the non-fortification of the Aland Isles, and will insist on the admission of consuls into all parts of the Black Sea, but neither France nor Austria consider the razing of Russian forts on the Circassian coast as a measure demanded by the interests of Europe. Austria does not consider Nicolaieff as a Black Sea port.

The London Times has an editorial which, although boasting, betrays anxiety as to England's success in the approaching Congress.

TURKEY.—The Sultan appeared at a ball at the British and French Embassies. The true believers wouldn't believe it. The English dragoon barracks were accidentally burnt—no lives lost. A fire had also occurred at Varna.

CRIMEA.—The Allies have exploded the last of the Sebastopol docks. Fort Nicholas is mined. The Russians continue to fire heavily from the North side. Five English regiments are preparing to return home. The French army received the news of peace with much dissatisfaction.

Jan. 29.—Six boats attempted a surprise, from the north side, but were discovered and repulsed by the French.

The peace news caused much excitement in the Russian army, and preparations making for an attack on Gen. Autemarre's division were countermanded.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.—Vienna letters state that negotiations relative to the principalities are still unsettled, Austria and France differing from England, as to the propriety of according representative institutions. It is said that the point will be reserved for settlement at Paris after the treaty of peace is signed.

It is understood that two additional regiments are to be immediately dispatched to British North America, to act in case their services should be required, with the 76th Regiment and the Canadian Rifles, now at the station.

Advices from Constantinople of the 28th ult., state that the Sultan has approved of the plans of internal reform proposed at the conference. Previous advices had informed us that those plans were most comprehensive in character, involving a complete social, judicial, political, and military reform, and placing the Christian and Moslem subjects of Turkey on an equality. In Constantinople, they will it is expected, be carried into effect without any difficulty; but is feared, that in the provinces, the fanaticism of the people and the reluctance of the public functionaries may paralise the liberal intentions of the Sultan.

Arrival of the Baltic.

The steamship Baltic from Liverpool, Feb. 20, was signalled off this point at 9 o'clock.

Her advices are four days later than those brought by the America.

She brings no intelligence of the Pacific.

The Peace Conferences opened on the 23d ult. All the Envoys had arrived at Paris. Confidence in the re-establishment of peace still continues.

The excitement respecting the American difficulties was not so great.

A large force of British sloops of war is to be concentrated in Canadian waters, as a Palmerston bravado.

SECOND DESPATCH.—The Baltic brings dates to the 20th. News very dry. The London Times announces that the 18th Regiment, and a battalion of Rifles are about to be despatched to Canada, and several other regiments will follow soon, so as to concentrate a powerful force in that country. It is rumored also, that almost every regiment attached to the home service has received intimation that their service may be required in Canada.

APPOINTMENTS.

Providence permitting, we will preach at Waldo Hall, Worcester, as follows:
H. Pratt, March 9.
E. Burnham, March 16.
S. S. Brewer, March 30.

I will preach at
Richmond, (Reed Meeting House,) March 9.

J. PARTRIDGE.

The Lord willing, Br. S. S. Brewer, will preach in Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, March 2.
Bro. John Couch, Sunday, March 16.
In behalf of the Committee,

F. FLANDERS, Chairman.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Salem, Friday eve, March 7.
Lynn Dye House, Sunday, March 9.
Westboro', Tuesday eve, March 11.

SAMUEL BRAGG.

I appoint to preach at Portland, Maine, the second Sabbath in March.

J. COUCH.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at
At Biddeford, Sunday, March 9.
At Brunswick, Sunday, March 16.

R. R. YORK.

The Lord willing, brother M. Grant will hold a meeting at Phœnix Hall, Fairhaven, Mass., on March 13th, commencing at 10 o'clock, A. M.

An invitation is extended particularly to brethren and sisters residing in New Bedford, Dartmouth, at the head of the river Mattapoisett and vicinity.

R. R. GIFFORD.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1; postage 17 cts.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chap.'s of Matthew, by I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts. single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 " "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50 "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 "	"	1,50 "
Voice of the Church,	$1 "	"	9 " doz.

John Cumming's works, 75 cts. per volume.
Romanism, by John Cumming, $1,00.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Math. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, ahd not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. TAYLOR."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J. M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

T. F. Leavitt, your subscription will expire with number 34.

Cash Receipts.

J. Waterhouse, C. F. Dixon, E. Mitchell, E. Stow, E. White, N. Bennett, W. M. Bennett, J. B. Richardson, J. L. Dock, J. G. Oldacre, E. Hogan, W. B. Rose, J. Converse, S. Braley, H. F. Durgin, A. Kelley, J. D. Milliken, P. Ober, A. J. M'Cullock, L. A. Felton, T. H. Ford, L. B. Moore, C. A. Robinson, L. R. Gilman, A. B. Whitney, Wm. B. Lang, S. Willey, J. Brackett, Geo. Brackett, A. French, J. Whitman, E. C. Richardson, J. W. Thomas, $1 each.

Br. at Lawrence, $2, B. F. Elliot, 75 cents, D. A. Jones, 25 cents, E. Aldrich, $2, Br. at Wales, $2, R. Wakefield, $4, H. D. Warner, $2, Wm. E. Peck, $3,50.

J. Sanderson, M. A. Sawyer, D. Butler, W. H. Hawley, H. P. Sikes, N. Nayson, S. S. Holt, Wm. Hamblin, 50 cents each.

For the Poor—A Friend, 50 cents.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public.

For the Crisis.

The Exiles.

BY A. M. STARK.

"By the rivers of Babylon we sat down and wept."—Ps. 137.

Far away from the land of their own sweet home,
The Hebrews in exile did wander forlorn;
Down by Babel's cold stream they often would roam,
And with hearts bowed in grief they sadly did mourn.
Their harps on the willows they carelessly hung,
Left, attuned by the breezes of Heaven so mild.
For the songs of their Zion no longer were sung,
No echo responded in melody wild.

But a Father's fond eye was watching o'er thee,
O cherished of Judah, beloved of the Lord;
Ay, didst thou not see in that record for thee,
A period prophetic marked out by his word?
And did not thine enemies secretly fear
The power of Jehovah, in whom thou didst trust?
Whilst they dreaded the time as yet it drew near,
Their city so proud, should be laid in the dust.

Seventy years were fulfilled, the reckoning was up,
Belshazzar a feast for his nobles doth make;
See, how from the cup and the bowls they do sup,
Till, stricken with horror, those royal ones quake.
They thought now they'd triumph o'er those in their power,
And prove that the hopes they had cherished were vain;
But Cyrus had come, and this was the glad hour
The exiles were freed, and their enemies slain.

Thus in days of mystic Babylon, we hear
The voice of the weeping exile as he cries,
Come, dear Lord, and take us to our home so dear,
Where thine own soft hand shall wipe our weeping eyes.
Long, long, we have strayed in the enemy's land;
Have watched when the periods prophetic should close—
When we hoped in his lot, good Daniel should stand,
And all thy dear children be freed from their woes.

We believe, we expect our Deliverance is near,
For He who hath promised is faithful and true;
Then why should we tremble and doubtingly fear,
Though our numbers be broken—scattered and few.
Soon, soon, Christ the bands of oppression will break,
Our long-looked-for Eden, shall then be restored;
Our harps from the willows we'll joyfully take,
And attune them anew with praise to the Lord.

Green River, Vt.

For the Crisis.

Practical Rules of Life.

Dear Bro. Merriam:—I do thank and praise the Lord for his kindness and mercies to me—that I still live to give glory to his blessed name—for his Holy Spirit which has taught, and is, I believe, teaching me to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present evil world. And as I am permitted from time to time to look into the sacred pages of Holy Writ, by the assistance of His divine Spirit, I discover by faith what I must be in order to inherit the Kingdom of God. When I look to myself, I shudder at the thought that I am so unworthy; for I do fear there needs be a reformation in my heart, inasmuch as the blessed Word says, "without holiness no man shall see the Lord."

I believe the Lord is at hand, and what is done must be done quickly. The Lord will not condemn any Reformation. If I understand God's plan, a mere nominal profession will not save me. The Word must have a practical bearing in my daily deportment as becometh one professing godliness. On a profession of our faith, God makes certain requirements, though nothing too hard for us to perform, God's grace assisting us, which He has promised to the faithful. Has God required those things in vain? "God will not be mocked: whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. If he sow to the flesh, he will of the flesh reap corruption; but if he sow to the Spirit, he will of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

I find by a close investigation, that sin is very deceptive. How can I be deceived by sin, and at the same time profess godliness? By throwing off a little restraint, and at first committing a very small sin, in our own estimation, and that paves the way for greater sins. If my conscience will permit me to commit that small sin, by the same rule I can commit sins of greater magnitude, and so on, and I shall be in the way to become an out-breaking sinner. The question has arisen in my mind, Can I live without sin? Faith answers, I can do all things, the Lord helping me. How shall I begin? By denying myself of all ungodliness and every worldly lust, bearing every cross, and discharging every duty enjoined upon me as a Christian.

I will take this opportunity to say, I believe in the speedy coming of the Son of God to earth, the second time, to raise the dead and change the righteous living by giving them Immortality which no one now posseses but himself. After renovating the earth, he will establish the fifth universal Kingdom, under the whole Heaven, and all the saints will reign with Him as the subjects of that everlasting Kingdom. It is about two years since I embraced the Advent faith. I believe the recent movement in relation to the coming of the Lord corresponds to the Midnight Cry in the parable of Matt. 25th. I believe the Cry ended with the 1335 days (years) of Daniel 12th ch., in one year from which time I believe the last and great Prophetic Period of 2300 days (years) will expire, and the long-looked-for Prince of life will come down the parted skies, attended with all the retinue of the Heavenly Host; and at that time the immortalized saints will rise to meet Him in the air.

My reason for believing the 2300 days will expire in the coming Spring can be seen by referring to an article published in a late number of the Crisis, headed "The 2300 days," written by myself.

The following resolutions under the head of a Reformation, I will adopt, and the Lord, by His grace assisting me, I will carry them out in practical life.

Resolved 1st, I will take the Word of God for my rule of faith and practice, and daily search the Scriptures as for hidden treasures.

2. I will attend to family prayer three times daily.

3. I will speak evil of no person, in any way calculated to injure or excite prejudice against him.

4. I will abstain from eating or drinking anything calculated to injure my system.

5. I will be regular in all such habits as shall be conducive to my temporal and spiritual health.

6. I will use no spirituous liquors, tea, coffee or tobacco in any form. I will indulge in no superfluous ornaments.

7. I will use no vain or unmeaning words—nor indulge in foolish jesting or filthy and unholy conversation.

8. I will subdue selfishness in all its forms.

9. I will spend no time idly in company with the ungodly; but shun the appearance of evil as far as practicable.

10. I will be kind and hospitable to all saints. I will, in all meekness and love, rebuke sin, and kindly admonish any brother who may speak reproachfully of another.

11. I will try to be led by the Spirit in all things.

12. I will be punctual to my word, will use few words in business, and will give honest weight and measure in all my dealings.

13. I will not deceive or wrong any one knowingly; and should I do it ignorantly, as soon as I am apprised of the same, I will not delay in making restitution.

14. I will be non-resistant in case of injury, showing no retaliation, but rendering good for evil.

15. I will not indulge in any sinful passion, neither in or out of my family.

16. I will, as far as it is within my means, relieve the distressed, the suffering, and the poor.

17. I will confess Christ at every favorable opportunity.

18. Finally, I will endeavor to do to others as I would have them do to me.

And now let me say to any whose eye this may meet, or who may see my daily walk and conversation, and discover that it does not correspond with the above resolutions, I will not think it unkind in you, but will thank you to admonish me. Before closing, let me say, that I will from this date, henceforth, walk according to the above rules as near as possible, by the help of the Lord, should time continue longer or shorter; and after doing all this, I shall be an unprofitable servant of God, and shall have done no more than duty, but must plead the merits of Christ for final Salvation.

May the good Lord bless the scattered Flock with grace to stand in this time of peril in which we live. The great, tremendous day is approaching. O I can bless God with my whole soul, for a heart that can feel the love of Christ.

Dear Brothers and Sisters scattered abroad, pray for me that my faith fail not; but that you and I may still believe in Jesus Christ the Son of God. I feel as though I can pray the prayer that our Saviour taught His disciples: "Our Father who art in Heaven, thy Kingdom come."

Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus.

J. B. Wetherell.

Worcester, Feb. 25, 1856.

Responsibility.

We copy the following from the Prophetic Expositor of Feb. 15, together with the remarks of the Editor:

In the Expositor for Feb. 1, I read the mournful intelligence that Bro. C. Crawford and his wife are asleep in Jesus. I never saw them, and I know them only as members of my Father's family, pilgrims whose race is run, whose toil is o'er. I felt sad to think that one more of the heralds had fallen. But this grief did not prompt me to write until a few moments afterwards, when I glanced over the Expositor for December 15th, and saw what I presume was the last letter Bro. Crawford ever wrote for publication. I want that letter to be read again. Here is a part of it.

"My work is all behind, in consequence of going West on a preaching tour, and my expenses were more than my receipts. But I had agreed to go, and did go. Yet I cannot live and be absent from home upon such remuneration as this. After my return, I thought of writing out a statement of the condition of things in these localities, and sending it to you for publication—but upon second thought concluded not to do so, as some might think it begging."

"I staid in one place from Thursday night till Sunday night and preached. The attendants appeared very much interested. We had two meetings on Sunday. On leaving they said, 'Bro. Crawford, if you ever come this way again, you must certainly call and see us!' I received many 'a God bless you,' and that was all! I was thankful for their good wishes even, but such will not buy tickets to ride on the cars, bread for our families, nor garments to clothe them, BUT THE GOSPEL MUST BE PREACHED, and if the Church does not do her duty, the responsibility must rest on them."

This was written, Nov. 25th, 1855. Two weeks after he was taken sick, and, January 7th, 1856, Bro. Crawford died, leaving a sick wife; six days after, that wife died. Four orphans are left to mourn and endure the trials of an orphan's lot. Now I do not know the cause of Bro. Crawford's fever, which resulted in his death. I do know that this disease is sometimes produced by extreme nervous depression, such as might naturally be caused by the circumstances of trial to which he was subjected. I do not know where he had been preaching—how rich or how poor those hearers were who invited him to come again, and gave him for his toil "God bless you," and nothing else. I hope I never shall know them—God pity them at the judgment!

This much we do know. A faithful brother, as we suppose, returns from a series of appointments, his expenses not paid—his family not provided for—his "work all behind"—his heart sick and sad. A few days later he dies—his wife dies too, and his children, without father or mother, are left on the wide world.

Think of this, ye rich men, and "weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you." Another light is quenched—another watchman fallen, and, to use our brother's last words, "The responsibility must rest" SOMEWHERE!

"Well," says one, "I would not go and preach, if men would not pay." "Get thee behind me! for thou savorest not of of the things of God!" In the language of Bro. C., "The Gospel must be preached!" and when GOD calls a man to preach, he must not count his life dear to himself.

O ye rich! think of the poor orphans whose cries go up to God for daily food, and your barns are full—your houses are full, and your purses are full, and more than this your cup will be full of sorrow, unless you do your duty to God and man!

Bro. Crawford is gone. Who will go next? Who else will die from disease, and care, and anxiety, while preaching the last awful message of God's mercy to stingy hypocrites, and rich and ungodly professors? Who else will leave their "little children to the cold charities of a heartless world?" And where will the RESPONSIBILITY rest?

I tell you, my friends, there is a reckoning day coming. God is taking account of your dollars, of your broad acres, of your comfortable and costly clothes, of your useless luxuries—of your farms, your houses and your merchandize. And soon he will say, Give an account.

There is money enough in the Church, and if some that read this do not find at the judgment that they have more than they wish for, I am greatly mistaken.

What more can I say? I might mention those four poor children, but people who will let a minister of Christ labor for nothing till he dies, will forget his children very soon. God will remember them, however!

Now, I want you all to understand one thing. I, H. L. Hastings, want none of your money. These hands have often ministered to my necessities, and can do it again. I have no fears of being called a beggar. I write to tell you God's truth, and you will meet it, and me, and Bro. Crawford at the judgment soon. And Christ will say, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to these ye did it not to me."

Keep your money—use everything you can, yourselves—give God the crumbs, if anything, while you eat the loaf. Hoard up wealth—buy a few more acres of this cursed old earth—build a new house—get fine furniture—take Bank and Railroad stock—let God's ministers travel and pay their own expenses—pay them in "thanks" "and God bless you's." Let them die discouraged. Make long prayers—tell how you love the truth—don't scatter tracts nor pay for your newspapers—get rich, take comfort, come up to the judgment at last, and—be damned! And all angels and saints will say Amen—"Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments."

H. L. Hastings,

Editor of the Cross & Crown.

Peacedale, R. I.

P. S.—Bro. Marsh, please forward the enclosed $5,00 for the benefit of Bro. Crawford's children. H. L. H.

We had intended to have made some remarks in the present number, on the subject of Elder Crawford's death, but on reading Elder Hasting's article, we feel that silence will be most befitting. That article speaks volumes. As Bro. H. surmises, the letter referred to, was the last one ever received from Bro. Crawford, and we join with him in desiring that that letter be read again. In it our lamented brother complained of failing health—and yet, with all the frowns of adversity staring him in the face, we hear him resolutely, defiantly proclaiming, in spite of the neglect of those for whose eternal welfare he had been laboring—his worldly prospects "all behind"—and the pangs of disease already in his frame—a truth, a "nobler than which ne'er was uttered,"—"THE GOSPEL MUST BE PREACHED!"

It is customary to emblazon the sayings of great men on places of public gaze—but here is one that should forever be indelibly impressed on the hearts of the saints of God. Another martyr has departed, and awaits his reward at the "resurrection of the just." S.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. Smith.

West Otis, Feb. 5, 1856.

Dear Brn. and Srs:—We are still in this world of wickedness and woe, expecting deliverance; but be not weary in well doing, for "in due time we shall reap if we faint not." Let us thank the Lord for his goodness and mercy. Let us praise Him that He has kept us from the broad road of ruin, while others have been drawn back into the world, and have said, "our expectations are vain." Let us still rest on the promises, (John 14: 3,) and be assured that it will be fulfilled.

I feel very thankful for the Crisis, which comes to me weekly, laden with those soul-cheering epistles from the household of the Lord. It is all I have, besides my Bible, to encourage me on in this warfare. I have not seen an Adventist since last August. It has pleased the Lord to place me where I cannot meet with those of like precious faith. I have been obliged to leave my dearest earthly friends, for the sake of Jesus and His word. I have sometimes felt that I was one of the most forsaken beings on earth; but when I look at the misery and destitution around me, I feel in my heart that I am one of the most favored of the human race.

I am content to remain in my present situation, if I may but be permitted to dwell in the kingdom of God. I am unacquainted with most of you here, but hope to meet you in the renovated earth. I desire an interest in your petitions at the throne of grace. May the Lord guard and keep you till the Archangel's trump shall sound, is my prayer.

Your Sister in hope,

L. Smith.

Napoleon III.

In our 29th number, we extracted an article from the Bible Examiner, relating to the course of Napoleon III. We now give a further extract on the subject, from the last number of the Examiner:

"In the last Examiner we gave gave an extract from an English writer on prophecy, and we give in this number another extract from his Tract issued in December last. He says:

"The Emperor Napoleon having frightened the English government into war, and having played upon the simplicity of the English people, got quiet and complete possession of Constantinople and the Dardanelles—the keys of the East. He then went on to get possession of Sebastopol and the Black Sea. His army alone took Sebastopol, and his army alone will keep it. Having thus laid the foundation of his Eastern empire, it next became advisable to advance into the heart of the East. Accordingly he sends his lieutenant, Abdel-Kader to Damascus, in order to get possession of Syria, and to collect the Arabs to the French standard. The next great possession in advance was Palestine and Jerusalem. Therefore, while Abdel-Kader was on his way to Damascus, another agent was on his way to Jerusalem, as consul or ambassador of France. This new agent has out-stripped Abel-Kader, and has already established French supremacy in Jerusalem. In the Morning Chronicle for Friday, November the 2nd, you will find the first or only announcement of what may prove the most momentous occurrence of the age. On Sunday, the 30th of September, 1855, the French flag was hoisted at Jerusalem—the French Emperor made the patron of the Holy Places—and prayers offered up for him by all the clergy—as if Jerusalem were a part of his own empire. This, we assert, was a virtual occupation of Jerusalem, and an actual assertion of the French Supremacy. This is more than enough for the first step. He will do nothing to create suspicion or alarm, but will now proceed gradually to gain complete possession, both civil and military, until, by-and-by, he will make Jerusalem a great military position, and the base of his operations in the conquest of the East. You will not find this in the public papers at large. The public press which cannot see through the transparent designs of France upon Constantinople, is too silly to see through anything! Yet the Morning Chronicle lets in one glimmer of truth upon the nation, and betrays its secret uneasiness by the following significant words: 'While our attention is fixed upon the events in the Crimea, the French are settling the disputed question of the Holy Places, of Jerusalem, in their own way.' O! how true! While we are shouting like children for victories in the Crimea, which we did not gain, the French are getting into their hands all the vital positions of the East, and leaving England absolutely nothing! We are looking out of the window at the bonfires, while our allies are stealing the plate off our sideboard!—now and then putting in an huzza in order to keep up the diversion.

"In the course of these mournful and horrible events we have seen extracts of letters from officers in the Crimea, which assert that the French have taken possession of Constantinople, and have so completely changed Sebastopol into a French town, that no British soldier, under arms, is permitted to enter it without a pass from the French commandant. In a word, France is making us her tools, to conquer, not only the empire of Napoleon, but the empire of the East. Our ships being far off, and our army at home being a crowd of boys, we dare not refuse even the meanest office, even the most audacious demand! If we dared to do so, our whole army would be shut up by the French in the Dardanelles, and our own shores invaded from Cherbourg and Boulogne. We are compelled to drink the dregs of that cup which we put into the hands of France at Waterloo—and it is a just retribution for our pride; but it is also an eternal warning never to permit a country to be governed, or a war to be undertaken, in compliance with the wishes of "The People." Such a compliance has, in all ages, been the ruin of Empires.

"The seizure of the Holy Places, and in fact, of Jerusalem itself, is the greatest of all the great events which have occurred within the 19th century. The rest are great only politically, this event is great Scripturally. It looks like the 'Beginning of the End.'"

Millenarianism.

We present our readers to-day with an extract from an Essay on Millenarianism from the pen of Pres. Lord, of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H. It is an Essay of great merit, although containing some ideas which we do not endorse:

The doctrine of the resurrection, at Christ's second appearing, to introduce a millennial age of glory, is not a new and strange thing invented, but an old thing revived. It was preached to Abraham when he received Isaac, in a figure from the dead. It stands in all Scripture, and in the early formulas and traditions of the Christian Church. It has been strange, at any time, only as men, for natural, philosophic reasons, or whithout reason, and without thought, have, in different periods, preferred not to contemplate this supernatural evidence of the Messianic reign;—first, the reign of grace, in the church militant; and, secondly, the reign of glory in the church triumphant.

"I know no theory of Millenarianism, properly so called; and I know no modern, in distinction from ancient Millenarianism. This, like other doctrines of Scripture, for a long time held by the primitive Christians, was corrupted, at length, by rationalistic and fanciful interpreters, led by Origen and other speculative theologians of the schools. Through the middle ages it was mostly covered up by scholastic traditions, allegorical commentaries, and the errors of Romanism in general. Occasionally, excited men, who caught, amid the surrounding darkness, some glimpses of the primitive truth, attempted to revive it. But they could not reproduce it in its simplicity. The age was too dark. Providence was not ready for them. They brought out only obscure resemblances of it, mere caricatures, which disgusted all considerate persons, and served only to perpetuate the popular delusions. These extravagances are reported in all the histories down to the Reformation.

"The same has been true, to a great extent, of the latter half of the Protestant period. The reformers, in general, returned, in this respect, as in others, to the primitive belief. Some of their ablest writers gave it their unequivocal testimony and support. But they were pressed by subjects of more immediate concernment to church and state, and could not, conveniently, elaborate this, which, as they foresaw and testified, would belong more intimately to a future, and, as some affirmed, our present period.

"It is part and parcel of the regular orthodox theology which Christ and his Apostles taught, which was measurably revived by Luther, Calvin, and the Divines at Westminster, and subsists the same forever. The modern churches have lost sight of it, only because they have lost sight, and so far as they have lost sight of that same old theology, and have admitted, consciously or inadvertently, Gnostic, Pelagian, and other heretical philosophies, into their religious creeds. If we could restore the old theology, in general, from these admixtures of speculation, and 'oppositions of false science,' Millenarianism would necessarily be restored with it; for it is an integral and necessary part of it. There could not be a revival of the primitive theology without it. It is as really a part of the primitive faith, as the head, or hands, or feet, are parts of a man; or as a governor is part of the State; so that without it, the man is not a man, but a lusus naturæ; and the State is not a State, but a jumble of discordant factions. My good brethren must pardon me for saying this; for I think it susceptible of demonstration. And it is as consequential as it is true; and therefore ought to be said. I pray them to pardon me: it is them who are following after 'modern theories,' and not the Millenarians. I say it in charity, for I have been as they are; and I would to God that they were, in this respect, as I am, 'except these bonds' which all men necessarily suffer who feel themselves obliged to conflict with inveterate prejudices of society.

"In that millennial age, Christ 'shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: he shall reign in peace and righteousness, and 'there shall be none to hurt or destroy in all his holy mountain.' But, meanwhile, the elect church is, in no sense, and at no time, triumphant, but militant, in a state of many fightings and afflictions: prepared and qualified, by this severity of discipline, for the coming era of glorious manifestation. The leaven of grace, now diffused, in the time of preparation, pervades and assimmilates the church, its members one to another, and all to God; but not the unbelieving world,—just as actual leaven does not assimmilate sand, and convert it into bread, but meal only. The sand will be sand, and the meal will be meal; that is, the church will be the church, and the world will be the world, till the 'end of the age;' so, as in another parable, the wheat and the tares will grow together till the present mixed and confused dispensation terminates, at the harvest, when, at that ordained end of the age, 'the wheat shall be gathered into the garner, and the chaff be burned in unquenchable fire.

That is Millenarianism, as it was, and as it is. So the primitive church believed and taught. So Calvin, Pictet, and scores of men at Westminster; so Chillinworth and Butler substantially taught. So Howe, Edwards, and some of their successors almost saw, and were ravished by the sight, so far as they could see through the invading cataract of a false philosophy. But we, their children, have become blind. We have stumbled upon the dark mountains. Many of us have turned the plain and unsophisticated letter of Scripture into figure; its experimental facts into speculative fictions; its figures, by which it would illustrate the literal facts, and make them more impressive upon the world, into unmeaning symbols: its symbols, which proved the facts and figures by unanswerable analogies, into unmeaning figures; and fact, and figure, and symbol, all descriptive alike of Divine realities, into an unintelligible jargon. No two interpret them alike; and few care to interpret them at all. The confusions and uncertainties of the commentators have produced a general distrust of prophetical study. Let my brethren pardon me; for, in this thing I have sinned with them, and beyond them, and have need of forgiveness more than they."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 30.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF

JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS. } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

The "Seven Times."

By B. P. Hildreth.

No. 3.

There are some remarkabe prophecies and incidents, very striking, recorded, which cannot but interest all who love the truth; and for such, I desire to labor. First, it is well known that Nimrod, "the mighty hunter before the Lord," was the founder of the Babylonian and Assyrian kingdom, Gen. Chs. 10th and 11th, about 130 years after the flood. History tells us that he reigned 14 years; Belus, his son, reigned 65 years, Ninus, his son, 52 years and died, A. M. 2019. His Queen, Semiramis, reigned 42 years, Ninygas succeeded, in whose 23d year, Abraham, at the age of 75 years, entered Canaan. Ten years after, Abraham overthrew Amraphel, king of Shinar, and other kings, who had invaded and conquered "the cities of the plain," and taken Lot. Abraham slaughtered the kings and recovered all; and as he was returning, "Melchizedek met him, with bread and wine," to whom he gave "tithes of all." Ningas is supposed to be Amraphel, for he was king of Babylon; that is, Shinar; in the 35th year of Abraham, 2094. From this date we find no more chronology of the Assyrian kings, (excepting one Dorcilius, who began a reign of 40 years, in the 11th year of Samuel,) till the 21st year of Amaziah, when Sardinapalus succeeded his father, Aerozapes, in Assyria, 20 years. (Roll.) Jeroboam 2nd, began to reign over Israel in the 15th year of Amaziah, and reigned 41 years. In his days, Jonah, the prophet, prophesied good concerning Israel. "The Lord saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter; for there was not one shut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Israel. And the Lord said not that He would blot out the name of Israel trom under Heaven, but he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam, the son of Joash. He restored the coast of Israel from the entering of Hamath to the sea of the plain; according to the word of the Lord God of Israel, which He spake by the hand of His servant Jonah, the son of Amittai, the prophet, which was of Gath-hepher." 2 Kings, 14: 25–27. Now as Jonah prophesied in the early days of Jeroboam, and as Sardanapalus reigned 20 years in Assyria, and all his years are within the years of the reign of Jeroboam, it amounts to almost a certainty that Sardinapalus was the king of Nineveh, who laid aside his robes and put on sackcloth, and proclaimed a fast, at the preaching of Jonah, against the city. He was a luxurious prince; but at the threatenings of God he became alarmed, and partially broke off his sins, by a temporary repentance. There were undoubtedly many souls truly converted to God; for whom He spared that city beyond forty days. But when an alarming prophecy is limited by time, if that time pass away without experiencing the judgments denounced upon the people, the unsound heart relapses again into sin, "and the last state of that man is worse than the first." And so it seems it was with Sardinapalus; instead of exerting himself to obey God, and render his people happy, he lived a licentious life, and became so base, that he durst not be seen by any man; and kept himself concealed in effeminacy and pleasure. It happened one day that "Arbaces, the governor of Media, got a sight of him, in the attire of a woman; which so disgusted him, and excited his indignation against his king, that he determined to throw off the yoke which bound him to so dissolute a sovereign. He consulted with Belosus, a Chaldean, who joined him; and pleased him well, by telling him that he should enjoy the kingdom; who, thereupon promised Belosus, the kingdom of Babylon. They raised an army of four hundred thousand men, of the Medes, Persians, Babylonians and Arabians, and besieged Nineveh, where the king had shut himself up. The walls of the city were one hundred feet high, and so thick that three chariots could pass abreast, on the ramparts, and they could not force the walls; but lay two years before the city, hoping to reduce them by famine. They raised recruits out of Bactria, and in the third year an inundation of the Tigris, threw down twenty furlongs of the walls, which made a fair breach for Arbaces to enter. Sardinapalus, either terrified at the accomplishment of an old oracle, that Nineveh never should be taken, till the river became an enemy to it; or seeing no means of resistance, set fire to his palace, and perished in the flames." (Hist. of the world.) Thus the unhappy king destroyed himself on a funeral pyre; his treasures, his wines, his servants, and his quandam associates, all together, in the eleventh year of the interim between Amaziah and Uzziah, B. C. 310. Thus ended the line of Nimrod, after more than one thousand four hundred and fifty years' empire; called by historians, "the first Assyrian empire; after which," says Rollin, "there arose, viz., that of the Medes, the Babylonians, and Assyrians. Arbaces destroyed Nineveh, and attached it to the Median Kingdom, as he had promised; but it was rebuilt, and became a very powerful empire," as we shall soon see. Now if Sardinapalus was the king to whom Jonah prophesied, as by these sketches of history appear very probable; though Jonah's time passed by, the time of the king did not pass by, without a fulfilment of the prophecy, "Nineveh shall be overthrown;" which this king witnessed with his own eyes, when he saw the wall prostrated to the ground before the enemy; and he was left to imbrue his hands in his own blood. Thus was the prophecy of Jonah speedily fulfilled upon Nineveh; though for the time being their repentance stayed the wrath of God; but the event actually occurred within the short space of twenty years; and thus, I fully believe it will be with this wicked generation. So true is the word of God, that sooner will heaven and earth pass away, than one jot or tittle, fail of accomplishment. Arbaces' reign commenced in the first year of Uzziah; and contrary to his promise to Belosus, of the kingdom of Babylon, it seems he sought to hold all. "Belosus opposed him," and if Cornelius's conjectures are true, "one Pul of Assyria assisted him; so that Arbaces was content to make a division with them."

"Pul began to reign in Nineveh in the fourth year of Uzziah, and reigned 48 years. He came up against Menahen, king of Israel, who bought his peace and friendship for a thousand talents of silver." 2 Kings, 15: 19. Tiglath-pileser succeeded him, and riegned 27 years. He put Ahaz, king of Judah, under tribute. 2 Chron. 28: 20, 21. Salmanaser succeeded him and reigned about 13 years. He invaded the kingdom of Hoshea, king of Israel, and after three years' siege, he carried the ten tribes into captivity, and supplied their places with inhabitants of other nations, in the 6th year of Hezekiah, king of Judah. 2 Kings, ch. 17. Senacherib succeeded him, and reigned 7 years. In the 14th year of Hezekiah, he came and took many of the cities of Judah, and blasphemously raging against God, besieged Jerusalem. 2 Kings, 18th ch. His army perished, and he fled in shame and disgrace to Nineveh, where he was slain, and Esarhaddon reigned in his stead, ten years; when he died, and Merodach Baladan became master of the whole empire of Assyria. His death, that is, Senacherib's death, ended the line of kings, at Nineveh, B. C. 702. (Rol.) Belosus began to reign in Babylon the same year that Pul began in Nineveh, the fourth year of Uzziah, and reigned 59 years. He was succeeded by Baladan, who is also called in profane history, Nabonassar, and is the famous author of the era, that bears his name. He reigned 26 years, from B, C. 747, Merodak Baladan, the son of Baladan, or Mardoch Empadus, succeeded in B. C. 721, and reigned 52 years; was in amity with Hezekiah, king of Judah. Is. 39: 1, 2. He was succeeded by "Ben-Merodach his son, who reigned about 21 years, whose captains (as I take it,) captivated Manasseh." (Rol.) Nebuchadonosor succeeded 13 years; Saraceus, 9 years; Nabopolassar 21 years; and then Nebuchadnezzar, who with a threefold captivity, removed the tribes of Judah and Benjamin to Babylon.

"Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty;" said the haughty king, to himself, as he "walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon." But where is the chosen people of God? Ah, Judah is in captivity. The head of gold rules with the rod of a despot; the great image has commenced his career in earnest, against the breakers of God's covenant, and must and will crush them, till "seven times" pass over them. All, all are swallowed up in Babylon! And now the living may know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men," for the punishment of sin; and now they must "be trodden down of the Gentiles, till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

We believe that we are nearing that point when "the times of restitution of all things" will succeed Gentile oppression; and King Jesus sway the sceptre of the world in righteousness. "But O, Judah, O, Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself;" and many long and bitter years must thou pine away in the enemy's land! Thou hast taken thy departure from Jerusalem, thy beloved city, and "they that hate thee shall rule over thee;" (So true are the words of God;) and thou mayest count two thousand five hundred and twenty years, from the time thy king was led in chains to Babylon, before "the words of God will be fulfilled." But hush this sad and solemn soliloquy; our hope and help are in God: the prophecies have been fulfilling these many, many years, and are still; but when we look back on Manasseh, and take a view of his hardened heart, against the prophets; who so constantly portrayed the threatenings of Heaven against him; his profanation of the temple of God; so corrupt, so murderous and so heaven-daring was his life, that we wonder with great admiration at the unbounded mercy of God, in restoring him again to his throne.

The king of Babylon exults over his plunder, and glories over the oppressed; but the king of Judah mourns, humbles himself greatly before the God of his fathers, prays with his whole heart, "and God was entreated, and heard his supplication and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the Lord, He was God." Here is a fulfilment of God's word. "If they shall confess their iniquity, with their trespasses, which they have trespassed against me; if their uncircumcised heart be humbled, and they accept of the punishment of their iniquity; then I will remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember, and I will remember the land. * * * I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them, for I am the Lord their God." Lev. 26: 40–44. The destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, was a remarkable type of the end of an apostate Church in the last days.

Each of the years of Manasseh's reign that are marked with a star have been contenled for, as the year of his captivity; but as the full period of "Seven Times" has passed away, (or nearly so,) from and after Manasseh's thirty-second year, we see that they were all wrong; and no other year but his fortieth, has been named, in which it is supposed to have occurred. But we have as good evidence that he was in captivity twelve years, as that he was taken in his fortieth, and twelve years added to his fortieth, would carry it to his fifty-second for his return. It is supposed that he was taken by the captains of the host of Ben-Merodach, king of Babylon, (whose reign commenced in the 28th year of Manasseh,) and not by Esarhaddon.

It will be seen that the chronology of Nahum's prophecy against Nineveh is marked B. C. 713, the very year before Senacherib came up from Nineveh, against Jerusalem, and by his officers poured out an insulting blasphemous tirade against the people of Judah, their king and their God. This was in the fourteenth year of the reign of Hezekiah, B. C. 712. If any one will read attentively 2 Kings, Chaps. 18, 19, and compare it with the first ch. of Nahum, they will see a striking fulfilment of Nahum's words against the king and people of Nineveh. "There is one come out of thee that imagineth evil against the Lord; a wicked counsellor." Such was Senacherib, when he left Nineveh. Nah. 1: 11. Says God by Isaiah, of him: "But I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me. Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult is come up unto mine ears; therefore I will put my hook into thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back, by the way which thou camest." 2 Kings, 12: 27, 28. Did not the Lord send him back a fugitive in disgrace? so that after all his boasting, he could "not come into the city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it;" according to the word of the Lord.

Says Nahum, ch. 1: 10: "For while they be folden together as thorns, and while they be drunken as drunkards, they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry." The Assyrian camp was undoubted as "full of confusion, as a thorn-hedge is of prickles;" and as drunken as drunkards, and as completely fitted to destruction "as stubble fully dry," is to be consumed with fire; when "the Lord sent an angel which cut off all the mighty men of valor, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria; So he returned with shame of face to his own land; and when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels slew him there with a sword." 2 Chron. 32: 21.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. J. Davis.

Westboro', Mass., Feb. 25, 1856.

What better am I in this year than in fifty-four? Important question! I beheld the glorious light of '54, and nothing ever did me so much real good. It has weaned me from the world, to say the least. Joyful news—blessed be God. It gave me more light than I had formerly enjoyed. It was better living than in former years. I was glad to obey Jesus. As I received more light, more was required to be done. I look back to '54 and rejoice. No regret of the past, only that I was so unprofitable a servant. Brethren, let us with fresh zeal follow on; it is glad news, that victory is ours while we stand in obedience to an All-wise leader, glory to His name. Our heavenly Master will pay well his workmen. Soon the reckoning day will come, and we shall walk forth on the lovely new earth, and see the mite we have lent the Lord has accumulated a wealth and spread out in beauty farther than the eye can reach.

J. Davis.

For the Crisis.

Trust in God.

By H. Pratt.

Nothing is more becoming or natural in children than implicit confidence in the promise and care of a parent. "A father stands in the child's mind, as the type of courage, and capacity; and the mother of love and goodness. The feeling of trust is perfect." No anxiety on their part. The tempest-lashed ocean has no terror for them, if father be at the helm. There is an inexhaustible certainty that all is well. Neither sickness nor trouble diminishes this trust. It grows stronger then. Danger but drives it to the parent's arms; all to them is safety there. God has styled himself a father to the fatherless, and the widow's friend; and not only so, but says if we will separate ourselves from those that walk disorderly, he will be our Father.

Now as the father pitieth the child, SO the Lord pitieth those that fear Him. Will the father let the child perish, if able to succor? If he ask a fish will he give him a stone? Can we then confide in our heavenly Father's promises? Oh, yes; says the professor, we can trust in Him. Now all this is quite easy, to trust in the Lord for food, when our barns and storehouses are well filled—for health, when sickness comes not near our dwelling—or for prosperity, when the winds of adversity touch us not. But let sickness come, can we trust in Him then? Let misfortune deprive us of our dwelling and daily food, can we trust in Him then? Would a father pity his child that serveth him, and care for him then, and give him those things which he needed? Yes, say you; a kind father would supply all his wants. Much more will your heavenly Father give good gifts to them that ask Him. "Ask, and ye SHALL receive." Can we trust in Him?

"The young lions do lack and suffer hunger, but they that wait on the Lord shall want no good thing." Can we believe and wait on the Lord? We can leave our affairs with the Lord when all goes well, can we when they go ill? We can rest quietly in God's hands when in health, can we when sick? What is confidence in God good for, if it come only when you can get along without it, and leave you when you need it?

What is a ship good for that is only safe in harbor, or a sail that will split at the first blast? Patience when there is nothing to bear; courage when there is no danger; hope when everything is in our grasp; What are all these worth? "But such is the trust that most Christians have in God." It is nothing worth, and will pass away when it is most needed. We need a trust that will take hold on God in every trying hour, through light or darkness. Count for nothing that which is felt in hours of glee and prosperity. Consider that only to be genuine trust in God which you have in hours of darkness. Begin here. Put your standard there. If you have none there, "you have none at any time." If our confidence fail not here, then we may say in the language of inspiration, "Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stall; YET, will I rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." And again, "Though he slay me, yet will I TRUST in Him."

Wales, Feb. 24, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. L. Boutell.

Kennebunkport, Feb. 1, 1856.

Bro. Merriam:—This is an important time. The signs and premonitions upon which we predicated the soon coming of our Lord, are such at the present time, that we ought to be strong in "the faith," giving glory to God. This is the time for the Church to be fully awake, decided and active; being co-workers with Christ in the same great glorious work of saving men by the agency of the truth. To do this, the Bible must be our only text book. Its principles, must be strictly adhered to in love. This would prevent much confusion and division which would otherwise exist. Yea, it would save from so many unauthorized tests of fellowship which is the prolific source of division and evil.

At the present time there are two prominent beliefs with regard to the '53 and '54 movement. And these various beliefs, or faiths, do materially effect those who hold them.

The one class believe and teach that the three prophetic periods of 1260, 1290 and 1335 days, commenced in 519, and that the last, or longest of them ended in 1854—"that the late movement on time" "was the Cry at Midnight" "made by the arrangement;" and that because the days have ended (the 1335) certain obligations are resting on the Church which could be reached in no other Era; and which brings them to a new and important position, separating them from others, and by which they are to be known.

The other class, although they did most sincerely believe the arrangement, and did earnestly look for their coming Lord, at the same time, yet as the time passed without the realization of their most sanguine hopes, they have concluded, and confessed themselves mistaken; and as far as the commencement of the days are concerned, in error. Thus they do not make the Lord responsible for their mistakes, arising from human deductions, but they can and do look forward with unwavering faith for the fulfilment of the Prophet's declaration at the End of the days—believing this is the time, corresponding to the days of Noah and Lot, when he that shall endure to the End by "the faith" shall be saved.

Now all can readily see a difference in these conclusions. They are not both truthful. And there is quite a gulf between them. Now which is true? Did the direction come from Him who never errs to the Church, to proclaim to the world that the days referred to did commence in 519, and that 1335 days (years) from that time the Lord, with all the other pending events connected with it, would come? We have reached the last point at issue long ago—no sign! no Lord to be seen in The Mid Heaven!!! Which, I ask, is the most like good, childlike submission and obedience, to confess there is a mistake at the commencement of the arrangement, and that 519 is not the right time for the event, or to claim all has been directed of the Lord, while the failure is most apparent to all?

But, says one, we did have blessings—yes, great blessings, therefore, it was all of the Lord. But remember the Lord is so good as to grant blessings to His people while they are mistaken and in error. So the good and honest-hearted received great blessings while in the error, because they contended so faithfully for the common, all-important truths connected with this Message. Thus let all now be steadfast in the faith which works by love, purifies the heart (the whole man) and overcomes the world. This, Glory be to God, will fit us to meet our coming Lord by hiding our lives with Christ in God. Then when he who is our Life shall appear, we shall appear with Him in glory. Thy brother,

L. Boutell.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. J. D. Roberts.

West Killingly, Mass. Feb. 18th, '56.

To the scattered ones:—I have been thinking for some time past, how very necessary it is that we possess the spirit of Christ at all times, and in all that we do. As Christians we are not as careful as we ought to be, seeing that we look for such important things. If we would just stop and ask ourselves, is this Christ-like, it would be better.

It is very natural to talk idly, or just more or less. This is not Christ-like; for the word of God is decidedly against it. See Matt. 12: 36, 37; also Eph. 5: 4,

"But," says one, "I never felt condemned for laughing and talking." What if you do not? the word of God condemns it,—and by the word you will be judged at the last great day. Another thing seems very natural also; that is, backbiting. This, too, the word of God condemns. See Ps. 15: 3; also Rom. 1: 31.

Now, brethren and sisters, let us take heed to Peter's admonition, 1 Pet. 1–15, and be holy in all manner of conversation; and have our conversation in Heaven. See Phil. 3: 20. Let us examine ourselves closely, and see by the word of God wherein we are wrong, that we may do right in the little future that remains; striving to become more pure through faith in Christ, that we may be presented to the Father without spot and blameless.

And now, in the language of our Savior, "watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." Pray often—be swift to hear and slow to speak.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, MARCH 12, 1856.

☞ Some of our papers of last week were unfortunately soiled or torn, so that we were under the necessity of sending such or none. Please excuse us: we hope to remedy the evil in future.

☞ I am requested by Sister Gierlow to express her obligations to brn. Hastings and Shepherd for their liberality in furnishing her with books and tracts.

Questions.

My time for a number of months past has been so much occupied, that I have not given the attention to questions which have occasionally been asked by our correspondents, that I otherwise should. A part of the burden devolving on me having been removed, I hope to enjoy more leisure and opportunity for attending to those things; therefore, soliciting the pardon of all who have been neglected, I will endeavor in future to respond to such interrogations, as far as I have ability, leaving it for the readers to decide for themselves on the remarks that may be made.

Question.

Br. Merriam:—Will you, or some of your able correspondents, tell us what Jesus meant when he told the Pharisees, (Luke 17: 21,) in answer to the inquiry, "when the Kingdom of God should appear," that it was, as the margin reads, "among" them? Did the Savior mean to teach that the Kingdom of God was at that time among them? If so, why did he speak a parable in the 19th chapter to disabuse the minds of those who thought that the Kingdom of God was immediately to appear? T. N. P.

Reply.

The question before us is, did Jesus intend to teach the Pharisees that the Kingdom of God was then set up within or among them? I answer decidedly, in my judgment, He did not. Why? Because (1) the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom stands in Scripture identified with His appearing. Hence the expressions, "at His appearing and Kingdom," "the Son of man coming in His Kingdom," &c. (2) He tells His disciples (v. 25th) that "He must FIRST suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation" prior to the setting up of His Kingdom. How could it have been then set up? (3) He informs His disciples how His kingdom will be manifested, viz. like the lightning shining from one part of Heaven to the other, which also shows it was then future. (4) In ch. 19 to which you refer, the idea entertained by some that "the Kingdom of God SHOULD IMMEDIATELY APPEAR, was corrected by our Savior in the parable of "the nobleman who went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom." (5) After giving the signs of his coming, ch. 21st, He distinctly announces the fact that when these things transpire we may know "that the kingdom of God is NIGH."

These texts show conclusively that the Kingdom of God, in its legitimate and proper sense, was then in the future. If any passage refer to an existing Kingdom, it could only be in a subordinate sense. The distinctive characteristics of a kingdom are (1) a king, (2) a subject, (3) territory, (4) laws. I have not time to enlarge on this subject, but all these four elements are essential to the proper idea of a kingdom. We may in a metaphorical sense speak of the King, or the territory, or the moral characteristics of that State as being the kingdom, but a kingdom in its appropriate sense involves the four elements named. The king must possess regal authority—he must reign over a certain territory—and subjects must be controlled by his sceptre, which cannot be true of the Messianic Kingdom while the King is personally absent, as is the case now, nor while the territory is in the hands of an usurper—the great prince of darkness "who ruleth in the hearts of the children of disobedience," nor while the subjects of that reign lie in the silent tomb, nor while the laws of that empire are trampled under foot, nor until He shall take to Himself His great power and reign.

I understand the term "cometh not with observation," to signify that the everlasting Kingdom of God will not be introduced and established as other Kingdoms have been, i. e., it will not be manifested so that it will be known to be approaching by an external display of power. Other kingdoms have been introduced by conquest—organized by civil power—and manifested to the outward observation of all, at their incipient stage. The inhabitants could discover the approach of the conqueror, witness the success of his arms, and perceive the progress of the new empire until it became established as an organized and permanent government in their midst. In this outward and visible manner, the Jews expected the Messiah to organize His Kingdom. They expected, doubtless, that He would raise the standard of rebellion against the powers that then were—that multitudes would flock to His standard (as they did to that of David, the type of Christ,) and thus ultimately He would gain a triumph over their national enemies, the Jewish polity would be completely restored, and thus the Kingdom of God would be set up.

This process would be apparent to all, and hence the believers on that Messiah would say, after the struggle for supremacy commenced, "Lo, here is Christ"—the expected Messiah who is to restore the Kingdom to Israel, or "lo, there is Christ," the standard is unfurled—deliverance is coming—the Kingdom is already among you.

But Jesus assures the Pharisees that their idea of the inception, progress and establishment of the Kingdom was wrong, and that it would not come in the way they had marked out.

As if He had said, men will not see the Messiah unfurl the banner of freedom like a conquering monarch, so that His adherents might go and tell others that the Kingdom of God was visibly approaching. Where? Look, behold your Messiah! here is His Kingdom, or there is His Kingdom being organized among you.

To illustrate the subject, suppose at Christ's triumphant entrance into Jerusalem, the disciples had fully believed He was about to set up His Kingdom, and as the multitude were shouting, "blessed be THE KINGDOM of our father David that cometh in the name of the Lord," how natural it would have been for the believers to have informed those who had no knowledge of the Savior by saying, "lo here!" or "lo there!" The term rendered "lo," was originally a verb, meaning "see or behold;" but why see or behold? "for (BECAUSE) the Kingdom of God (is being established) among you." This expression "for behold the Kingdom of God is among you," I do not understand to be the language of Christ; but the words which He affirms, men will not have an opportunity to make use of, before it will be revealed in all its glory. This is true in relation to the real Kingdom of Christ. But when, He continues, ye shall desire greatly the coming of that day, men will direct your attention hither and thither, affirming that Christ has come the second time, and that His Kingdom is already set up, nay, that it is even among you; but regard them not, whether you are pointed to the desert, or secret chamber, or wherever they may assert the Messiah is, and the Kingdom being set up; for remember, I have told you beforehand, that all such are deceivers. Pay no heed to the reports of the Kingdom being among you, until the whole heavens above are illuminated with the glory of the Kingdom instantaneously as the lightning's flash.

For the Crisis.

Letter from J. Thomas.

Lynn, March 5, 1856.

To Dr. A. Decker.—Dear Br.:—I was much interested in your article on the 2300 days published in the Crisis, but wish to inquire how you make the 1335 days end this year, and yet the 1260 end prior to the darkening of the Sun in 1780.

J. Thomas.

To the Patrons of the Prophetic Messenger.

Dear Brethren:—Having made due arrangements with the publishing Committee of the World's Crisis, you will from hence receive the Crisis instead of the Messenger; the reasons for which were given in the last Messenger, and need not be again repeated. The occasion of my writing this, is to say, as due you and other of my friends—why I give my sympathies to, and believe

WE SHOULD SUSTAIN THE CRISIS.

1st. Because it is free and independent, confined to no clique, and pledged to no party-creed, heralding the great truth of the speedy, personal Advent and reign of Christ on the earth, and with that, ready to investigate every truth appertaining to the Christian Church, whether of a chronological or other character. It was for this reason the Crisis came into existence. Of the importance of this element I need not speak, because it is what every intelligent Christian, awake to the realities of the thinking age in which we live—the time of the end when knowledge shall increase—deeply feels.

2nd. Because of its uniform, and kind spirit. Every one, who, like myself, has had upwards of twelve years experience in this cause, is prepared to appreciate this peculiar feature of the Crisis. Who has not lamented the thrusting, bitter, and almost pugilistic sarcasm that has found place in our Advent papers; a spirit alike inimical to the spirit of Christ and those who are his followers; as also unbecoming a Christian and generous heart conscious of knowing and defending the truth? Have we not all felt "better is a dry morsel and quietness therewith, than a house full of sacrifices with strife? Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith."

3d. Because it advocates views concerning the signs of the times which are consonant with those generally entertained by American Adventists. I do not speak of this so much because at is peculiar to ourselves, as for the reason that I think it is of the greatest importance in aiding to a becoming appreciation of the nearness of the Advent. To illustrate, let me say, we have lived in the time symbolized by the feet of the metallic image, (Dan. 2,) upwards of thirteen hundred years; and but for other prophecies we could not tell but the world was to continue here thirteen hundred years longer. But by the signs of the times which our Lord promised to give immediately after the papal tribulation, we know that now is the time when we are commanded to look for our Lord. The present belligerent aspect of the world, I do not see would prove the Lord at hand, if it were not at the precise point in chronology predicted in the Scriptures. Because there is perplexity on earth, we cannot therefore say, the Lord is at hand. But it is because this perplexity "upon the earth" comes in connection with, but subsequent to well defined and (I think) already witnessed celestial phenomena, that have afforded the most indubitable proof that the Lord will speedily appear. (See Luke 21.) These celestial signs were to appear immediately after the Papal tribulation. (See Matt. 24: 29.) Therefore to say these signs have not been witnessed, is tantamount to saying, "the Lord is not at hand"—"the vision that he seeth is for many days to come."

Nor can I regard more favorably the new, and as seems to me very illogical view lately advanced by a prominent herald of the Advent, purporting to show that the darkness of A. D. 1780, although supernatural, or at least of all similar appearances of modern times the most remarkable, and although it was "immediately after" the tribulation of the Church, yet it did not suffice to fulfil the prophecy; but that the repeated darkening of the sun, which, as was contended, had occurred during perhaps some six centuries past was sufficient, and did fulfil the above quoted prophecy. But if six centuries were required to fill the prophecy relating to the darkening of the sun, why not six centuries be required to fill the prophecy relating to the moon; and then six more to meet the sign in the stars? "immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven." Such a view of this remarkable prophecy seems to me like darkening council with words. How it occurred, I know not; but this I know, I highly prize the Crisis, because it occupies the only tenable position relating to this vastly important topic. A point of such magnitude that it should not be lost sight off by the Church. We need a paper that in these fearful days of peril, can comfort the Church with the blessed hope of soon seeing our great Deliverer—and that can give a becoming and Scriptural reason for so doing; which if not found in the signs of these times, as promised by our Lord, is found nowhere. A paper such as this we need, and should support.

4th. Without enumerating the many reasons there are, I may add once more:—insomuch as we value the power of the press, or a free, independent, plain-speaking, but kind, and earnest weekly journal, devoted to the advocacy of Bible truth, let us sustain the World's Crisis while time shall last, or while the paper retains its present invaluable character.

In conclusion I wish to say,—for a season I expect to remain in the west, it time lasts, and shall be glad to hear from my brethren as usual, and will meet any and all calls for help, that I can. My faith abides unshaken in the belief that the Lord is at hand, and what we do must be done quickly. Brothers, pray for me.

I remain your brother in tribulation and hope, P. B. Morgan.

Mobile, Ala. Feb. 20th, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. R. Parkhurst:

Stafford Springs, Feb. 13, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—With a grateful heart I am permitted once more to write for your valuable paper. While so doing I must improve the opportunity in communicating the effusions of my heart. Your toils and labors I prize next the Bible. Surely your recompense must be great in that day when we are rewarded according to the deeds done in the body. I had much rather dispense with a part of my food, if necessary, than be deprived of the soul-cheering rays that emanate from the pens of the brethren and sisters. I love the name of an Adventist while in this afflicted state. I read an article from a brother a short time since, to the afflicted; it was applicable to my case—just in time when most needed. It was like the healing balsam to my wounded heart. O praise the Lord for his goodness to the children of men.

Stupidity predominates here. "A little more sleep and a little more slumber," and I believe all will be over. My dear Brother Merriam, His Gospel tells us that at the crucifixion "the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept arose and came out of their graves after Christ's resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many. Will you write your views in the Crisis upon that sublime event? I am aware of your labors, therefore I would have you suit your own convenience, and you will oblige an unworthy sister. Sophronia R. Parkhurst.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. Wm. M. Ingham.

Clement's Port, N. S., Feb. 12, 1856.

To the brethren and sisters that are looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, Greeting:—

I sit down to let you know that I have not yet yet given up looking for that same Jesus that went up from Mt. Olivet. I have no idea of giving up the journey—the prize is just ahead, the Kingdom, immortality, eternal life. Dear brethren and sisters, let us by patient continuance in well doing, seek for those things. Now is the time we need to watch, if we would be counted worthy to escape all the things that are coming on the earth, and to stand before the Son of Man. I am often led to ask, who will be saved? Who will enter the holy city? Shall I be there? I have some hope of being there, but have some fears, when I read, "strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leads to Life, and few there be that find it." "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which, no man shall see the Lord." Let us all strive to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, love all that love Jesus and endure to the end that we may be saved. Farewell. Love to all the pilgrims and strangers, hoping to meet you soon in the better land. Wm. M. Ingham.

For the Crisis.

Brother Merriam:—Sir: I wish you would copy in the Crisis an article in the Advent Herald of Feb. 5, headed "Prosperity," by a brother Nehemiah; every sentiment of which I most heartily endorse; and could wish, were it consistent, that it might be printed in characters of gold, and read in tones of thunder to every congregation of Adventists in America. Oh! how many weeping Nehemiahs are there in our midst. The nominal Church says—we are rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing; but alas; they have the form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. It was once said, "out of Zion the perfection of beauty God hath shined"; but alas, where is the beauty and moral power of the Church now! she is like a Sampson shorn of his locks. Unless Jesus shall come soon, what shall be our fate? Let us turn unto a covenant-keeping God, with confession of our sin, and again pray for prosperity. Let Zion be again builded, and our reproach taken away. P. B. M.

For the Crisis.

Reply to Brother Streeter.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

My Brother:—In the last Crisis, you call for me to "come over and help" you. O yes, and that is the interesting cry from every quarter. What shall I do? How gladly would I, in my poor, feeble way, answer all these calls by a practical visit, if it were at all possible. I am going day and night, just as far, and as much as I think my health will allow of, without getting unfit for labor; and just in accordance also with my temporal means, as I calculate. But then, these sheep want feeding, and somebody must feed them. O, how much to be done, and how few to do it! O Lord, send "laborers into the harvest." Laborers! yes, laborers, not speculators—not venders of foreign goods—not traders in the wares of Babylon—not fault-finders and murmurers—not idlers and loafers—but men of virtue, of humanity, of truth, of activity, of power, of God!

I remember the dear ones in Vernon, Vt., with their eager ears for the truth, and their warm hearts to receive it. I really long to be in a good, fervent conference meeting with them. By the grace of God, I will visit them just as soon as the Lord opens the way; but at present it is not possible for me to come. Perhaps at a later hour, if the Master cometh not, it will be well to have a general conference of brethren and sisters somewhere in that section. Say, when the weather is warm, and the ground is settled. Indeed, I think it would be well to have many of this kind of meetings in various parts this year, if we have time. I think these the best kind of meetings. It seems to me they are far more profitable than camp-meetings. I think the time of camp-meetings is gone by. The people no longer rush in crowds as formerly, and generally we are able to entertain what do come, in our places of worship. In some locations they may be well enough; but mostly there is more novelty than devotion—more noise and bustle, than holy and humble worship—more coming and going than kneeling and praying. In short, more of earth than Heaven. They appeared to be expedient once, and then God greatly blessed us in preaching to the crowds that came together. But times and circumstances have changed; and we must be wise as serpents, as well as harmless as doves. We have not the temporal substance now to support them as formerly; nor have we the many strong-lunged preachers to labor in them as before time. Let us then set to work in a better way.

We earnestly exhort our brethren in that section to continue steadfast in "the faith," and "be not moved away from the hope of the Gospel." Keep up frequent meetings, and "exhort one another" more and more earnestly, "as ye see the day approaching." Above all, live in "peace among yourselves;" for this is an evil day for contentions. O my brethren, love as Jesus loved! Wait for each other's movements in all Heavenly kindness and charity. Remember how the Lord hath waited for us. Be not hasty or revengeful. Watch and pray. Greeting,

Edwin Burnham.

Letter from Br. A. M. Higgins.

Ware, March, 5, 1856.

Brother Merriam:—Thinking that as as notice was given a few weeks since that I was sick, the children of God might wish to hear how it turned with unworthy me, I would like the privilege of saying through the Crisis that "the Lord has done great things for me, wherof I am glad." My earnest desire to be able to meet my appointments and unwillingness to yield to disease, were, doubtless, the cause of the severity of the case in a great degree; and when I did yield, it was because I was obliged to. I then sank very low until all medicine and human skill availed nothing. We then in our extremity went to the great Physician, and found it was God's opportunity. He heard prayer, rebuked disease, and raised me up. And now I can say it has been good for me to be afflicted. I feel now that I can say I have learned something more of the Lord, and of the straightness of the way, and, the Lord helping me, I am pledged to the Master of the house, to try to show and help those of the household to see and walk in the way; for it is a straight way, and few there be that find it.

While we have so many Epistles on the way the children of Israel were led, and the way Adventists have been led, cannot some one give the way Jesus was led, and, tell us which of those ways we must travel to find Eternal life? O, brethren and sisters in Christ, let us be sure of this one thing, that we abide in Christ the vine, "There is no other name given under Heaven or among men whereby we must be saved." Therefore abiding in any other name, faith, or experience, or whatever it may be, it will be found "a sandy foundation," however fine or nice the house built thereon may appear.

My prayer is, Lord, inspire some brother or sister's pen for the work, and feed the sheep.

Thy brother in hope of Eternal life through Jesus Christ, A. M. H.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. L. W. Bragg.

Ware, March 10, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—In behalf of husband I write to the brethren that he has been very sick, even near death's door, which is the cause of his not fulfilling his appointments, given in the Crisis. But to the glory of God, he yet lives to praise the Lord, and is mending fast, hoping soon to be able to meet the saints in different places, to give a word of comfort in this trying time.

The Lord bless you all with grace to separate from all that is impure, and cling to the Lord with all your heart, knowing that nothing but a whole consecration to God will bring us to the fountain of living water, where we can say from the heart, "I know that my Redeemer lives, and because he lives I shall live also."

I can say to the praise of God, I never enjoyed more of God and the Holy Ghost in all my life, than of late. Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me. And all ye saints of God, praise him in the highest; for He alone is worthy. O I do praise Him for affliction's rod. I can truly say, "it is good for me that I have been afflicted;" for before I was afflicted, I went astray, but now I will keep thy commandments. They are my delight and meditation by day and night. O praise the Lord forever and ever, is the language of my unworthy heart. O, I so long for immortality, that I may praise the Lord according to His excellent greatness; for I truly feel that our praise is too low when I have a view of His excellent greatness and glory. O Lord, let us feel our own weakness and thy greatness; and ever hide in Jesus daily as we journey to the Heavenly city of Zion. O be good, humble and faithful; live only for God. Then we shall be of one mind, heart and judgment, speaking the same things, being of one accord, and builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit. Then we shall see the signs follow them that believe. Bless the Lord's name forever and ever.

From a pilgrim expecting immortality soon, praise the Lord.

L. W. Bragg.

Extract of a letter from Br. J. Blain published in the Prophetic Expositor:

"Bro. Marsh:—To encourage brethren who are making sacrifices to spread truth, I send for the Expositor, a few extracts of letters, out of many which I am receiving. I do it especially to encourage the circulation of our works on the life and death question.

"Dear Sir,—In the month of October I took a business trip 'out West' and while on board a steamer on Lake Erie, I saw a book purporting to be published by you, titled, 'Death not Life.' I purchased the work, and since my return have wanted other copies, but have not been able to find any one that has it for sale. Will you please inform me what a few copies—say 30 to 50—can be delivered for? I am at present a member of a Baptist Church; but how long I shall continue, I cannot say, as I am propagating the doctrines found in your work—a doctrine which has been dimly held by me for some years, but knew not what it was. I never could believe in 'endless punishment.'

Chelsea, Mass., Dec., 1855."

The following is from Pickaway, O.:

"Bro. Blain:—Fortunately for me, as I was riding in the cars one day, a passenger by the name of Hudson, a Congregational minister, handed me your book, 'Death not Life,' and I bought it. Now I wish you to send me some of your books, and other good works on the subject. I want all the information I can get on the subject—I am alone in this county as far as I know. I am a local Methodist E.

Preacher, and intend, when I know enough how to defend myself, to preach the truth to the people, for I am fully satisfied the Bible teaches the destruction of the wicked, and not eternal torment. T. F. H."

From Asbury University, in Greencastle, Ind., a friend writes:

"Mr. Blain:—There is now a great demand here for your work, 'Death not Life,'—and if you will send two dozen, I will forward the pay, &c."

On sending the money, he says:

"We have organized an investigation Society, composed of students and others who are not bound down by the theories of the schoolmen; and among other matters the doctrine of destruction came up, and soon found a vigorous defence. I shall sell the books you sent, and may want another lot for the Berean Bible Class, of which I have spoken, and others who are now interested in the contest. T. S."

Another from Newark, O., says:

"Mr. Blain:—Please send me 'Death not Life,' with other works you may have, that will assist a Bible scholar in searching for the truths of the Bible. Let me know the prices, and I will send pay, &c.
J. W. B."

"A Presbyterian minister of Washington County, N. Y., who is at present only preaching as a supply to churches of that order, wrote me in Oct:

"I enclose $1, for which I will thank you to send me some of 'Death not Life,' for distribution. I have read your book with much pleasure, and hope it may be the means of removing prejudice, and causing a careful and prayerful study of God's word, on these all-important subjects.
J. F."

"The above are some of the proofs that 'we labor not in vain.' The Lord give us more courage and zeal in our sweet work of reform!

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1856."

Obituary.

Died on the 31st of Jan. 1856, of a short but severe illness, in the 9th year of his age, Frederic Browe, son of brother and sister Browe, of Newark, N. J.

Dear brother Merriam:—It falls to our painful lot to ask you to record another instance of mortality from the midst of our already diminished flock—the necessity for which we hoped would have ended ere this.

But so it is, the great enemy is still in the field not satisfied with his long reign of terror. He is at his old familiar work of creating tears and sorrow, and lamentation and wo. He will not make an unwilling surrender in any event, until the stronger shall disarm the strong man and spoil his goods. He will make us smart under his cruel power and wrath. He will dash into any circle, and invade any family, crushing the rising hopes of all obnoxious to his iron tramp. He will, while his power lasts, make his wanton attacks upon the high, the low, the honorable and the mean, the good as well as the bad, and leave in all his path the wrecks of blighted hopes and bleeding hearts.

This terrible oppression inflicts a peculiar smart upon our beloved brother and sister, and all of their faith who have long since entered their protest against the reign of death. However, it is their privilege to stand harnessed for war, and with the prophet to say, "Oh, mine enemy, though I fall I shall rise again:" and find comfort in the hope that Jesus will soon fulfil his threat: "Oh death, I will be thy plague—Oh grave, I will be thy destruction."

There is comfort for believers, however, so long as it is written, "All things shall work together for good to them that love God—to those who are the called according to his purpose;" that is, those who believe in redemption at the appearing of Christ.

The dear lad believed the Gospel—and is a hopeful candidate for the resurrection. Bless God—Rachel may cease her mourning: for her children shall come from the land of the enemy, and be brought to their own border again. So we will dry our tears and sing with brother Browe

"Oh death, thy reign is almost o'er,
Soon shalt thou lose thy power,
Creation then shall ring,
And all the saints shall sing,
In endless strains,
Throughout that happy hour."

B. Matthias.

We regret that the above Obituary was accidentally delayed.

☞ We have recently transferred our subscription list to a new book; if we have made any mistake, our patrons will please inform us. It is important that all names forwarded to us should be written in a legible hand, and the name of the State given.

☞ We have now on hand a variety of English Bibles with marginal reading and references, executed in a mechanical style truly excellent. Prices from 1$ to $2.

Chronological Table of the Reign of the Kings of Judah, Israel, Assyria and Babylon.

Years.	Kings of Judah.	Y. of R'n.	Kings of Israel.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	Kings of Assyria.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	Kings of Babylon.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	B. C.
	Amaziah	21	Jereboam	7		Sardan'p'lus	1				*	829
Jonah
9	"	29	"	15		"	9					821
11	Interregnum		"			"	20	20				810
	Uzziah	1	"	27		Arbaces	1					809
Hosea	"	3	"			"	3	3				807
Joel	"	4	"	30		Pul	1		Belosus	1		806
Amos	"	15	"	41	35	"	12		"	12		795
	"		Interregnum		23	"			"
	"	38	Shallum	1	1	"	37		"	35		770
	"	39	Menahem	1		"	38		"	36		769
	"	49	"	10	10	"	47		"	46		760
	"	50	Pekahiah	1		"	48	48	"	47		759
Isaiah	"	51	"	2	2	Tig. Pileser	1		"	43		758
52	"	52	Pekah	1			2		"	49		757
	Jotham	1	"	2		"	3		"	50		756
Micah	"	9	"	10		"	11		"	59	59	748
Hosea	"	10	"	11			12		Baladan	1		747
16	"	16	"	17		"	17		"	6		742
	Ahaz	1	"	18		"	18		"	7		741
Micah	"	3	"	20	20	"	20		"	9		739
Hosea	"		Interregnum		9	"			"
Isaiah	"	10	"			"	27	27	"	16		732
	"	13	Hoshea	1		Salmanaser	3		"	19		729
16	"	16	"	3		"	6		"	22		726
	Hezekiah	1	"	4		"	7		"			725
	"	4	"	7		"	10		"	26	26	722
Micah	"	5	"			"	11		Mero. Baladan	1		721
Hosea	"	6	"	9	9	"	12		"	2		720
Isaiah	"	7				"	13	13	"	3		719
	"	8	End.		109	Sennacherib	1		"	4		718
Nahum	"	14				"	7	7	"	10		712
	"	15				Esarhaddon	1		"	11		711
26	"	24				End.	10	10	"	20		702
5	"	29							"	25	5	697
	Manasseh	1						128	"	26		696
	"	15							"	40		682
	"	20							"	45		697
	"	21							"	46		676
	"	22							"	47		675
	"	23							"	48		674
	"	27							"	52	57	670
	"	28							Ben-Merodach	1		669
	"	31							"	4		666
	"	40							"	13		657
	"	49							"	22	22	648
	"	50							Nebuchod'n'sor	1		647
55	"	55							"	6		642
	Hamon	1							"	7		641
2	"	2							"	8		640
	Josiah	1							"	9		639
	"	4								12		636
Habakkuk	"	5							"	13	13	635
	"	6							Saracus	1		634
Zephaniah	"	14							"	9	9	626
	"	15							Nabapolazzar	1		625
31	"	31							"	17		609
	Jehoiakim	1							"	18		608
Jeremiah	"	4							"	21	21	605
Ezekiel	"	5							Nebuchadnez'r	1		604
11		11							"	7		598
	Zedekiah	1							"	8		597
10	"	11							"	18	18	587
											220
115	End.

☞ The above Chronological Table, connected with Sister Hildreth's article, should have been given on the first page, but from want of suitable material we were obliged to delay putting it in type until the outside of the paper was worked off.

☞ We will fill all orders received for "The Age of Gospel Light," as soon as we have a supply, which we expect in a few days.

☞ Br. Pratt: There are $2 due from the brethren you named, on the present volume.

Obituaries.

Died in Clements Port, N. S., Nov. 20th, of scarlet rash and putrid sore throat, after an illness of one week, Jesse B. Balcombe, aged 5 years. Also, on Dec. 6, Ephraim Balcombe, aged 7 years, after an illness of four weeks, sons of Br. John Balcombe.

Thus the ties of nature are severed, and our brother and his family are called to mourn. May the grace of God sustain them in their bereavement, and may they all prepare to meet the departed ones in the Kingdom. Our brother does not mourn as other's that have no hope; for he believes that Jesus Christ died and rose again, and will soon come, and then he will meet those little ones, that sang with him so sweetly the songs of Zion, and the companion of his youth who was taken from his embraces some three or four years ago, where the inhabitants will never say they are sick.

Funeral sermon preached for both the children at the same time by the writer, at the Goat Island Meeting House. Text. Jer. 31: 15—17.

"Ah! this is death, my innocents! 'tis He—
Whose chilling hand has touched your tender frames.
Ye heed us not—nor e'en the bursting sobs
Of your dear father, now, can pierce your ears.
Your mother's tale, replete with varied scenes,
Exceed my powers to tell—but other harps
And other voices, sweeter far than mine,
Shall sing her matchless worth, her deeds of love,
Her zeal, her toil, her suff'rings and her death.
But all is over now; she sweetly sleeps
In yonder grave—and ye, sweet babes,
Are resting by her side— the cold, cold earth,
A pillow for your little heads. Sleep on! serene
In death! no care shall trouble you for aye.
All undisturbed, ye slumber far more still
Than when I lulled you in my lap, and soothed
Your little sorrows till they ceased.
Your flesh
Shall rest in hope till that great day, when He
Who once endured far greater woes than man
Can ever know—who, when on earth, received
Such little children in his arms, blessing
Them graciously—shall come again and reign.
Then, like the glorious body of your Lord
Who wakes your dust, these fragile forms shall be.
Then, shall ye mount with Him on angel wings—
Be freed from sorrow, sickness, sin and death,
And in His presence, find—eternal bliss."

Wm. M. Ingham.

Died at his residence in Otis, Feb. 28th., Bro. Ezra Jackson, aged 63 years. He has left a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss; but they sorrow not as those that have no hope.

For many years he has been an active member of the Methodist Church, when he heard some two years and a half ago of the coming of the Lord, the restoration of the earth as the saints' inheritance, &c., he cautiously but firmly embraced them, and with renewed zeal has warned and exhorted his fellow men to prepare for the judgment.

Sweet be his rest till the trumpet shall sound,
That shall bring up the dead from beneath the cold ground.

A Friend.

Kansas.—Louisville, March 8. A telegraphic dispatch from Weston, Kansas, says that the Free State officers were installed at Topeka on the 4th inst.

We copy the following editorial remarks from the Boston Traveller:—

"The English papers abound in speculation and tattle about the Peace Conferences. But, up to the time the Baltic left Liverpool, the conferences had not been opened. The 23d of February was the day generally fixed on as the opening day. The persuasion seemed to be quite strong and general that a peace would ensue. It seems that France has carried the war as far as it is thought for the interest of the Emperor to go, and now demands that there should be peace. England, however, has yet all her glory and advantage to reap; and if she comes out of the war now, she will come with no laurels, and no profit at all commensurate with the immense sacrifices of life and money which she has made. She has sacrificed her whole army; she has squandered scores of millions of money; and yet France walks off with the credit of having done all the fighting, earned all the victories, and secured to herself all the glory of the war. The English people will grumble and rave; but England—proud and self-sufficient England—is helpless in this war without France, and must submit to make peace when Napoleon says the word, and on the terms which will satisfy him. The quarrel with the United States continues to occupy much attention in England. Palmerston holds his head high, and talks bravely and saucily about us, and to us; and the general tone of the administration supporters, in Parliament and out, is defiant and provoking."

Interesting Rumors from Washington, respecting Central American Affairs—Senator Douglas and the Territories.—March 8. The Herald's correspondent at Washington, under date of the 7th, telegraphs as follows: In connection with the fact that a large British squadron is understood to be on the way to the coast of Central America, I have learned to-day that the government of Great Britain sent word to Mr. Marcy several weeks ago, that British subjects in Central America had supplicated them for aid, and that they should afford them protection.

Secretary Marcy has been very busy for the last forty-eight hours preparing elaborate dispatches, which go out in the European steamer to-morrow, with reference to our difficulties with England. Complete instructions to Mr. Dallas will accompany the dispatches.

Washington, March, 10.

Senate.—The Senate considered the bill appropriating three million of dollars for increasing the armament and munitions of war, and for the manufacture and alteration of small arms in accordance with the recent recommendation of the President. The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading by a vote of 22 against 12.

Mr. Crittenden wished to know how recent improvements are to be applied to arms in the States.

Mr. Weller replied that it is proposed to call them in. There are about 300,000 muskets in the States, which are to be rifles, supplied with new locks and Maynard's primers, which alterations will make them most efficient weapons. This alteration will cost 3$ each.

Washington Rumors—England and France to put down Fillibusterism.—New York, March 4. The following dispatch, dated Washington, March 3, was telegraphed to the Herald last evening:—"A good deal of excitement was created in the Cabinet, to-day, by the reading of an article which appeared in the London Morning Post, of Feb. 12, proposing an alliance between France and England to suppress American Fillibusterism. The article proposes to increase the fleets of France and England in the vicinity of Central America, and to put in force the right of search of all suspected American vessels in the same manner as it is exercised in the case of African slavers. This is looked on as more significant from the fact that the Post is regarded here as the organ of Lord Palmerston.

The Cabinet had a protracted session when the article above referred to received their attention.

The Central American Question.—The Washington Correspondent of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, makes the following somewhat important statements:—

"There is some probability of an effectual resistance on the part of Great Britain to the execution of the decree lately issued by the Walker Government of Nicaragua, on the extension of its jurisdiction over the Mosquito Territory, and the port of San Juan or Greytown. Some of the New York papers have already thrown out hints that this may be the case. But I have some information on the subject which renders it almost certain that as soon as the late Nicaragua decree shall be attempted to be executed, the commanders of H. B. Majesty's vessels of war on the West India station will interpose to prevent it.

In 1849, soon after the British had expelled the Nicaraguans from San Juan, and had substituted the Mosquito and British flag for that of Nicaragua, a treaty was concluded between the two Governments whereby it was stipulated that any attempt by Nicaragua to "exercise sovereignty in any part of the Mosquito territory, or to retake possession of San Juan shall be constructed as a declaration of war against Great Britain." Standing orders are also supposed to have been placed in the hands of all the commanders of the ships of war comprising the British West India fleet, to prevent, by force, if necessary, the extension of the Nicaraguan jurisdiction over the Mosquito region.

The Clayton-Bulwer treaty does not preclude either party to it from making war with any state or community in Central America, else how could we have burned Greytown? But the British Government may have come to the sudden and secret determination to abandon these cities of the Mosquito protectorate, and to avoid any further complication with Central American affairs. How far this is probable may be judged from the tone of the London Morning Post, in a recent article upon American aggressions. This article is referred to by the Union as a proof that the British Government has made an alliance with France of a character hostile to the United States. But whatever credit may be afforded to this article is attributable to the impression, perhaps an erroneous one, that this paper is the organ of Lord Palmerston."

Rebellion at South Carolina College.—On the night of the 19th ult., the students of the South Carolina College got into a fracas with the police and citizens, and several persons received death wounds. One of the students and the Chief of Police have died, and other students are not expected to recover. The students, said to be one hundred and sixty in number, were all armed during the melee, which was provoked by several of the military, and they surrendered only upon the threat of the Governor to fire upon them.

Aid for Kanzas.—The New York Independent reports that a gentleman of that city, who has been planning to co-operate liberally with the Kanzas Aid Company, was called on a few days since to help a subscription for sending some military supplies to the settlers in Kanzas. Having no money on hand to be conveniently spared, he sold a diamond pin for $500, and gave the proceeds for defence of freedom.

FOREIGN NEWS.

One week Later from Europe.

War Preparations.—The Times' correspondent is assured that warlike preparations in France continue just as if no conferences were about to be opened.

The Post's Paris correspondent states that dispatches from Asia speak of the concentration of a large force at Erzeroom. The Russians also are receiving reinforcements, and each appeared to anticipate a campaign. It was supposed the Russians had decided upon holding Kars.

The Times' Vienna correspondent writes: Preparations for defense are continued with the greatest energy in all the ports of the Baltic and Gulf of Finland, particularly in the neighborhood of Riga and Sweaborg.

The Times Kertch correspondent, on the 29th of Jan. states that the rumors of peace have in no way interfered with the active preparations for war.

Turkey.—Marseilles, Feb. 9. Ali Pasha is expected to arrive to-night, and will bring with him a decree from the Sultan, sanctioning the proposed measure relating to the reform.

The Porte, it is stated, will demand that the principalities shall remain distinct, but admitting for each of them the establishment of a hereditary hospodar.

The Conferences.—Paris, Feb. 18. Lord Clarendon had audience of the Emperor Napoleon Sunday. Count Buol was presented the following day. The priority of the English plenipotentiary is said to have been intentional.

The most earnest professions are made in official quarters at Paris, expressing a wish and determination of the Emperor's Government to maintain the alliance with England throughout.

Asia.—Correspondence via Constantinople brings accounts from the coast of Asia to the 3d inst. On high tableland, a snow storm continued during ten hours with frightful intensity. It proved fatal to a Russian convoy on the way carrying provisions to a small garrison at Kars. A detachment of seventy-five men perished in the snow. It is said that divisions of the Russian army encamped in the mountains, also greatly suffered, their communication being interrupted with the remainder of the country, and that their supplies were nearly cut off.

Austria.—Some additional particulars of the forthcoming Austrian amnesty have transpired. It will, with few exceptions, be unconditional, and be made known individually to those immediately concerned. Those who choose, can reassume their citizenship at once, and be put in possession of their property. Those who choose to return immediately may sell. Those who do neither will be considered dead, and their property handed to their legal heirs.

Aisa.—On the 6th of Jan., six battalions of Russians surprised a body of Turks near Zazdidi. The latter retreated, leaving their guns and baggage. The Russians subsequently burned Pacha's palace and several villages.

The Peace Conference.—There is much gossip about the Peace Conference.

Baron Brunow is reported to have said that Russia is sincerely desirous of peace, but if peace be not made within three or four weeks at farthest from the opening of the conference, serious difficulties might interfere with the final settlement of the question.

Lord Clarendon had a private interview with the Emperor immediately on his arrival in Paris.

Miscellaneous.—A despatch from Gen. Codrington, dated Sebastopol, Feb. 4, describes the destruction of Fort Nicholas on that day, the weather being magnificently fine. One hundred and six thousand pounds of powder were put in several mines. At 1 o'clock, P. M., the explosion took place, and a low line of ruins are all that remains of Fort Nicholas.

Rear Admiral Dundas has been appointed commander-in-chief of the Baltic fleet.

The Glasgow Herald estimates the damage inflicted by the late storm upon shipping in the Clyde and erections along the banks, at $100,000. This is irrespective of the great loss sustained in the city, suburbs and adjoining country. It is thought that the total loss in West Scotland would amount to half a million sterling.

The Rothschilds, it is said, propose taking the whole of the new loan.

Arrival of Steamship Africa.

New York, March 8.—The royal mail steamship Africa, from Liverpool, Feb. 23, arrived this afternoon at about 5 1-2 o'clock.

The Peace Conferences.—The Peace conferences were expected to open on Monday the 25th, two days after the sailing of the Africa, and great anxiety prevailed as to their issue. Ali Pachi, the Turkish Envoy, reached Marseilles on the 19th, en route for Paris, and we may now calculate there will be no hindrance to the commencement of the conferences on the 25th, although the plenipotentiaries have not yet assembled in Council. It is stated that the exigencies of Diplomatic etiquette have already been fully discussed and satisfactorily settled. The knotty question of precedence has been solved in a way which conciliates punctilio by adopting alphabetic order. By this means, Austria takes the lead, followed by France, Great Britain, Russia, Sardinia, Turkey.

The European Times of the 23d ult., says:

"The conferences, it is now believed, will practically open on Monday next, and before many days have elapsed, we shall know whether it will terminate amicably or not. Some of the German papers openly assert that Russia is playing a perfidious game, and that the apparent candor of Baron Brunow respecting Russia's inability to continue the war is part of a system to gain time to recruit her strength. These views come from a source which entitle them to attention, and if the Allies were slumbering while Russia was active, we could understand the object. But the reverse is notoriously the fact, and the speech from the Throne at the opening of the British Parliament must have convinced the Czar that we were not to be deceived by so clumsy a device. We have believed from the first that Russia was acting in good faith in her desire for peace, and we cannot help thinking that the declarations of Baron Brunow are the reflex of the views which prevail at St. Petersburg.

Not the least gratifying fact is the extreme cordiality which exists between the Emperor of the French and our government. The fear some time back was, that Louis Napoleon desired peace on terms less stringent than those on which the British government insisted, but the appearance of a recent article in the Siecle, inspired, evidently, by the highest authority, and copied into the Moniteur of Wednesday last, removes all doubt on this subject. Lord Clarendon, it is intimated in some of the letters from Paris, will insist that Nicolaieff shall be included in the arsenals on the coast of the Black Sea which are to be destroyed, and upon the concession or rejection of this proposal the question of peace or war will probably turn.

The Anglo-American Difficulties.—Nothing further has transpired respecting difficulties with America, except that the London Advertiser professes to know that Mr. Dallas has very stringent demands in regard to both the Central American and enlistment questions.

A Vienna letter to the London Times says the evident desire of the Washington government to pick a quarrel with England excites attention here, and people in office are strongly inclined to suspect the President of endeavoring to kill two birds with one stone. In plain English, his partisans are believed to have two reasons for agitating against England—the one to secure the President's re-election, the other to make a diversion in favor of Russia. Austria at present is on very decent terms with the American government, but she regards its continual endeavors to find a pretext for meddling in European affairs with such a jealous eye, that the good understanding is is not likely to be of any great duration.

Russian War Preparations.—Letters from St. Petersburg and Warsaw, published in the German papers, give details of the extensive preparations made by Russia for a continuance of the war, and state that on no point has the former energy of the military departments been abated.

APPOINTMENTS.

If the Lord permit I will meet with the brethren in Newark, New Jersey, Thursday evening, March 27th, and continue with them over the following Sabbath. H. Pratt.

The Lord willing, Br. S. S. Brewer, will preach in Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, March 2.
Bro. John Couch, Sunday, March 16.
In behalf of the Committee,
F. Flanders, Chairman.

Providence permitting, we will preach at Waldo Hall, Worcester, as follows:
E. Burnham, March 16.
S. S. Brewer, March 30.

I will preach at
Richmond, (Reed Meeting House,) March 9.
J. Partridge.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at
At Brunswick, Sunday, March 16.
R. R. York.

The Lord willing, brother M. Grant will hold a meeting at Phœnix Hall, Fairhaven, Mass., on March 13th, commencing at 10 o'clock, A. M. to continue over the Sabbath.

An invitation is extended particularly to brethren and sisters residing in New Bedford, Dartmouth, at the head of the river Mattapoisett and vicinity. R. R. Gifford.

The Lord willing, Br. Burnham will preach at Salem, Sunday, March 23.
T. Hardy.

With the help and permission of our Lord and Master, I will meet the Church of Christ in Roxbury, Tuesday eve., March 18.
Lynn, Thursday eve., March 20.
If these appointments conflict with others, brethren, please write me at the Crisis Office, Boston.
A. M. Higgins.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postage 17 cents.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Dobney on Future Punishment, 75 cts.

Bible verses Tradition, $100.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.
" " 2 series, 75 cts.
Signs of the Times, 75 cts.
The End, 75 cts.
Lectures on Romanism, $1.
The Tent and the Altar, 75 cts.

Church Debts, 50 cts.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15cts. single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 " "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 " "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 " "	3 " "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 " "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 " "	1,50 "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 " "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 " "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 " "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 " "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 " "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast,	3 " "	1,50 "

The Destiny of the Wicked, 3 cts.
Book of Seven Seals, 3 cts.
Seven Seals, 3 cts.
The Laodicean Church or the Judgment Age, 3 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns.—The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.
- Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"Wellcome's Treatise on Matt., 24th and 25th chapters.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."
"D. T. Taylor."
Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J.M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

Notice of the New England Mission Tent.—Those wishing for Tent-Meetings in Illinois, Iowa, or Wisconsin, this Spring, will please write to myself or Br. W. Pratt, at this place. P. B Morgan.
Moline, Ill. Feb. 28, 1856.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

J Howe, C Perry, S Parker, D N Kidder, J M Fargarty, R Collins, Br Rogers, E Starkins, H N Duke, A Holmes, W Moore, D Kinsman, B Peterson, H Butler, O Haynes, J Bates, D Burnham, B Wheelock, J Morgan, A Russ, A W Brown, A Brown, J Gray, J Sparks, J H Trufaunt, W Cobbath, E Dole, $1 each.

Wm M Ingham $2, M Hill $2, E Stephens $3, M L Clark $30.20, J M Withington $2, J M Howard, A M Crabtree, 50 cts. each.

For the Poor—A Friend, $2.

Old debt of Crisis—E Dodge, $1. Whole amount, $61.04.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

The best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to publish this advertisement to the public.

I know enough reach the truth
lly satisfied the n of the wick-
T. F. H."
, in Greencas-

now a great de-
Death not Life,' o dozen, I will says:

n investigation
nts and others
the theories of other matters came up, and fence. I shall nd may want
Bible Class, of thers who are
. T. S."
, says:
d me 'Death
you may have,
olar in search-
ble. Let me
send pay, &c.
J. W. B."
of Washing-
t present only urches of that

I will thank ath not Life,' ead your book
pe it may be lice, and caustudy of God's subjects.
J. F."
he proofs that Lord give us
ur sweet work 56."

. 1856, of a
9th year of n of brother
., N. J.
t falls to our d another in-

Chronological Table of the Reign of the Kings of Judah, Israel, Assyria and Babylon.

Years.	Kings of Judah.	Y. of R'n.	Kings of Israel.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	Kings of Assyria.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	Kings of Babylon.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	B. C.
	Amaziah	21	Jereboam	7		Sardan'p'lus	1					829
Jonah
9	"	29	"	15		"	9					821
11	Interregnum		"			"	20	20				810
	Uzziah	1	"	27		Arbaces	1					809
Hosea	"	3	"			"	3	3				807
Joel	"	4	"	30		Pul	1		Belosus	1		806
Amos	"	15	"	41	35	"	12		"	12		795
	"		Interregnum		23	"			"
	"	38	Shallum	1	1	"	37		"	35		770
	"	39	Menahem	1		"	38		"	36		769
	"	49	"	10	10	"	47		"	46		760
	"	50	Pekahiah	1		"	48	48	"	47		759
Isaiah	"	51	"	2	2	Tig. Pileser	1		"	43		758
52	"	52	Pekah	1			2		"	49		757
	Jotham	1	"	2		"	3		"	50		756
Micah	"	9	"	10		"	11		"	59	59	748
Hosea	"	10	"	11			12		Baladan	1		747
16	"	16	"	17		"	17		"	6		742
	Ahaz	1	"	18		"	18		"	7		741
Micah	"	3	"	20	20	"	20		"	9		739
Hosea	"		Interregnum		9	"			"
Isaiah	"	10	"			"	27	27	"	16		732
	"	13	Hoshea	1		Salmanaser	3		"	19		729
16	"	16	"	3		"	6		"	22		726
	Hezekiah	1	"	4		"	7		"			725
	"	4	"	7		"	10		"	26	26	722
Micah	"	5	"			"	11		Mero. Baladan	1		721
Hosea	"	6	"	9	9	"	12		"	2		720
Isaiah	"	7				"	13	13	"	3		719
	"	8	End.		109	Sennacherib	1		"	4		718
Nahum	"	14				"	7	7	"	10		712
	"	15				Esarhaddon	1		"	11		711
26	"	24				End.	10	10	"	20		702
5	"	29							"	25	5	697
	Manasseh	1						128	"	26		696
	"	15							"	40		682
	"	20							"	45		697
	"	21							"	46		676
	"	22							"	47		675
	"	23							"	48		674
	"	27							"	52	57	670
	"	28							Ben-Merodach	1		669
	"	31							"	4		666
	"	40							"	13		657
	"	49							"	22	22	648
	"	50							Nebuchod'n'sor	1		647
55	"	55							"	6		642
	Hamon	1							"	7		641
2	"	2							"	8		640
	Josiah	1							"	9		639
	"	4								12		636
Habakkuk	"	5							"	13	13	635
	"	6							Saracus	1		634
Zephaniah	"	14							"	9	9	626
	"	15							Nabapolazzar	1		625
31	"	31							"	17		609
	Jehoiakim	1							"	18		608
Jeremiah	"	4							"	21	21	605
Ezekiel	"	5							Nebuchadnez'r	1		604
11		11							"	7		598
	Zedekiah	1							"	8		597
10	"	11							"	18	18	587
115	End.										220

☞ The above Chronological Table, connected with Sister Hildreth's article, should have been given on the first page, but from want of suitable material we were obliged to delay putting it in type until the outside of the paper was worked off.

☞ We will fill all orders...

The Central Ame
Washington Correspon
mercial Advertiser, ma
what important statem

"There is some prol resistance on the part execution of the decr
Walker Government o tension of its jurisdict
Territory, and the por town. Some of the already thrown out hi case. But I have so subject which renders as soon as the late Ni attempted to be execut
H. B. Majesty's vessel
India station will inter

In 1849, soon after t
the Nicaraguans from stituted the Mosquito a of Nicaragua, a treaty
the two Governments
ted that any attempt b cise sovereignty in any territory, or to retake shall be constructed a against Great Britain.' also supposed to have b of all the commanders comprising the Britisl prevent, by force, if of the Nicaraguan jur quito region.

The Clayton-Bulwer
either party to it from state or community in how could we have bu
the British Governmen sudden and secret det these cities of the Mos to avoid any further c
tral American affairs.
able may be judged fro
don Morning Post, i
American aggressions.
ed to by the Union as Government has made of a character hostile
But whatever credit r article is attributable t
haps an erroneous one organ of Lord Palmers

Rebellion at South
On the night of the 19
the South Carolina C with the police and cit sons received death wo
dents and the Chief of other students are n
The students, said to b in number, were all ar which was provoked by and they surrendered o
the Governor to fire un

Preacher, and intend, when I know enough how to defend myself, to preach the truth to the people, for I am fully satisfied the Bible teaches the destruction of the wicked, and not eternal torment. T. F. H."

From Asbury University, in Greencastle, Ind., a friend writes:

"Mr. Blain:—There is now a great demand here for your work, 'Death not Life,'—and if you will send two dozen, I will forward the pay, &c."

On sending the money, he says:

"We have organized an investigation Society, composed of students and others who are not bound down by the theories of the schoolmen; and among other matters the doctrine of destruction came up, and soon found a vigorous defence. I shall sell the books you sent, and may want another lot for the Berean Bible Class, of which I have spoken, and others who are now interested in the contest. T. S."

Another from Newark, O., says:

"Mr. Blain:—Please send me 'Death not Life,' with other works you may have, that will assist a Bible scholar in searching for the truths of the Bible. Let me know the prices, and I will send pay, &c. J. W. B."

"A Presbyterian minister of Washington County, N. Y., who is at present only preaching as a supply to churches of that order, wrote me in Oct:

"I enclose $1, for which I will thank you to send me some of 'Death not Life,' for distribution. I have read your book with much pleasure, and hope it may be the means of removing prejudice, and causing a careful and prayerful study of God's word, on these all-important subjects. J. F."

"The above are some of the proofs that 'we labor not in vain.' The Lord give us more courage and zeal in our sweet work of reform!

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1856."

Obituary.

Died on the 31st of Jan. 1856, of a short but severe illness, in the 9th year of his age, Frederic Browe, son of brother and sister Browe, of Newark, N. J.

Dear brother Merriam:—It falls to our painful lot to ask you to record another instance of mortality from the midst of our already diminished flock—the necessity for which we hoped would have ended ere this.

But so it is, the great enemy is still in the field not satisfied with his long reign of terror. He is at his old familiar work of creating tears and sorrow, and lamentation and wo. He will not make an unwilling surrender in any event, until the stronger shall disarm the strong man and spoil his goods. He will make us smart under his cruel power and wrath. He will dash into any circle, and invade any family, crushing the rising hopes of all obnoxious to his iron tramp. He will, while his power lasts, make his wanton attacks upon the high, the low, the honorable and the mean, the good as well as the bad, and leave in all his path the wrecks of blighted hopes and bleeding hearts.

This terrible oppression inflicts a peculiar smart upon our beloved brother and sister, and all of their faith who have long since entered their protest against the reign of death. However, it is their privilege to stand harnessed for war, and with the prophet to say, "Oh, mine enemy, though I fall I shall rise again:" and find comfort in the hope that Jesus will soon fulfil his threat: "Oh death, I will be thy plague—Oh grave, I will be thy destruction."

There is comfort for believers, however, so long as it is written, "All things shall work together for good to them that love God—to those who are the called according to his purpose;" that is, those who believe in redemption at the appearing of Christ.

The dear lad believed the Gospel—and is a hopeful candidate for the resurrection. Bless God—Rachel may cease her mourning: for her children shall come from the land of the enemy, and be brought to their own border again. So we will dry our tears and sing with brother Browe

"Oh death, thy reign is almost o'er,
Soon shalt thou lose thy power,
Creation then shall ring,
And all the saints shall sing,
In endless strains,
Throughout that happy hour."

B. Matthias.

We regret that the above Obituary was accidentally delayed.

☞ We have recently transferred our subscription list to a new book; if we have made any mistake, our patrons will please inform us. It is important that all names forwarded to us should be written in a legible hand, and the name of the State given.

☞ We have now on hand a variety of English Bibles with marginal reading and references, executed in a mechanical style truly excellent. Prices from 1$ to $2.

Chronological Table of the Reign of the Kings of Judah, Israel, Assyria and Babylon.

Years.	Kings of Judah.	Y. of R'n.	Kings of Israel.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	Kings of Assyria.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	Kings of Babylon.	Y. of R'n.	Ys.	B. C.
	Amaziah	21	Jereboam	7		Sardan'p'lus	1					829
Jonah
9	"	29	"	15		"	9					821
11	Interregnum		"			"	20	20				810
	Uzziah	1	"	27		Arbaces	1					809
Hosea	"	3	"			"	3	3				807
Joel	"	4	"	30		Pul	1		Belosus	1		806
Amos	"	15	"	41	35	"	12		"	12		795
	"		Interregnum		23	"			"
	"	38	Shallum	1	1	"	37		"	35		770
	"	39	Menahem	1		"	38		"	36		769
	"	49	"	10	10	"	47		"	46		760
	"	50	Pekahiah	1		"	48	48	"	47		759
Isaiah	"	51	"	2	2	Tig. Pileser	1		"	43		758
52	"	52	Pekah	1			2		"	49		757
	Jotham	1	"	2		"	3		"	50		756
Micah	"	9	"	10		"	11		"	59	59	748
Hosea	"	10	"	11			12		Baladan	1		747
16	"	16	"	17		"	17		"	6		742
	Ahaz	1	"	18		"	18		"	7		741
Micah	"	3	"	20	20	"	20		"	9		739
Hosea	"		Interregnum		9	"			"
Isaiah	"	10	"			"	27	27	"	16		732
	"	13	Hoshea	1		Salmanaser	3		"	19		729
16	"	16	"	3		"	6		"	22		726
	Hezekiah	1	"	4		"	7		"			725
	"	4	"	7		"	10		"	26	26	722
Micah	"	5	"			"	11		Mero. Baladan	1		721
Hosea	"	6	"	9	9	"	12		"	2		720
Isaiah	"	7				"	13	13	"	3		719
	"	8	End.		109	Sennacherib	1		"	4		718
Nahum	"	14				"	7	7	"	10		712
	"	15				Esarhaddon	1		"	11		711
26	"	24				End.	10	10	"	20		702
5	"	29							"	25	5	697
	Manasseh	1						128	"	26		696
	"	15							"	40		682
	"	20							"	45		697
	"	21							"	46		676
	"	22							"	47		675
	"	23							"	48		674
	"	27							"	52	57	670
	"	28							Ben-Merodach	1		669
	"	31							"	4		666
	"	40							"	13		657
	"	49							"	22	22	648
	"	50							Nebuchod'n'sor	1		647
55	"	55							"	6		642
	Hamon	1							"	7		641
2	"	2							"	8		640
	Josiah	1							"	9		639
	"	4								12		636
Habakkuk	"	5							"	13	13	635
	"	6							Saracus	1		634
Zephaniah	"	14							"	9	9	626
	"	15							Nabapolazzar	1		625
31	"	31							"	17		609
	Jehoiakim	1							"	18		608
Jeremiah	"	4							"	21	21	605
Ezekiel	"	5							Nebuchadnez'r	1		604
11	"	11							"	7		598
	Zedekiah	1							"	8		597
10	"	11							"	18	18	587
115	End.										220

☞ The above Chronological Table, connected with Sister Hildreth's article, should have been given on the first page, but from want of suitable material we were obliged to delay putting it in type until the outside of the paper was worked off.

☞ We will fill all orders received for "The Age of Gospel Light," as soon as we have a supply, which we expect in a few days.

☞ Br. Pratt: There are $2 due from the brethren you named, on the present volume.

Obituaries.

Died in Clements Port, N. S., Nov. 20th, of scarlet rash and putrid sore throat, after an illness of one week, Jesse B. Balcombe, aged 5 years. Also, on Dec. 6, Ephraim Balcombe, aged 7 years, after an illness of four weeks, sons of Br. John Balcombe.

Thus the ties of nature are severed, and our brother and his family are called to mourn. May the grace of God sustain them in their bereavement, and may they all prepare to meet the departed ones in the Kingdom. Our brother does not mourn as other's that have no hope; for he believes that Jesus Christ died and rose again, and will soon come, and then he will meet those little ones, that sang with him so sweetly the songs of Zion, and the companion of his youth who was taken from his embraces some three or four years ago, where the inhabitants will never say they are sick.

Funeral sermon preached for both the children at the same time by the writer, at the Goat Island Meeting House. Text. Jer. 31: 15—17.

"Ah! this is death, my innocents! 'tis He—
Whose chilling hand has touched your tender frames.
Ye heed us not—nor e'en the bursting sobs
Of your dear father, now, can pierce your ears.
Your mother's tale, replete with varied scenes,
Exceed my powers to tell—but other harps
And other voices, sweeter far than mine,
Shall sing her matchless worth, her deeds of love,
Her zeal, her toil, her suff'rings and her death.
But all is over now; she sweetly sleeps
In yonder grave—and ye, sweet babes,
Are resting by her side— the cold, cold earth,
A pillow for your little heads. Sleep on! serene
In death! no care shall trouble you for aye.
All undisturbed, ye slumber far more still
Than when I lulled you in my lap, and soothed
Your little sorrows till they ceased.
Your flesh
Shall rest in hope till that great day, when He
Who once endured far greater woes than man
Can ever know—who, when on earth, received
Such little children in his arms, blessing
Them graciously—shall come again and reign.
Then, like the glorious body of your Lord
Who wakes your dust, these fragile forms shall be.
Then, shall ye mount with Him on angel wings—
Be freed from sorrow, sickness, sin and death,
And in His presence, find—eternal bliss."

Wm. M. Ingham.

Died at his residence in Otis, Feb. 28th, Bro. Ezra Jackson, aged 63 years. He has left a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss; but they sorrow not as those that have no hope.

For many years he has been an active member of the Methodist Church, when he heard some two years and a half ago of the coming of the Lord, the restoration of the earth as the saints' inheritance, &c., he cautiously but firmly embraced them, and with renewed zeal has warned and exhorted his fellow men to prepare for the judgment.

Sweet be his rest till the trumpet shall sound,
That shall bring up the dead from beneath the cold ground.

A Friend.

Kansas.—Louisville, March 8. A telegraphic dispatch from Weston, Kansas, says that the Free State officers were installed at Topeka on the 4th inst.

We copy the following editorial remarks from the Boston Traveller:—

"The English papers abound in speculation and tattle about the Peace Conferences. But, up to the time the Baltic left Liverpool, the conferences had not been opened. The 23d of February was the day generally fixed on as the opening day. The persuasion seemed to be quite strong and general that a peace would ensue. It seems that France has carried the war as far as it is thought for the interest of the Emperor to go, and now demands that there should be peace. England, however, has yet all her glory and advantage to reap; and if she comes out of the war now, she will come with no laurels, and no profit at all commensurate with the immense sacrifices of life and money which she has made. She has sacrificed her whole army; she has squandered scores of millions of money; and yet France walks off with the credit of having done all the fighting, earned all the victories, and secured to herself all the glory of the war. The English people will grumble and rave; but England—proud and self-sufficient England—is helpless in this war without France, and must submit to make peace when Napoleon says the word, and on the terms which will satisfy him. The quarrel with the United States continues to occupy much attention in England. Palmerston holds his head high, and talks bravely and saucily about us, and to us; and the general tone of the administration supporters, in Parliament and out, is defiant and provoking."

Interesting Rumors from Washington, respecting Central American Affairs—Senator Douglas and the Territories.—March 8. The Herald's correspondent at Washington, under date of the 7th, telegraphs as follows: In connection with the fact that a large British squadron is understood to be on the way to the coast of Central America, I have learned to-day that the government of Great Britain sent word to Mr. Marcy several weeks ago, that British subjects in Central America had supplicated them for aid, and that they should afford them protection.

Secretary Marcy has been very busy for the last forty-eight hours preparing elaborate dispatches, which go out in the European steamer to-morrow, with reference to our difficulties with England. Complete instructions to Mr. Dallas will accompany the dispatches.

Washington, March, 10.

Senate.—The Senate considered the bill appropriating three million of dollars for increasing the armament and munitions of war, and for the manufacture and alteration of small arms in accordance with the recent recommendation of the President. The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading by a vote of 22 against 12.

Mr. Crittenden wished to know how recent improvements are to be applied to arms in the States.

Mr. Weller replied that it is proposed to call them in. There are about 300,000 muskets in the States, which are to be rifles, supplied with new locks and Maynard's primers, which alterations will make them most efficient weapons. This alteration will cost 3$ each.

Washington Rumors—England and France to put down Fillibusterism.—New York, March 4. The following dispatch, dated Washington, March 3, was telegraphed to the Herald last evening:—"A good deal of excitement was created in the Cabinet, to-day, by the reading of an article which appeared in the London Morning Post, of Feb. 12, proposing an alliance between France and England to suppress American Fillibusterism. The article proposes to increase the fleets of France and England in the vicinity of Central America, and to put in force the right of search of all suspected American vessels in the same manner as it is exercised in the case of African slavers. This is looked on as more significant from the fact that the Post is regarded here as the organ of Lord Palmerston.

The Cabinet had a protracted session when the article above referred to received their attention.

The Central American Question.—The Washington Correspondent of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, makes the following somewhat important statements:—

"There is some probability of an effectual resistance on the part of Great Britain to the execution of the decree lately issued by the Walker Government of Nicaragua, on the extension of its jurisdiction over the Mosquito Territory, and the port of San Juan or Greytown. Some of the New York papers have already thrown out hints that this may be the case. But I have some information on the subject which renders it almost certain that as soon as the late Nicaragua decree shall be attempted to be executed, the commanders of H. B. Majesty's vessels of war on the West India station will interpose to prevent it.

In 1849, soon after the British had expelled the Nicaraguans from San Juan, and had substituted the Mosquito and British flag for that of Nicaragua, a treaty was concluded between the two Governments whereby it was stipulated that any attempt by Nicaragua to "exercise sovereignty in any part of the Mosquito territory, or to retake possession of San Juan shall be constructed as a declaration of war against Great Britain." Standing orders are also supposed to have been placed in the hands of all the commanders of the ships of war comprising the British West India fleet, to prevent, by force, if necessary, the extension of the Nicaraguan jurisdiction over the Mosquito region.

The Clayton-Bulwer treaty does not preclude either party to it from making war with any state or community in Central America, else how could we have burned Greytown? But the British Government may have come to the sudden and secret determination to abandon these cities of the Mosquito protectorate, and to avoid any further complication with Central American affairs. How far this is probable may be judged from the tone of the London Morning Post, in a recent article upon American aggressions. This article is referred to by the Union as a proof that the British Government has made an alliance with France of a character hostile to the United States. But whatever credit may be afforded to this article is attributable to the impression, perhaps an erroneous one, that this paper is the organ of Lord Palmerston."

Rebellion at South Carolina College.—On the night of the 19th ult., the students of the South Carolina College got into a fracas with the police and citizens, and several persons received death wounds. One of the students and the Chief of Police have died, and other students are not expected to recover. The students, said to be one hundred and sixty in number, were all armed during the melee, which was provoked by several of the military, and they surrendered only upon the threat of the Governor to fire upon them.

Aid for Kanzas.—The New York Independent reports that a gentleman of that city, who has been planning to co-operate liberally with the Kanzas Aid Company, was called on a few days since to help a subscription for sending some military supplies to the settlers in Kanzas. Having no money on hand to be conveniently spared, he sold a diamond pin for $500, and gave the proceeds for defence of freedom.

FOREIGN NEWS.

One week Later from Europe.

War Preparations.—The Times' correspondent is assured that warlike preparations in France continue just as if no conferences were about to be opened.

The Post's Paris correspondent states that dispatches from Asia speak of the concentration of a large force at Erzeroom. The Russians also are receiving reinforcements, and each appeared to anticipate a campaign. It was supposed the Russians had decided upon holding Kars.

The Times' Vienna correspondent writes: Preparations for defense are continued with the greatest energy in all the ports of the Baltic and Gulf of Finland, particularly in the neighborhood of Riga and Sweaborg.

The Times Kertch correspondent, on the 29th of Jan. states that the rumors of peace have in no way interfered with the active preparations for war.

Turkey.—Marseilles, Feb. 9. Ali Pasha is expected to arrive to-night, and will bring with him a decree from the Sultan, sanctioning the proposed measure relating to the reform.

The Porte, it is stated, will demand that the principalities shall remain distinct, but admitting for each of them the establishment of a hereditary hospodar.

The Conferences.—Paris, Feb. 18. Lord Clarendon had audience of the Emperor Napoleon Sunday. Count Buol was presented the following day. The priority of the English plenipotentiary is said to have been intentional.

The most earnest professions are made in official quarters at Paris, expressing a wish and determination of the Emperor's Government to maintain the alliance with England throughout.

Asia.—Correspondence via Constantinople brings accounts from the coast of Asia to the 3d inst. On high tableland, a snow storm continued during ten hours with frightful intensity. It proved fatal to a Russian convoy on the way carrying provisions to a small garrison at Kars. A detachment of seventy-five men perished in the snow. It is said that divisions of the Russian army encamped in the mountains, also greatly suffered, their communication being interrupted with the remainder of the country, and that their supplies were nearly cut off.

Austria.—Some additional particulars of the forthcoming Austrian amnesty have transpired. It will, with few exceptions, be unconditional, and be made known individually to those immediately concerned. Those who choose, can reassume their citizenship at once, and be put in possession of their property. Those who choose to return immediately may sell. Those who do neither will be considered dead, and their property handed to their legal heirs.

Aisa.—On the 6th of Jan., six battalions of Russians surprised a body of Turks near Zazdidi. The latter retreated, leaving their guns and baggage. The Russians subsequently burned Pacha's palace and several villages.

The Peace Conference.—There is much gossip about the Peace Conference.

Baron Brunow is reported to have said that Russia is sincerely desirous of peace, but if peace be not made within three or four weeks at farthest from the opening of the conference, serious difficulties might interfere with the final settlement of the question.

Lord Clarendon had a private interview with the Emperor immediately on his arrival in Paris.

Miscellaneous.—A despatch from Gen. Codrington, dated Sebastopol, Feb. 4, describes the destruction of Fort Nicholas on that day, the weather being magnificently fine. One hundred and six thousand pounds of powder were put in several mines. At 1 o'clock, P. M., the explosion took place, and a low line of ruins are all that remains of Fort Nicholas.

Rear Admiral Dundas has been appointed commander-in-chief of the Baltic fleet.

The Glasgow Herald estimates the damage inflicted by the late storm upon shipping in the Clyde and erections along the banks, at $100,000. This is irrespective of the great loss sustained in the city, suburbs and adjoining country. It is thought that the total loss in West Scotland would amount to half a million sterling.

The Rothschilds, it is said, propose taking the whole of the new loan.

Arrival of Steamship Africa.

New York, March 8.—The royal mail steamship Africa, from Liverpool, Feb. 23, arrived this afternoon at about 5 1-2 o'clock.

The Peace Conferences.—The Peace conferences were expected to open on Monday the 25th, two days after the sailing of the Africa, and great anxiety prevailed as to their issue. Ali Pachi, the Turkish Envoy, reached Marseilles on the 19th, en route for Paris, and we may now calculate there will be no hindrance to the commencement of the conferences on the 25th, although the plenipotentiaries have not yet assembled in Council. It is stated that the exigencies of Diplomatic etiquette have already been fully discussed and satisfactorily settled. The knotty question of precedence has been solved in a way which conciliates punctilio by adopting alphabetic order. By this means, Austria takes the lead, followed by France, Great Britain, Russia, Sardinia, Turkey.

The European Times of the 23d ult., says:

"The conferences, it is now believed, will practically open on Monday next, and before many days have elapsed, we shall know whether it will terminate amicably or not. Some of the German papers openly assert that Russia is playing a perfidious game, and that the apparent candor of Baron Brunow respecting Russia's inability to continue the war is part of a system to gain time to recruit her strength. These views come from a source which entitle them to attention, and if the Allies were slumbering while Russia was active, we could understand the object. But the reverse is notoriously the fact, and the speech from the Throne at the opening of the British Parliament must have convinced the Czar that we were not to be deceived by so clumsy a device. We have believed from the first that Russia was acting in good faith in her desire for peace, and we cannot help thinking that the declarations of Baron Brunow are the reflex of the views which prevail at St. Petersburg.

Not the least gratifying fact is the extreme cordiality which exists between the Emperor of the French and our government. The fear some time back was, that Louis Napoleon desired peace on terms less stringent than those on which the British government insisted, but the appearance of a recent article in the Siecle, inspired, evidently, by the highest authority, and copied into the Moniteur of Wednesday last, removes all doubt on this subject. Lord Clarendon, it is intimated in some of the letters from Paris, will insist that Nicolaieff shall be included in the arsenals on the coast of the Black Sea which are to be destroyed, and upon the concession or rejection of this proposal the question of peace or war will probably turn.

The Anglo-American Difficulties.—Nothing further has transpired respecting difficulties with America, except that the London Advertiser professes to know that Mr. Dallas has very stringent demands in regard to both the Central American and enlistment questions.

A Vienna letter to the London Times says the evident desire of the Washington government to pick a quarrel with England excites attention here, and people in office are strongly inclined to suspect the President of endeavoring to kill two birds with one stone. In plain English, his partisans are believed to have two reasons for agitating against England—the one to secure the President's re-election, the other to make a diversion in favor of Russia. Austria at present is on very decent terms with the American government, but she regards its continual endeavors to find a pretext for meddling in European affairs with such a jealous eye, that the good understanding is not likely to be of any great duration.

Russian War Preparations.—Letters from St. Petersburg and Warsaw, published in the German papers, give details of the extensive preparations made by Russia for a continuance of the war, and state that on no point has the former energy of the military departments been abated.

APPOINTMENTS.

If the Lord permit I will meet with the brethren in Newark, New Jersey, Thursday evening, March 27th, and continue with them over the following Sabbath. H. Pratt.

The Lord willing, Br. S. S. Brewer, will preach in Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, March 2.
Bro. John Couch, Sunday, March 16.
In behalf of the Committee,
F. Flanders, Chairman.

Providence permitting, we will preach at Waldo Hall, Worcester, as follows:
E. Burnham, March 16.
S. S. Brewer, March 30.

I will preach at
Richmond, (Reed Meeting House,) March 9.
J. Partridge.

If the Lord permit, I will preach at
At Brunswick, Sunday, March 16.
R. R. York.

The Lord willing, brother M. Grant will hold a meeting at Phœnix Hall, Fairhaven, Mass., on March 13th, commencing at 10 o'clock, A. M. to continue over the Sabbath.

An invitation is extended particularly to brethren and sisters residing in New Bedford, Dartmouth, at the head of the river Mattapoisett and vicinity. R. R. Gifford.

The Lord willing, Br. Burnham will preach at Salem, Sunday, March 23.
T. Hardy.

With the help and permission of our Lord and Master, I will meet the Church of Christ in Roxbury, Tuesday eve., March 18.
Lynn, Thursday eve., March 20.

If these appointments conflict with others, brethren, please write me at the Crisis Office, Boston.

A. M. Higgins.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postage 17 cents.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Dobney on Future Punishment, 75 cts.

Bible verses Tradition, $100.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.
" " 2 series, 75 cts.
Signs of the Times, 75 cts.
The End, 75 cts.
Lectures on Romanism, $1.
The Tent and the Altar, 75 cts.

Church Debts, 50 cts.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Pauline Theology,	15 cts.	single,	$10	per	100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "	"
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 "	"
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50	"
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 "	"
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Outline of the Coast,	3 "	"	1,50	"

The Destiny of the Wicked, 3 cts.
Book of Seven Seals, 3 cts.
Seven Seals, 3 cts.
The Laodicean Church or the Judgment Age, 3 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"Wellcome's Treatise on Matt., 24th and 25th chapters.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. Taylor."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J.M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

Notice of the New England Mission Tent.—Those wishing for Tent-Meetings in Illinois, Iowa, or Wisconsin, this Spring, will please write to myself or Br. W. Pratt, at this place. P. B Morgan.

Moline, Ill. Feb. 28, 1856.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Cash Receipts.

J Howe, C Perry, S Parker, D N Kidder, J M Fargarty, R Collins, Br Rogers, E Starkins, H N Duke, A Holmes, W Moore, D Kinsman, B Peterson, H Butler, O Haynes, J Bates, D Burnham, B Wheelock, J. Morgan, A Russ, A W Brown, A Brown, J Gray, J Sparks, J H Trufaunt, W Cobbath, E Dole, $1 each.

Wm M Ingham $2, M Hill $2, E Stephens $3, M L Clark $30.20, J M Withington $2.
J M Howard, A M Crabtree, 50 cts. each.
For the Poor—A Friend, $2.
Old debt of Crisis—E Dodge, $1. Whole amount, $61.04.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Br. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public.

From the Georgia Citizen.

The Close of Time.

BY SR. C. C. GIRLOW.

Ye watchmen, standing upon Zion's walls!
Ah, tell me, if ye can, "What of the night?"
What are those rays of light now faintly seen,
Emerging from the East? The meteor's glare,
The comet's trail—or is the morning near?
Portentous clouds are hovering o'er the earth,
And from afar the thunder's voice I hear.
Sadly the winds as if inspired to sing
Earth's requiem in advance, now mourning sweep
All o'er the earth.

Dread signs above, below,—
In sun and moon and stars, on land and sea,
Have met our view; while nations now perplexed,
And in distress demand; "What mean these things?"
In vain we seek from earth's wise men to know
Their solemn import; and we turn to Him,
Who knoweth all things, and who hath foretold
What shall precede the dawn of that bright day,
That clouds shall not obscure, nor night succeed;
And from his Word we learn, that earth is soon
To die—to "melt with fervent heat,"—the works
Therein to be destroyed:—The ordeal past—
The curse removed, and she shall re-appear,
Herself immortal—free from every ill,
Her offspring, now immortal, to recede
From Death's embrace.

Methinks I hear the songs,
That shall ascend from that celestial throng:
"Worthy the Lamb, who died us to redeem
By his most precious blood: worthy the Lamb!"
Long have I waited for that morning fair,
That shall restore the treasures of my heart.
O, come, thou King of kings, and Lord of lords!
And bring the keys of death—unlock the tomb,
And set the captives free—the objects of thy care.
O, change thy living saints, that we with them
May evermore in righteousness behold
Thy face and live.

My weary soul cries out,
O, come, Thou Great Emancipator! come,— "Creation groans for Thee!" With joy we hail
The many tokens of thy near approach!
We've listened long to hear thy chariot-wheels,
As down the parted sky, thou shalt descend
Thy purpose to complete. The sceptre, throne,
All of this world is thine. O, wrest it from
The power of the arch-fiend, who hath for near Six thousand years triumphant reigned. Then shall Thy will be done on earth as now in heaven.

For the Crisis.

Reasons for Believing the Midnight Cry yet Future.

BY BR. RITSON.

1. Because there is no disappointment when the true Cry is made, as there is only one tarrying time in the parable; and the Bridegroom tarries to-day as much as ever, and the time of His coming is still unknown to the virgins.

2. Because the Cry is not raised on the time of the Bridegroom's Coming, under the preaching of His return based on the great Chronological periods, but on the Event itself, the Cry being a forerunner of the Bridegroom; what the Cry really is remaims to be proved. To define what the Cry is, is the object of this present communication.

3. Because in the likeness of an Eastern wedding, the Cry was not made until there was some unmistakable external evidence that the Bridegroom was coming.

4. Because ALL the virgins slumber and sleep until the Cry is made, and the Cry wakes them up; they therefore could not make the Cry, nor help to give it, which I believe they will, in the future, until they receive the external evidence of the Bridegroom's coming.

5. Because the foolish believe as well as the wise in the true Cry; and ask the wise for their oil, or in other words, for help, advice, or prayers, because the lamps of the foolish are gone, or going out. Now common sense says, and experience bears witness, that the foolish are too busy getting money in this evil day, to be asking for oil; to be either thinking or caring much about the Lord's coming.

6. Because in the Cry the foolish are busily engaged, seeking for oil, and are trying to buy where they can, until the Bridegroom comes. There is nothing said in the parable of their relaxing their endeavors to obtain oil, or that they should again relapse into a sleepy state, after the Cry is made; they shew by their works they believe the Bridegroom is coming, and they do all their folly will let them, to try and get oil, the whole time the Cry lasts, until the Bridegroom comes. It outrages all the plain meaning of the parable, to suppose that the foolish are now doing what the evidence of our senses tells us they are not doing, unless, being wholly engaged in the affairs of this life, trading, buying, selling and getting gain, MEANS asking—seeking for oil.

7. Because in the going forth to meet the Bridegroom in 1844, in this country, there was a general expectation through the Churches that the preaching was true. Multitudes of professed Christians did actually state their belief in the End of all things nigh at hand. The passing of the time alone shewed what was in their hearts—separation followed, and those who believed these things on evidence, have endeavored in the face of all possible opposition, to hold on to their faith; but have, in spite of their honest endeavors, partially gone to sleep; while others, on the passing of the time confessed their mistakes, said they were deluded, as I have been often told of late, by Church members, have gone into the world as deep as ever, and, in the language of the parable, are represented as being sound asleep, "slumbered and slept," from which state they are all to be aroused by the Midnight Cry.

If the Midnight Cry is yet future, in what does it consist? The object of the Cry is to wake all the virgins out of sleep, and it seems to me that nothing but the opening scenes of the last great day can or will ever do it. All the preaching of time, and the best arguments on Chronology have signally failed to produce the EFFECT spoken of in the parable, or to bring the Church into a prepared state to meet their Lord. Where are we now in prophecy? I pray the Lord to let the truth shine, and help us all to understand.

As to the days being ended, I do not believe they are, for the following reasons:

1. Because the 2300 days were to bring us to the last end of the indignation; and as there are three kinds of indignation—

1. The indignation of the Lord against the wicked.

2. His indignation against His people.

3. The indignation of the wicked against the saints.

And as not one of them is yet ended, the days cannot be ended.

2. Because at the end of 1335 days all the wonders spoken of in Dan. 12: 1, 2, 3, 13, and given under oath of the angel, ver. 7, are to be finished—and they are yet in the future; and seeing it is of no use to have definite years to express an indefinite period of time, I conclude from the fact of the 430 years of bondage in Egypt having terminated on the self-same day, that the blessed God will finish His work at the close of the 2300 and 1335 years with the same precision as to dates, as He has ever done in all former dealings with His people.

To harmonize Daniel and Revelation, I consider the 1335 years bring us to the Resurrection and Marriage Supper of the Lamb. The seals, trumpets and vials are all comprised under the 2300 and 1335 years of Daniel, and are all finished before the Supper takes place. But the great matter for our consideration, is, under which of the trumpets are we now living? and where are we as to the pouring out of the vials? Let it be borne in mind, THAT ALL the trumpets will have sounded, and the vials have been poured out before the resurrection and marriage supper.

But the 7th angel sounds for years. "In the days, or years (plural) of the voice of the 7th angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished;" consequently, we must now be living under his sounding, as the years or days date back from the resurrection, and it seems consistent that it should require some years, in which the nations should be angry, to prepare them to drink of the wine of the Wrath of God. It will be seen that the 7th angel has sounded, because the past tense is used. The nations were angry; that is, the nations are angry when he begins to sound, and not after he has sounded; and the period is closed or finished.

The sounding of the 7th angel may be compared to a trumpet I might take in my hand. I put it to my lips—a sound follows—I prolong the sound for a given period—when the sound ceases. I have sounded (past.) Just so with the 7th angel—he commences his sounding with the last offer of mercy to the world, and mercy takes flight for ever from this wicked world to give place to wrath when he has finished sounding. Let it be remembered that all the trumpets are figurative—that trumpets are not actually sounded, so that we hear a sound, but they merely are used to mark off stated periods of prophecy relating to the Roman Empire.

But when does he commence sounding. I solemnly believe in 1843–4—a time long to be remembered for the Proclamation of our Lord's coming, and marking the time for the going forth to meet the Bridegroom—a time remarkable for the most perfect rejection of our Lord Jesus Christ and His coming, that has probably ever occurred since the foundation of the world; for since the 10th of the 7th month, 1844, I know by experience that the most persevering hostility has been manifested towards all those that have been honestly endeavoring to carry out their faith by their works; there has been no oppression too cruel, no scoffing insult too mean for all those who love our Savior's appearing—to receive at the hands of a wicked world. As the 7th angel's sounding introduces the third woe, we have only to recount the long catalogue of crime and bloodshed, pastilence and famine, accidents of every kind, loss of life and property in every imaginable way, attended with the most atrocious wickedness, and acts of lawless violence that ever disgraced the earth, in order to believe that we are living in the closing period of this world's history.

Now if the nations are angry during the period of time occupied by the 7th angel, what follows next in sxccession after he has sounded? "Thy wrath is come." In looking over the different places in the New Testament, where the word wrath occurs, when connected with the judgment, I find it has reference to the periods of time when God will take vengeance on the world, when there is NO INTERCESSOR. Before I go any farther on this subject, I wish the brethren to understand that there are 3 distinct offices of our Lord Jesus Christ between the crucifixion and judgment.

1. He is a High Priest after His exaltation to the right hand of the Father, to make intercession for His enemies, until they are made His footstool. Ps. 110: 1—4; Heb. 8: 1—4.

2. At the close af His Priesthood, He comes out of the Holy place and takes His seat on the white cloud, Rev. 14: 14; with a golden crown on his head, and a sharp sickle in his hand, prepared to reap the harvest of the earth. Under this symbol our Lord Jesus has laid aside His priesthood, and has received kingly authority prepared to execute the wrath of God. His wearing only a single golden crown shews that His subjects are yet under the dominion of death. He does not receive His title of King of kings, till the kings are raised in the resurrection, and that probation closes under this symbol, is seen from the prayer of the Church; "Thrust in thy sharp sickle and reap; for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe." The earth is reaped, and we are introduced to His

3d. and last office—King of kings and Lord of lords, Rev. 19: 16; Having on His head many crowns, revealed from Heaven with all His saints, to destroy them that destroy the earth. With this knowledge of our Savior's different offices, we are prepared to understand the 7 last plagues. It is generally understood that 6 are in the past and one in the future. I believe it can be proved that they are all in the future. Bearing in mind the meaning of the word wrath, and its future application, I would ask the brethren to look at these plagues in the light of the following illustration.

I take a bottle and fill it full of a certain mixture—call it wine, if you please. Now there is not room for a drop more of any other kind of liquid, because the bottle is full. If I try to add a little water, there being no room for it, it will run off, because it is already full; and if, by chance, the two liquids should mix, and part of the water be left in the bottle, the wine will escape. The mixture will then be mere wine and water. Now bear this in mind, that when the 7 last plagues are poured out, they are vials of the wrath of God; Rev. 15: 7; again, Rev. 14: 10; "If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God which is poured out WITHOUT MIXTURE (of mercy or intercession) into the cup of His indignation, &c." Now I ask the question, When does the wrath of God come? I answer, When the 7th angel has sounded, and not betore; for His wrath is come at the time when the trumpet ceases to sound. According to this view of the subject, the 7 last plagues begin when the trumpets end, which I fully believe. Again; her plagues are to come in one day; Rev. 18: 8; Death, mourning and famine. What plagues are meant here? and how many are there? I find no mention of any other than the 7 last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God, and they are poured out in one day, (one year) and at the close of that prophetic day, she is utterly burned with fire. That year, I believe, according to the proof, to be the last of the 1335, and according to what light I have from the state of things, I have all confidence will commence this Spring.

Recapitulation. The mystery of God is finished in the period of time comprised under the 7th angel's sounding, by the rejection of the truth, when he begins to sound. The nations become angry, and are prepared to drink of the wine of the wrath of God, when he has done sounding. When that period closes, Jesus Christ leaves the office of Mediator and High Priest, to execute the wrath of God; (for God's wrath is come when there is no intercessor,) takes His seat on the white cloud with kingly authority, to pour out the 7 last plagues. When that work is done, in answer to the prayer of the Church, he reaps the harvest of the earth. The time comes to reward the Prophets and those that fear His name, small and great, after the resurrection. He receives His title, King of kings, and then proceeds to destroy those that destroy or corrupt the earth. Such, I honestly believe to be the truth; and when that last year of plagues commences, and our Lord ceases to be a Mediator, we shall KNOW it. We shall then have the evidence of His coming right before our eyes. When our Lord Jesus leaves His office as Mediator to take His seat on the White cloud, the Cry will then be raised, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh"—actually on his way to earth again.

One word more on the Midnight Cry, and I have done. As there is no probation after the Son of Man takes His seat on the white cloud, in order for all the wise virgins to have time to have all their lamps trimmed and burning, I believe we shall have a sign, (the shaking of the powers of Heaven;) for the lamps of the wise virgins require to be trimmed to prepare them for the Bridegroom's return. I am therefore looking every day for the last great sign—for a sign would be of no possible benefit unless given in probation. I look for the Day of God. O wondrous day! day of deliverance for the saints, the poor, afflicted, down-trodden, despised people of God, that have been waiting for salvation—but a day of mourning for the foolish and the wicked nations of the earth.

Newport, N. H., March 2, 1856.

For the Crisis.

"The Gifts."

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Why will people persist in unbelief in relation to "the gifts" being in the Church now? Has God changed? Has the dispensation changed? Has the Church become so strong, whole, and pure that she no longer needs the "fulness of the Spirit? Let me reason with you, dear brethren. I do not contend that we should make it a point to seek for the developments of "gifts," that are not needed at present, just for the sake of seeing them developed. I do not contend that we should attach so much importance to the manifestation of them as to the manifestation of grace. I do not wish to enter into, or cause others to enter into, a wide controversy in regard to them. I only contend that we should simply believe "all the Word of God" on this, as well as on all other subjects.

What saith the Word? Did God at first set the gifts in the Church? Yes, certainly. Well, when did he take them from the Church? Was it at the close of the last week of the "seventy weeks" of Daniel's prophecy? Certainly not; for Paul was not converted till at, or after that time, and they were all in the Church in his time; for he wrote to the Church in regard to the use of them. Well, how long after his time was it before God did take them from the Church? Where is the text of Scripture that tells us? Where the history that tells us? Does not Mr. Gibbon, and do not other historians tell us that they were in the Church at the close of the second century? Does not Mr. Wesley, from the most ample and positive testimony, declare that they were in the Church till later than that, even?

Am I told, that the text in the first of Corinthians, thirteenth chapter, at the eighth verse, proves that they were not designed to remain in the Church to the consummation? Let me see. Paul says here, "whether there be prophecies, they shall fail." Does he mean they shall fail to be fulfilled? No, he does not say so. Does he mean they shall fail to be given? No, for then he could not say "there be prophecies!" What then does he mean? The Greek word for fail here, is end, or be accomplished. Have the prophecies all ended, or all been accomplished? Certainly not. Some of the most important yet remain to be accomplished. Then prophecy yet remains unfulfilled in the Church! and is it positively certain that God will never by any man or woman, concerning any subject, nation, kingdom or place, utter another prophetic word? What shall we do with some remarkable prophecies uttered in more modern times than the apostolic; such, for instance, as that of John Huss—and others equally remarkable? Shall we say such things are mesmeric, or from the Devil? "Despise not prophesyings!" But Paul tells us here, "whether there be tongues they shall cease." Does he mean people shall not speak with any tongue? Of course not. Does he mean people shall at some time only speak with one tongue? Does he mean they shall not speak in a foreign tongue by a miraculons interposition of the Holy Spirit? Doubtless the latter is his meaning. But when shall these miraculous tongues cease? Paul tells us in the very following verses they shall cease "when that which is perfect is come." And when will the "perfect" come? He says when that which is perfect is come, "I shall know as I am known!" Do we know, does Paul know now as he is known? He tells us again in this very connection now we see through a glass darkly! but then face to face! "Then"—when? Why when that which is perfect is come—when we no longer know in part—when we no longer see through a glass darkly—when that which is in part shall be done away—when the Church is perfected of course. But he tells here, that "knowledge shall vanish away." What knowledge, pray? Not the knowledge of God, certainly. Not the knowledge of holy things. What then? Why he tells us himself. Just read. Now we KNOW in PART; when that—(that what? Why that perfect knowledge) which is PERFECT is come, that which is in PART shall be DONE AWAY. How plain! Then, the knowledge that is to pass away, or vanish away, is "thee in part knowledge" which we now have! See the contrast, Prophecies, Tongues, Partial knowledge, cease: Faith, Hope, Charity, abide.

It is just as certain that faith, hope, and love will abide in the Kingdom of God, as that prophecies, tongues and partial knowledge will cease. We have, to be sure, ever concluded that faith and hope will cease in the Kingdom; but we have not one particle of Scripture, or reason for it. How shall we know that we shall forever remain in the perfect state, when we get there, only as we, with a perfect faith, believe the Word of God, which tells us so? How, in the Kingdom, shall we pray without faith? And that we shall pray, see Ps. 72: 15. Is. 65: 24. Zephaniah 3: 9. Positive testimony. And what is said of faith is just as true of hope, in this connection. The Syriac Testament reads, "faith, hope and charity are abiding!" Come, let us fling away all our old false notions and believe the Word! But to return to the point at issue. How long doth inspiration tell us that "God hath set" the "gifts" in the Church for? Let us read.

Ephesians 4: 11—13. "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors; and some, teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ. TILL WE ALL COME IN THE UNITY OF THE FAITH, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a PERFECT MAN, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." Are we all in the unity of the faith, now? I guess not, hardly! Have we come unto a perfect man? Who can make bold to say such an impious thing? Have we yet come to the fulness of Christ? And yet here the Apostle declares that God hath given Prophets till then, as well as pastors, teachers and Apostles.

But I shall be asked, does not this prove too much? Does it not prove that we have Apostles also till the perfect time. To this I reply. 1. God has never given us to understand that he chose more than twelve Apostles, and these he chose himself. It seems he did not accept the choice of the eleven after the passion; for he subsequently made choice of Paul instead of Matthias, whom they chose.

2. These twelve had peculiar power to remit and retain sins, and confer the Holy Spirit.

3. Whatever these twelve, or any one or more of them have written, are the commandments of God. See 1st. Cor. 14: 37. And hence the authority of the twelve Apostles still remains in the Church in all its fulness, in their writings, till the end. So that it may with propriety be said, God hath set them in the Church now. But with other "gifts" the case is entirely different.

1. The nu[illegible] of other "gifts" is unlimited.

2. Other "gifts" have not, by express command of God, become standing authority in the Church.

3. No others are empowered to remit and retain sins but the twelve; and consequently, cannot claim the right to command by the same standing written authority.

4. Since the written authority of the Apostles is unchanging with circumstances, there is no need of a succession of men, since the twelve continue good in the virtue of the office to the end.

But indeed, if this reasoning be not considered good, the Word remains. And I, would rather take the ground of the believers in Scotland, "that God continues the Apostolic succession in a modified sense," than to throw away the good things provided for us. But let us look to the Book once more. In the 12th chapter of 1st Corinthians, Paul shews that the Church is the mystical body of Christ, and the individual saints are the "members in particular." Now He argues that one class of gifts in one department makes a foot, in another department another class makes a hand—and so on, an eye, and the like. Just read the chapter. Now, if the logic of the Apostle is true, I ask is not the mystical body of Christ dismembered, if part of these "gifts" or members are absent? Ay, and it is the grief of my soul that it is so. My dear brethren, you contend very earnestly that some of the gifts are in the Church yet; why not all? You say the gift of teaching is in the Church. The gift of governments is in the Church. The gift of helps is in the Church. The gift of healing is in the Church—for if the gift of healing is not in the Church, what shall we do with the instruction of James about the prayer of faith to heal the sick. The gift of faith also must be in the Church, or His instruction falls to the ground.

Now why contend that only part of them are there? But you ask, what is the use of tongues? Let me ask, what was ever the use of tongues? Do you say that unbelieving foreigners might hear the Gospel in their own language? I reply, are there not many unbelieving foreigners now that need to hear it? and would it not be well if the Church lived so as to receive power at once, to speak to them, rather than to spend many years to acquire their language, and then obtain it but imperfectly? But you say, "they can learn it now without this interposition." Well, and could they not have studied and learned it then? Do you say the gift of tongues was conferred then to confirm the disciples? Well, and do the disciples now need no confirming? Tearful observation teaches us they do.

But let us read what inspiration says the gift of tongues was for. 1 Corinthians 14: 22. "Wherefore tongues are for a SIGN, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not." A sign of what to them that believe not? Why a sign that God is in the midst of His people, and that His truth is with them, and that they—the wicked—should believe, &c. Say, do not the wicked need such a sign now? Read 1st Corinthians, 14: 21. There you have the whole story written, multum in parvo.

But you say, "people counterfeit the gifts. The Mormons talk with tongues, and Spiritualists talk with tongues, and mesmerised persons talk with tongues, and persons claiming to be Adventists talk with tongues, who neither live right, nor shew a right spirit." That is all true. And so wicked men pray, preach, sing, read the Bible, &c. What then? Shall we leave off? By the fruits we know them. If a person talks with tongues, who is sour, denunciatory, exclusive, dogmatical, unkind, uncharitable, immoral, or unchristian in any form, be aware of such an one; but do not class lambs with goats. Come, tell me where, when, and what for, God has taken these gifts—part of them—out of the Church, and I will listen meekly; but you must give us Book, Book, Book! We care but little what you do or do not believe, so far as proof is concerned, we want THUS SAITH THE LORD.

I wish to say in this connection, I have no sympathy with the recent developments of tongues among Adventists. It is not in accordance with the Book in several important particulars. But while I would cry beware ot mesmerism on the one side, I would say beware of unbelief on the other.

Let us like meek, simple-hearted children, sit down at Jesus' feet, and receive all the blessed truth. I close by saying I feel lonely, sad and pilgrim-like, part of my time, at least; not because I have not the comforts of life—not because I have not a pleasant and happy family—not because I have not many kind, and dear brethren and sisters to visit and rejoice with, but because I long, long, long, for Jesus to come and put us right, and make all things new.

Eld. [illegible] Brewer

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 19, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 31.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF

JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

The "Seven Times."

BY B. P. HILDRETH.

No. 4.

Says Nahum, ch. 1: 7, "The Lord is good, a strong hold in the day of trouble; and He knoweth them that put their trust in Him." v. 10, "Now will I break his yoke from off thee, and burst thy bonds in sunder." This was true of Hezekiah, king of Judah, who served the Lord with all his heart; and God did break the yoke of the king of Assyria from his neck, and he (Hezekiah) left his kingdom independent. V. 14, "And the Lord hath given a commandment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown: out of the house of thy Gods will I cut off the graven image, and the molten image; I will make thy grave, for thou art vile."

Is any further argument necessary to convince any candid mind, that the prophecy of Nahum was, in a great measure, fulfilled in the destruction of Senacherib in the house of his gods and also of all the flower of his empire, the very next year after it was delivered? He is fully described, "a wicked counsellor;" his death, his images, his vile character, and his lack of future posterity; "no more of thy name be sown;" though the utter end was left for Cyaxeres and Napopolazzar to accomplish.

Esarhaddon, the son of Senacherib, succeeded him ten years, whose death ended the line; (Hist. of the world;) and Mardok Empadus or Merodak-baladan, became sole monarch of the Assyrian empire, B. C. 702. And his son must have been king when Menasseh was taken; and I think those who read the description of what he did after he returned from Babylon, 2 Chron. ch. 33, will be led to believe that he must have had more time than three years to do all that is there recorded; so that he must have been taken in an earlier year of his reign than his 40th. But the final events will soon show us "that God hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of our habitation;" for we have found the word which He has spoken by many of his prophets, to have been immediately fulfilled.

Thus we have traced the lines of the Babylonian and Assyrian kings for several centuries, and some of their cotemporary prophets, together with the kings of Judah and Israel, from B. C. 829, to the end; and in less than two centuries and a half, we follow them weeping to Babylon, and leave them all there; as God, by his prophets had foretold. This is the most reasonable and probable view of the Assyrians, to my mind, that can be presented; and the most in accordance with Scripture; but I know there will be ojections to this view; for I know that Rollin differs in some things; but he takes the Apocrypha for authority, and I have no confidence in it. I know that the Apocryphal book of Judith mentions the eighteenth year of Nebuchadonosor; but I find no other history that gives him any more than thirteen years, unless quoted from that book. The names of the prophets that were cotemporary with those kings of Judah and Israel are on the margin of the tables; whose denunciatory words were fulfilled upon Israel and Judah, and upon Nineveh and Babylon.

Hosea prophesies against Israel in the days of Jeroboam. "Yet a little while and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel. * * I will utterly take them away. * * Give ear, O, Israel, and hearken, O house of the king, for judgment is toward you, ye shall eat unclean things in Assyria." These prophecies all had a primary fulfilment in about seventy-five years, when the kingdom of Israel ceased; the nation was removed to Assyria, and the king slain with a sword.

Jeroboam was great grandson to Jehu, whom God had appointed to avenge the blood of his prophets and the house of Ahab and Jezebel. But as he and his posterity delighted in blood, and imitated the house of Ahab, they were entitled to the same destruction. But many of Hosea's words will ultimately be accomplished at the day of judgment.

Amos prophesied of that earthquake which is mentioned in Zachariah 14: 5, two years before it occurred, in the days of Uzziah; and foretold the death of Jeroboam by the sword, which were doubtless fulfilled in less than three years. Many of those prophetic promises, if obedient, and denunciations against the children of Israel, if disobedient, (which were quoted in the beginning of this article,) were strikingly accomplished, that have not been mentioned; such as the following, "and five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight." Did not Gideon and his three hundred men put more than an hundred and thirty thousand to flight, unarmed but by the sword of the Lord? Again, "ye shall sow your seed in vain; for your enemies shall eat it." This was fulfilled when the Midianites came up against them and destroyed the increase of the earth; when they had sown it, "and left no sustenance for Israel," Judges 6: 3, 4. Again, "I will send wild beasts among you, which shall destroy your children." This was done when those wicked children insulted Elisha, "and there came forth two she bears out of the wood, and tore forty and two children of them," 2 Kings, 2: 24, "Your highway shall be desolate." The song of Deborah, Judges, 5: 4, contains a fulfilment.

Many more might be presented that have been with equal precision accomplished, but I forbear; for this article has already reached an unusual length; but such prophecies, so strikingly, and sometimes miraculously accomplished, show the work of God; that they were accomplished, "not by the bow, nor by the sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen;" but that the Lord is engaged in the defence and fulfilment of His word; and as we have seen so many of the prophecies which relate principally to the things of this world fulfilled, we look with all confidence to see others accomplished which relate to the eternal destiny of mankind.

At the close of our chronological table, we left Babylon, "the glory of the Chaldean's excellency; the lady of kingdoms;" but for her great oppression of the people of God, she was overthrown in the short space of seventy years; as Jeremiah the prophet had foretold, ch. 25: 12–14, when the golden head fell, the silver breast and arms fell; and the brazen belly and thighs after three centuries, fell; and Rome, "that great city," reigned "over the kings of the earth," both under her pagan and papal dynasties. And now, what remains of that image but the tips of the toes, which the speedy course of time will soon, very soon cause to fall? when He whose right it is to reign, will, in an unthought-of moment, make His appearance, to the utter discomfiture of the image and all its appendages, as Daniel, the prophet, has told us, ch. 2, "Thus saith the Lord: Remove the diadem; and take off the crown! I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until He come, whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ezek. 21: 27.

This is doubtless in the actual process of fulfilment; we have seen the great image that has trodden under foot the people of God for so many ages, now only existing in its very last extremities; (this cannot be blotted out by poor, puny, opposing man;) the "four horns that have scattered Judah, Israel and Jerusalem," seen in a vision by Zachariah, ch. 1: 18–21, are the same powers that are represented by the different metals of the image; and have not the four carpenters begun to fray them away?

"The word of the Lord came unto me saying, Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by tresspassing grievously, then will I stretch out my hand upon it, and will break the staff of the bread thereof, and I will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it. Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, they should deliver but their own souls by their righteousness; saith the Lord God. How much more when I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword and the famine, the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast." The above was partially fulfilled in the desolations of Jerusalem, by the king of Babylon; but how much more terrific will these four sore judgments be, when God in his wrath shall hurl them on the devoted heads of an apostate Church.

"O, Zion, that dwellest with the daughters of Babylon, deliver thyself!" "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues!" "For He will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness; because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth." The time has now come when the most startling prophecies are sounding in our ears; and who can but take up a lamentation and weep for the unparalleled delusions in the Church; "and sigh and cry for the abominations that are done in the land." "The destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he has gone forth from the place, to make thy land desolate; and thy cities shall be laid waste without an inhabitant," Jer. 4: 7. "For behold, in those days and at that time when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem. I will assemble the nations and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat; and I will plead with them there for my people, and for my heritage Israel; whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land. Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; prepare war; wake up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near; let them come up; Beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong. Assemble yourselves and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together, round about. Thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord, amen. Put ye in the sickle for the harvest is ripe; come get you down for the press is full, the vats overflow, for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision! for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision. The sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining. The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; the heavens and the earth shall skake; but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel." Glory to God most High! "So shall ye know that I am the Lord, dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain. Then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no stranger pass through her any more."

These promises, (though interspersed with denunciations of coming wrath,) are infinitely precious to every believer. O, who would not be numbered among the living in Jerusalem? Who would not belong to His household, and feel that their names are in the "Book of Life?" "The Lord shall suddenly come to His temple, and who can abide that day?" Thus saith the Lord, "I will utterly consume all things from off the Land; I will consume man and beast; I will consume the fowls of heaven and the fishes of the sea, and the stumbling blocks with the wicked; I will cut off man from the land saith the Lord. Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey; for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy," Zeph. 1: 2, 3, and 3: 8.

O, backslidden Church, who are these stumbling-blocks, over whom millions will pitch into destruction? Who hath covered you with the cold spray of death? If God spared not His chosen people, "take heed lest he spare not thee."

B. P. HILDRETH.

Millenarianism.

We present our readers to-day with another extract from Pres. Lord's Essay:—

"The fall of man was perfectly evident, beforehand, to the mind of God. Upon the occurrence of that event, he manifests himself with the assurance that its natural; that is, its stated penal consequences reaching down through all the ages, should be overruled to the higher illustration of his glory as a moral governor, in the work of redemption by Jesus Christ, the ultimate dejection of evil spirits, and 'the perdition of ungodly men.' The transmitted plague of sin foreseen to become infectious and overspreading, during the antediluvian age, having reached its natural crisis in the time of Noah, and resulted in the almost total destruction of the race; again he is manifested in the deliverance of that righteous patriarch, and the subsequent sequestering of a peculiar nation to become a depository of the true religion. The general apostasy of that favored people—the subject of continual prophecy and warning from the time of Abraham,—having, in its season, provoked judicial vengeance, and resulted in the overthrow of the Jewish commonwealth, again God is manifested incarnate, and sends out the Gospel to the uncircumcised nations dispersed from Babel. In like manner the evangelization of the gentile nations; the ingathering of churches over the civilized world, and among barbarians; the anti-Christian apostasy of the states and governments of the earth; the dying out of churches in one land, and their rising in another; the circuit of the Gospel from East to West, till it should be preached in all the world, for a witness to all the nations; the universal prevalence of unbelief and wickedness in the last days of this more glorious dispensation; the consequent general overturning that would ensue, at Christ's second coming; and his assumption of universal government; all stand out as naturally related parts of a comprehensive scheme, challenging the scrutiny of the world, and requiring, upon the highest pains and penalties, its recognition of the moral providence of God. The whole series is unique, consistent, similar; a series of degradations, destructions and new creations, by a supernatural power; and not, as represented by the atheistical philosophies, a course of natural development of the earth and man into a perfect state. But out of the fallen humanity, the Kingdom which God sets up and preserves, through all the ages, is not of this world; for the world passeth away. The leaven of grace pervades not the world, but the ransomed Church, while the world hastens to its successive judgments. Successive ages of miraculous revelations and Divine interpositions, in preparation of the Church for its destined state of glory follow each other, in connexion with corresponding supernatural judgments upon guilty nations, till the last ordained scene of Christ's second appearing to execute more signal vengeance upon wicked men; to create all things new; and introduce the ages of ages of glory.

"It is also worthy of more distinct notice, that the facts and events prophesied of, in fulfilment of the Divine covenant and promise, have now become, for the most part, veritable history. That is, these facts and events have successively taken place, literally and circumstantially, as foretold and recorded in the miraculous revelations, coincident with all secular history and tradition, and with various natural phenomena, for the instruction and warning of the world. There is, consequently, ground of unhesitating assurance, that the facts and events predicted in Scripture, as yet future, and known not to have taken place, will, in like manner, take place, in their appointed times, literally and circumstantially, as foretold. This history of God's moral providence is simple and intelligible as any history of his merely natural providence, having the advantage of inspired testimony with a supernatural authentication. The creation of the world and of man; the fall; the promise of Christ; the calling and election of a Church—its preservation in a state of holiness and acceptance with God; the wickedness of the unregenerate part of mankind increasing and extending till the desolation of the earth by the flood—are history. The preservation of the righteous Noah and his family; the partitioning of the earth among the sons of Noah; the curse and stigma of the guilty Ham; the political and social blessing of Shem and Japhet; the corresponding different paths, localities and conditions of their several respective races upon the re-peopled earth; the confusion of speech at Babel, and the subsequent dispersion of the presumptuous and rebellious people; the call of Abraham; the separation of the Jewish nation, and the settlement of their theocratic government; their backslidings, captivities and returns; the universal wickedness of the surrounding nations; and their successive destructions, all according to the supernatural word of God—are history. The decline of the Jews in knowledge and virtue; the ceasing of vision among them; their ultimate general apostasy; the miraculous overthrow of their economy and commonwealth; and their dispersion among all the Gentile nations—are history. The coming of Christ and its attendant signs from Heaven; the settlement of the Christian Church; its incipient corruptions, through the anti-Christian power already beginning to work in the days of the Apostles; the rapid spread of heresy and false doctrine under the man of sin; the idolatrous union of Church and State; the consequent secularization of Christianity through a long period of despotic rule; the subjugation of faith and knowledge; the reigns of terror; the persecutions of the saints; the era of dredulity, submission, ignorance and idolatry—are history. The partial discomfiture of the anti-Christian powers, and the revival of true religion, at the era of the Reformation; the rise of a new anti-Christian power in the reformed Churches, as in the days of the Apostles; the corruptions of the reformed religion; the flood of rationalism and infidelity that has rolled over the lands of Luther and Calvin, and of Christendom in general; the reaction of of Romanism and despotism, and the remarkable agitations of the recent Protestant period, all are history;—the history of conflict between Christ and Anti-christ for this lost world. In all this history we see nothing of development and progress except of the mysterious plan of Providence in preserving the elect, and permitting the wickedness of the world to unfold itself in now and more subtle forms and types of unbelief answerable to the prophetic accounts of the last and perilous times of the Christian age. So far is humanity, in its natural course and progress, from developing itself into a perfect state, according to the philosophic theories of the times, and the corresponding tendencies of socialistic and philanthropic reformers and agitators in general; and so far is the world from approaching its converted state, agreeably to the speculative theologians who have shaped their views and measures to these philosophic theories; it is historically and certainly evident, that, hitherto, every tribe, nation and race of men upon the earth, a few righteous men alone excepted, have successively declined into greater wickedness; and that, at this present time, Christianity is spreading in the world, in no proportion to the increase of the wicked population of the globe, and the spread of atheistic, or pantheistic, or polytheistic unbelief. It is evident, and the fact is sometimes inconsiderately and inconsistently admitted by such speculative reasoners themselves, that the rapid development of our present worldly civilization is more and more alienating society from God, and making it more difficult for his servants to preserve themselves in the simplicity of their faith. Whatever advantage Christianity gains, through its comparatively few and inconsiderable friends, and the expansion and diffusion of knowledge in general, as it does gain great absolute advantage, and more fully asserts and vindicates the government of God, it gains no relative advantage, but the contrary. The spirit of the fallen world converts the same means of advancement and power into instruments of more refined and wide-spreading licentiousness and unbelief, so that goodness bears no proportion to wickedness, in view of any sound ethical or evangelical standards, in the most cultivated and Christian nations; and these nations, because of their accumulated errors and vices, are, at this moment, reeling to and fro, and staggering like a drunken man. The Scripture is so far, literally fulfilled.

"Wherefore the Millenarian holds it to be conclusive and certain as any other doctrine, or matter of faith can be:—and they are perfectly certain because standing on the sure word of God;—that, inasmuch as in all the past ages wickedness has increased in every nation, and under every successive dispensation of religion, and more offensively to God in proportion to the increased light and importance of each succeeding revelation, till he has seen fit to overturn and destroy the existing organization of things, by extraordinary natural visitations, and by supernatural deluges, and storms of fire and brimstone from Heaven, and thus has made room for higher and more glorious dispensations, according to His everlasting covenant, so the fallen race will be likely to manifest still more its rebelliousness and guilt, as prophecy declares; and he will consequently do, as he has done in the past, so also in the future, as he expressly says he will do, in executing judgment, not upon particular nations only, but the aggregate and collective world, and setting up the promised universal reign of Christ. There is the strongest natural probability that God will carry on his government, in the future, as he has carried it on in the past ages, since no reason exists in the nature of God, or the nature of man, why it should be otherwise; and when he says, distinctly and literally, as he does say in His word, that he will so carry it on, we are bound to believe him—all the wishes, or imaginings, or speculative reasonings, of bad or good men, and all occasional different phenomena of nature or society to the contrary notwithstanding. We have no right to conclude or imagine, against the ordinary laws of language, the rules of logic, the analogies of history, and the general course and tendency of events, that his distinct and literal declarations may be subjected to a mythical interpretation; or that he will act, in his future government, contrarily to the methods which he has certainly observed in the past. When Christ affirms, distinctly and positively, as He does affirm, that He will come, manifestly and visibly, a second time, from Heaven, upon the full ingathering of his elect among the Gentile nations, and will then destroy the anti-Christian nations, judicially, as he destroyed the ancient Pagan and Jewish nations, and will deluge the sinful and accursed earth with fire, as in old time, with water, and miraculously make it, thenceforth, the purified abode of righteousness and peace, under his universal reign; that He will bring with him his people, of the past ages, raised from the dead, to preside with Him, over this restored scene, for a thousand years; we are as much bound to believe that prophetic affirmation of His kingly age, as the historic record of His first advent, and His priestly age. We have no more right to suppose, contrary to the literal Scripture, or the figurative and symbolic Scriptures, manifestly setting forth more impressively the literal facts, that the world, in general, will be developed into a perfect state, than that the antediluvian world, or any nations of past ages—Egypt, Assyria, Persia, Babylon, Greece, Rome, Jerusalem, were so developed, which nations are now known, historically and certainly, to have been subverted and destroyed. If Christ is known, historically, to have been manifested—the Angel of the covenant, after the fall of man, and to have set up, supernaturally, an elect Church upon the earth: if the same Heavenly Messenger again appeared, to preserve, supernaturally, His elect, in the time of general destruction by the flood; and again, in proper humanity, at Jerusalem, to save the elect among the Jews from the overthrow of that apostate and doomed people; if, after His visible return to Heaven, he sent forth His Spirit with signs and wonders, and diverse miracles, to bring in the chosen remnant of the children of the covenant, and His elect among the Gentiles; and if, upon their complete ingathering, and the greater apostasy and corruption of the anti-Christian part of mankind, and the almost absolute extinction of the true faith, it is affirmed that He will then appear, visibly, a second time, and achieve, personally, His final triumph, during another, the judicial age, we are bound to give, equally, the history and the prophecy, our literal and unquestioning belief. There is no reason in the nature of the case, none in the laws of language, none in theology, or analogy, or history, or experience, why they should be subjected to a different interpretation. On the contrary, to set up our speculations and theories of a millennium in distinction from these logical, inductive, and historical conclusions, or in opposition to them, and to put, accordingly, an allegorical and mythical interpretation upon the Holy Scriptures, as the modern Churches have done for the last hundred and fifty years, and are now doing, in accordance with the merely imaginative and fictitious philosophies of the schools, is infinitely dishonorable to the word of God, and dangerous to the souls of men. The curious, romantic, discordant, and mostly unintelligible literature, which, on this and other related subjects of the Bible, has now spread itself from the great centres of theological instruction, over the whole Christian world, and has nearly superseded the primitive and reformed theology, and has controlled the social and political movements of the nations, producing the agitations, destructions and confusions which now exist, is [illegible] to the [illegible] and is the most remarkable sign of the [illegible]ed apostasy of the last times.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, MARCH 19, 1856.

Reply to Sr. Parkhurst's Question on Matt. 27 : 52, 53.

The passage reads: "And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many."

I do not know on what particular point you desire information, or that I should be able to give any new light on the subject. I think it evident, however, that in this case some of the saints (probably some who had recently died, for they seem to have been known as saints,) had a literal resurrection after the resurrection of Christ. What became of them afterward, we are not informed, and it would be impossible to conjecture in the absence of all divine testimony.

It is evident this occurrence did not constitute the first resurrection, because John, who wrote the book of Revelation long after this event, saw the first resurrection take place at a point of time which was then in the distant future, for it stands in connection with the thousand years which will be acknowledged by all to be subsequent to the time of John.

It is also evident that these resurrected saints did not constitute the 144,000 spoken of in Rev. 7, as some contend; for before John had his vision of the seals, he was introduced to the celestial scenery thus: "After this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven; and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be HEREAFTER," Rev. 4: 1.

In chs. 4th and 5th, various heavenly objects are presented to his view illustrating the worship of angels and men, and in ch. 6th, six of the seals are presented which, of course, as all will allow, were then future. Then, in ch. 7, between the opening of the sixth and seventh seal, the sealing process of the 144,000 commences which shows conclusively, I think, that this number could have no reference to a company of saints that had been resurrected and immortalized before John wrote the Revelation.

Again; neither could it, as it appears to me, have reference to the 144,000 of Rev. 14th; for that company will be generally admitted to be the same as that presented in ch. 6.

The object of this event seems to have been to enstamp the impress of the mission of Christ. It placed, as it were, the divine seal upon the doctrine of the resurrection through Christ; and was designed, doubtless, to establish the faith of the disciples in one of the great, central ideas of the whole Gospel economy, viz., the resurrection of the saints to immortality, as connected with the resurrection of Jesus from the dead.

The Bible Union Reporter.—The publishers of the Bible Union Reporter will receive our thanks for three of their monthly nos.

This is a work issued in an elegant quarto form of 24 pp. Typography most excellent. Price $1 a year. It is designed to publish the new translation of the Scriptures "as rapidly as they can be prepared for the press," also critical notes, and "important biblical information relating to the progress of pure versions of the word of God."

The three first nos. contain 14 chs. of the Book of Job, with the common version, the revised version, and the Hebrew text. For the most part, the phraseology of the revised Scriptures is the same as in our common version; but in some portions there is quite a difference. E. g. Job 14: 10, reads thus: "But man dies, and wastes away; yea, man expires, and where is he?" v. 13, "O that thou wouldst hide me in the under-world," &c.

Should any of our readers wish for a copy, direct to "Wm. H. Wyckoff, Cor. Sec. or C. A. Buckbee, Assist. Treasurer, 350 Broome St., New York."

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. M. M. Markham.

Middle Haddam, Middlesex County, Ct. 1856.

Dear Br. Merriam:—My heart rejoices to have the privilege once more of responding to the calls of the Crisis; for its weekly visits cheer and strengthen me on my journey through this vale of tears, and this hour of temptation which has come on all the world to try them, and the time of trouble into which we are entering! O, who shall be able to stand? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, saith the inspired Scripture.

We need to search our hearts daily to see if every motive is pure, and to guard against all selfishness; for it will lead to idolatry, which will forever shut us out of the Kingdom of God. O, that we had these words written on our door-posts, that we might read it as we go out and as we come in—"Little children, love one another." O that we would live it out in our lives; then the enemy could not make so much division amongst the little flock.

We are coming close to the closing scenes of this world's history, and should we grudge to give a little to spread this sublime truth? Nay, we will consider it a great privilege to do so. It is the most glorious message that ever saluted the ears of mortal man.

Dear Brother, you are honored with a far greater message than John the Baptist; then take courage, lift up your head and rejoice, for you will have many stars in your crown of rejoicing in the day of the coming of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Yours, looking for the Consolation of Israel. M. M. Markham.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. E. C. Warner.

Salisbury, Ct., Feb. 23, 1866.

Br. Merriam:—I have been thinking some time of writing a letter for the Crisis; but have felt that perhaps there were those who might be more edifying to the readers of the Crisis, as it is my first attempt at writing for any paper. I like the Crisis very much. It comes weekly laden with meat in due season. It is truly refreshing to the soul filled with the love of God, to read the heart-cheering, soul-stirring pieces that fill its columns: I see no contentions, no strife fill its pages; but on the contrary, all is love, and harmony, as it should be; for we know that a spirit of contention and strife will never enter the New Earth.

I feel very thankful to our Heavenly Father for preserving my life to see these days; for as Daniel, the Prophet, says, blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the end of the days—and surely do we not live in a time fraught with the deepest interest—a time when everything seems to indicate the speedy coming of Christ? Truly, if any one ever had reason to be thankful to the Lord for the many blessings imparted unto them, it is my poor unworthy self.

Some five or six years ago, at the age of nine years, I was brought very low with the third relapse of scarlet fever. I was unconscious for several hours. My eyes were set; and I had well nigh yielded up my breath, and was apparently in a dying state, when, as it happened, in the Providence of God, that dear servant of God, our beloved Br. Mathewson, happened to be at our house. He was asked by my parents, as an Elder of the Church, to obey the command of James 5: 15, 16, and the Lord, ever true to His word, fulfilled His promise; and from that hour I began to amend. I have often wondered why it was I was raised, as it were, from a bed of death. Then I have thought, perhaps it was to show the world what great things the Lord was able to do, even in these days when so many think the gifts have departed from the Church. I know they have, in a great measure, departed—but why is it? Is it not because there is a want of faith in the Church? They have departed from the faith once delivered to the saints. Since the Lord raised me up from that bed of sickness, I have felt as though I ought to love and serve Him with all my might. I loved His word and Christian society better than aught else, although I did not come out and make a public profession of religion until last fall, when I was buried with Christ by baptism, by the hand of Br. Mathewson, and so I went on my way rejoicing, as did one of old.

I love my dear Savior—praise His holy name; and I am determined by the grace of God to serve Him while here I sojourn, so that He may own me for one of His children, when He comes, to be admired by all them that believe. O how much grace and wisdom we need to live right in the sight of God and the world, in these perilous times, when everything upon the right and the left, seems calculated to draw our minds, from the one great object—our souls salvation. May we be perfect even as our Father in Heaven is perfect. Then when our Saviour comes, we shall have a crown of glory that fadeth not away—a home in the New Earth.

How sweet to the lonely pilgrim is the name of home. Our earthly home is an endearing name, but what is it compared to that eternal, permanent home that never changes? There, in that blissful abode, all will be joy; no more shall we hear the sigh or see the falling tear; for we are told God shall wipe away all tears from off all faces. No more shall we be obliged to say that sad word, farewell. Here we meet and part; there we shall meet never to part. O how sublime the thought, to think of the endless pleasures we shall be permitted to enjoy throughout eternity.

The thoughts of such amazing bliss,
Should constant joys create.

From your young friend in the hope of the Gospel, E. C. Warner.

We are happy to receive the above letters from our young friends. I am reminded of the expression of the Apostle, "let no man despise thy youth."—Ed.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. D. D. Warner.

Salisbury, Ct., Feb. 23, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—Will you permit a few lines to appear in the columns of the Crisis from a youth of sixteen years? A year ago last summer, I lost my health, and was not able to labor much for a considerable time. I had ample opportunity for reflection. I saw myself a sinner, and that I must have help from God, or perish. And as I thought my complaint was a disease of the heart, and that I was liable to die at any moment, it behooved me to make my peace with God before it was too late. One day my parents being absent, I was taken worse, and thought perhaps I might not live until night. I asked my sister who was younger than myself, to pray for me, for I believed she was a Christian, and I thought God would hear her prayers. I cried, Lord, save, or I perish: the Lord bade the rough sea be calm, and I felt peace in God. My sister told me she felt the Lord had taken away my health to save my soul. She said she could not but rejoice, while before the Lord in prayer, that He had brought me to see and feel my frailty.

In a few days the tempter came with great power, telling me the Lord would not forgive me, I was so great a sinner; but, thank God, through the instruction of my dear Parents, (who have been looking for the blessed hope these many years,) I was led to believe God's word for myself; and when He says "they that come unto me, with broken and contrite hearts, I will not turn them empty away;" still further: "They that seek me early, shall find me;" blessed be God; who can want a firmer foundation than the word of God to plant their feet upon? If we stand there and obey Him, He will hold us up, and keep us safe amid the wreck of matter, and the crash of worlds.

I believe the great day of the Lord is near; and in view of that belief, let me say a word to the young; you, who are trembling around the cross. Come to Jesus, and put not off the day of repentance until the door of mercy is closed—for then you will seek in vain. And you who claim that you have not much feeling on the subject, do not wait for feeling; your judgment is convinced that you ought to be a Christian; go on and take up your cross and do every known duty, and God will give you feeling enough. What saith the Apostle? "His servants ye are, to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey." Do not be "Ashamed of Jesus, that dear Friend,

On whom your hopes of Heaven depend."

I received the ordinance of baptism from the hands of our dear Br. Mathewson, last fall, since that time my health has been gradually improving.

Yours in hope of Eternal Life at the Resurrection. Darwin D. Warner.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. B. P. Manning.

Goffstown, N. H., March 11, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—I can truly say that I feel like a pilgrim and a stranger here in this wicked world; but the End is near—I thank the Lord for the truth that the Brethren are laying before the Church, through the Crisis at this time; I can truly say that, in my judgment, it is meat in due season to the household of faith.

O how clearly we can perceive the fulfilment of prophecy at this time. We are told in Dan 11: 45, and 12: 1, that "He shall plant the tabernacles of His palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him. And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people." From this we learn that the time of trouble is to commence, and then God's people are to be delivered—all that are found written in the Book.

Dear Brethren, I believe Napoleon is to fulfil the last verse of the 11th ch. of Dan. What blessed harmony it makes with the ending of the 2300 days or years of the 8th ch. and 14th verse. I am settled and grounded that the month Nisan of the present year will wind up the 2300 years from the going forth of commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem. This, I believe, is the starting point. I thank the Lord for truth. There are a few brethren in this section who firmly believe that '56 is the true time of deliverance for God's people.

My dear Brethren and Sisters, let us, one and all, read the 101st Ps., and come to the same conclusion that David did. Let us follow the example of Christ and His Apostles. If we do, it will be well with us. Brethren, let us remember the words of Paul to his Galatian Brethren, ch. 5: 1; "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not again entangled with the yoke of bondage." But, let us keep the Spirit of Christ. If we do, we shall have the fruits of the same, which are "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; Against such there is no law. And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." 2 Tim. 2: 11; "It is a faithful saying; for if we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him; if we suffer, we shall also reign with Him; if we deny Him, He also wil deny us."

O, my Dear Brethren, can it be possible, that we are so near home? Jesus, when He went away, told the disciples that, "if He went away, He would come again, and receive them unto himself." What a blessed promise. Well, He is coming. Yes, I believe He is coming with my whole soul: and I feel, to say with Bro. John, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Amen.

Love to all the saints,
Benj. P. Manning.

For the Crisis.

Meeting at Shipton. C. East.

Br. Merriam:—Agreeably to notice in the Crisis, Elder Edwin Burnham came and fulfilled his appointment in this place, and closed his labor among us, for the present, on the Lord's day, 24th Feb., having in eight days delivered fifteen lectures to the largest and most attentive congregations that have, as yet, been witnessed in this place; each lecture generally about two hours in length, during which time the audience continued in perfect order and sobriety, listening with manifest anxiety to hear and understand the "word of the Kingdom," in all its relative bearings. The doctrines of the Bible were presented by Elder B., in perfect harmony with the views, and stated ministrations of our much respected Brother, Elder John Porter, the officiating Pastor of the Church in Shipton; and therefore the Church were the more understandingly fed and nourished by the word through his labor. A deep and extensive impression, I think, has been made upon some of the best minds, that we handle the elements of the last crowning message that God will ever send to men in this dispensation. And when unprejudiced men of the world in Shipton, want the truth, I believe that they know where and among what people to find it. And nothwithstanding all our time mistakes, they give us credit for a large amount of truth not to be had elsewhere; and this fact never more irresistibly forced its way through the crowd than in the course of the late series of lectures. Br. Burnham ranged the great field of Revelation, proving at every step that "God means what He says, and says what He means." Never did truth more illustriously shine in all the sublimity of its native grandeur. Good has been done. The Church has been much refreshed, and made stronger in the "faith once delivered to the saints." Some have professed their faith in Jesus to return as King, and to reign in righteousness, and are waiting an opportunity to be baptized. While the convinced many will surely stand speechless in the day of God.

The Gospel of the Kingdom must be preached, and the Church in Shipton has ever held itself responsible for its share of the expense. We have never sent the working servant of the Lord away at the close of his toil with a "God bless you, Bro., be sure and come again," to pay his travelling fare, and buy his children bread. O no. Though our meeting was an expensive one, on account of the long distance that Brother Burnham had to come, and then to return directly back again, the Church and congregation behaved most nobly in meeting all expenses connected. At the close of this banquet in the Lord's house, some three or four hundred persons stood upon their feet to give expression of their wishes for Elder Burnham's speedy return to Shipton. And we hope he will visit us again next June. Let the Lord be praised for his manifold blessings to the Church.

Your Brother in Christ,
George Bangs.

Shipton, C. E. March 12, 1856.

For the Crisis.

He Will Come.

By Edwin Burnham.

What though days, weeks, months and years yet continue to roll on? What though saints sigh, mourn, grieve and cry? What though men and devils rail and mock? What though nations contend for the dominion of the earth, with each other, and with the "Prince of the kings" of the world? What though "blood toucheth blood" on the gory battle-field, amidst confused heaps of mangled humanity? What though death rides "the pale horse" abroad, and hell follows with him? What though wrong inundate every street of the city, and vice stalk at every corner? What though "truth is fallen in the street, and judgment cannot enter? What though the multitude have, with one consent, turned from the truth, and trampled it in the dust, and there is scarce real faith upon the earth? The Word of God standeth sure! His promise cannot fail. Though earth wax old as a garment, and tumble in confused ruin, and the Heavens break asunder, as the weather-worn tent-cloth, His promises remain as yesterday. In God's name, "I say to those who are of a fearful heart, be strong. Behold your God will come, even God with a recompense; He will come and save you." Yea, and right soon—too soon for an apostate Church, and ungodly world—He will come.

Believe, O brother, sister, believe! Lift up your heads with confidence—even lift them up, and be not afraid. What a mighty, mighty event crowdeth upon us, like the hastening storm-cloud before the whirlwind! Canst thou not almost feel the awful earthquake jar, and see the glaring lightning gleam? See, see thy mighty Savior cometh! He boweth His ear now to hear thy preparation cries, and hasteth to give the grace that thou mayest "stand," when in the majesty of His power, He shall bow the heavens to come down, and execute the "judgment written." Say, wilt thou lose thy expectation now? Shall thy tears, thy sighs, thy groans, thy cries, thy prayers, thy agonizings, thy consecrations, thy separations be all in vain? Awake, awake! O children of faith, and put thy garment of beauty on! Cast off, O cast off the vanities of this world. Despise its riches, its fame, its glory, its honors, its pleasures, its show, its folly. Sell not thy Heavenly birthright for a paltry mess of pottage. What can all its boast do for thee in the day of doom? Heap up riches, buy and build fine habitations, join land to land, and roll on wheels of human pleasure—what, and thou a follower of the Nazarene! a disciple of the simple stranger who had not where to lay His head! How in such circumstances will thy condition compare with those who dwelt in dens and caves of the earth—who went clad in sheepskins and goatskins, of whom the world was not worthy? Hast thou not something to do with thy substance, and with thy powers, to save thy fellow-men, and strengthen thy brethren?

He that will come, when He once did come—"though He was rich, for our sakes became poor." Art thou His disciple? Art thou sure of it? Search, and look. God is not mocked. What thou sowest thou shalt reap! He that will come when He did come—"Jesus wept!" Art thou His disciple? What—and full of mirth, laughter, vain talk and jesting? God forgive us. How wicked we have all been in this thing! He that will come, when He did come, He did "not strive or cry, or lift up, or cause His voice to be heard in the street"—he sought not reputation.

Art thou His disciple? What—and seek to be a leading man among your poor brethren? seek to be great? O shame! Thou wilt not only make "unearthly fluttering," and utterly fail, but thou wilt expose thyself to sure damnation. Go, go, humble thyself at the feet of thy Lord, and abase thyself in the dust before him, and entreat Him to forgive that worse than foolish thought.

O that day! that fearful burning day! What a tremendous scene!! The God of glory comes to reckon with His creature man! What shall I do? How shall we stand before Him? O God of mercy, grantus grace thy presence to abide.

What terror then will seize upon the false and hypocritical! How blanched will be the cheeks of those who have trifled with eternal things! O Lord, remember me for good in that great day.

Edwin Burnham.

The First & Second Resurection.

By P. Tandy.

Br. Merriam, and the Advent believers generally: I must in meekness beg leave to differ from Br. Ayers, in believing "that there will be a general resurrection of all the dead from their graves, at the coming of Christ." No, I cannot conscientiously subscribe to such a theory. I believe the spirit of truth is destined to guide into all truth. I do believe with Br. Ayers, that "resurrection implies a restitution, or bringing back again to life." I perfectly accord, too, with my Br. A. that "nothing is more plainly taught in Scripture than two resurrecsions." Now, I would humbly ask, is "the character of the one plainly declared, and that of the other left to be inferred from attending circumstances? Rather, is not the character of both plainly portrayed in God's Bible? I hold, that the best and only way to understand the Scriptures aright, is by comparing Scripture with Scripture. I believe also, that men naturally are spiritually dead, "dead in trespasses and in sins." But when the truth of God is applied by the Holy spirit to the heart and conscience of the sinner, and he becomes truly penitent for his sins, Christ applies his precious blood to said sinner's heart, and thus he is cleansed from sin! This is the first rising of a spiritual life;—and this is called by many, the first resurrection; so it is in a spiritual sense; but this has nothing to do with the literal resurrection, either of the just, or of the unjust. If holiness is the fruit of the first resurrection, then that resurrection must be spiritual; or passing from a state of spiritual death into spiritual life. Br. A. says, that this "implies certainly a resurrection;" and he adds, the 54th v. of the 6th chap. of John "shows that this precedes the resurrection of the last day, it must be the first resurrection." This is his construction upon the passage. We very well know, that every one who spiritually, and by faith, eateth the flesh, and drinketh the blood of the Son of God, hath eternal life;—or they have a promise of immortality when Jesus comes the second time, without sin (or a sin offering) unto salvation. It does seem to me, that the good Br. has mistaken the meetness for the first resurrection, for the resurrection itself. "Again; he says, He that hath part with me in the first resurrection, is secured from the second death." This is true, whether we apply it spiritually, or literally to the first resurrection. For we must truly believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, in order to escape the second death. It is substantially true, that Jesus is "the resurrection and the life; and he that liveth and believeth on Him shall never die." But this living and believing in God are prerequisites to the blessings at the first resurrection. Let me say, once for all, that we as Christians, or as Adventists, have no part in the first (literal) resurrection, until Jesus, the great Shepherd of the sheep comes to raise the dead saints, and give to them an immortality. "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead;" and "Let us not sleep, as do others," and similar passages have no reference to the saints sleeping in their graves, not at all; but they do actually refer to spiritual death, and spiritual life. Taken in this sense, Christ is the "giver of life to the dead," (who have actually 'awoke') that is, from sin and transgression, "in this present world." Now, Christ declares himself to be "the resurrection and the life." But we understand Him to be the "resurrection," &c., not only in a two-fold, but in a three-fold sense. First, He raises the sinner, who is dead in trespasses and in sins, (when he repents of and forsakes his sins,) to a new life in Christ Jesus. Second, He awakes the dead saints, who are asleep in their graves; and then He quickens the living ones, so that they may both arise and meet their Lord in the air! This, we understand to be the first resurrection, or resurrection of life, mentioned in the Bible. Third, is the resurrection of damnation, when all the wicked will be raised?

For further light upon this very important subject, let us look into the Revela-arful burning day!

ne!! The God of with His creature do? How shall we O God of mercy,
ence to abide.
will seize upon the
! How blanched
hose who have trigs! O Lord, re-
that great day.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

d Resurection.

ANDY.

e Advent believers
meekness beg leave
, in believing "that resurrection of all zves, at the coming not conscientiously
ory. I believe the d to guide into all h Br. Ayers, that a restitution, or life." I perfectly
. A. that "nothing in Scripture than w, I would hum-
er of the one plain-
the other left to ng circumstances?
ter of both plain-
ble? I hold, that to understand the comparing Scrip-believe also, that ually dead, "dead
" But when the
by the Holy spirit
nce of the sinner,
nitent for his sins,
ous blood to said
he is cleansed from sing of a spiritual by many, the first spiritual sense;
o with the literal
he just, or of the
the fruit of the
that resurrection
sing from a state
iritual life. Br.
lies certainly a dds, the 54th v.
"shows that this
of the last day, ection." This is e passage. We y one who spirit-
th the flesh, and he Son of God, have a promise
as comes the sec-
r a sin offering) eem to me, that the meetness for the resurrection
. He that hath surrection, is se-death." This is spiritually, or ection. For we ord Jesus Christ,
nd death. It is us is "the res-
l he that liveth
all never die."
ng in God are ngs at the first
, once for all,
as Adventists,
teral) resurrec-
t Shepherd of
he dead saints,
ality. "Awake, arise from the leep, as do oth-have no refer-
n their graves,
tually refer to al life. Taken
"giver of life tually 'awoke') ession, "in this hrist declares
ection and the
Him to be the y in a two-fold,
First, He raises trespasses and f and forsakes
Christ Jesus.
d saints, who and then He that they may
rd in the air!
he first resur-
ife, mentioned
e resurrection wicked will be s very impor-
the Revelation of St John; whose sayings are faithful and true.

In the twentieth chapter of Revelation, we have the first and second, or last resurrection vividly set forth. I believe, as the Adventists do, generally; that there will be a resurrection of the bodies of all the dead, both of the just and the unjust, John 5: 28, 29; Acts 24: 15. That those who are Christians will be raised at his second coming, according to Paul's testimony to the Corinthian Church, 1 Cor. 15: 23. And that the rest of the dead, will not live again until after the thousand years of Christ's personal reign on the earth have expired, Rev. 20: 5. And furthermore, that the saints shall not all sleep, but shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump, 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52. Now, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." And at the expiration of the thousand years, Satan is to be loosed out of his prison, who is to go out to deceive the nations, which are in the four quarters of the earth, to gather them to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. These are represented as going up on the breadth of the earth, to encompass the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; (or Palestine restored,) and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them! The devil that deceived them, was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the Beast and the False Prophet are, and there it seems they are tormented as long as day and night continues. Then, the Revelator saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the Heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. Then he tells us, that he saw the dead, (not the righteous dead,) small and great, stand before God! and they were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

Here is set forth the solemn scene of the second resurrection. Much more might be said on this thrice glorious and interesting subject, but I forbear, and give place for others, who are more able, and far better qualified to give information upon this subject. And now, let me say to one and all, that love Christ and his appearing. "Preach the coming of Jesus." Amen, and Amen.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. R. E. Wood.

CHESHIRE, March, 6th, 1856.

BR. MERRIAM:—If the world has joys, it has none for me; why should I expect comfort in this world? Should I hope, or even desire to go through the valley of tears, singing? or to dwell in the house of mourning, laughing? Would I fare better than my best Friend? While here, he was a man of sorrow, and shall I not taste the bitter cup? He was acquainted with grief, and shall I be a stranger to it? Would I be kindly treated in the land where he had not where to lay his head? Would I fare like the DWELLERS OF EARTH, when the King of kings fared not so well as the fowls of heaven, or the foxes of the field?

Would I go any other way to the blessed inheritance, when it is through much tribulation I must enter into the Kingdom? The world is too barren a soil, to produce true joy. But in this my comfort lies; that though in the world I shall have trouble, yet in Him I may be of good cheer, because He has overcome the world.

The children of the bridechamber cannot be glad when the bridegroom is not with them. How can I be content and rest among the enemies of my Lord the King, where the general voice is, "Shall this man reign over us? We will not have him for our king, we will not take him for our Savior."

"Oh! that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain tears, that I might weep day and night for the sins of my fellow creatures, for the slain of the daughter of my people." The whole world is, with respect to the judgment, as it were, fast asleep. In this night of universal darkness, the greater part are dreaming in their sleep, and believing themselves to be wide awake. This is the true, but melancholy condition of the most part of mankind —they dream while they think themselves to be awake, and slumber in respect to the coming judgment. Nor will they be aroused till the last trumpet sounds in their affrighted ears, and eternity opens to their wondering eyes. There are a few, however, (and alas! but a few,) who are really awake, and whose thoughts pierce through the dark shadows of this dismal night, and behold events that are transpiring, in their true light—in the light of glory, and the regions of bliss, that are soon to be revealed. Such, however, are the only persons who have their loins girt, and their lamps burning, in expectation of the bridegroom, at whose coming, the bright day will burst upon our view, the shadows flee away, and a light seven times brighter than the noon day sun will shine upon the blessed new earth.

Abel, Enoch, and Elijah will be there, Patriarchs, Prophets, Apostles and Martyrs will be there, the loved ones of earth, and all who are sleeping in Jesus, will be there! O, that glorious land! I long to be there. Cheer up, dear Brn. and Srs., victory will soon be ours; some of us have lately seen our little ones struggling with that dreadful enemy, death, and they are now hid from our sight in the cold, dark grave; but O, the blessed promise, they shall come again from the land of the ememy and stand in their own border. Four loved ones of my own, dearly beloved and gone, have fallen asleep.

"O death, thy reign is almost o'er,
Soon shalt thou have an end."

How fond the recollection that they shall soon live again; yes, and my lovely little Freddie, so lately passed away; he was too good, too pure for this sad, dreary earth. In a few more days, or months, at most, his little grave will be spoiled. I long to embrace him, when he shall have life from the glorious Life-giver.

"O, we should be o'erwhelmed with gloom,
To lay our loved ones in the tomb,
Did not that promise meet our eye,
Of Him who hath ascended high—
I'll bring your children yet again
From out their graves, where they have lain,
And place them on that happy shore,
Where sighs and farewells are no more."

Not a pain, nor a sigh, nor a sorrowful tear,
Nor gloom, neither sadness, shall ever appear,
To grieve for a moment the ransomed throng;
Rejoicing o'er death with the conqueror's song.

From your sister in much affliction, expecting deliverance at the appearing of Jesus, RELIANCE E. WOOD.

For the Crisis.

One Thousand Pamphlets for free Distribution.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The pamphlets of which we recently gave notice in the Crisis, are now ready for distribution. Having extended the article on the 2300 days and 70 weeks beyond what we anticipated in the beginning, it now contains 40 very large and condensed pages, instead of 36, as we stated at first. The price, however, will be the same, 6 cts. per piece.

We would here notice, also, that the article in the pamphlet on the 2300 days and 70 weeks, differs widely, in some respects, from the one which recently appeared from us in the Crisis—being a much more thorough examination of the subject. We have in this article examined, at considerable length, and shown by the most unequivocal proof, the connection of those two periods; and have also established by the crucifixion of Christ, at the end of the 69 weeks, as we think, beyond all controversy, that B C 445 is their correct starting poiut; and therefore the 2300 days will end the present year. We have established the time of the crucifixion of Christ, by eclipses, and the most unequivocal facts in history; and we feel confident that the article will meet with general approbation from all who love the time of the appearing of Jesus.

Although poor, as to the things of this world, yet by the help of the Lord, we have been enabled to publish an extra thousand for free distribution.

Now, dear Brn., the time is short, and, therefore, what is done must be done quickly. We hope, therefore, that all will send in their orders immediately, and those who are able and wish to pay for them, and have not the money just at hand, let them not wait on this account—just give us your address, and the number you want, and we will send them as wo can have a few weeks' credit for the printing. To the poor we would say—send in your order and address, and we will fill them with the greatest pleasure. We have already had calls for a considerable number.

Address Doct. A. Decker, or W. C. Peck, Buffalo, N. Y.

Buffalo, March, 10, 1836.

Letter from Sr. N. M. Henry.

BLANDFORD, March, 15 1856.

BR. MERRIAM:—Allow me, in the name of Sr. Julia Bates, to thank the dear Brethren and Sisters, who have so cheerfully come to her aid, in this her hour of extreme need. To use her own language, "words cannot express my gratitude." You have, indeed, caused the "widow's heart to sing for joy," and given bread to the hungry, and clothed the needy, and "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of His, ye have done it to Him."

Your Sister, N. M. HENRY.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. G. Bangs.

BR. MERRIAM:—I am highly pleased with the spirit and sentiment of the Crisis—also the subject-matter contained in the correspondence. It affords living testimony that in these last days of perilous times, there is a Church "built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." GEORGE BANGS.

TYPOGRAHICAL.—Bro. Morgan's article in our last paper addressed to the patrons of the Prophetic Messenger, should have been dated Moline, Ill., instead of Mobile, Alabama.

Obituaries.

Died in Bristol, R. I., March 7, Alzaida, daughter of Bro. James H. Gladding, aged 13 years. Alzaida has fallen by the enemy, death. She now sleeps in Jesus. Although young in years, she was a pattern of piety and Christian resignation. After suffering about three years with spinal affection, and being deprived of the use of her limbs most of the time, she had to be carried in the arms of her parents from her bed to her chair. She was never known to murmur or complain. Often, whilst sitting in her chair on the Sabbath, and watching the children, while they were getting ready for the Sabbath School, she would shed tears; but as soon as she found that it was noticed by any of the family, she would at once endeavor to look cheerful. Before she was confined to the house, she was very fond of attending the Sabbath School and searching the Scriptures. A few moments before she breathed her last, she said to her father that she should meet him at the resurrection. The writer has conversed with her a number of times through her sickness, and she often expressed a desire for the Lord to come and change her vile body to one of immortality. She could look forward to that land of rest, and desire the time to come when she could say, "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," who is the resurrection and the life—when He will wipe away all tears from every eye—where there will be no more sickness, sorrow, pain or death, and where the inhabitants will no more say, I am sick.

Sleep on, Alzaida, and take thy rest. It will be but a short time—the day will dawn, and you will hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth clothed with immortality, to meet the loved ones of earth—if they are faithful, to part no more. I. H. G.

Fell asleep in Jesus, sister CLARISSA THAYER, wife of David Thayer, aged 36, after having waited for the Lord 14 years. Lord, let the trumpet sound and wake thy sleeping children, give reward to thy servants the prophets, and all that fear thy name, small and great.

H. THAYER.

IN SENATE.—Gov. Shannon has been ably defended by Mr. Jones, of Tenn., who was replied to by Mr. Hale, of N. H., in what Mr. Greeley considers the best speech of his life. H. G. says:

"The speaker's heart was thoroughly in his work, and his exposure of the deadly antagonism of the views now advanced by President Pierce respecting the right of the people of Kansas to form a State Government without permission from the Territorial authorities, and the doctrines of this same Mr. Pierce, backed by the whole Democratic party of New Hampshire, as to the Dorr constitution and government of Rhode Island, were the most withering. The wrongs and outrages inflicted on the Free State people of Kansas, the insolence of the Border Ruffians, the glaring complicity of the Federal authorities, the indisposition of the President to do anything in defence of the dearest rights or even the lives of the Free State people, and his eagerness to dragoon them into submission to the atrocious laws so audaciously imposed on them by the Border Ruffians, were vividly, and effectively set forth. I think Mr. Hale never before had so large, so attentive, nor so sympathizing an auditory in the Senate, and when he closed with a pledge of his devotion to the Union and his confidence that it would be preserved by the People against all perils and assaults, a murmur of approbation pervaded the assemblage."

FERRY BOAT BURNED.—Philadelphia, March 15. About 9 o'clock to-night the ferry boat New Jersey, while crossing the Delaware to Camden, took fire in the middle of the stream. There being a great deal of floating ice in the river, much difficulty was experienced in managing the vessel, and she was finally run upon the bar opposite Arch Street. About one hundred passengers were on board, many of whom jumped into the river and were rescued by boats, and others saved themselves by clinging to floating ice. It is feared that a large number are drowned. The boat is now burned to the water's edge—great confusion prevails, and it is impossible to gather authentic details. Steamers immediately went to the assistance of the passengers, but they had previously been saved by small boats. It is now asserted that not less than 30 lives have been lost.

EARTHQUAKE AT SAN FRANCISCO.—The residents of this city were aroused this morning, at 23 minutes past 5 o'clock, by the shock of an earthquake, which was felt in every portion of the town. The vibration appeared to be from N. E. to S. W., and as far as we can learn not a single building escaped the terrible shock. The first movement of the earth was very sudden, and the buildings swayed to and fro heavily afterwards, and finally the vibrations were short and rapid. Evidences of the violence of the shock were visible in different portions of the city this morning, and it is surprising, that there was not much more damage done. The fire wall on the top of the store occupied by Messrs. Goodwin & Co., on Front street, was entirely thrown from the north side the building into Oregon street.

In nearly every portion of the city we hear of houses being injured more or less

The shock was more severely felt at Oakland than here, and various rumors are afloat of the damage done to the government works at Fort Point and Alcatraz Island; and also the Farallones are said to be affected very materially.

The vibrations were attended with a heavy report resembling the discharge of distant artillery, but was continuous and produced a deep, low rumbling sound.

This earthquake has been the only theme of interest on the street to-day, and we have yet to meet the first person who was not affected by the shock. It appeared to be more sensibly felt out towards Fort Point than any locality we have heard from. The small dwellings in that vicinity were rocked like a cradle, and persons were nearly thrown off their beds. It is by all means the most violent earthquake that has been known in San Francisco since its settlement by the Americans. The whole city was in uproar, and the entire population a good deal alarmed, while many were nearly frantic. People rushed wildly into the streets in their night clothes, and stood amazed and astonished at what had happened.

The clipper schooner Page arrived here on the 12th from Japan, bringing news of a terrible earthquake which occurred there on the 11th of November, at ten o'clock, P. M., which destroyed 100,000 dwellings 54 temples, and 30,000 inhabitants. A fire broke out at the same time in 30 different places in the city. The earth opened and closed over thousands of buildings with their occupants. The shock was severe at Simoda. Although the distance from Jeddo to Simoda is but 60 miles, it appears that no official account of the earthquake had been received at the latter place at the time of the sailing of the schooner Page, Dec. 10th. The news was obtained through the Dutch interpreter. The Japanese seemed to attach but little importance to the catastrophe. The inhabitants of the city were forewarned of the disaster, and many of them escaped. The buildings of Jeddo are chiefly of one story and constructed of very light material. The temples of worship, however, are lofty, and in some instances are constructed of heavy masonry.

LOANS OF THE ROTHSCHILDS.—The celebrated banking-house of the Rothschilds loaned during the past year $516,000, as follows:—England, $80,000,000; Turkey, $40,000,000; Sardinia, $10,000,000; Austria, $120,000,000; Russia, first loan, $130,000,000; Russia, second loan, $100,000,000; England, on exchequer bills, $25,000,000.

AID FOR KANSAS.—A gentleman in this city who has been planning to co-operate liberally with the Kansas Emigrant Aid Company, was called upon a few days since to help a subscription for sending some military supplies to the settlers in Kansas; having no money on hand to be conveniently spared, he sold a diamond pin for $500, and gave the proceeds for defence of freedom.

A SLIGHT shock of an earthquake was felt in Madison, Conn., and in other towns in that vicinity, last Wednesday night.

FOREIGN NEWS.

One week Later from Europe.

Arrival of Steamship Arabia.

HALIFAX, March 12.—The Steamship Arabia from Liverpool, on Saturday, the 1st inst., arrived here at 11 P, M., yesterday, and sailed for Boston, at 3 o'clock this morning.

PEACE CONFERENCES.—The plenipotentiaries held their first meeting at the Hotel of Foreign Affairs at Paris, Monday, Feb. 25. Present—Buol, Hubner, Walewski, Clarendon, Cowley, Orloff, Brunow, Cavour, Villamarrina, Ali Mehemet—Count Walewski presiding.

The session lasted three and a half hours. Walewski opened the conference by an introductory speech. Credentials were exchanged, and a written guarantee signed not to divulge the proceedings until the whole be concluded. A discussion on an armistice then ensued. An armistice was settled on until the end of March, but not affecting the blockade of Russian ports.

The Austrian propositions were formerly paragraphed as the basis of negotiations. The meeting then adjourned.

On Tuesday there was no meeting, that time might be afforded to formulate and ratify the armistice agreed to on the previous day.

On Wednesday, the Congress held their second meeting. Nothing can be known with certainty of their proceedings. Rumors abound.

It is now asserted that Russia, while assenting to the dismantling of Sebastopol, Bomarsund, and even Nicolaieff, refuses to cede her protectorate over Greek Christians.

Thus far the indications are favorable to the supposition that Russia really desires peace.

Vienna letters assert that Gortschakoff the diplomatist, had stated that the Russian government considers the convocation of a general European Congress, immediately after the treaty of peace is signed, the best means of settling all questions. France and Austria favor the idea. England does not.

The evident cordiality now existing between France and Austria, begins to excite uneasiness in England, and a triple league of France, Austria and Russia against England is surmised as not an improbable incident of the future.

Three thousand Russians are employed day and night in constructing a triple row of piles right across the Gulf of Finland, twelve miles across and six miles from Cronstadt, with but few openings; behind which is a steam fleet of 18 ships, 14 corvettes, and 70 gun boats.

A Russian ukase orders an immediate issue of treasury notes, in seven series, amounting in the aggregate to 21,000,000 roubles.

Great energy is manifested in Russia in advancing railways.

Relations between Russia and Persia increase in cordiality.

The allies were about to destroy the sunken ships in Sebastopol harbor, by dropping upon them heavy shells to explode under water.

It is stated, via Vienna, that Ismael Pacha supercedes Omar Pacha in Asiatic command.

RUMORED BREAK UP OF THE CONFERENCE.—Agitation in the Money Market. It is deemed not improbable that the result of this new move of the artful diplomatists of Russia may be the immediate breaking up of the conference. A very grave hitch in the conferences has already occurred.

Though the fifth point is the last of all, it had been agreed to take it up first. It was accordingly on the second meeting of the conference submitted for the consideration of the plenipotentiaries.

No sooner had it been formally laid on the table, than Count Orloff and Baron Brunow took objection to its being taken into consideration, with a view to its being decided by the conference. They proposed that it should be referred to a Congress of the representatives of all the crowned heads in Europe. If so referred, they pledge themselves in the name of the Czar, to abide by whatever decision that Congress might come to.

This new and unexpected phase in the Eastern question has produced consternation in Paris, and caused a further fall in the French fund. It has also no less surprised and alarmed our own government.—Morning Advertiser.

SWEDEN.—Stockholm is to be fortified by land and sea; including the valley of Maalar.

THE TRUTH ABOUT NICOLAIEF.—Under this head, the French Moniteur de la Hotte makes some important statements about the Russian arsenal, Nicolaief. It says that that place is not only a port of construction for ships of war, but also for arming; and that everything but the very largest ships of the line can be armed, provisioned and manned at Nicolaief, and then floated down the Bug to the Black Sea. Of the 16 ships of the line in the Black Sea fleet at the commencement of the war, all but three, which were of the first class, were armed at Nicolaief, and sailed thence to Sebastopol in complete fighting order. To accommodate such ships, the Russian government has excavated and cleared the channel of the Bug all the way, so that during eight months in the year there are 23 feet of water in the channel, and when the river rises there is considerably more water. Vessels of 120 guns can be built and partly armed at Nicolaief, and floated down to the Black Sea, and there complete their armament.

THE MONSTER STEAMSHIP.—Next week, about 1000 men will be employed upon the "great leviathan" belonging to the Eastern Steam Navigation Company, now in course of construction at Messrs. Scott Russell's. She will be 23,000 tons register, and will carry about 12,000 tons of coal in addition. She will be 23,000 tons register, and will carry 10,000 passengers, and will have eight screw steamers as her complement of large boats, four on each side. She is of most gigantic proportions, and a visit to her is a sight to be talked of. When she is completed and in the water, she will assuredly draw "all London" to her; and, in fact, be the greatest curiosity in the kingdom.—London Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.—The Presse d'Orient states that an attempt is to be made to destroy the vessels sunk in the harbor of Sebastopol by throwing heavy shells so that they shall drop perpendicularly on the vessels, and, by bursting, knock them to pieces. Some doubt, however, is expressed whether any such operation is necessary, as the ravages of the worm peculiar to the Black Sea—the teredo novalis—must already have half-destroyed them.

Professor Unger, of the Vienna University, whose name is well known to students of botany and geology, and some of whose botanical works have been translated and published in London, has been denounced by the Vienna Church Gazette as a man who brings forward doctrines which do not agree with the Holy Scriptures. The charge has been brought under the notice of the Austrian Minister of Instruction.

Messrs. Gillon & Co., of Leith, have entered into an extensive contract with the French government, for supplying with preserved meats the army in the Crimea. Not less than 700,000 lbs. of beef, will, it is said, be used in fulfilling the contract.

An architect who is gone to build a house of refuge for Austrian pilgrims at Jerusalem will send the foundation stone of the new Church which is to be erected in Vienna in commemoration of the escape of the Emperor of Austria from assassination. The stone will be taken from Cæsarea Philippi, the spot where the Apostle Paul heard from the lips of the Savior the following words:—"On this rock will I build my Church."

ENGLAND.—In about a fortnight or three weeks' time about 250 gun and mortar boats will be completed. They will be ranged near the northern shores of the Isle of Wight, in front of her Majesty's Marine Palace, Osborne, from which they will extend up in front of Ryde. Arrangements are making for steamboat and other excursions, for the purpose of visiting this remarkable fleet.

APPOINTMENTS.

With the help and permission of our Lord and Master, I will meet the Church of Christ in

Lynn, Thursday eve., March 20.
Clinton, Mass., Sunday, March 23.
Springfield, Sunday, March 30.
Warehouse Point, Tuesday eve, April 1.
Hartford, Ct., April 3.
New Britain, Sunday, April 6.
Cheshire, April 9.
Bristol, Sunday, April 13.
A. M. HIGGINS

Providence permitting, I will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, March 23.
Exeter, N. H., Tuesday eve, March 25.
Portland, Me., Sunday, March 30.
Worcester, Mass. Sunday, April 6.
J. HEMENWAY.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Cheshire, Ct., Sunday March 23.
Meriden, Ct., March 24 and 25.
Hartford, Ct., March 26.
Windsor, Ct., March 27.
Warehouse Point, March 28.
Springfield, Mass., Sunday March 30.
Worcester, Mass. Waldo Hall, March 31 and April 1.
Westboro', April 2 and 3.

If the brethren further East wish my labors among them, they may address me by letter. Direct West Meriden, Ct.
C. GOODRICH.

Br. Edwin Burnham will deliver a lecture on Spiritualism, at Mechanic's Hall, Salem, Sunday, March 23. T. HARDY.

I expect to preach at Hillsborough, N. H., in the Baptist meeting house—upper village—the 4th Sabbath in March.
T. M. PREBLE.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the Church at Kennebunkport, Me., Sunday, March 23.
Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, April 13.
Portsmouth, N. H., Sundays April 20 and 27. S. S. BREWER.

Providence permitting, we will preach at Waldo Hall, Worcester, as follows:
S. S. Brewer, March 30.

If the Lord permit I will meet with the brethren in Newark, New Jersey, Thursday evening, March 27th, and continue with them over the following Sabbath. H. PRATT.

The Lord willing, Br. Burnham will preach at Salem, Sunday, March 23.
T. HARDY.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postage 17 cents.

Bible vs. Tradition, $1.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Dobney on Future Punishment, 75 cts.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.
" " 2 series, 75 cts.
Signs of the Times, 75 cts.
The End, 75 cts.
Lectures on Romanism, $1.
The Tent and the Altar, 75 cts.

Church Debts, 50 cts.

Pauline Theology,	15 cts. single,		$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "	"
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 "	"
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50	"
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 "	"
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Outline of the Coast of Man,	3 "	"	1,50	"

The Destiny of the Wicked, 3 cts.

Book of Seven Seals, 3 cts.

Seven Seals, 3 cts.

The Laodicean Church or the Judgment Age, 3 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. TAYLOR."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J.M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

NOTICE OF THE NEW ENGLAND MISSION TENT. —Those wishing for Tent-Meetings in Illinois, Iowa, or Wisconsin, this Spring, will please write to myself or Br. W. Pratt, at this place. P. B MORGAN.

Moline, Ill. Feb. 28, 1856.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Laporte, Indiana.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Br. John Brown, your paper has been sent regularly. We have also received your remittance.

Sr. Harriet Burridy, your paper has been sent regularly. Your remittance has also been received.

Cash Receipts.

E Dole, E Dodge, J Brown, M M Flint, J B Whittemore, E Ayres, L W Houghton, Z T Wood, M W Burlingame, W Harriman, D Mirch, L Dingly, J Megquire, T Jordan, M Megquire, J W Allen, C F Jordan, H Snell, T M Preble, E Benson, C Phillips, A Morgan, C H Barret, E Hodgkins, S A Munson, $1 each.

K H Simons, B Herrick, L R Gaines, T Hale, C W Wellman, E Evans, Sr Andrews, P Tandy, A Youngman, 50 cts. each.

G Hill $2, C Tuttle 51 cts. Z Foster 51.

For the poor—D Dole $1, K H Simons 50 cts.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public. Ed.

For the Crisis.

The two Sacrifices and two Suppers.

BY WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

The sacrifice for the sins of the world—the sacrifice for the fowls of heaven—the marriage supper of the Lamb—the supper of the great God, contrasted:

The great atonement has been made,
The sacrifice been given;
And hungry mortals now may feast
On the rich bread of Heaven.

"Come, then, all things are ready now,"
The banquet is prepared,
The invitation is to all,
By all it may be shared.

Beloved of God: in contemplating this interesting subject, we purpose to confine ourselves to a few of the most prominent points which naturally present themselves; and may the grace of God which bringeth salvation through Jesus, the Messiah, quicken us together with Him as we proceed. Amen.

The first point, then, to which we would advert is, that GREAT SACRIFICE for the sins of the world made by the ever blessed God, in the person of His dearly beloved Son Jesus, and expressed in those memorable words, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish but have everlasting life." Here is an incomparable sacrifice. Pause, and think of it. Behold the immaculate Son of the eternal Father, divesting himself, as it were, of all his august majesty and primeval glory which he had "before the world was"—laying aside His regalia of state, and bidding adieu, for a season, to the blissful courts of Heaven, to an angelic society, and the more immediate presence of Deity, descending on his beneficent mission to our fallen planet, and sojourning here among a race of rebellious mortals, subjected to numerous privations, enduring shame and contumely, suffering pain and wo, "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief"—and finally, through wicked hands

He dies' the Prince of glory dies.
Lo! Salem's daughters weep aloud;
A sudden darkness shrouds the skies,
A sudden trembling shakes the ground.

Here is a sacrifice enstamped with the Divine impress. "For scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." It is rightly styled then in theology, "the sacrificial atonement," and in Scripture, "the propitiation for our sins," Here is truly a noble feature in the economy of redemption, the contemplation of which should inspire our hearts with the liveliest sentiments of gratitude for the divine benevolence. Well might holy "angels desire to look into these things.

And what finite mind can fully trace the joyous effects which will flow throughout all the blissful cycles of eternity, to every true believer in Jesus, consequent upon this sacrificial offering, beginning prior to the expulsion of our first parents from Eden—intimated in that precious promise, "it (the seed of the woman, Jesus) shall bruise thy head;" and more clearly developed in the prophetic era thus: "thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin:" and still more comprehensively set forth under the Gospel dispensation in the parable of the marriage of the king's son thus: "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son, and sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding; and they would not come. Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, tell them which were bidden, behold, I have prepared my dinner, my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready; come, unto the marriage." Or, as is recorded in another place, "A certain man made a great supper and bade many. And sent his servants at supper time, to say to those that were bidden, COME, FOR ALL THINGS ARE NOW READY."

This event will be fully consummated in the Apocalyptic "marriage supper of the Lamb," amid the choral melodies of seraphim and cherubim, the harmonious anthems of innumerable redeemed intelligences, and the victorious shouts from the lips of sainted myriads in crowning Jesus King and Lord over all the renovated earth. "And I heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints." Hence, "Blessed are they which are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb."

Though we have but hastily glanced at this portion of our subject, yet we trust the relation existing between the sacrifice and supper is readily perceived, and that relation also in which the whole human family stands towards the same. Observe, the Lamb has been slain—the atonement made—a way opened for the happy recovery of man—"All things are now ready," for their reception—the "robe"—"the best robe"—the "ring"—the "shoes"—the "fatted calf"—the "music!" The messengers of God have gone out in haste with the blessed invitation to all, "Come; for all things are now ready." O, who would not embrace so rich an offer as this? augmenting thereby, the joy of "the angels of God," (Luke, 15: 9, 10.) And does not he who would reject it, do so at the loss of immortal glory? Those who reject the invitation to the antepast of the marriage supper of the Lamb, as presented in the Gospel of the Kingdom, will never be called to participate in that glorious Jubilee of "the nations which are saved." But this is not all. There remains another sacrifice—another supper with which all such will have to do, which brings us to the consideration of

THE SECOND PART.

Now gather, every hungry bird,
And all the fowls of heaven;
A sacrifice is made for you,
A sumptuous feast is given.
The flesh of kings—of mighty men—
Of captains, great and small,
Come, eat your fill and satiate,
The supper is for all.

The sacrifice to which we would now lead your attention, is one of an entirely different character from that we have just discussed. We find that this sacrifice is identified with the impending catastrophe—the closing scenes of this wicked world—that it is made by the omnipotent God for a specific purpose, namely, to vindicate His attribute, justice, in the manifestation of His Judgment upon the wicked nations of the earth, which will result in the preparation of a great supper for the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven and the beasts of prey. We are aware that this passage, (Rev. 19: 17, 18,) by most commentators is regarded as most highly figurative—simply denoting the ascendency of Protestantism and its final triumph in the extermination of the papal power. We cannot think, however, that the passage is confined to this at all, and do not feel disposed to endorse any exposition we have yet met with on this singular text. That the downfall of the papacy is associated with this event, we have no doubt; but the idea that this event symbolizes exclusively the destruction of popery in the exaltation of protestantism, we must dissent from. Our humble opinion, (notwithstanding the book of Revelation abounds with figures and symbols) is, that this Scripture will have an actual and literal fulfilment. Not but that it may, together with this, symbolize a great moral revolution. yet we are strongly of the opinion, that this text will have a literal fulfilment—that carnivorous birds and beasts of prey, will actually feed upon incalculable quantities of human flesh in the great day of God.

We now proceed to show why we conclude this text will have a literal accomplishment. 1st, let us look at the chronology of this transaction. It is at the terminus of the seventh trumpet and sixth vial. It is located subsequently to the marriage of the Lamb, and the opening of the heavens which unfolds Jesus as the mighty Warrior accompanied by His heavenly-clad army on white horses.

We now turn back and hastily run over a few prophetic Scriptures, and observe whether they accord with, and affirm a literal view of our text.

"Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures? To me belongeth vengeance and recompence; their feet shall slide in due time; for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste," Deut. 32: 34, 35. "For I lift my hand to heaven, and say, I live forever. If I whet my glittering sword, and my hand take hold on judgment; I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me. I will make mine arrows drunk with blood; and my sword shall devour flesh," vs. 40–42. "Behold the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate, and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it. . . . And I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity. . . . I will make a man more precious than fine gold, even the golden wedge of Ophir, (implying that a very few will be spared, comparatively, in the general destruction, when God shall arise) and will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the Lord of Hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger," Isa. 13: 9, 11–13. "And it shall come to pass at that day that the Lord will punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth," Isa. 24: 25. "Come near, ye nations, to hear; and hearken, ye people; let the earth hear, and all that is therein; the world, and all things that come forth of it. For the indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies; he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter. Their slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcasses, and the mountains shall be melted with their blood. And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved and the heaven shall be rolled together as a scroll. . . . For my sword shall be bathed in heaven; it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse to judgment," Isa. 34: 1–5. "I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the Lord of hosts. Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, the Lord shall roar from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation; he shall mightily roar upon his habitation; he shall give a shout, as they that tread the grapes, against all the inhabitants of the earth. A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations, he will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day, from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground," Jer. 25: 29–33. "For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries; and the sword shall devour, and it shall be satiated and made drunk with their blood; for the Lord God of hosts hath a sacrifice in the north country by the river Euphrates." Jer. 46: 10. "And thou, son of man, Thus saith the Lord God, speak unto every feathered fowl, and every beast of the field, assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh and drink blood; ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth. . . . And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you. That ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, with mighty men, with all men of war, saith the Lord God, Ezek. 39: 17–20.

The passages here transcribed most assuredly point to the closing scenes of earth, the epoch marked in the passage of the Apocalypse under consideration. The language obviously indicates a complete, universal slaughter of the wicked. We cannot conceive that it admits of a solitary exception. It evidently embraces the entire mass of the ungodly. e. g. "I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth." Again, "The slain of the Lord shall be at that day, from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth."

3rd. The same catastrophe is brought to view by the Revelator, (Rev. 14: 19, 20,) under the figure of a great winepress. "And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine, i. e.,—the wicked—and cast it (them) into the great winepress of the wrath of God. And the winepress was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs."

By carefully examining these Scriptures and others of a kindred nature, (of which there are many, pointing down to the coming Crisis,) it will be difficult for the candid mind to evade the force of the argument, that the event presented in the text will literally be accomplished. The very nature of the case must establish this conclusion.

Reflect, for a moment, upon the woeful state of things in connection with this event. "Nation rising against nation, and kingdom against kingdom"—the ancient declaration of Jehovah verified: "I will give all the wicked to the sword"—every man's hand lifted up against his brother. See dynasties overthrown—kingdoms demolished—ecclesiastical systems swept away—institutions, civil and military, with all their pomp and splendor dashed in pieces—nations rushing to and fro like the waters of the troubled deep. Behold the entire world in one terrific and bloody struggle! How long, think ye, must such an awful state of things continue, ere it will necessarily result in the preparation of what God has called all the fowls of heaven and beasts of the field to come, and partake of, namely, "The Supper of the Great God?"

Here we see, then, that God, in the imposing movements of His providence, vindicates His justice by the manifestations of His righteous judgments upon the wicked and rebellious nations of the earth, while the fowls of heaven and the beasts of the field are provided with such banquet as shall satisfy their voracious appetites.

Thus, it appears, that the Sacrifice provides the Supper—that the Supper consists of flesh and blood furnished by the innumerable "slain of the Lord," from which every feathered fowl and beast of prey will be permitted to appease their hunger. "That they may eat the flesh of kings, the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of ALL men, both free and bond, both small and great." Surely, "The anger of the Lord shall not return, until He have executed, and till He have performed the thoughts of His heart; in the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly." And in view of this great and terrible day of the Lord, do we not see the force of the Revelator's inquiry? "Who shall be able to stand?"

And now let us compare the Sacrifices and Suppers and mark the striking disparity between them. Observe in the first, "This unspeakable gift,"—God spared not his only Son, but delivered Him up for our offences, and raised Him again for our justification. Consequently, provision is made in the everlasting Gospel for helpless, starving, dying men, that they might be cleansed from their sins by the blood of Jesus, clothed with the garments of salvation, filled with good things from the treasury of Heaven, and live forever, praise God—which will finally result in the Apocalyptic feast, or "Marriage Supper of the Lamb," Hallelujah! That will be celebrated by redeemed and holy beings through the ages of eternity; the supper of the great God will be limited to a period of time sufficient to vindicate the justice of God. The participants in the former are "sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise," "and kept by the power of God through faith," in Jesus; the partakers in the latter are the condemned of God, because they believed not in His Son. The former are not hurt with the second death; the latter must suffer the pangs of that death—their merited and inevitable doom. The former enjoy an earnest of this glory to be revealed; "being justified by faith, they have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus, the Messiah, and rejoice in hope, the love of God is shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost which is bestowed upon them; the latter also experience an antepast in those painful apprehensions, that "certain fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery indignation," which will ultimately destroy all the adversaries of Jehovah. In the former case it was optional for each to accept or refuse the gracious invitation; in the latter it is compulsory—the impenitent sinner is compelled to share in the awful scene.

Again: these eventful scenes open before a wonder-stricken world, at one and the same time. While the sainted myriads are chanting their victorious anthems before the great white throne unto the August One which sitteth thereon, the rejecters of God in the Gospel of His Anointed, are enduring "tribulation and anguish," as it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to such.

And now, in conclusion, what do we learn from the contemplation of this momentous subject? Is there not much presented for serious reflection?

We observe then, that each individual of the human family must either be identified with the Marriage Supper of the Lamb, or the Supper of the Great God. Ye who have chosen the former, gladly embraced the proffered invitation given in the Gospel—in all your trials and afflictions, which number many, (Ps. 89: 19,) your persecutions, your adversities under all the vicissitudes of this present life, do not be discouraged; look upward—look forward—let your hearts be cheered with the prospect of soon beholding the glad morning of the resurrection in all its ineffable splendor and glory, and Jesus coming in clouds of Heaven to redeem and glorify His Church. Then shall ye partake of His glory in the coronation scene now at hand.

O hail, happy day!
That brings us joy without alloy,
O hail, happy day!

And O, impenitent sinner, living devoid of hope and without God in the world, wilt thou thus remain, thy stubborn heart still proof against Almighty love, running wild thy downward course to death, away from God, from Christ, from every holy influence designed to save, art thou determined thus to live? An awful doom awaits thee—the dreadfulness of which no human tongue may yet unfold, from which there's no escape—mark well thy fate. Wilt thou still resist sweet mercy's call? 'tis written, there in characters most legible, in God's Holy Book—the sacred volume read, and ponder deep. Then turn, O turn, while yet there's hope; from all thy sins turn unto God and live. Do not delay. Time's last moments now are near to close, and the strong angel-cry—"'Tis done" will soon be heard, while thundering tones of the last Trump shall shake the earth and skies, and then quick summoned with the millions that shall rise either to mingle with those who shall celebrate "The Marriage Supper of the Lamb," or be consigned among that number who shall constitute "The Supper of The Great God."

Finally: If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be, Anathema Maran-atha, (i. e. accursed when the Lord cometh.)

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you—my love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

Elizabeth City, N. Y., Jan., 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. L. M. Collins.

BATH, N. H., Feb. 18, 1856.

BR. MERRIAM:—I have long felt it my duty to write to the little flock. I must confess, however, that I have been too dilatory in this respect. But, dear Br., be of good cheer; I am thankful that the Lord has given us one like yourself to feed the household with meat in due season.

I have not been unmindful of your laborious task to serve the members of Father's family; nor of the many trials and temptations with which my brethren and sisters have been surrounded. Some, I find, have not only the darts of the enemy hurled at them, but what is still worse, they are wounded in the house of their friends. Even those with whom "they had taken sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company, have whet their tongue like a sword, and bent their bows, to shoot their arrows, even bitter words." When I see such a lack of brotherly love, my heart sinks within me. And I am led to exclaim, O, that mine eyes were a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the restoration of that love in the Church which the Apostle desired should be continued.

"Let brotherly love continue." Brn. and sisters, do we consider the importance of adhering to this little passage of Scripture, and the importance there is attached to it? Did not Christ in His preaching enjoin it upon his humble followers to love one another? Certainly He did. He came to do good. He came on a mission of love, and well did He perform His mission. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." It is through brotherly love running from heart to heart, that we may know that we have passed from death unto life. Now if we have not this love abiding in us, let us, at once, seek for it; for without it we have no promise of an inheritance with the saints of God.

For one, I never felt more like serving God than I do now. When I started out to meet the Lord, I determined not to give over the conflict until I see the King in His beauty. I expected to meet with trials on the way; but thus far I have been enabled to overcome them. Praise God! My course is onward. I am on a journey for Life—Life—eternal Life! is the object I have in view. Soon the victory will be won. Our long-expected King is coming soon. Let us not be disheartened, but rejoice; for Zion's Avenger is strong to save, and He will save His people from the hand of the oppressor. The Lord has had a hand in the move of His people, and He will not leave them; no, NEVER. Then we will not yield to the keen edge of disappointment, but trust in God. And soon we will shout victory! Hallelujah; for worthy is He that cometh to reign. My prayer is, "Come, Lord Jesus," and come quickly.

Yours, in hope of soon seeing the little flock safe in the Kingdom,

LYDIA M. COLLINS.

For the Crisis.

A Few Thoughts to Eastern Friends.

BY W. PRATT.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Do not think because I have not written you, I have forgotten or intend to slight you. The truth is, I cannot get time to write all personally. I have promised to write many, but as yet I have not been able to fulfil my pledge. I always intend to answer all letters, and as far as I have knowledge I have done so. My absence from home may cause delay, hence you must have patience.

Since I have been in the West, I have found enough to do. I have labored the most of the Winter in Central Illinois. Spent, however, some ten days laboring in Iowa. Aside from that, my labors have been confined to this State.

Soon after my arrival in the West, I baptized one soul in the Old Mississippi. I spent a week in Iowa City. There were influences—railroad celebrations, and other things, that prevented much good being accomplished. Perhaps the seed sown will bring forth fruit in due season. I found a few good brethren there. Here I met with Br. Graham from New York—an Advent Preacher. His health was poor. Met also Br. Skinner—a Baptist preacher who has embraced the life and death views, and is a Pre-millenialist. Br. Carver from Ohio, and others, who are looking for speedy deliverance. I accompanied Br. Graham to his humble cottage—log cabin—a distance of some 12 miles from the city. I had a very pleasant visit with him and family. Could but contrast his nice furniture they brought with them, with the humble cabin in which they dwelt. Ah, thought I, it is much better than the dens and caves of the earth in which the saints had to take up their abode in past days. Again, I thought, few perhaps East would be willing to leave friends and all they hold dear to go West—live in a log house, and put up with the deprivations of a new country. Those coming West must not expect the conveniences of New England.

Br. Graham and family seem to count it all among the light trials—not worthy to be compared with the future glory. His health had been poor since August last. Had a siege of the ague. His labors were, by God's blessing, taking effect, and he had to lay down his arms when the battle was on the turning point, in consequence of sickness.

Some one of the "baser sort" poisoned his horse, and it died. Those that did it belong to the "little horn" family, no doubt, for it was done in connection with a discourse on that power. This was quite a loss to our brother just after he had spent much in coming on; for he needed the animal more than ever. I expect soon to see him again, as I am going to help him break up that new field, the Lord willing.

Since I returned, I have been laboring some 150 miles South of this place. In the eight weeks I was absent, I preached forty-nine sermons in different counties, to some effect, I trust. I had some hinderances by other denominations, which prevented much being accompanied. The result I leave. It was very difficult to get a house for any length of time, in which we could hold meetings. The different denominations were holding protracted meetings which broke up the appointments and deprived us of a house. There seemed to be much strife among the sects to get the first position. Each party striving for the first claim, or to get the pre-eminence over the other. In this I may misjudge, but acts speak for themselves.

Of course, all are friends, but when the Advent doctrine is introduced, they have but little relish for that. Nevertheless, truth carries a weight with it. Ah, it is a savor of life or death. But I will not write more now. If you have room to spare in your columns, and have nothing more interesting to fill your paper, I may frequently contribute a mite. We have been quite well most of the time except colds.

W. PRATT.

P. S. If any friends wish information from the West, I will cheerfully write and give them all I know.

W. P.

BR. PRATT:—Whenever the Lord will, we would be happy to hear from you.—ED.

For the Crisis.

The two Sacrifices and two Suppers.

BY WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

The sacrifice for the sins of the world—the sacrifice for the fowls of heaven—the marriage supper of the Lamb—the supper of the great God, contrasted:

The great atonement has been made,
The sacrifice been given;
And hungry mortals now may feast
On the rich bread of Heaven.

"Come, then, all things are ready now,"
The banquet is prepared,
The invitation is to all,
By all it may be shared.

Beloved of God: in contemplating this interesting subject, we purpose to confine ourselves to a few of the most prominent points which naturally present themselves; and may the grace of God which bringeth salvation through Jesus, the Messiah, quicken us together with Him as we proceed. Amen.

The first point, then, to which we would advert is, that GREAT SACRIFICE for the sins of the world made by the ever blessed God, in the person of His dearly beloved Son Jesus, and expressed in those memorable words, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish but have everlasting life." Here is an incomparable sacrifice. Pause, and think of it. Behold the immaculate Son of the eternal Father, divesting himself, as it were, of all his august majesty and primeval glory which he had "before the world was"—laying aside His regalia of state, and bidding adieu, for a season, to the blissful courts of Heaven, to an angelic society, and the more immediate presence of Deity, descending on his beneficent mission to our fallen planet, and sojourning here among a race of rebellious mortals, subjected to numerous privations, enduring shame and contumely, suffering pain and wo, "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief"—and finally, through wicked hands

He dies! the Prince of glory dies.
Lo! Salem's daughters weep aloud;
A sudden darkness shrouds the skies,
A sudden trembling shakes the ground.

Here is a sacrifice enstamped with the Divine impress. "For scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." It is rightly styled then in theology, "the sacrificial atonement," and in Scripture, "the propitiation for our sins," Here is truly a noble feature in the economy of redemption, the contemplation of which should inspire our hearts with the liveliest sentiments of gratitude for the divine benevolence. Well might holy "angels desire to look into these things.

And what finite mind can fully trace the joyous effects which will flow throughout all the blissful cycles of eternity, to every true believer in Jesus, consequent upon this sacrificial offering, beginning prior to the expulsion of our first parents from Eden—intimated in that precious promise, "it (the seed of the woman, Jesus) shall bruise thy head;" and more clearly developed in the prophetic era thus: "thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin:" and still more comprehensively set forth under the Gospel dispensation in the parable of the marriage of the king's son thus: "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son, and sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding; and they would not come. Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, tell them which were bidden, behold, I have prepared my dinner, my oxen and my fattlings are killed, and all things are ready; come, unto the marriage." Or, as is recorded in another place, "A certain man made a great supper and bade many. And sent his servants at supper time, to say to those that were bidden, COME, FOR ALL THINGS ARE NOW READY."

This event will be fully consummated in the Apocalyptic "marriage supper of the Lamb," amid the choral melodies of seraphim and cherubim, the harmonious anthems of innumerable redeemed intelligences, and the victorious shouts from the lips of sainted myriads in crowning Jesus King and Lord over all the renovated earth. "And I heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints." Hence, "Blessed are they which are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb."

Though we have but hastily glanced at this portion of our subject, yet we trust the relation existing between the sacrifice and supper is readily perceived, and that relation also in which the whole human family stands towards the same. Observe, the Lamb has been slain—the atonement made—a way opened for the happy recovery of man—"All things are now ready," for their reception—the "robe"—"the best robe"—the "ring"—the "shoes"—the "fatted calf"—the "music!" The messengers of God have gone out in haste with the blessed invitation to all, "Come; for all things are now ready." O, who would not embrace so rich an offer as this? augmenting thereby, the joy of "the angels of God," (Luke, 15: 9, 10.) And does not he who would reject it, do so at the loss of immortal glory? Those who reject the invitation to the antepast of the marriage supper of the Lamb, as presented in the Gospel of the Kingdom, will never be called to participate in that glorious Jubilee of "the nations which are saved." But this is not all. There remains another sacrifice—another supper with which all such will have to do, which brings us to the consideration of

THE SECOND PART.

Now gather, every hungry bird,
And all the fowls of heaven;
A sacrifice is made for you,
A sumptuous feast is given.
The flesh of kings—of mighty men—
Of captains, great and small,
Come, eat your fill and satiate,
The supper is for all.

The sacrifice to which we would now lead your attention, is one of an entirely different character from that we have just discussed. We find that this sacrifice is identified with the impending catastrophe—the closing scenes of this wicked world—that it is made by the omnipotent God for a specific purpose, namely, to vindicate His attribute, justice, in the manifestation of His Judgment upon the wicked nations of the earth, which will result in the preparation of a great supper for the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven and the beasts of prey. We are aware that this passage, (Rev. 19: 17, 18,) by most commentators is regarded as most highly figurative—simply denoting the ascendency of Protestantism and its final triumph in the extermination of the papal power. We cannot think, however, that the passage is confined to this at all, and do not feel disposed to endorse any exposition we have yet met with on this singular text. That the downfall of the papacy is associated with this event, we have no doubt; but the idea that this event symbolizes exclusively the destruction of popery in the exaltation of protestantism, we must dissent from. Our humble opinion, (notwithstanding the book of Revelation abounds with figures and symbols) is, that this Scripture will have an actual and literal fulfilment. Not but that it may, together with this, symbolize a great moral revolution. yet we are strongly of the opinion, that this text will have a literal fulfilment—that carnivorous birds and beasts of prey, will actually feed upon incalculable quantities of human flesh in the great day of God.

We now proceed to show why we conclude this text will have a literal accomplishment. 1st, let us look at the chronology of this transaction. It is at the terminus of the seventh trumpet and sixth vial. It is located subsequently to the marriage of the Lamb, and the opening of the heavens which unfolds Jesus as the mighty Warrior accompanied by His heavenly-clad army on white horses.

We now turn back and hastily run over a few prophetic Scriptures, and observe whether they accord with, and affirm a literal view of our text.

"Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures? To me belongeth vengeance and recompence; their feet shall slide in due time; for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste," Deut. 32: 34, 35. "For I lift my hand to heaven, and say, I live forever. If I whet my glittering sword, and my hand take hold on judgment; I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me. I will make mine arrows drunk with blood; and my sword shall devour flesh," vs. 40–42. "Behold the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate, and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it. . . . And I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity. . . . I will make a man more precious than fine gold, even the golden wedge of Ophir, (implying that a very few will be spared, comparatively, in the general destruction, when God shall arise) and will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the Lord of Hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger," Isa. 13: 9, 11–13. "And it shall come to pass at that day that the Lord will punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth," Isa. 24: 25. "Come near, ye nations, to hear; and hearken, ye people; let the earth hear, and all that is therein; the world, and all things that come forth of it. For the indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies; he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter. Their slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcasses, and the mountains shall be melted with their blood. And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved and the heaven shall be rolled together as a scroll. . . . For my sword shall be bathed in heaven; it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse to judgment," Isa. 34: 1–5. "I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the Lord of hosts. Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, the Lord shall roar from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation; he shall mightily roar upon his habitation; he shall give a shout, as they that tread the grapes, against all the inhabitants of the earth. A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations, he will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day, from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground," Jer. 25: 29–33. "For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries; and the sword shall devour, and it shall be satiated and made drunk with their blood; for the Lord God of hosts hath a sacrifice in the north country by the river Euphrates." Jer. 46: 10. "And thou, son of man, Thus saith the Lord God, speak unto every feathered fowl, and every beast of the field, assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh and drink blood; ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth. . . . And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you. That ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, with mighty men, with all men of war, saith the Lord God, Ezek. 39: 17–20.

The passages here transcribed most assuredly point to the closing scenes of earth, the epoch marked in the passage of the Apocalypse under consideration. The language obviously indicates a complete, universal slaughter of the wicked. We cannot conceive that it admits of a solitary exception. It evidently embraces the entire mass of the ungodly. e. g. "I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth." Again, "The slain of the Lord shall be at that day, from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth."

3rd. The same catastrophe is brought to view by the Revelator, (Rev. 14: 19, 20,) under the figure of a great winepress. "And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine, i. e.,—the wicked—and cast it (them) into the great winepress of the wrath of God. And the winepress was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs."

By carefully examining these Scriptures and others of a kindred nature, (of which there are many, pointing down to the coming Crisis,) it will be difficult for the candid mind to evade the force of the argument, that the event presented in the text will literally be accomplished. The very nature of the case must establish this conclusion.

Reflect, for a moment, upon the woeful state of things in connection with this event. "Nation rising against nation, and kingdom against kingdom"—the ancient declaration of Jehovah verified: "I will give all the wicked to the sword"—every man's hand lifted up against his brother. See dynasties overthrown—kingdoms demolished—ecclesiastical systems swept away—institutions, civil and military, with all their pomp and splendor dashed in pieces—nations rushing to and fro like the waters of the troubled deep. Behold the entire world in one terrific and bloody struggle! How long, think ye, must such an awful state of things continue, ere it will necessarily result in the preparation of what God has called all the fowls of heaven and beasts of the field to come, and partake of, namely, "The Supper of the Great God?"

Here we see, then, that God, in the imposing movements of His providence, vindicates His justice by the manifestations of His righteous judgments upon the wicked and rebellious nations of the earth, while the fowls of heaven and the beasts of the field are provided with such banquet as shall satisfy their voracious appetites.

Thus, it appears, that the Sacrifice provides the Supper—that the Supper consists of flesh and blood furnished by the innumerable "slain of the Lord," from which every feathered fowl and beast of prey will be permitted to appease their hunger. "That they may eat the flesh of kings, the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of ALL men, both free and bond, both small and great." Surely, "The anger of the Lord shall not return, until He have executed, and till He have performed the thoughts of His heart; in the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly." And in view of this great and terrible day of the Lord, do we not see the force of the Revelator's inquiry? "Who shall be able to stand?"

And now let us compare the Sacrifices and Suppers and mark the striking disparity between them. Observe in the first, "This unspeakable gift,"—God spared not his only Son, but delivered Him up for our offences, and raised Him again for our justification. Consequently, provision is made in the everlasting Gospel for helpless, starving, dying men, that they might be cleansed from their sins by the blood of Jesus, clothed with the garments of salvation, filled with good things from the treasury of Heaven, and live forever, praise God—which will finally result in the Apocalyptic feast, or "Marriage Supper of the Lamb," Hallelujah! That will be celebrated by redeemed and holy beings through the ages of eternity; the supper of the great God will be limited to a period of time sufficient to vindicate the justice of God. The participants in the former are "sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise," "and kept by the power of God through faith," in Jesus; the partakers in the latter are the condemned of God, because they believed not in His Son. The former are not hurt with the second death; the latter must suffer the pangs of that death—their merited and inevitable doom. The former enjoy an earnest of this glory to be revealed; "being justified by faith, they have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus, the Messiah, and rejoice in hope, the love of God is shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost which is bestowed upon them; the latter also experience an antepast in those painful apprehensions, that "certain fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery indignation," which will ultimately destroy all the adversaries of Jehovah. In the former case it was optional for each to accept or refuse the gracious invitation; in the latter it is compulsory—the impenitent sinner is compelled to share in the awful scene.

Again: these eventful scenes open before a wonder-stricken world, at one and the same time. While the sainted myriads are chanting their victorious anthems before the great white throne unto the August One which sitteth thereon, the rejecters of God in the Gospel of His Anointed, are enduring "tribulation and anguish," as it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to such.

And now, in conclusion, what do we learn from the contemplation of this momentous subject? Is there not much presented for serious reflection?

We observe then, that each individual of the human family must either be identified with the Marriage Supper of the Lamb, or the Supper of the Great God. Ye who have chosen the former, gladly embraced the proffered invitation given in the Gospel—in all your trials and afflictions, which number many, (Ps. 90: 19,) your persecutions, your adversities under all the vicissitudes of this present life, do not be discouraged; look upward—look forward—let your hearts be cheered with the prospect of soon beholding the glad morning of the resurrection in all its ineffable splendor and glory, and Jesus coming in clouds of Heaven to redeem and glorify His Church. Then shall ye partake of His glory in the coronation scene now at hand.

O hail, happy day!
That brings us joy without alloy,
O hail, happy day!

And O, impenitent sinner, living devoid of hope and without God in the world, wilt thou thus remain, thy stubborn heart still proof against Almighty love, running wild thy downward course to death, away from God, from Christ, from every holy influence designed to save, art thou determined thus to live? An awful doom awaits thee—the dreadfulness of which no human tongue may yet unfold, from which there's no escape—mark well thy fate. Wilt thou still resist sweet mercy's call? 'tis written, there in characters most legible, in God's Holy Book—the sacred volume read, and ponder deep. Then turn, O turn, while yet there's hope; from all thy sins turn unto God and live. Do not delay. Time's last moments now are near to close, and the strong angel-cry—"'Tis done" will soon be heard, while thundering tones of the last Trump shall shake the earth and skies, and then quick summoned with the millions that shall rise either to mingle with those who shall celebrate "The Marriage Supper of the Lamb," or be consigned among that number who shall constitute "The Supper of The Great God."

Finally: If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be, Anathema Maran-atha, (i. e. accursed when the Lord cometh.)

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you—my love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

Elizabeth City, N. Y., Jan., 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. L. M. Collins.

BATH, N. H., Feb. 18, 1856.

BR. MERRIAM:—I have long felt it my duty to write to the little flock. I must confess, however, that I have been too dilatory in this respect. But, dear Br., be of good cheer; I am thankful that the Lord has given us one like yourself to feed the household with meat in due season.

I have not been unmindful of your laborious task to serve the members of Father's family; nor of the many trials and temptations with which my brethren and sisters have been surrounded. Some, I find, have not only the darts of the enemy hurled at them, but what is still worse, they are wounded in the house of their friends. Even those with whom "they had taken sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company, have whet their tongue like a sword, and bent their bows, to shoot their arrows, even bitter words." When I see such a lack of brotherly love, my heart sinks within me. And I am led to exclaim, O, that mine eyes were a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the restoration of that love in the Church which the Apostle desired should be continued.

"Let brotherly love continue." Brn. and sisters, do we consider the importance of adhering to this little passage of Scripture, and the importance there is attached to it? Did not Christ in His preaching enjoin it upon his humble followers to love one another? Certainly He did. He came to do good. He came on a mission of love, and well did He perform His mission. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." It is through brotherly love running from heart to heart, that we may know that we have passed from death unto life. Now if we have not this love abiding in us, let us, at once, seek for it; for without it we have no promise of an inheritance with the saints of God.

For one, I never felt more like serving God than I do now. When I started out to meet the Lord, I determined not to give over the conflict until I see the King in His beauty. I expected to meet with trials on the way; but thus far I have been enabled to overcome them. Praise God! My course is onward. I am on a journey for Life—Life—eternal Life! is the object I have in view. Soon the victory will be won. Our long-expected King is coming soon. Let us not be disheartened, but rejoice; for Zion's Avenger is strong to save, and He will save His people from the hand of the oppressor. The Lord has had a hand in the move of His people, and He will not leave them; no, NEVER. Then we will not yield to the keen edge of disappointment, but trust in God. And soon we will shout victory! Hallelujah; for worthy is He that cometh to reign. My prayer is, "Come, Lord Jesus," and come quickly.

Yours, in hope of soon seeing the little flock safe in the Kingdom,

LYDIA M. COLLINS.

For the Crisis.

A Few Thoughts to Eastern Friends.

BY W. PRATT.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Do not think because I have not written you, I have forgotten or intend to slight you. The truth is, I cannot get time to write all personally. I have promised to write many, but as yet I have not been able to fulfil my pledge. I always intend to answer all letters, and as far as I have knowledge I have done so. My absence from home may cause delay, hence you must have patience.

Since I have been in the West, I have found enough to do. I have labored the most of the Winter in Central Illinois. Spent, however, some ten days laboring in Iowa. Aside from that, my labors have been confined to this State.

Soon after my arrival in the West, I baptized one soul in the Old Mississippi. I spent a week in Iowa City. There were influences—railroad celebrations, and other things, that prevented much good being accomplished. Perhaps the seed sown will bring forth fruit in due season. I found a few good brethren there. Here I met with Br. Graham from New York—an Advent Preacher. His health was poor. Met also Br. Skinner—a Baptist preacher who has embraced the life and death views, and is a Pre-millenialist. Br. Carver from Ohio, and others, who are looking for speedy deliverance. I accompanied Br. Graham to his humble cottage—log cabin—a distance of some 12 miles from the city. I had a very pleasant visit with him and family. Could but contrast his nice furniture they brought with them, with the humble cabin in which they dwelt. Ah, thought I, it is much better than the dens and caves of the earth in which the saints had to take up their abode in past days. Again, I thought, few perhaps East would be willing to leave friends and all they hold dear to go West—live in a log house, and put up with the deprivations of a new country. Those coming West must not expect the conveniences of New England.

Br. Graham and family seem to count it all among the light trials—not worthy to be compared with the future glory. His health had been poor since August last. Had a siege of the ague. His labors were, by God's blessing, taking effect, and he had to lay down his arms when the battle was on the turning point, in consequence of sickness.

Some one of the "baser sort" poisoned his horse, and it died. Those that did it belong to the "little horn" family, no doubt, for it was done in connection with a discourse on that power. This was quite a loss to our brother just after he had spent much in coming on; for he needed the animal more than ever. I expect soon to see him again, as I am going to help him break up that new field, the Lord willing.

Since I returned, I have been laboring some 150 miles South of this place. In the eight weeks I was absent, I preached forty-nine sermons in different counties, to some effect, I trust. I had some hinderances by other denominations, which prevented much being accompanied. The result I leave. It was very difficult to get a house for any length of time, in which we could hold meetings. The different denominations were holding protracted meetings which broke up the appointments and deprived us of a house. There seemed to be much strife among the sects to get the first position. Each party striving for the first claim, or to get the pre-eminence over the other. In this I may misjudge, but acts speak for themselves.

Of course, all are friends, but when the Advent doctrine is introduced, they have but little relish for that. Nevertheless, truth carries a weight with it. Ah, it is a savor of life or death. But I will not write more now. If you have room to spare in your columns, and have nothing more interesting to fill your paper, I may frequently contribute a mite. We have been quite well most of the time except colds.

W. PRATT.

P. S. If any friends wish information from the West, I will cheerfully write and give them all I know.

W. P.

BR. PRATT:—Whenever the Lord will, we would be happy to hear from you.—ED.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 32.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF

JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis

Faith in God.

By D. N. Kidder.

"And he said behold the fire and the wood; but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?" Gen. 22: 7. How often have I tried to imagine the feelings, and to get a glimpse of the faith and confidence of this truly Christian man, while on his journey to the place where he had been directed to offer his only son for a burnt offering! See them as they silently pass along, bearing the required articles, as the lad supposes, till, at once, the thought came rushing to his mind with regard to the lamb, and he anxiously inquired, "father, see here is the wood and the fire, but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?" Imagine, if possible, the emotions of that father as he looks upon that promising son, his eyes beaming with filial love as he makes the inquiry. Surely naught but consecration entire could enable him to make the reply, "My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering."

Thus I believe it is with every truly consecrated child of God in these days. They plainly discover a highway, hidden from the sight of the ungodly and worldly professor, cast up for the redeemed, and letting go the world and their good name, they walk right out upon the plain promises of God's word regardless of the scoffs and contempt of friend or foe—all things laid upon the altar—with the strongest assurance that God will provide. When we thus present ourselves, however poor in this world's goods—the way looking dark and the door apparently closed against us—God does accept the willing mind, and provide himself an offering.

Within the last few days an incident has occurred in my own experience which has forcibly reminded me of this truth. When I sent my last remittance for the Crisis, it was the last cent I had, and I thought within myself, when this subscription is out, what shall I do without the paper? I regard it next to my Bible. Here I am scoffed at and scorned—friends unwilling that I should read, much more that I should pay for the Crisis. I unworthy and unwilling to receive it without some little compensation to its devoted conductors, and what shall I do? The thought came to my mind, "Trust in the Lord—no good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly." If I am His, and the perusal of the paper is for my good, He will provide. Thus I stood and watched with no little interest the arrival of each no. till the last but one. About that time a relative called, and after stopping a few moments, he took from his pocket-book a dollar note, inquiring if I wanted it? I replied almost involuntary, while my eyes instantly filled with tears and nearly prevented my speech, "yes, thank the Lord. I thought He would provide," and told him what I intended to do with it. And now here enclosed, I send the same to you to pay for the Crisis another six months, should time continue so long, and with an increase of living faith in God's word, I ask, is it not better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in princes?

I am more and more convinced of the exceeding sinfulness of unbelief—distrusting Him who hath said, "all power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." Never have I viewed this wicked, cruel sin in such light before, and never before has that little word, faith, appeared so full of meaning, and clothed with such beauty, excellency and glory as now; and, at times, within the last two years, I am led to inquire, why such life, light, faith, love and glory filling the soul, if laboring under error? It cannot be. I have earnestly sought with all my heart to know the truth, and have a strong desire and determination to obey the same; and never, for one moment, have I seen cause to repent, or retrace my steps, or even to look back. No; onward, onward is continually sounding in mine ears, while daily the light of divine truth plainly shows that the word of God is being and will be fulfilled to the very letter; and that even before our eyes, and, in such a manner, that no sincere lover of Christ can fail to see, if they WATCH as He has commanded them to do. But how painfully true will be that Scripture which saith, "Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth? How few of the great mass of professed Adventists, will be ready and waiting for Christ—the glorious, triumphant King—when He comes, even should that event transpire the ensuing spring. How few will welcome him back to earth again! Nevertheless, there will be a company that will wait for Him from Heaven.

O, my dear Brn. and Srs., one and all, try to be found in that company—hold on to God a little longer—His strong arm will surround you—He will not let the waters overflow you—He careth for them that are His, and will gather the wheat into the garner. Try to have all that mind that was in Christ—our living Head—bear with meekness and patience the scorn, contempt and ridicule that is heaped upon your head for Christ's sake. Love and pray for your enemies. This will require you to dig deep and lie low; nevertheless, it can he done. Your are not to wait for your enemy to break down, confess and ask your forgiveness, no! you must forgive from your very heart the selfsame day; for none will presume to live a day without prayer, and this is the example. We must live according to the pattern, or we are none of His. Truly the way is straight and few there be that find it. It requires all the Christian graces to be brought into perfect and complete exercise, to make a Christian. Daniel said that many should be purified, made white and tried; and if these are the days spoken of by that prophet, let us see to it that we endure the trial even to the end. We need to pray much that we may be kept by the power of God through faith, in order to abide the day of His coming which is close at the door. Amen and amen.

Your sister, waiting for redemption,
Bristol, Feb. 23, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Burnham.

BRO. MERRIAM:—Our Brethren all over the land are rousing up, and prospering in the work of the Lord. I hear blessed reports from far and near. O, it is like cold water to the thirsty soul! Praise the Lord. Let all be encouraged, we will soon be home. We will not faint or grow weary now, since we have come so far. Let Devils howl, let demons trifle, let men mock, let apostates reproach, let hell and earth combine their rage. We are on the right course, and God helping, we will finish it in triumph. Amen, and amen.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis,

Duty of Watchfulness.

By A. Ross.

BRO. MERRIAM:—Having enjoyed the privilege of spending a Sabbath with friends in my native town, which has not been the case before for some length of time, I seat myself to communicate a few thoughts to the scattered flock of God. I confess I never felt more unworthy of the undertaking than I do now. And were it not for the conviction I feel that it is my duty, my inability to instruct or edify, would keep me from making the effort.

It is known and felt by every one, that we have fallen upon strange times. Not only the Bible student, but the statesman sees in the events of the day as they pass in grand review, the sure precursors of a coming storm. And though, at present, there may be a more pacific state of things in appearance, which will give the world one more opportunity of raising the false cry of peace and safety, I believe it will only prove to be a lull before the general storm which will sweep earth with the besom of destruction. Now is the time to set a constant watch lest we stumble upon the dark mountains of unbelief, and the Master come and find us sleeping. Jesus says: "What I say unto you, I say unto all, WATCH." This commandment is general in its application. It does not merely apply to persons of some particular calling, but to all, in every condition. To the minister of Christ who labors in word and doctrine, and also to the lay member acting in a more private capacity. Says the Alpha and Omega—"if thou wilt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief." O, how significant the term, watch,—when viewed in a Biblical light it implies, 1. Inspection. 2. Prospection. 3. Expectation.

1. Inspection signifies an oversight, or close examination of our hearts in the light of God's revealed word. How necessary this self-examination. David prayed that God would teach him the number of his days, that he might apply his heart to wisdom. And again he says: "Stand in awe and sin not; commune with your own heart upon your bed and be still." Again: "I call to remembrance my song in the night. I communed with mine own heart, and my spirit made diligent search." Says the Apostle Paul, in writing to the Corinthians, "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith, prove yourselves. Know ye not that Christ is in you except ye be reprobates?" Again: "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat."

An inspection of our thoughts,—our motives,—our intentions and purposes, makes it necessary that we have some standard to bring ourselves to. To whom shall we look as a model of holy living, save Him who lived our example and died our sacrifice? View Him as His character is set forth in the record His Father has given of Him. Majestic sweetness sits enthroned upon His brow,—while His lips—O, how full of grace and truth. No angry passion lurks in His bosom, no cruel envy there. When smitten upon one cheek, He turned the other also. When persecuted, "He threatened not, but committed himself to One who judgeth righteously." Is it in our hearts to imitate His example? Look and see. It is not enough for me to present a fair exterior, while the private character is corrupt. There are those whose public life is irreproachable—they make a fair show in the flesh—are eloquent in the pulpit, and draw around them a throng of admirers; but "unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united." When He who searches the hearts, and tries the reins of the children of men, shall come in judgment, where will such persons be found? Only one answer can be given. God save us from making an empty boast of inward joys and sins forgiven, while we are slaves to lust.

2. To Watch, implies Prospection, or the act of looking forward in anticipation of a good time coming. Now the Lord has promised us such a time, when the pilgrim will be blest with immortality. Hence the consistency of looking forward to the day of deliverance, and earnestly desiring its arrival—where, rivers of gladness water all the earth, and clothe all climes with beauty. The reproach of barrenness is gone—the fruitful field laughs with abundance, and the land once lean, or fertile, only in its own disgrace, exults to see the thistle curse repealed.

3. To Watch, signifies Expectation, or hope, trust, prospect of good. Men who engage in some worldly enterprise, endure the incidental hardship, because there is a prospect of reaping a benefit from their labor. It is on the same principle the Church is called to act. Our life in this state of mortality is that of hope and expectation. This world is not the home of the saint, in its present condition. It affords him no resting-place. He is but a way-faring man whose face is set toward the celestial city,—and while faith has explored its streets of gold, and looked with delight upon its pearly gates, and walls of jasper, and listened to the sweeping strains of melody chanted by seraphic legions, so enraptured is his soul with the bright prospect of coming glory, that earth's richest music falls lifeless around him; the hum of worldly business and the funeral knell greets his ear alike. Such persons are looked upon by the worldling as mad, or beside themselves, and the taunting remark is often made, "what would become of the world, if every body was like them?"

Similar remarks were made in primitive times, when the Church was so pure that she disdained the offer of any other arm of support save that of her Beloved. And shall we, upon whom the ends of the world are come, court worldly influence now, just as the Bridegroom is to appear for the redemption of His bride? God forbid. O let Zion's Watchmen all awake. Let the Church generally awake and shake off dull sloth; for now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed. Now we stand amid the closing scenes of the Gospel dispensation, in grand review—they are passing—the voice of the day of the Lord is heard, and soon the mighty man will cry bitterly; and while war is lifting his helmet to his brow, is the prayer of A. Ross.

"O God protect thy people now,"

For the Crisis.

PAWLING, Feb. 4, 1856.

DEAR BRO. MERRIAM:—I have thought it might benefit some way-worn pilgrim to give a brief history of my pilgrimage thus far. I have been travelling the road about ten years, since I started on my journey, I had been serving the prince of the power of the air for a long time, and it was hard getting released from him. In fact, he lays claim to me yet, and tries by every means in his power to win me back, sometimes by persuasion, and at other times by compulsion; but yet, I am striving to serve the Lord.

When I first experienced religion, I joined the M. E. Church on probation, and was finally taken in in full fellowship, baptized after their manner—that is, by sprinkling; but that did not satisfy my conscience. All went on quite well for about six months, when I fell in with a book which opened my eyes to the fact that the Churches was proud and corrupt; but while it showed me that the Churches were wrong, it did not give me anything better. I read my Bible, and prayed the Lord to show me the truth; but I was too much like one of old that asked, what is truth? and went away without waiting for an answer. I finally dissolved my connection with the Church entirely. Still I persevered in my study of God's word and prayer. I joined the Church again, and tried to feel that I was wrong and they were right. Afterward, in the course of God's providence, I came to this place and united with the Church.

After coming to this place, I was told about the monstrous doctrines of the Adventists. I thought the doctrine that man had no immortal soul, absurd. I could get along with the nearness of the Advent; but the idea that I had no pre-eminence over the beast at death, was too humiliating. But although I shunned them as heretics for a while, yet necessity drove me into their company, and their conduct showed, to my astonishment, that they were Christians. Finally, I ventured to converse upon the subject, confident, however, that they were mistaken, and I hoped to show them their errors. I sought from the Bible, (not from Church creeds) for evidence, to support my doctrine; but all my strong reasons ed me nothing, and, to my mortification, I found truth to be with those poor, despised ones. I had prayed to be led into the truth, and now, to be on the side of truth, I must become an outcast like them. What should I do, dependent as I was, upon the community for their patronage? I was in a narrow straight—the prospect of gain on the one hand, and truth with the prospect of poverty and contempt on the other. I almost made up my mind to stick to the Church, right or wrong; but this gave me no peace, and finally, I made up my mind to go for truth, and leave the event with Him who numbers the very hairs of our heads. I thank the Lord that after living about two years in this way, and passing through many disappointments, I am not tired of the pilgrimage, but believe we are near the promised land—and I still desire to be lead into the truth. *

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. E. Burnham.

NEWBURYPORT, March, 17, 1856.

BRO. BROWN:—I embrace the present moment to write, as you requested, my reasons for believing the flood of Noah's time to have been universal.

1. The Bible reads so. "All the high hills under the whole heaven were covered." See Gen. 7: 19.

2. Traditional intelligence is collected from all nations under Heaven of there having been a universal deluge.

3. The deposit of sub-marine matter, as pebbles, sand, shells, &c., presented to the examiner on all the hills and mountains of importance on the earth, prove that the waters of the sea have once rolled over the earth universally.

4. It is abundantly evident that Geologists have the right of it in saying, "what was once the bed of the ocean, is now the upland of the earth, in many places, and what was once the upland of the earth, is now the bed of the ocean in many places." This is proved by irrefutable testimony. Hence we argue universal aqueous change by the flood.

5. Thick-skinned animals that bear the characteristics of having been inhabitants of the tropical regions of the earth, near the equator—such as elephants—have been discovered by multitudes embedded in solid ice at the extreme north—as far as human beings have penetrated. Hence, we argue, that the waters of the seas have rolled over the equator, en masse, at some former time, and bore the animals northward, where they became ice-preserved. When was it but at the flood?

6. The existence of "frigid conglomerate" proves the universality of the flood. In the glaciers of frozen regions, several deposits of many sorts of animals, plants, and shells, in huge quantities, of various climes, lands, and seas, have been found tumbled, pell mell, in together—and thus frozen. This must have been done by universal aqueous action. What action but the flood?

7. Coal deposits are another argument of the universality of the flood. Coal is of vegetable origin, and gives proof of having been deposited by water action, indisputably. It is, in a manner, a universal action of water. To me, there is no difficulty in believing that action to have been the flood, some infidel Geologists to the contrary notwithstanding!

8. The peculiar lay of the strata of earth in many parts, to a great extent, shows it to have been the result of swift moving waters in mighty quantities at a time. This is also an almost universal thing; hence, again, universal action of water is argued.

9. Salt deposits in various parts, the result of aqueous action, is an argument of no small power.

See Fairholme's Scripture Geology, for proof of all this.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. L. D. Cannon.

PLEASANT VALLEY, March 6, 1856.

Col. 3: 12—14, "Put on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on Charity, which is the bond of perfectness."

We sometimes think and say, if any who have offended us will confess their fault, we will forgive; but we must remember, it is written, "Forgive and ye shall be forgiven." We may say again, James tells us to "confess our faults one to another." He also says, "Pray one for another." Christ says, "And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any; that your Father also which is in Heaven, may forgive you your tresspasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in Heaven forgive you your trespasses." This was spoken expressly to the followers of Christ. It is perfectly clear that there is no forgiveness with God towards us, if there is not forgiveness in our hearts towards our Brethren and Sisters, even if we count them our enemies.

Think of the answer given by our blessed Master, when inquired of by one of His disciples, "How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, until seven times; but until seventy times seven." Have we done this? If not, may the Lord help us to come up to the Gospel rule without murmuring. Let us cultivate a spirit of forgiveness one towards another, strive to come into the unity of the spirit, and heed the admonition of Paul, "And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor; and evil speaking, be put away from you with all malice; And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake, hath forgiven you." James says, "It ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth." This is not the spirit which we need in these last days, when looking for the revelation of Jesus Christ from Heaven. Let us ask God for the "Wisdom that is from above which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." Have we all that Charity spoken of, 1st Cor. 13 ch., "Charity that suffereth long, and is kind, charity that envieth not, charity that is not rash, is not puffed up. Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the Truth; Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity," or love, "never faileth."

If there be not love, there is no union. Christ has many times commanded us to love one another, and He says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." Let us prove ourselves what we profess to be—the disciples of Christ, by keeping His commandments, especially the last or new commandment, which He gave to His disciples as He was about to leave them. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore Love is the fulfilling of the law." We read in James, ch. 2, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, is guilty of all. Let love be without dissimulation." Let it be a heart work.

Paul speaks to the Thessalonian Church in language like this. "And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one towards another, to the end He may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all His saints." Peter would have us purify our souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren; and then he says, "See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently;" and speaking of brotherly love and kindness and charity, he says, "Let these things be in you and abound." We have no promise of an entrance into the Kingdom, if we are destitute of these Christian graces. He also says, "Be of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be piteous, be courteous. Not rendering evil for evil, nor railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing."

We are told that "The end of the commandment is "charity out of a pure heart, and a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned." John, the beloved disciple, gives us some very good lessons in his 1st Epistle 3d ch. Let us read and practice. Brethren and Sisters, let us all "Abide in Him;" that when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at His coming.

LUCIA D. CANNON.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, MARCH 26, 1856.

The Millenium.

No. 6.

Isa. 25: 6, "And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined."

"And in this mountain," i. e. Kingdom of God. The "feast of fat things" here spoken of, presents, in a most striking manner, the rich blessings and heavenly enjoyments of those who shall inherit that Kingdom. The richest viands—the most refined beverage is taken to represent the pure blessedness—the unalloyed pleasures of the immortal world.

"And He will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations." v. 7.

It will be recollected that Moses, after being admitted to the immediate glorious presence of the Deity, had become so far a partaker of the Divine nature, that the children of Israel could not endure the brightness of that glory, because of the unbelief and sinfulness of their hearts. But the saints having been changed into the image of Christ, from glory to glory, by the Spirit of the Lord, will be able to behold with open face the unvailed glory of God.

There has ever been since the fall, a cloud of darkness overhanging the world, and shrouding the earth in a pall of spiritual night; but when the regeneration of the heavens and earth takes place, the shades of moral darkness will flee away—the clouds will be dispelled—and all Nature will chant the praises of the great Renovator; the glory of God and the Lamb will beam from every object, and all the occupants of the celestial land will rejoice in the light of everlasting day. As the Prophet Zachariah expresses it, "The light shall not be clear nor dark," or not clear in one place and dark in another, as it is now, "but it shall be one (universal) day which shall be known to the Lord. "Not day, nor night," or, not a succession of day and night, as in the present world; "but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light," or, light in the evening as in the morning; in other words it shall be universal and everlasting day.

But when shall this scene of glory and triumph transpire? This question is fully answered in the succeeding verse.

"He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of His people shall He take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it." v. 8.

"He will swallow up death in victory"—says the Apostle, (1 Cor. 15: 54,) "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

"And the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces." In describing the glorified state of the Church in the renovated earth, the Revelator says, (Rev. 21: 4,) "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

"And the rebuke of His people shall He take away from off all the earth." The fact that death is swallowed up in victory, determines the chronology of this passage to be subsequent to the resurrection; and the fact that "the rebuke of God's people (or the curse) shall He take away from off all the EARTH," demonstrates the locality of the immortal Kingdom to be on the earth. I see no possible evasion of either of these points. If the residence of the saints after the resurrection is not here proved to be on the earth, it would seem impossible to prove any doctrine from the Bible; for surely no one will contend that the curse will be removed to prepare the earth for the abode of the wicked.

In v. 9, we have the shout of the ransomed when they behold the Deliverer coming to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saying, "Lo! this is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us." In vs. 10—12 we have the record of the destruction of the wicked, and in the succeeding ch. (26,) we have the song of redeeming love. "In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah; We have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee. Trust ye in the Lord forever; for in the LORD JEHOVAH is everlasting strength." Is. 26: 1–4.

Question.

BRO. MERRIAM: I would like to ask if there is more than one passage in the Bible which, if rightly interpreted, would teach the resurrection of the wicked?

The passage I refer to is in John 5: 28, 29. If the resurrection of the wicked is the teaching of the Bible, what shall I do (believing, as we do, that death is extinction of being) with Luke 20: 35, 36; also the entire 15th ch, of 1st Cor.?

A constant reader of the Crisis,

ALVAN T. BLISS.

REPLY.

If there be any doctrine taught in Scripture in clear and unequivocal language—a doctrine lying at the very basis of Christianity, as one of the most prominent features of the Divine economy, it is, in my apprehension, the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead through the atonement of Christ. Great and unspeakably glorious light has been thrown upon the nature of the atonement, within a few years past, through the Advent doctrines. It now appears clear as the noon-day sun, that Jesus "gave himself a RANSOM FOR ALL," 1 Tim. 2: 6—"a propitiation not for our sins only, but also for the sins of the WHOLE WORLD,' John 2: 2—that He "is the Savior of ALL MEN, especially of them that believe," 1 Tim.: 4; "And the bread that I will give is my flesh which I will give for the life of the world." Jno. 6: 51.

Now suppose the Allied Powers of Europe should pay the full price for the redemption of all the prisoners taken at Kars by Russia, would not every prisoner have to be delivered up by Russia? Could they reserve as many as they chose of the number? No; certainly not. The contract includes the entire body of prisoners. Just so Jesus paid the price of redemption for every son and daughter of Adam; and as without their own agency they go down into the grave, so without their own agency they will come up again. And those who believe God and fall in with His plan, will come up clothed with the power of an endless life: while those who willfully reject this blessed economy of grace, and do not through this hope purify themselves, even as He (Christ) is pure, will come up to reap corruption, and die the second death; because they would not accept of eternal life through Christ.

Suppose we should hear Jesus affirm, as He did in John 5: 28, that "the hour is coming when ALL THAT ARE IN THE GRAVES shall hear His voice, and shall come forth," could we have disputed His sacred authority, and replied that only a small proportion of them that are in the graves would ever hear His voice and come forth? Or suppose we should attempt this, and assert that none but those who had done good would come forth, and that would be at, or unto a resurrection of life, and that He should then assure us those also who had done evil would come forth unto the resurrection of DAMNATION, would not the fact be forever settled in our minds, that not only the righteous, but also the wicked would have a resurrection?

The resurrection here spoken of could not have been a moral resurrection, unless it can be made to appear that all who are spiritually dead will have aspiritual resurrection; it, therefore, must necessarily include all who are literally "in the graves."

Again; how can we possibly contend that there will be no resurrection of the wicked, or unjust, when the Scripture distinctly and unequivocally announces the fact "that there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and UNJUST?" Acts 24: 15.

The Apostle warned men in his day that after their hardness and impenitent heart they treasured up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath; and Peter assures us that the Lord knows how "to RESERVE the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished;" and that the heavens and earth that then were, "are reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." And when the judgment takes place, and the dead are resurrected, Rev. 20th ch., we find they are judged "according to their works," and "whosoever was not found written in the Book of Life, was cast into the lake of fire."

But you inquire, what shall be done with Luke 20: 35, 36? It reads thus: "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection."

The word here rendered "to obtain," is sometimes used in the sense of striking or hitting an object, which would remind us of the Apostle's idea of aiming at the mark for the prize, i. e., the immortal inheritance. The word rendered "world," is aioonos, age. The sense of the passage is, those who shall be accounted worthy to obtain or enjoy that immortal age, which we can apply to none but the righteous.

"And the resurrection from the dead"—the sense of the original does not appear to be fully conveyed by this expression, for the article is repeated in the Greek, being placed both before and after the noun, thus: tees anastaseoos tees ek nekroon, literally, the resurrection the from the dead. The force of the expression is this: the resurrection, viz. that which is from the dead. It is not simply a rising up of the dead, but a rising up from among the dead, which, to my apprehension, implies the "first resurrection."

Paul presents the same idea in the remark he made (Phil. 3: 11,) "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." The word here rendered "resurrection," is not the common word used in the Greek for resurrection. The word which is used in all other passages for resurrection is anastasis, that which is here used is exanastasis—implying the same thing as the expression in Luke 20: 35—viz. a rising up from among the dead. Thus Jesus is spoken of (Rom. 1: 4) as "declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead;" i. e., it was demonstrated by the power of God exercised in behalf of the Savior in bringing Him up from among the dead, that He was the beloved and honored Son of God; for while others were still held by the power of death, Jesus was delivered and "raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father."

In respect to the 15th ch, of 1st Cor., I would say, that the Apostle is writing to Christians, and therefore describes particularly the glory of the first resurrection, at which those who have done good are to come forth unto the resurrection of life. But he makes the platform of the resurrection in general, broad as that of the sentence of death; so that all who stood upon the one, will stand upon the other. "For as in (the first) Adam all die, so in Christ (the second Adam) shall ALL be made alive," v. 22. "But every man in his own order," v. 23. The word rendered "order" is used in military language to signify a certain division of an army, as a cohort, squadron, or legion. The idea here conveyed is, that every man will be resurrected in his own proper company. Thus this passage clearly reveals the fact that all the human race will be resurrected, and that there will be different classes of men at their resurrection.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. S. M. Tatro.

COLLINSVILLE, Feb. 3d, 1856.

BRO. MERRIAM: Having had a desire to write you for some time, I embrace this opportunity with pleasure. Am sorry to say that religion is at a very low ebb in this place, at present, although last summer the Adventists here supported three social meetings each week, and they were well attended. Now we have but one or two, and those but thinly attended. Really the reason is plainly enough to be seen. It is a want of that love spoken of in Rom. 13: 10, "that worketh no ill to his neighbor." We are too prone to forget that we should love our neighbors as ourselves. Our object should be to do all the good in our power, and as little harm as possible. Now to show our neighbors that we love them, is to deal honestly with them, and if we see them in danger, remind them of that danger. If we know a way of escape, point them to that; not treat them as spies when they come in to our meetings; for in doing thus, we exclude those whom we might otherwise benefit. Suppose they do not believe as we do, let them come to our meetings. We can present to them our blessed hope in the love and truth of it, and they may see the truth and embrace it, and be numbered among those that shall be saved, when Christ shall come to make up His jewels.

O, Brn. and Srs. let us try to exemplify the religion of our blessed Lord and Master in all we have to do with the world. As I perceive the nations are being gathered to the battle of the great day of God, I am led to cry out with all my soul, Lord, prepare me for thy coming and Kingdom. My prayer to God is, that He will unite His people in this place; for a house divided against itself cannot stand. When I think of the holy city that John saw coming down from God out of heaven, in its riches, and splendor, and sublimity; and that these glorious mansions are for the poor pilgrim, who has no continuing city, but is seeking one to come that will stand forever; my heart rejoices in the prospect. We shall meet the loved of earth whom death has sundered from us here. O, praise God—our deceased friends shall live again, and we, if faithful, shall with them be made immortal, and reign with Christ forever. O, that blissful home! where every object that meets the eye, and every sound that salutes the ear, will ravish the senses with unutterable delight!!

O, happy, thrice happy company! when once you have reached that blessed home, you will have gained endless bliss. You then can sing redeeming grace and dying love. O, I long to be there, where no sorrow or care can disturb that sweet heavenly rest. Then Brn. and Srs., seeing that so great joys await us, let us lay aside every weight—and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us.

Your Bro. waiting for redemption,

SAMUEL M. TATRO.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. Wm. McCullock.

NORTH ADAMS, Jan. 29, 1856.

BR. MERRIAM:—The Crisis is still a welcome visitor in my family, and I hope to have it continued while time shall last: for by it we get light upon the Scriptures of truth which mark the Pilgrim's pathway to the promised land. Truly, the land is nearing. This is a matter of rejoicing to those who endure the trials of their faith which is more precious than gold.

There are a few even in North Adams that have not denied His name, while there are others that have forsaken their first love, and forgotten that they were purged from their sins; and since they have tasted the good word of God, and the power of the world to come, and now fallen away, I fear that it is impossible to renew them again unto repentance. O what a condition such are in—the judgment of a righteous God about to overtake them, while they have laid down their watch, and are so overcharged with the cares of this life, that that day will come upon them unawares. But O, the happy meeting of those that have not proved traitors to the cause of Christ. I often think of the time when we shall not be separated from the faithful little flock that "shall walk with him in white."

Dear Brethren, let us remember our beloved editor at the throne of grace, that we may stay up his hands, not only by our prayers, but by our prompt attention to the pecuniary aid requisite for the support of the paper. This is a medium through which we can converse while separated from each other. May it be the will of God to have it continue till the revelation of His Son from Heaven, is the prayer of your unworthy Brother, seeking that rest that shall remain for the people of God.

WM. MCCULLOCK.

The prayers of the Church is what of all things I desire; for perhaps no one needs more wisdom and grace than myself, and few feel their unworthiness and responsibility more than the humble servant of the Church who has the care of the Crisis.—ED.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. S. Braley.

WARDSBORO, VT. Feb. 24th, 1856.

BRO. MERRIAM: Were I in the midst of a social meeting of Adventists, I should feel it a duty and privilege to stand as a witness, and give a reason of my hope. We as a people are a tried people; but our trials have been made the more severe for the want of knowledge, on our part. I have before me an old Chronological Index of Scripture History (by whom prepared I know not:) against the date 445 B. C. it reads thus: "Nehemiah is appointed deputy governor of Judea, and rebuilds Jerusalem." If the 2200 days commence at that point, the truthfulness of their Chronology will be tested soon. Have we any other evidence of the nearness of that great and tremendous day of the Lord, independent of Chronology? I think we have much. The signs are all in the past, the midnight cry is now being made.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us be of that number that shall be watching and waiting for the coming of the Lord. Viewing the subject as it really is, we have reason to take courage. We know it can be but a step to the consummation. We know the Lord hears and answers prayer; therefore let us pray without ceasing that we may be enabled through faith to lay hold of His exceedingly great and precious promises which are given to us, that through these we may become partakers of the divine nature; let us look at one of these above named promises, John 6: 37–40, "All that the Father giveth me will come to me, and him who cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out; for I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him who sent me. And this is the will of the Father who sent me, that of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it in the last day."

Yours in hope,

S. BRALEY.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. W. Shepherd

ELIZABETH CITY, N. J., March 14, '56.

BRO. MERRIAM: I learn through the Crisis that Bro. W. Sheldon proposes soon to take his journey west, in order to preach the everlasting gospel and herald forth the coming of the "King of kings," and that he wishes to take with him a good supply of tracts for gratuitous distribution. Now this seems like a laudable enterprise, and we would say God speed thee. The truth is, I have but little of this world's goods, but, notwithstanding, by the help of God, who giveth richly all things needful for us through Jesus Christ, I propose to become one of one hundred who shall make up the sum of one hundred dollars to supply Bro. Sheldon with tracts for his western tour. Some may say I cannot spare a dollar, but would like to contribute towards the object. Then give fifty cents' and if you cannot spare that, give twenty-five, and so let us have the sum made up at once. Now what is done, Brn., must be done quickly. There is no time for slumbering or sleeping here. God help the children to move in this matter. Make up the sum at once. Send in your portions to the Crisis office, and if there be any surplus, let that go toward sending the Crisis to God's poor. This is another matter that must be attended to, and that soon. The children are crying for bread, and they must be cared for. May God help us all to be up and doing, fill us with the Holy Ghost, with peace and joy in believing, that we may all abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost—that we may come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Yours in hope, waiting for the glorious appearing of the Messiah,

WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

I will be another to make up the hundred.—ED.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. J. B. Paine.

SUNCOOK, N. H., Feb. 18, 1856.

BRO. MERRIAM: I have often thought of the command of the Apostle Paul, Heb. 10: 25, to "exhort one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Although he speaks of assembling together, yet he often wrote to his brethren that he could not meet with, exhorting, warning and comforting them. I can say that I have been comforted by reading the warm-hearted exhortations of my dear Brn. and Srs., in the Crisis, from week to week. I thank the Lord for it. I often call to remembrance former days, and resolve anew that, the Lord helping me, I will not be of them that draw back unto perdition. When I meet with some who appeared engaged when definite time was preached, but now are engaged in the world with double eagerness, I feel like asking such to read the last part of the 10th ch. of Romans, and Luke 21: 24. The Lord help us to take heed how we read, and how we hear; "behold the Judge standeth before the door."

Brn. and Srs., let us try to stir up each other's pure minds by way of remembrance. I am perfectly satisfied that now is the time to watch and pray always, so that we may be accounted worthy to escape all those things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man. All the past blessings in our experience will do us no good, unless we hold out to the end. Oh! how can any one give up looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ; I cannot express my gratitude to the Lord for the sweet experience I have had in taking my lamp (Bible,) and going forth to meet the Bridegroom; and the subject is blessed to-day.

That we may be of that class who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, is the prayer of thy unworthy Bro. in Christ,

JOHN B. PAINE.

☞ We expect a supply of Bro. Decker's Pamphlets soon. Some portions of his argument on Chronology are presented in a new light. I have supposed that the 2300 days could not, with our present light, be extended beyond the Spring of '55: and therefore have not felt that interest in relation to the arrangement extending the prophetic points to 1856, that I otherwise should; for I supposed it would be impossible to fix the crucifixion at a later date than A. D. 37; since it has been understood by Chronologers that the reign of Tiberius Cæsar closed in A. D. 37 under whose administration Jesus was crucified. Bro. D. however quotes Josephus to show that after the death of Herod his son Philip was Tetrach of Trachonitis &c., for 37 years—that Philip died in the 20th year of Tiberius' reign, and that Tiberius reigned 22 years, 5 months and 2 days, which would make over 39 years from the death of Herod before the close of Tiberius' reign.

I have not had time to examine the subject much; but at all events, it seems comforting and refreshing to find any evidence from reliable authority, that the time is so near when Jesus will be revealed in all the excellency of His glory as Judge supreme and King over all the earth; when the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High.

For the Crisis.

Letter from A. M. S B.

BR. MERRIAM:—I desire to be ever ready for every good word and work, to do and suffer all God's holy will while in this probationary state. I am permitted to remain sympathising with all the true Israel of God in their afflictions, trials, persecutions, and temptations, and would gladly speak words of comfort to the weary, wayworn traveller to that better land—the heavenly Canaan—the recompense of the reward which Moses had respect unto—the inheritance promised unto Abraham and his seed for an everlasting possession. O what a glorious hope is ours! Paradise restored again in all its Eden beauty. And that great event so near, when a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes rule in judgment. And thou, lone pilgrim,

"Cheer thee, land is nearing."

Lift up thy heart rejoicing, redemption is nigh. The innumerable company which John saw, Rev. 7: 14, 'came up through great tribulation;" then faint not, nor be weary, endure to the end, Matt. 24: 13.

"The path of sorrow, and that path alone,
Leads to the land where sorrow is unknown.
No trav'ller ever reached that blest abode,
Who found not thorns and briers in the road.
Ah, be not sad, altho' thy lot be cast
Far from the flock, and in a boundless waste!
No shepherds' tents within thy view appear,
But the chief Shepherd even there is near."

He has said, "fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom." Sweet words of comfort—and "Let not your heart be troubled." How many precious promises there are in God's holy book to Christ's little flock. Then let us examine and prove ourselves individually, whether we be in the tre faith. No time now to slumber when danger is so near.

"Up, O up, thou drowsy soldier,
Thou has but an hour to fight."

Then fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life. It is time we were all in a waiting position, with garments washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb, lamps trimmed and burning, oil in our vessels ready to hail the Heavenly Bridegroom with joy, and receive from Him the welcome plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." O, shall we be there to join that blessed throng?

"Haste and get ready—
List to the cry;
Loud it swells—it is the knell—
The close of Gospel day."

A. M. S. B.

For the Crisis.

Covetousness.

By H. Munger.

Br. Merriam:—Reading an article in your paper of March 5, from Bro. H. L. Hastings, recalled to my recollection some things that merit a severe rebuke among professed Adventists. Whether the right class of persons can be reached by my remarks, is doubtful; but if they read they will see that cognizance is taken of their course. I will mention a few facts that have come under my observation.

First, a Bro. was requested to come and labor on the Sabbath. He hired a carriage, went 25 miles, and filled the appointment. The people were wonderfully blessed, so much so, that they forgot to take up a collection, or to pay one cent of his expenses, for his conveyance, which was $4. He received a "God bless you," and "come again; for we have not had such a meeting for six months." This invitation came from a man who was wonderfully blessed at the time. He owned a very large farm—money at interest, and fruit in plenty; for he gave the Bro. two large ripe peaches—requesting him to be sure not to forget to come again soon. The Bro. remembered this visit, as he had to work four days to pay for his conveyance, two days were spent in going and coming, and he received two large peaches and a "God bless you."

Many of our brethren do not know what a privilege it is to travel and preach in some places, so I will give you one out of many profitable trips taken by Advent Preachers. A Bro. went 17 miles, met 30 or 40 brethren or cousins, and received a God bless you and 16 cents beside. A three cent piece was given by a man who was worth his thousands, and was looking for the Lord every day. He told me that he expected the Lord that week. The next day I found him shouting and very happy, and two teams ploughing for planting. This accounted for his 3 cent piece and loud shouting. It was in hopes to reap a large corn and tobacco harvest the next fall.

I could multiply cases like the above, but will stop here by saying, such persons are a curse to the cause of religion, and it would be a blessing if they would back out, and let the poor generous-hearted Christians know what to depend upon, that they might not stumble by leaning upon a broken staff to help support the cause of God. We will groan a little longer under these burdens, seeing the tares are among the wheat, knowing the harvest is near, and the reapers engaged, who will know the tares from the wheat, and will dispose of them, according to the word of God. God pity the covetous idolators.

Hiram Munger.

Chickopee Falls, March 8, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Meeting in Fairhaven.

According to appointment, we commenced our meetings Thursday morning, the 13th inst., and continued them four days, having in all, twenty meetings.

It was one of the most pleasant and profitable series of meetings I ever enjoyed. Several who have been wandering from the fold of Christ, were persuaded to return with weeping, and after confessing and forsaking their sins, received very rich blessings from the great Head of the Church.

We felt at each meeting that we were in a heavenly place in Christ Jesus. Hours seemed short when together, but we parted with the expectation of soon meeting in the everlasting Kingdom where no parting hands are given, or farewell words spoken.

The last evening we were together, their large and beautiful hall was filled with an attentive congregation, that seemed anxious to know the truth, and knowing, to believe and obey.

At the close of the evening meeting on Sunday, about one hundred set down to the Lord's table to partake of the emblems of the Savior's broken body, and spilt blood. It was a season of deep interest and profit to the lovers of Jesus.

We parted with strong resolutions to be good, patient and meek, that we may meet at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

"Praise the Lord for his wonderful works to the children of men." "Let everything that hath breath, praise Him."

Your Brother in Christ,

M. Grant.

The New Hymn Book.—The new Hymn Book, published by Elder Himes, is now 'out,' ready for all who desire it. The book embraces 769 pages, and is got up in most elegant style. A few of the hymns express sentiments which some of us do not believe, but the great majority of them express what we do believe. On the whole, it is a beautiful book.

The price of the Pulpit Edition, in cheap binding, is 80 cents each. Turkey and Gilt, $1,50.

Pocket Edition, cheap binding, 70 cents each. Gilt, $1,25.

Send orders for them to Elder J. V. Himes, Boston, Mass., or Elder Jonas Merriam, Editor of the World's Crisis.

Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, also, our Brethren are aware, is a very neat pocket and conference Hymn Book, which none of them should be without, since it expresses what we believe to be the truth, and costs but a trifle. See notice of it. Send orders to Bro. Merriam at Boston, or Bro. S. S. Brewer at Lawrence, Mass.

Edwin Burnham.

European Religious Intelligence.—France. Count Gasparin on Religious Liberty in Europe. Little as the principle of religious liberty is welcomed as yet by the governments of Europe, yet the number of its advocates among the leading men of most of the Protestant churches of Europe is constantly increasing. An admirable article on this subject is found in the Archives du Christianism, (the organ of the free Protestant church of France) from the pen of Count Agenor de Gasparin, one of the most pious, learned, and influential members of European Protestantism. He glances first over the map of Europe and sketches briefly the present state of legislation in the different countries. Mohammedanism in Turkey has not yet repealed the law which inflicts capital punishment on every Mussulman who turns a Christian. Russia is no less intolerant. There also only the Greek Church has the right of making converts. The evangelical missions among the heathens as well as Jews are suppressed. The Protestants of Courland and Livland and the Catholics of Poland are by the most revolting means forced into the State-church. In the kingdom of Greece the treatment of Rev. Mr. King, the American missionary, shows what the Greek Church would do if she had the power. The Roman Catholic Church remains faithful to the traditional spirit of persecution wherever the secular arm does not force her to abandon it. The constitutions of Italy (except Sardinia) and Portugal do not allow any other public worship than the Catholic; only foreigners are allowed to assemble for divine service if under the condition of not admitting any native. Spain guarantees in her new constitution to every individual the right not to be persecuted for his religious opinions, but she still shrinks from proclaiming the right of public worship for all men. Austria has made some concessions to Protestantism, for example, the right of receiving converts from Romanism; but no one is allowed to open a religious book without permission from the government, which is by no means liberal in granting it; it detests Protestantism. Confiscation of Bibles and destruction of the Hungarian mission are sufficient proofs of this. Sardinia has nobly entered upon a better way; the government shows that it is determined to maintain liberty everywhere and for all; but every new measure of this kind calls forth the most violent opposition on the part of the Roman Church. The French Government has repeatedly declared that it does not recognize the right of public worship for everybody; instead of liberty it grants only tolerations. Belgium is, with Sardinia, the only country with a predominant catholic population, where Protestants are fully free. Protestantism in Europe shows a more favorable disposition towards religious liberty than the other denominations. England and several cantons of Switzerland give to every sect the right of worshipping God according to the dictates of their conscience. In Holland the same is the case, if not by law, yet in fact. Prussia and Denmark have been guilty of many acts of intolerance; and Sweden, like Portugal and Rome, goes even so far as to make the civil rights dependent on membership in the National Church. Gasparin then blames the Protestants of Europe that they, while sending an embassy to Tuscany for the Madia, have been silent as to the persecutions still taking place in their own midst. He blames England in particular for still excluding the Jews from Parliament and for resisting the re-organization of the Roman Bishoprics. He concludes by showing that without a Church, separated from the world, and therefore separated from the nation and the State, it is impossible to establish religious liberty.

Speech of the Emperor of the French.—The session of the Senate for the year 1856 was opened on Monday, by the Emperor in person.

His imperial Majesty delivered the following speech:

"Peers and Senators,—On the last occasion of my assembling you, serious anxieties prevailed. The allied armies were engaged in a siege, where the obstinacy of the defence raised a doubt of success. Europe, uncertain, seemed to be awaiting the end of the struggle before pronouncing itself.

"To maintain the war, I asked of you a loan, which you voted unanimously, though the amount have appeared excessive.

"The rise in the price of provisions threatened the laboring classes with general inconvenience, and a disturbance of our monetary system caused a fear that business and labor would slacken. Thanks to your aid and to the energy displayed both in France and in England, and above all to the assistance of Providence, these dangers, if they have not entirely disappeared, have been for the most averted.

"A grand feat of arms at last decided in favor of the allies a struggle unexampled in history for its inveteracy. From that moment the opinion of Europe was more openly expressed. Our alliances were everywhere extended and strengthened.

"The third loan was completed without difficulty. The country gave me a fresh proof of its confidence by subscribing for a sum five times larger than that I asked for. It has supported with admirable resignation the sufferings inseparable from the dearness of provisions—sufferings alleviated by private charity, by the zeal of the municipalities, and by the 10,000,000 distributed to the departments The arrival of foreign grain has now produced a considerable fall; the anxiety caused by the disappearance of gold has diminished, and never has labor been more abundant or wages higher.

"The hazards of war have revived the military spirit of the nation. Never have there been so many voluntary enlistments, nor so much ardor amongst the conscripts designated by lot.

"To this brief expose of the present situation must be added facts of great political significance.

"The Queen of Great Britain, desiring to give a proof of her confidence and of her esteem for our country, and to make our relations more intimate, has come over into France. The enthusiastic welcome she received has proved to her how profound were the sentiments her presence inspired, and was of a nature to strengthen the alliance of the two peoples.

"The King of Piedmont, who, without looking behind him, embraced our cause with that courageous spirit which he had before exhibited on the field of battle, has also come to France to consecrate a union already cemented by the bravery of his soldiers.

"These sovereigns have beheld a country, lately so agitated and disinherited of its rank in the councils of Europe, now prosperous, peaceable and respected—making war not with the momentary delirium of passion, but with the calmness of justice and the energy of duty. They have seen that France that was sending 200,000 across the seas, convoking to Paris at the same time all the arts of peace, as if she meant to say to Europe, 'the existing war is to me only an episode. My ideas and my powers are always partly directed towards the arts of peace. Let us neglect nothing for a good understanding, and drive me not to throw into the field of battle all the resources and all the energy of a great nation.'

"This appeal seems to have been understood, and the winter, by suspending hostilities, favored the intervention of diplomacy. Austria resolved on a decisive step, which introduced into the deliberations the entire influence of the sovereign of a vast empire. Sweden linked herself more closely to England and France by a treaty that guaranteed the integrity of her territory. Lastly, the advice or the entreaties of all the cabinets reaching St. Petersburg, the Emperor of Russia, the inheritor of a situation he had not created, seemed to be inspired with a sincere desire to put an end to the causes that led to this sanguinary conflict. He determined to accept the propositions transmitted by Austria. The honor of his arms satisfied, it was to his own honor to give way to the clearly expressed wish of Europe.

"The plenipotentiaries of the allied and belligerent powers are now assembled in Paris to decide on the conditions of peace. The spirit of moderation and equity that animates them all necessarily creates the hope of a favorable result. Nevertheless, let us await with dignity the end of the Conferences, and be equally ready, if necessary, to draw the sword anew, or to extend the hand to those whom we have fairly fought.

"Whatever may happen, let us occupy ourselves with the means calculated to augment the strength and the riches of France. Let us if possible, draw closer the alliance formed by a community of glory and sacrifices, and of which peace will far better exhibit the reciprocal advantages.

"Finally, in this solemn moment for the destinies of the world, let us put our trust in God, to the end that He may guide our efforts in the direction most conducive to the interests of humanity and civilization."

The Emperor was most enthusiastically received in his passage to and from the Salle des Marechaux.

Convent Garden Theatre Destroyed by Fire.—A bal masque had been given by M. Anderson, the Wizard of the North; and the company remaining, numbering about 200, were about to break up at five o'clock, when the orchestra struck up the National Anthem. At this instant a bright light was observed in the carpenter's shop which lay between the ornamental roof and the ceiling. Mr. Anderson himself was the first to give the alarm of "Fire!" and the terror and tumult which this announcement occasioned may readily be imagined. The few remaining masquers rushed precipitately to the various entrances—of which the police, with ready presence of mind, took immediate possession. Several women were trampled on and some were carried out fainting, but none were seriously injured. There was something hideous in this sudden change from mad revelry to ghastly fear. The musicians leaped from their seats and fled, in many cases without saving their cherished instruments. It was now hardly 5 o'clock, and yet in the few minutes which had elapsed, the doom of the theatre had been sealed. The flames had burst through the roof, sending high up into the air columns of fire, which threw into bright reflection every tower and spire within the circuit of the metropolis. This glare operated as a speedy messenger in bringing up the fire-engines, which now proceeded from every quarter of London at a tearing gallop to the scene of conflagration. There was no want of water, but neither engines nor water were of any avail in saving the property. The theatre blazed within its four hollow walls like a furnace, and at half-past 5 o'clock the roof fell in with a tremendous crash.

Burning of the Steam Tug Leviathan.—New York, March 21. The Leviathan, the staunchest, best, and swiftest steam-tug that ever floated in these waters, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday, about 12 miles off Sandy Hook, and within four miles of the Light boat. Capt. Hazard started for the engine room, when he met the engineers and firemen rushing out somewhat singed and slightly injured. The fire spread with fearful rapidity to the adjoining woodwork, and in less than ten minutes the vessel was a burning mass, from stem to stern. The crew had barely time to launch the life-boat when the promenade deck fell with a crash. The captain and a boy alone remained on deck, nor did they leave until the smoke-pipe fell.

From Washington.—March 19. The Republicans claim an important triumph in the passage of Mr. Dunn's resolution, authorizing the Speaker to appoint a committee of three members to proceed to Kanzas and investigate affairs generally in that territory, present and past. Some of the Republicans say that the adoption of the proposition is a success equal to their election of Speaker.

March 22. Mr. Greeley telegraphs from Washington, that he has information from a reliable source, that the Administration has ordered the arrest of all the members of the Free State Government of Kanzas, and that President Pierce believes they are all in prison ere this.

On Saturday night some burglars raised the window of the sleeping room of a butcher, named Freitag, in Lawrenceville, Pa., and put a cloth saturated with chloroform, attached to a long pole, to the nostrils of himself and wife. When the chloroform had taken effect, they entered the room, took $500 from a bureau, and then decamped.—Boston Traveller.

"The Angel Gabriel," and Negro Riots in Demarara.—Accounts from Demarara, received via. St. Thomas to March 8th, state that the negroes of British Guiana, stimulated by the harangues of the lunatic Orr, not unknown in this city as the Angel Gabriel, had risen against the Portuguese Coolies, who profess the Roman Catholic religion, and that several lives have been lost.

Having failed in inflaming the minds or arousing the passions of the ignorant portion of the black population, by violent harangues in which he imputed every species of crime and immorality to the Roman Catholics, he took advantage of an existing feud between the negro population and the Portuguese immigrants, most of whom are Catholics, and stimulated an excitement against the latter that ultimately broke out into active hostility, and resulted in the pillaging and demolition of the shops of the Portuguese traders in the city.

This occurred on the 18th ult., and was immediately followed by like disturbances in the country, throughout the colony, incited by emissaries from the town. The disturbances in the country seem to be still more serious, being attended, according to the Georgetown Gazette, by the loss of many lives. Detachments of the 2d W. I. Regiment were sent in steamers to Berbice, and up the river as far as the Great Diamond Plantation. The latter had returned with thirty prisoners. The former remained to support the civil power at Fort Canjo. Troops were also sent for to the Windward Islands; and a French war-steamer was placed by its commander at the disposal of the Governor.

Cholera still prevails at Porto Rico. At Porto Cabello, trade was quite active.

Disturbed State of Montvideo.—Attempted Assassinations. Our correspondent at Montevideo, writes under date of Dec. 31, that the present condition of that country, the finest of La Plata, is truly distressing. Every day there is an account of some disturbance. The followers of the bloody Oribe daily grow more bold, and already cry out in public, viva Oribe. A young man was stabbed in the street for not joining in the cry. Gen. Logos was also stabbed in the street by mistake, it is said, for an Italian with whom he was walking.

A band of 40 brigands had a collision with a detachment of the royal Greek army on the plain of Marathon. Twelve of the brigands were killed, and six made prisoners. The troops had 12 killed and wounded. The brigands are infesting the country in such numbers that a peasant lately caught one of them in a snare which he had set for a wolf. A band of 400 brigands infests Thessaly.

Hurricane.—The Opeloussa La. Patriot of Saturday, says:—On Saturday, a hurricane passed a little to the South of Washington doing considerable damage. Large trees were torn up by the roots, fences blown down, and their materials scattered in every direction.

FOREIGN NEWS.

One week Later from Europe.

Arrival of Steamship Persia.

London, Saturday morning. The Moniteur of yesterday contains an imperial decree, calling out for active service 140,000 young soldiers for the class 1855.

Berlin, Sunday. Two couriers passed through this city, en route for Paris, bearing fresh instructions for the Russian Plenipotentiaries.

Hamburg, 6th.—Admiral Watson has sailed from Kiel. He has ordered the fleet to assemble off Moar Island to announce the renewal of the Blockade of the Russian ports.

Marseilles.—Orders are received here for conveying 10,000 infantry and a battery of artillery to the Crimea, to replace troops returned home.

Crimea.—Delegates from the two belligerent armies met on the 29th of February to concert measures for carrying out the armistice.

Baltic.—The Russians are sending troops in considerable numbers to Finland, concentrating a large force round St. Petersburg, and strengthening the batteries near Cronstadt.

Turkey.—Constantinople, Feb. 21. The Sultan's hatti-scheriff relative to the reforms in favor of the Christians has been read and promulgated in the presence of the ecclesiastical, civil and military dignitaries.

The text of the decree states that Europeans will have a right to possess landed property—that, as regards civil rights, there will be a complete equality between Mussulmans and Christians. Any denomination of a nature to express the superiority of one race over another is expressly forbidden, both in public document as in private conventions. The patriarchs are to be named for life. The clergy will receive a fixed stipend, and the Church property will be managed by an assembly composed of persons of that religion. There will be mixed tribunals. Education will be free, but under the surveillance of mixed commissions. Other reforms are announced, as, for instance, the right granted to provincial and communal councils to take the initiative in grants for public works; as also the establishment of banks, in order to regularise the monetary system of the empire. A million copies of the decree of the Sultan have been distributed.

The general accounts represent things as very threatening in Turkey.

There can be no doubt that the Allies will have to occupy Turkey in force, to prevent a civil war between the enfranchised Christians and the Mahometans.

One hundred millions of piastres in new paper money have been issued by the government. There was much disunion in the divan on the subject.

Russian prisoners recently captured in the Crimea describe the condition of the Russian army to be anything but satisfactory; owing to the want of transport, and difficulty of obtaining supplies from Baktchi-Serai, the men are hungry and out of heart.

A body of 1,500 or 2,000 troops belonging to the Queen of Madagascar, have been achieving what her Majesty calls a victory over France—that is, they attacked the French employees and native laborers working at a coal mine in the Bay of Vavatoube, in the north part of Madagascar, belonging to France, killed 7 Frenchmen, made above 100 prisoners, destroyed property worth 850,000f., and carried off 7 pieces of cannon, a quantity of muskets, and some gunpowder. According to the Mauritius paper which records the occurrence, this gross outrage and insult on the French flag is expected to be revenged by the Imperial government.

We have a report that a plague has broken out at Chin-kiang-foo, and carried off upwards of 100,000 persons. It is called the black-tongue plague, from its peculiar symptoms.

From the Camps.—The British strength of all ranks in the Crimea is little short of 80,000 men, not one of whom is under 18 years of age, and but a small per centage can show much less than a year's military training at home and in the Crimea—the cavalry on the Bosphorus amounts to nearly 5,000; there are 10,00 men at Malta, in very fair condition, in reserve; large draughts of field artillery leave England within the next few hours; the infantry regiments at home ready for service muster more than 12,000 men.

The nominal strength of the Russian army in the Crimea, at the end of January last, is represented, on information said to be derived from a highly trustworthy source, at 67,000 infantry, 19,000 cavalry and artillery, and 300 guns; but the effective strength is probably much less. The same authority estimates Mouravieff's army at 100,000 men.

The French Engineers blew up on the 12th Feb., two portions of the aqueduct which formerly supplied the docks at Sebastopol.

The Peace Conferences.—The third sitting of the plenipotentiaries was held on Saturday, March 1, when they agreed that the Austrian protocol as accepted by Russia, should form the basis of their negociations, and signed that protocol pure and simple, giving it all the power and force of preliminaries, and upon that proceeded to the discussion of the terms of peace. The Russians conceded all the demands of the western powers, almost without resistance.

A despatch, dated Berlin, the 4th inst., states that the Emperor Alexander had received at St. Petersburg, a notification from Count Orloff of the signature of the preliminaries of peace, and that his Majesty had, on the 3d inst., (Monday,) transmitted by telegraph to Count Orloff, a despatch declaring his approval of the signature. The Russian ambassador at Berlin, had been informed of these circumstances.

The fourth sitting of the conferences was held on Tuesday, the 4th inst.

The Times Paris correspondent writes, on Wednesday evening, the 5th inst:—"No secret has been better kept than the proceedings of conference up to the present moment, as far as details are concerned. All that can be safely affirmed is, that matters are going on 'well enough;' but it would be an error to suppose that there is not yet a good deal of work to be got through. I believe that France and England have not been since the commencement more firmly united than at the present moment.

"Of Austria's firmness I doubt whether as much can be said. At all events I again hear whisperings of Count Buol not relishing all that was expected of him. It is stated positively that no prolongation of the armistice beyond the 31st of March will be listened to, and that everything must be arranged in ten or twelve days from this date."

Paris, March 5.—The fifth sitting of the plenipotentiaries in conference took place today, but the proceedings are enveloped in complete secresy.

India and China.—The Chinese rebellion is said to be making head against the Government, and the successes of the insurgents in the province of Kiangsi threatened to interrupt the transit from the tea and silk producing country. Admiral Stirling has organized a system of convoy between the five ports, which is expected to be of incalculable benefit both to native and foreign trade, and highly efficient in suppressing piracy. Two fires broke out in Macao on the 4th and 5th of January, and destroyed about 1,000 houses in the Chinese town, and property worth above a million dollars.

Miscellaneous.—The shocks of earthquake in Asia Minor had lasted ten days, and several towns had been destroyed

Notwithstanding the probabilities of peace, immense quantities of war materials are accumulating at Portsmouth—90,000 shells for the use of the mortars are ordered to be got ready, and all the powder depots are overflowing.

It is believed that in case of peace a French army of occupation, consisting of 40,000 or 50,000 men, will remain in the East for a certain time.

APPOINTMENTS.

The Lord willing, Br. Boutell appoints to preach in Providence, R. I., the first and second Sundays in April.

Br. M. Grant appoints to preach at Union Hall, Globe Village, Liverston, on Thursday Friday and Saturday evenings, March 27, 28 and 29.

At Clinton Hall, Fall River, Mass., on Sunday, March 30.

Providence permitting, Br. J. Couch will preach at Free Chapel, Boston, on Sunday, March 30.

With the help and permission of our Lord and Master, I will meet the Church of Christ in Springfield, Sunday, March 30.

Warehouse Point, Tuesday eve, April 1.
Hartford, Ct., April 3.
New Britain, Sunday, April 6.
Cheshire, April 9.
Bristol, Sunday, April 13.

A. M. Higgins

Providence permitting, I will preach at Portland, Me., Sunday, March 30.
Worcester, Mass. Sunday, April 6.

J. Hemenway.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Warehouse Point, March 28.
Springfield, Mass., Sunday March 30.
Worcester, Mass. Waldo Hall, March 31 and April 1.
Westboro', April 2 and 3.
Lawrence, Mass. Sunday, April 6.
New Bedford, Mass. Sunday, April 13.

If the brethren further East wish my labors among them, they may address me by letter. Direct West Meriden, Ct.

C. Goodrich.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the Church at
Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, April 13.
Portsmouth, N. H., Sundays April 20 and 27.

S. S. Brewer.

Providence permitting, we will preach at Waldo Hall, Worcester, as follows:
S. S. Brewer, March 30.

If the Lord permit I will meet with the brethren in Newark, New Jersey, Thursday evening, March 27th, and continue with them over the following Sabbath. H. Pratt.

Notice of the New England Mission Tent.—Those wishing for Tent-Meetings in Illinois, Iowa, or Wisconsin, this Spring, will please write to myself or Br. W. Pratt, at this place. P. B Morgan.

Moline, Ill. Feb. 28, 1856.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postage 17 cents.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition, $1.

Dobney on Future Punishment, 75 cts.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.
" " 2 series, 75 cts.
Signs of the Times, 75 cts.
The End, 75 cts.
Lectures on Romanism, $1.
The Tent and the Altar, 75 cts.

Church Debts, 50 cts.

Pauline Theology,	15 cts.	single,	$10	per 100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "	"
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 "	"
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50	"
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 "	"
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Outline of the Coast of Man,	3 "	"	1,50	"

The Destiny of the Wicked, 3 cts.

Book of Seven Seals, 3 cts.

Seven Seals, 3 cts.

The Laodicean Church or the Judgment Age, 3 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"Wellcome's Treatise on Matt. 24th and 25th chapters.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. Taylor."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J. M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Union Mills, Indiana.

Br. Aaron B. Andrews, P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co. Illinois.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Br. George L. Teeples P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co., Illinois.

Joel S Richards' P. O. address is Centre Lincolnville, Maine.

Cash Receipts.

A Coans, P W Jones, L Rawson, A B Read, H M Kelley, C F Kittridge, M L Mills, W Wood, J Niles, E Hamblin, S Rogers, S Mills, T S Pepper, D W Perry, J G Hamblin, S Hovey, Mrs Sweat, S Fagan, M B Cowles, P Scott, L U Lombard, Moses Warner, C Church, F M Allen, J Vickery, S B Pratt, J M Remington, W M Lathe, David Mosher, $1 each.

C H Johnson $2, J Ewell $2, G H Hill $2, H W Pray, $12.

N Hall, S G Mathewson, C C Chase, L Bailey, G Swift, Mrs Knights, J Rogers, A Burnham, Sr Andrews, M Whitaker, J H Otis, 50 cents each.

Old debt of Crisis—J G Pettis $1, whole amount, $64 54.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to publish his advertisement to the public.

For the Crisis.

Faith, Hope and Charity.

By Vesta N. Cudworth.

When God's dread curse fell heavily
Upon this fair abode of man,
Which once had rung with melody,
Faultless, complete, a perfect plan;
When wild disorder reigned around
Where previous harmony prevailed,
And muttering thunder's awful sound
Causing the guilty heart to quail—
Three Angel-sisters, lingered here—
Faith, Hope and Charity most fair—
To soothe the grief, and dry the tear
Of mortals, doomed to pain and care;
All, all that would receive and share
Those Angel visitants, were blest;
They breathed a holy atmosphere,
The substance of a promised rest.

Faith, made the trembling step more firm,
And nerved the arm in conflict dire—
A shield from which fierce darts would turn,
'Tho' wing'd with hate, and tip'd with fire.
Peace and assurance planted deep
Within the fearful fainting heart,
Securely gliding o'er the deep,
Within this blessed safety-barque.

When hearts grow wild with misery,
With'ring beneath its simoon breath,
And sighing dirges drearily
Chanted the harbingers of death;
Hope enters with her magic wand,
And casts her sunshine o er the scene;
The dying ones no more despond,
While lighted by her joyous beam.

She points unto a river bright,
With crystal waters mirroring
Hills, crown'd in glory's fadeless light—
Life's tree on either side the stream.
She points to scenes where death and sin,
Can sever loving hearts no more,
Inviting all to seek and win
Inheritance, on that blest shore.

Blest Charity made suffering sweet,
The bitt'rest drug, the roughest way;
And seemed to bind a silken net
Around the feet that fain would stray;
Filled with a joy too calm, too deep
To be disturbed by transient charms,
And sighing mortals ceased to weep,
While folded in her loving arms.

Hope saw the lonely watcher bent
O'er the couch of death and pain;
And erst her powerful influence lent
To break the suff'rers dreadful chain;
She pointed to the genial spring,
When seed, long planted in the ground,
Would from the dust arise and sing,
At the last trumpet's awful sound.

Charlemont, March 7, 1856.

For the Crisis.

The Prayer-Meeting.

How well do I remember the time, when I was made to believe that without Christ there was no salvation for me. And how sweet the memory of that scene when I found my sins forgiven! How heavenly the expression of my Savior's reconciled countenance! How cheering His voice! How comforting the Holy Spirit witnessing with mine that God owned me for His child! Shall I forget the place of prayer, where the saints of God meet to pray for each other, and the more so as we see the day approaching—a place where the soul takes delight in the presence of Jesus, who is our hope, our salvation, our all?

Oh, my Brn. and Srs., let us not wander as aliens from God, nor cry in the desert for bread, but remain at our Father's house where there is bread enongh and to spare. Let not our foes rejoice over our sorrows and trials, by our neglecting the place of prayer. Let not the star of our hope grow dim. O, do not say in your heart, "where is my beloved gone?" continue to meet with those whose kindred spirits have mingled together with yours before, and importune the blessed Savior whose form is Divine, whose vestments shed odors around; whose voice is sweeter than the dulcimer, and who has promised, where two or three meet together in His name, He will be in the midst of them.

Do you desire the Savior's blessing, Bro. or Sr.? Then help maintain the prayer-meeting. Do you remember the time when you gave your heart to God? Did you not promise that you would love Him, and consecrate all to His glory? Did you enter the vineyard with the expectation of working for a crown, without any cross, and receiving it before the race is ended? Did you in fifty-four, when you made glad the hearts of your Brn. or Srs. in singing, praying, and exhorting them to continue in the good old way, to hold on to the truth that Christ was coming; when you met evening after evening, through the cold snows of winter, and the heat and rain of summer, did you suppose for one moment that in eighteen hundred and fifty-six your place would be vacant in the prayer-meeting? Methinks I hear you say no; I did not expect to grieve my best friend—my Savior—but I have left undone those things that I ought to have done. Oh, my Bro. or Sr., return, come to the place of prayer; for who will chide you for loving the house of prayer?

"Unleavened Bread."

By E, Burnham.

Are our brethren aware that the use of "leavened bread," at the communion, is certainly unscriptural? I see they are waking up to the subject, in various parts. I am glad. The last Expositor, published in Rochester, has an excellent article on the subject. My own mind has been settled on the subject, as many of our brethren well know, for a number of years; and in many places I have urged upon our people the propriety of using "unleavened bread."

Let us look at the Scriptural argument on the subject. First, our Lord used "unleavened bread" when he instituted the supper. Do you wish for proof? I give it. The supper was instituted on the occasion of the passover. That is positive. Well, the Lord commanded that no "leavened bread" should be used within seven days, on that occasion, and that during that time no "leaven" should be found in the house of his people; so that no other kind of bread could possibly have been used by our Lord at that time but "unleavened bread." You can read multitudes of proofs at your leisure. Secondly, Jesus said, "as often as ye do this—eat this bread, and drink this cup—ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come." When He said, "this bread," must He not have meant this kind of bread, on this kind of occasion? What else possibly could He have meant? Is not the sense of the passage thus: as often as ye, my disciples, do eat this "unleavened bread," in memory of my broken body, and drink this literal juice of the grape, in memory of my flowing blood, you make it manifest that you believe I died a literal death on the cross, for your salvation, till I come the second time? Thirdly, Jesus said, "this is my body"—or as many, nearly all the critics, translate "this represents my body." Indeed, the connection of the passage shows this to be the sense. Well, now, Paul tells the Corinthians that "unleavened bread" represents "sincerity and truth." Then, of course, "leavened bread" represents hypocrisy and falsehood! Now the body of Jesus was holy and pure, and therefore "unleavened bread," only, represents His body. What does Paul mean by "that one bread which we break?" Is it not that one kind of bread? I think so. If our brethren wish to know how to make the unleavened bread, I reply. Take water, or sweet milk, and flour—nothing else whatever—put them together—mix the paste stiff as you can work it—bake in a moderately deep pan sometime—pare off the outside all over, and it is ready for use. Come, brethren, let us be up to the Word in all things.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. E. W. Tefft.

Florida, Feb. 11, 1856.

Bro. Merriam: I wish to say a few words to the scattered flock, upon the following Scripture: Rev. 7: 1–3, "And after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree. And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God; and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads."

"After these things"—after what things? of course, those seen in the previous part of the vision. But does John see the angels holding the winds after the heavens have departed as a scroll? Certainly not. Why? Because Paul tells how the children are sealed, Eph. 1: 13, "After ye believed ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise." Ch. 4: 30, "Grieve not the holy Spirit of God whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." But they must first have heard the Gospel of salvation before they could have believed it; for the Apostle says: Rom. 10: 14, 15, "how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be be sent." Now let us learn who the preacher is. Rev. 14: 6, 7, "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

The angels hold the winds—the preacher flies with his message—the sealer hastens to make them secure, that believe.

The Holy Spirit is the only title we have to the inheritance. Says Paul, Rom. 8: 9, "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. 11th v., If the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Gal. 3: 29, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Now how many of us have retained the Spirit, witnessing with ours that we are His? I can say with confidence and meekness, that I have this witness, that I am His, and when I see that those angels are about letting loose their hold of the winds, I am lifting up my head and rejoicing in prospect of speedy deliverance.

But to the question; who are those angels? and what are those winds they are holding? First, what do the winds symbolize? Daniel saw the four winds strive upon the great sea, "and four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another," ch. 7: 19. "Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast," v. 23, "Thus he said (unto me,) the fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth." Jer. 49: 36, "And upon Elam will I bring the four winds from the four quarters of heaven: and I will scatter them toward all those winds, and there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come." V. 37, "And I will send the sword after them till I have consumed them." Dan. 11: 40, "And the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and horsemen, and many ships; and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over." Jer. 25: 31, "The Lord hath a controversy with the nations; he will plead with all flesh, he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord." V. 32, "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, behold evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth."

From the above Scripture, we see that winds symbolize wars, or the sword. Now who are those that, under God, control wars? The governments of earth declare war, and make peace. To make the angels literal, would destroy the rule of interpretation, for the winds were symbolical. Now, it appears to me, that John saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds, symbolizing four great nations that restrain the elements of war, while the servants are being sealed. Who are those nations? Russia, Prussia, Austria, France and England are called the five great powers of Europe; can they control the world in respect to war, or peace? Providence permitting, they can. Why have they not then restrained the present war? Because God has said, "if they refuse to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, thus saith the Lord of hosts: ye shall certainly drink," Jer. 25: 28. But have they ever held the winds so that the Gospel could be preached? I believe they did in 1815, when they entered into an alliance after the conquest of Napoleon. In order to avoid another convulsion of the world like the one they had just passed through, they entered into this treaty—being yet present at Paris—they declared that, conformably to the word of the Holy Scripture, they would remain united by the bonds of true and indissoluble fraternity, and render one another assistance in every case, and that they would direct their subjects and their armies, whose fathers they regarded themselves, in the same brotherly spirit. Russia, Austria, and Prussia, were the originators of this treaty, and they invited other European powers to join them. All acceded with the exception of England, the regent of which declared, that although he shared personally the principles of the holy alliance, he could not, according to the constitution of his kingdom, enter into any treaty with foreign powers without the signature of responsible ministers. (Rotteck's history of the world, vol. 4, p. 224.) It had been provided by the treaty of alliance in 1814 and '15 between Russia, Austria, Prussia, and England, that special congresses, or as they were called, reunions, should be held from time to time by the sovereigns of those States, or their ministers, to take into consideration the state of Europe, and the measures necessary for its repose and prosperity. (Markham's hist. of France, p. 568. From the above we can see a union formed for the repose of Europe. Those monarchs were sickened by the past events, and formed a treaty that has kept the European nations in check until the last two or three years. Russia was the first to form the treaty and the first to break its union. These nations have held the winds for almost 40 years. But within the two last years, Russia has let loose her hold, England also; Prussia and Austria only remain holding the winds. O, what an interesting moment we live in—never has the world or the Church occupied a moment like this, interesting to the world from the fact that the angel will soon have preached his last sermon—the angel with his seal will have taken his flight, and the doom of the wicked will have been sealed forever. But to the Church it is all interesting. Satan has done all in his power to destroy them; Jesus is about to clothe them with immortality and cause them to shine as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father, Matt. 13, arrayed in white, Rev. 7: 13, 14, all tears wiped away—no more pain, Rev. 20, 4, inheriting the new Jersualem and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. Here we are despised and forsaken of those that should be friends; but there we shall be enriched, made heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. What a blessed hope! Brn. let us arise at once and gird on the whole armor; we are well able to go up and possess the land through Jesus strengthening us. One more struggle, and the victory may be won.

Yours in the blessed hope,

E. W. Teft.

Prosperity.

"O Lord I beseech thee, send now prosperity." —Psa. 118: 25.

This is a prayer for the Church; and if ever this prayer was appropriate, it is now.

Prosperity may be defined to be success in our undertakings. "Whatever he doeth shall prosper." Thus the messenger of Abraham prospered in finding a wife for Isaac. "God made Joseph to prosper." Nehemiah also prospered in his journey and labor. Solomon prospered; and even the "ungodly prosper in this world." But religious prosperity is that contemplated in the text, and is expressed also in such texts as Ps. 122: 6, 7, "They shall prosper that love thee. Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces." "And the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hands." Isa. 59: 10.

The prosperity of the Church would be success in accomplishing her specific work. This is not to make herself respectable in the world, and to draw around her crowds of admirers, but it is to succeed in gathering out of the world a people for the Lord, saving some from the wrath to come making ready a people prepared for the Lord, inducing men "to turn from idols to serve the living God, and to wait for His Son from Heaven." That man or people that succeeds in doing this, may be said to enjoy prosperity.

But in order for a people or denomination to do this, they must have a certain kind of inward prosperity. The only object of Church or denominational organization is to render individual effort more efficacious; consequently, more prosperous. "One shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." Proper association of individual effort is conducive to the prosperity of the cause of Christ; inasmuch as it augments the usefulness of each one in a tenfold ratio. I fear this object is not always had in view, in Church organization or association.

It may be well for us, as a people, to ask ourselves the question, are we prospering? and if not, why do we not prosper in our efforts. As individual Christians, we are God's husbandry; co-workers with Him in the salvation of men. We are the salt of the earth, the light of the world; the instruments by which God blesses the souls and bodies of men. These are active agencies. They count not their lives dear unto themselves, but deny themselves every worldly consideration for the spiritual good of others. These are some of the characteristics of prosperous Christians. Now there is a law of our nature, that persons possessing a similarity of sentiment and sympathy, should associate together for mutual benefit and greater prosperity. This similarity of sentiment drew together a large number of persons from all denominations and from the world, and united them in one body to spread the truth, and thus save men by its influence.

Probably not less than fifty thousand persons in the United States and British Provinces, were thus voluntarily united in various ways to promote the one great object of arousing the world to the immediate preparation for the coming of the judgment; and unprecedented prosperity attended their efforts. But what are we now? O, it is painful to compare the retrospect with the present, or to look at the prospect.

After spending thousands upon thousands of treasure, and a vast amount of physicial and mental energy for ten or fifteen years past, here we are, the wreck of what we were. Now can we say of ourselves in our associate capacity, (whatever that capacity may be,) that we prosper in anything we do? Is there a single Church, band, company or congregation, that is in a really prosperous condition? There may be such instances, but with feelings of the deepest humiliation, I confess, I know no one! And what is still more afflicting, few seem to grieve at it, but few pray in the language of the Psalmist, "O Lord send now prosperity."

But why is it, that we are thus? Are we not in the way of duty? Are we rushing against the rocks of divine providence? Is the angel of the Lord standing in the way with drawn sword, causing us to jam ourselves against every wall, or to plunge ourselves into difficulties at every step, and like the man in the mire, to sink lower and lower at every effort to extricate ourselves?

We are told to rejoice in prosperity, but in adversity to consider. And is it not time for us to lay these things to heart, and consider on our ways? If this work be of God we shall not be justified in leaving it or neglecting it, for any earthly consideration. If it is not of God, we shall only get Babel instead of Babylon for our efforts, wear out valuable life in useless effort; spend our money for that which is not bread, and our labor for that which satisfieth not.

Some of our brethren have settled this question for themselves. They have left us and gone various ways. By so doing, they say they have not been in the path of duty; and by implication say, that we are not. Now, if they are right, we are wrong, and the sooner we follow their example, the better for us and the world; but if we are right, they are wrong, and ought to return to us, and be witnesses for God, and, if need be, martyrs for the truth as it is in Jesus. But let us look at the wreck to see if indeed it be a ruin. Let us see if our present crippled condition be the necessary result of our position, caused by our running against the innumerable rocks of divine Providence, or only an accident, caused by carelessness, mismanagement, recklessness and imprudence. In this way we may learn our duty in the present emergency, and, by God's grace when we learn our duty, we will stand to our post, like a faithful warrior, regardless of all personal considerations.

Looking at our cause, we find many persons of strong minds, of deep thought, and devout hearts, that are sincerely attached to the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming of Christ. They have been made to feel the truthfulnes and importance of the doctrine, as much as Luther and his followers felt the doctrines of the reformation; salvation by faith in Christ alone.

Many of them have been driven from the various sects for their sentiments; (some, it may be, were imprudent, and pressed their doctrines out of season and beyond measure.) Many voluntarily left their communions for conscience' sake, and many have been gathered from the highways of the world. These have all made great sacrifices for this truth; and they have felt blessed in so doing. They have been blessed spiritually, and, I believe, that every sacrifice of money, that has been honestly made, has been given back by the Lord with interest.

There are now perhaps ten thousand persons in the United States and the Canadas, who are really and truly believers in this doctrine, and feel its importance. Now these ten thousand persons in their individual capacity, working in harmony with divine Providence, can do mighty things in pulling down Satan's strongholds, and in building up the cause of Christ. But if they work against Providence, they will succeed no better than did Balaam of old; the very asses of society will bray against them with success. That our doctrine is of God is proved by its being in harmony with the whole Bible, and sustained by the voice of the Church, in its purest and most prosperous times. We are all satisfied of the truthfulness of our doctrine. All honest hearts admit the pre-eminent claim of the truth. They cannot neglect it, and when the contrary is preached for truth, they cannot support it, nor let it pass unrebuked. Therefore it is, that they cannot support the existing organizations. They have been forced to provide an house for this truth, as it is in Jesus. Some have schooled themselves to the support of existing Church organizations; but few of them, I think, enjoy it, or make themselves useful in them. A separate existence as a people, has been forced upon us by circumstances, if not by the direct call of God. Indeed the most of the believers in these sentiments have felt themselves called upon by the voice of God to avow them; and they cannot neglect them more than they can neglect any of the great practical duties of the Gospel. There seems to have been a duty to themselves, the truth and the world, to provide in this way a home for, and the means of sustaining the promulgation of this doctrine.

Now how has this duty been done? O, tell it not in Gath, lest the uncircumcised rejoice. This part of the ork has been performed with less skill, or interest than any of the duties growing out of our position, and, till this is better, more skilfully, understandingly, zealously, and religiously done, we have no right or reason to expect or hope for prosperity. Instead of going to work religiously to build up a Church as a means of rendering our individual effort more efficient, we have not yet come to the conclusion that it is right, duty, or expedient. Some have been so much afraid of a Church, that they called those voluntary associations for the worship of God, and the promulgation of truth, bands, companies, &c.; thus choosing terms that are used to designate mere secular bodies, instead of the plain Testament ecclesia, or Church. And for fear that these bands would get organized, instead of the plain New Testament office of deacon, they have chosen committees. Instead of a minister, evangelist or pastor, a "Lecturer" is obtained. Now who does not see that those bodies, whatever be their name, that choose, or elect one or more persons to act for them are organized. So that they have the thing in fact, while they oppose it. This is certainly organizing against organization, and preaching against preaching; straining out a gnat, and swallowing camel after camel, or some other body equally hump-backed and deformed. It is now, however, pretty generally admitted, that some form of organization is necessary. And I ask, if some form is necessary for a New Testament institution, why not take a New Testament name, and have New Testament officers, in a New Testament manner. To do otherwise, is to say that Christ and the Apostles did not know what was best for us. "Had we been there, we would have shown them better. We would have had none of your deacons, stewards, helps, governments, pastors, teachers, evangelists, &c. We would have had no elders ordained in every city, nor any such human machinery, for that is all Babylon and is of the devil."

Now, brethren, I ask in all candor, are ye not carnal? And can we expect prosperity under such circumstances? Yea, even worse than this is seen in some large bands, (whether they be Italian bands or Advent bands,) where they cannot have the Lord's Supper regularly, because they have no one to prepare for it. I suggest to such ones, that they choose a committee to attend to this business, till they can find some officer more in accordance with the New Testament usage.

Now, brethren of all classes, for to such I would speak, let us settle this matter before we go further.

1. Is Church organization in any form right?

2. Is it expedient for us, in our present circumstances?

If we answer these in the affirmative, as I apprehend we shall, then let us inquire:

3. What form will best accomplish the objects of any organization?

Having settled these questions, we are prepared to examine other parts of our work. I think, upon reflection, that we shall come to the conclusion, that our condition is not the consequence of running against the rocks of divine Providence, in our denominational existence, (for I cannot yet call it an organization,) but partly the result of the head winds, strong currents, and dashing waves of opposition, always incident to reform of every kind; and partly the result of ignorance of our duty negligence in providing for difficulties; the recklessness of some, and the want of definite objects to be accomplished, in which all could understandingly unite. Before we can do anything effectual, we must first decide what it is we wish to do? Before we ask men to come and help us, we must first let them see that we have something to do, and that it is worth being done—and that we know how to do it, the men and means only being wanted. We must first put our house in order and ourselves in working condition, before we can expect men will take a position by our side, share our toils and fortunes. We may look in vain for prosperity till we put ourselves in a position to prosper.

Now, my brethren of all classes, that have the love of the Advent doctrine at heart, does it not appear that, notwithstanding all our disappointments, divisions and disasters; notwithstanding our previous disorganization, theological logomachy, and inharmonious policy, we can put ourselves in a position to prosper? Can we not, as at first, agree to differ on theological questions? Can we not forgive and forget all offences; and ask forgiveness of the offended? Can we not, for the good of the whole body, and the great good they are capable of doing, lay aside our personal preferences, and unite in some plan of efficient associated action? Can we not come together like a band of noble brothers, forgetting the past, letting bygones be bygones forever, and unite all the energies of our being, to spread the truth, to battle error, to arouse the church, to persuade sinners; warning all to flee the wrath to come.

Could we do this, and send up our united petition to the God of heaven for prosperity, I do believe that even hell would utter a groan of disappointment, Satan be defeated, our enemies stand aghast, the mouths of gainsayers be stopped, and the angels of God sing anew the song of "Peace on earth, good will to men." O, how many saddened hearts, of God's dear ones, would be made to rejoice; and though there might be some grumbling "elder brothers," yet the whole household of the Advent family, would cast off their garment of mourning, lift up their saddened faces, long suffused with chagrin, and with sunshine all beaming in their countenances, send forth a long hallelujah to God, for peace and reconciliation. O how many, many, many souls might be snatched as brands from the burning, and be brought to praise God and the Lamb, by our instrumentality, and be added as stars to the crown of our rejoicing in the day of Christ!

O shall not this be realized? Will not the entire house unite with me, in laboring for this, and send up our united prayer to God, saying, "Now, Lord, send prosperity?" Amen. Bro. Nehemiah.

While the hallowed soul rejoices to contemplate the perfections of the Deity, and feels that to reflect his glory is its highest bliss and privilege, its sense will be proportionably poignant of its own infirmity, and of the imperfection of its most devoted services. Hence on the mediatorial work of the Redeemer, will rest its only hope for pardon and acceptance.—Bulwer.

Love is the fulfilling of the law.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 1856. | VOLUME 3, NUMBER 33.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

Published by Believers in the Immediate Coming of

JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Jonas Merriam, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

The Second Advent of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

By P. Tandy.

Dear Bro. Merriam:—Much has been said, and very much is being said for and against the Advent doctrine, by the friends, and by the enemies of Christ. But we can come to the truth upon this very important subject, in no other way so well, as to come directly to the plain, literal testimony of God's word. May our Heavenly Father direct us by His Spirit, into the the true knowledge and acknowledgement of the Truth. We are to earnestly inquire, "What is Truth?" "How readest thou." And then, when God has taught us His truth, let us be exceedingly careful that we add not to, nor take from God's revealed testimony. I am willing for one, to 'Let God be true.'

Now, dear Brethren and Sisters, may we be so wise and happy, as to have our religious faith predicated upon God's truth, and may we live accordingly. By the help of the Lord I now proceed to prove from the Scriptures of divine truth, the Second Advent of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. "To the Law and to the Testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isa. 8: 20,) "Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints. To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." Job says, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; Whom I shall see for myself, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Balaam, the son of Beor, whose eyes are open, hath said; "He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the Most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open; I shall see Him, but not now; I shall behold Him, but not nigh; there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel," &c. David, Israel's King, declares, saying, "The ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the ungodly shall perish. Thou, (Lord,) shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor her, yea, the set time is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof. So the heathen shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory; when the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory."

Let the Psalmist David testify again. "O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness; (or, in His glorious sanctuary;) fear before Him, all the earth. Say among the heathen, that the Lord reigneth: the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved. He shall judge the people righteously. Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof. Let the fields be joyful, and all that is therein; then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord; for He cometh, for He cometh to judge the earth; He shall judge the world in righteousness, and the people with His truth." Again: "Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein; Let the floods clap their hands; let the hills be joyful together; Before the Lord; for He cometh to judge the earth; with righteousness shall He judge the world, and the people with equity."

The Prophet Isa. testifies that, "He, (the Lord,) will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of His people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him, we will be glad and rejoice in His salvation." Again: "Behold the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; He will come and save you." (The pure in heart.) The same prophet testifies again, saying—"Behold the Lord God will come with strong hands, and His arm shall rule for Him; behold, His reward is with Him, and His work before him. The Lord will go forth as a mighty man, He shall stir up jealousy like a man of war; He shall cry, yea, roar; He shall prevail against His enemies."

Again: "Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh, behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him. And they shall call them, the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord, a city not forsaken. O that thou wouldst rend the heavens, that thou wouldst come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence. For, behold, the Lord will come with fire, and with His chariots like a whirlwind, to render His anger with fury, and His rebuke with flames of fire."

The Prophet Jeremiah says, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In His days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely, and this is His name whereby He shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness."

The Prophet Ezekiel declares, saying, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until He come whose right it is; and I will give it him." Now hear what the Prophet Daniel saith on this subject. "I saw in the night vision, and behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve Him; His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and His kingdom that which shall not be not destroyed." And he says also, that, "At that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince, which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered every one that shall be found written in the book."

Now hear the great Apostle to the Gentiles. He brings in his testimony. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive; but every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at His coming. Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God, even the Father; when He shall have put down all rule, and all authority and power. For He must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed, is death." Paul declares also to his Philippian Brethren, saying, "Our conversation is in heaven; from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things to himself." The Apostle Paul interrogates His Thessalonian Brethren, thus; "What is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at His coming? For ye are our glory and joy." And he says to them in another place, "The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another; and toward all men, even as we do toward you; To the end, he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God,  at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, with all the saints."

And again, he declares to the same Church, saying, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort (or exhort) one another with these words." "And to you, (addressing himself to his Thessalonian Brethren again,) who are troubled, rest with us; when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power; when He shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe, (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day." We hear Paul declaring yet again, saying, "We beseech you, Brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind," &c.; and then He says, "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that He, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that He is God. Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth that He might be revealed in his time. (Now mark,) For the mystery of iniquity doth already work, only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming."

The great Apostle in speaking to Titus, remarks thus, "The grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared unto all men, teaching us, that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. These things speak, and exhort; and rebuke with all authority—let no man despise thee."

Let us now listen to what Brother Paul says to the Hebrew Church upon this subject; he says, "As it was appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment; so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for Him, shall He appear the second time, without sin, (or a sin offering) unto salvation." And again, he says, "Yet a little while, and He that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

In Acts, we hear the Apostle Peter commanding the men of Israel in the name of the Lord, thus "Repent, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive, until the times of Restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy Prophets since the world began!" Again, the Apostle Peter exhorts the followers of Christ, to "Gird up the loins of their minds, be sober, and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought unto them, at the revelation of Jesus Christ." He says again, that "When the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." And yet again, we hear him declaring, that "He, (with His brethren,) had not followed cunningly devised fables, when they made known the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye witnesses of His majesty." Hence he declares, that they were "Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat! Nevertheless, we, according to His promise, look for new Heavens, and a new Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of Him in peace, without spot, and blameless."

The Apostle James says, with regard to Christ's murderers, "Ye have condemned and killed the Just; and he doth not resist you. Be patient, therefore, Brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until He receive the early and latter rain. Be patient, stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Proof texts to the above declarations. Jude 14: 15. Job 19: 25–27. Num. 24: 16–17. Ps. 1: 5–6. Ps. 102: 13–16. Ps. 96: 9–13. Ps. 98: 7–9. Isa. 25: 8–9. Isa. 26: 21. Isa. 34: 3–4. Isa. 40: 10. Isa, 42: 13. Isa. 62: 11–12. Isa. 66: 15. Jer. 23: 5–6. Eze. 21: 27. Dan. 7: 13–14. Dan. 12: 1. 1 Cor. 15: 22–26. Phil. 3: 20–21. 1 Thes. 2: 19–20. 1 Thes. 3: 12–13. 1 Thes. 4: 16–18. 2 Thes. 1: 7–10. 2 Thes. 2: 1–8. Titus 2: 11–15. Heb. 9: 27–28. Heb. 10: 37. Acts 3: 19–21. 1 Peter 1: 13. 1 Peter 5: 4. 2 Peter 1: 16. 2 Peter 3: 12–14. James 5: 7–9.

To be Continued.

For the Crisis.

The Gifts.

By J. B. Wetherell.

Bro. Merriam: I deem it a duty, with the help of the Lord, to write a few lines upon the design and import of the gifts. The Apostle tells us he would not have his brethren ignorant of them.

Says Paul in his Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. 4: 8, "Wherefore he saith, when he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men." We ask, how did he give gifts unto men? Let the 11th v. answer.

"And he gave some, Apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers."

What did Christ give those officers for?

V. 12, "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ."

We ask how long will this continue?

V. 13, "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a PERFECT man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

Now let us be very careful here to mark the language.

We see that, to sum up the above passage, it is, to come to a PERFECT man in the knowledge of the Son of God.

We ask, who was the Apostle Paul addressing himself to in 1 Cor. 12: 1? We see that it was to his Corinthian brethren. He tells those brethren, he would not have them ignorant of spiritual gifts. "Ye know that ye were (past tense) Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led." Compare the above passage with Eph. 4: 14, "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love may grow up into him in all things which is the head even Christ."

I think it is plain that the gifts were calculated to cement the Church together; and all could be received into the Church on a profession of their faith, whether Jew or Gentile; God was not a respecter of persons: for we are told that "in every nation under Heaven, he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him."

The Apostle tells us that "to one is given the word of wisdom, to another knowledge, to another faith, to another the gift of healing, to another the working of miracles, to another prophecy, to another discerning of spirits, to another divers kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will; for by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit."

Paul counsels the brethren to covet the best gifts; and yet says he, I will show you a more excellent way. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, (love) I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, (love) I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." "Charity never faileth; But whether there be prophecies they shall fail. Whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away."

This is an important passage to be understood. When were these gifts to cease? When the object was accomplished for which the gifts were designed, then it seems they might have ended. Beside the reasons already mentioned of the design of the gifts, they were to be instruments in spreading the Gospel all over the then known world. Rom. 10: 17, 18, "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. But I say, have they not heard? Yes, verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world."

Let us compare this passage with Col. 1: 5, 6, "For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the Gospel; which is come unto you as it is in all the world, and bringing forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of of it, and knew the grace of God in truth."

By the above, we see that the Gospel had found its way into all the then known world. In the fourth and fifth verses of this chapter, Paul, having in the preceding verses pronounced the benediction of God upon the faithful brethren, here recognizes the Church as having faith, love, and hope, just what was to be in the Church when the gospel had been diffused abroad by the gifts. "When that which is perfect is come." We cannot fail to come directly to the conclusion, with regard to the meaning perfect, by Paul's explanation what the gifts were for. They were for the PERFECTING of the saints, till the Church arrives to the perfect man in the fulness of Christ. Says Paul, 2nd Epistle to Tim. 3: 16, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be PERFECT, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Now, I think, when the Church arrives to this point of PERFECTION, they are invested with Faith, Hope and Love, at which time those extraordinary gifts, termed Prophecies, Tongues and Knowledge may fail, cease and vanish away. The declaration is positive that some time they shall fail, and so certain as we have shown the correct meaning of the expression "that that is PERFECT," so sure we understand the location of the GIFTS, and it removes many difficulties from the mind. If this be correct, before we get through it will commend itself to the candid mind. We are now prepared to investigate the subject more minutely in regard to Faith, Hope and Love.

1st, What is faith? Ans. Belief. By examining the term faith, we shall see it is not a gift, as some have supposed. It implies a circumcision of the heart. It makes us the covenant people of God, the seed of Abraham, and joint heirs with Christ to a certain inheritance; and that inheritence is real land such as we can plant our feet upon. It is not spiritual, nor beyond the bounds of time and space; but is this earth in its renovated state. God willed it to Abraham and his seed after him for an everlasting possession, and took oath to it by Himself, seeing he could swear by no greater. Here is the FAITH once delivered to the saints so much spoken of at the present time. We will notice a few passages with regard to the necessity of a faith in the Gospel and then pass. Mark 1: 15, "And saying the time is fulfilled and the kingdom of God is at hand, repent ye, and believe the gospel." Acts 13: 39, "And by Him all that believe are justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." Acts 15: 9, "And put no difference between us and them purifying their hearts by faith." Acts 26: 18, "To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God that they may receive forgiveness of sins and INHERITANCE among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me."

Time would fail me in attempting to enumerate the passages showing that a strong faith was indispensably necessary in order to salvation; but I think those already alluded to, are sufficient. We will now in the second place notice the term Hope, which is composed of expectation and desire. It is very important for one to have a correct faith in order to have a good hope; because if one believes he shall receive a thing promised, he has reason to expect it; and if the thing be a desirable one he will desire it, consequently he will hope for it until he receives it. Then hope ceases, for what a man already hath, why doth he yet hope for it? Hence, if the Lord has promised substance, as He did to Abraham, His children will continue to hope until they get land in reality; and they that have an understanding faith will not be satisfied with a spirit land; for that is just no land at all.

Thirdly, we will notice what Love is. 1st, love is a principle which will prove a safe rule to be governed by instead of the impulse of the moment, and God has nowhere told us to do or believe anything in which was not involved this principle. Hence we hear our Savior saying, that all the law was briefly comprehended in this one saying; or as John terms it, new commandment, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment; and the second is like unto it, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself; on these two hang all the law and the Prophets." This is the bond of perfection. He that enjoys the most of this, is the most like God. He that is destitute of it, is not begotten of God, neither knoweth God, neither has he life. 1st John 2: 5, "But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God PERFECTED. Hereby know we that we are in Him." Again; 10th v., "He that loveth his brother abideth in the light and there is no occasion of stumbling in him." Again; "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the Word of God ABIDETH in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one." 15th v., "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof. But he that doeth the will of God, ABIDETH FOREVER." 24th v. "Let that therefore ABIDE in you which ye have heard from the beginning; if that which ye have heard from the beginning shall REMAIN in you, ye shall also CONTINUE in the Son and the Father. And this is the PROMISE that he hath PROMISED us even ETERNAL LIFE. These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you; but the anointing which ye have received of him ABIDETH in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth and is no lie; and even as it hath taught you, ye shall ABIDE in him. And now, little children, ABIDE in him, that when he shall appear, we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming. If ye know that he is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born (begotten) of him." As at the commencement we quoted Scripture to show that when certain gifts would fail, Faith, Hope and Love would abide, which is the same as to continue, we think these quotations from John were spoken of the same time, and have allusion to the same facts; for he uses the same phrases and conveys the same ideas, only with more minuteness.

When will God's people come in possession of the promised inheritance? Ans. At the coming of Christ and not before. Therefore, I want Him to come; yes, I expect Him, I desire Him to come, I believe He is coming, and this is the reason of my hope which I feel always ready to give with meekness to any one that shall ask me. To establish such a faith as this, it was necessary to have some extraordinary and miraculous power of God during the Apostles' days, in order to open their eyes, and to enlighten the minds of men, in a manner that nothing else could. The PERFECT man of which the Apostle speaks, is one that is perfect in knowledge of the Scriptures, as to its teachings; and at that time, when a knowledge of them was obtained, then those miraculous gifts were to have an end. This was accomplished by the Apostles (twelve in number) and in their days. It is certain that faith will not extend into the Kingdom of God; for says Peter ch. 1: 9, "Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls." Peter had just been speaking of the promised inheritance which is to be given. After we have received this inheritance, why, as Paul says, should we yet hope for it? I think we may be assured that Faith and Hope end at the coming of Christ. As for Love, it is so boundless, that I cannot fathom it, or comprehend it. It passeth all understanding. It has, I believe, neither bottom nor shore. It cannot be weighed, nor measured. Bless the good Lord, it is a soul-stirring thought!

I believe the Savior taught this principle of love in the emblem of feet-washing, and in that peculiar climate it was a custom, and very necessary too; but we do not live in such a climate, and it is not required by the Lord here. "Faith, Hope and Love, these three, and the greatest of these is Love." It is not strange, that the Apostle should say, the greatest of these was love, as love is unfathomable. Furthermore, at that very time the Savior introduced the emblem of feet-washing, there was an inquiry among the disciples who should be the greatest? O, what an appropriate opportunity to introduce that principle of love; and hence Christ said to them, after He had washed the disciple's feet, "ye know not what I have done, but ye shall know hereafter." We ask, if it was the act of feet-washing alone, He wished to make prominent? Did they not know what He had done to them? Most certainly; they understood that He had washed their feet.

The salutation by a holy kiss was an expression of Christian love, not feigned, but coming from the heart, and was a manifest token of pure regard for the welfare of each other. But O, the contrast? when the gold becomes dim, and the most fine gold changed.

Pause a moment, while we read what Jude says, v. 4, "For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ."

But to return to the custom last mentioned; it has been changed to the salutation of the hand, which expresses just as much, and has much less the appearance of evil. What I have witnessed with my own eyes is convincing to me.

Before closing I would say, that I have endeavored not to be personal in my remarks, my only object is the glory of God, and good of souls. I highly respect the good feelings of my Brn. who do not view things in the light that I do. I regard their honesty, or I should not attempt to hold up what I. believe to be light. O, dear Brn. one and all, may the Lord bless you and me, preserve us blameless unto His coming which I believe strongly will take place the present spring. Let us love like Brn., exercise patience and Christian forbearance one to another, like children of our Heavenly Father; for of such is the kingdom of God. O come, great Deliverer, and give the promised INHERITANCE.

Worcester, March 25, 1856.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, APRIL 2, 1856.

Explanation.

We have been requested to explain the misunderstanding that took place in regard to a report which has been circulated to this effect: that Eld. Cummings received his first impressions respecting the darkening of the sun as marking the terminus of the 1260 years of tribulation, from Brn in Canada.

At the time he visited Canada, and held a series of meetings, in 1851, Eld. Thurber, after hearing him preach one evening, remarked to Bro. McDuffee's family, that he wished he could have preached himself that evening, so that he could have given him the light on the periods. To this it was replied, that it was of no consequence, for they had given him the light. Eld. Thurber then supposed that they had communicated the same ideas which he himself entertained in relation to the arrangement of those periods in connection with the darkening of the sun: but upon inquiry it does not appear that they (Bro. McDuffee's family) had embraced those points in the argument at that time. Thus the whole affair, so far as I am able to learn, originated in a misunderstanding, and here I leave it, hoping we shall all be more careful not to circulate reports involving one's character without a certain knowledge of the facts in the case.

The Millenium.

No. 7.

Isa. 65: 17–25, considered.

V. 17, "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind."

The government of God is designed to promote the happiness of His subjects. It tends to the highest welfare of society; and the ultimate and everlasting well-being of all who cheerfully and cordially submit to His requisitions. Hence the nature of the divine economy is progressive—it develops a clearer and brighter light from age to age. It is said of human governments that revolutions never go backward; much more is this principle applicable to the government of God. There may be in the progress and unfoldings of the divine economy apparent delays, failures, defeats and reactions; but all such apparent failures and defeats are partial and temporary; nay, the accumulated waters, at length, rush over the dam with a momentum increased and resistless—sweeping with greater velocity and grandeur like a river of the waters of life. Thus the economy of heaven is like the opening light rising, spreading and increasing in auroral beauty and glory till the whole heavens above are radiant with the glories of the morn, and the earth beneath illuminated and graced and beautified with its colorific beams.

When the darkness of heathen night spread over the antedeluvian earth, and the world was filled with violence the destruction that ensued prepared the way for the opening of the Patriarchal dispensation, in which a promise of an inheritance was given to the people of God, by possessing which they would become isolated from the nations and identified as the special, favorite people of God.

In the progress of this divine scheme a system of worship, peculiar to the Hebrew nation, was instituted, and ushered in amid the thunders of Sinai and the lightnings that shot forth from the bosom of that cloud that enshrouded the Divinity. This economy of the Jewish commonwealth affording, as it did, a grand, central point of worship at Jerusalem—a place of deposit for the sacred Oracles—in connection with the various rites and ceremonies of the Jewish ritual, arose in majesty and beauty like the temple of Solomon all resplendent with marble and gold. The edifice of the Jewish ritual was a spectacle of wonder to angels and men. But the time came when the edifice of Jewish worship must be demolished to pave the way for the more glorious temple of God under the Gospel dispensation. The Jews had apostatized from God, and that form of worship must yield to another more blessed and glorious; and the Jewish polity must be destroyed to prepare the way for the polity of the Christian commonwealth. But although favored with the light of Gospel day; enjoying a dispensation of infinite mercy and grace—a dispensation compared with which the former had no glory by reason of the glory that excelleth, yet the Church has receded from the light, sunk into worldly-mindedness and lost the life and power and glory of an evangelical faith, and an in*dwelling* Christ. The great mass of man*kind* have rejected the commands of God, and the doom of a rebellious world is imminent—her "judgment lingereth not, and her damnation slumbereth not." The impending judgment will soon be realized by a guilty world and a slumbering Church. The world will be "burned and few men left;" but these few—the little remnant—will "return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." And that destruction, appalling, indeed, to the wicked, and tremendous in its effects, will but pave the way for opening scenes of grandeur and of beauty, of loveliness and glory, such as the world has never before witnessed, even on the morn when creation arose in the freshness of its Eden state. A loftier anthem of praise will render vocal the realms of a regenerated world than ever enraptured the ear of mortal man.

It is delightful to trace the unfolding scenes of the divine economy, and the gradual development of the gracious plan. In the 2d Psalm we are informed, that Jesus was to succeed to David's throne, and that all the malicious rage of His enemies did but further the purposes of God, and lay the foundation for an everlasting Kingdom of which He will be the legitimate and sovereign Head; and that this glorious truth will be demonstrated by the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. From the 110th Psalm we learn, that under the Messianic economy He will be a Priest forever, not after the order of Aaron: but after the order of Melchisadec, having the power of an endless life. From Isa. 2d., we learn, that under the Gospel dispensation there will be a general influence of nominal Christianity, but that the Church will be exalted in pride and worldly aggrandizement till they look for a trimuphant and glorious state of things in the present evil world, and cry peace and safety, prosperity and glory, just before sudden destruction shall come, and all their idols shall be utterly abolished. From Isa. 11th we learn, that Jesus will be the supreme Judge of all the earth—that the wicked will be destroyed by the breath of His lips—that the Kingdom which will then be established will be peaceful and harmonious, and that then the whole earth will be filled with the glory of God. From Isa. 25th we learn, that at the organization of that Kingdom, all tears will be wiped away, death destroyed, and the curse removed from off all the earth. And from Isa. 65th, which is the passage under consideration in this article, we learn, that when that kingdom is set up, the earth will not be in its present form, but in its regenerated state, a fit abode for sinless and immortal beings.

But how do we know that the scene described in this passage will transpire in the world to come, when the Church is in its glorified and immortal state? We so understand from the fact that Peter, who evidently quotes the language of the Prophet in this chapter, places the scene beyond the purification of the earth by fire.

"But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens and the earth shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness," 2 Pet. 3: 10–13.

If, subsequently to the conflagration of the earth, we are to expect the fulfilment of this promise in Isa. of a new heavens and a new earth, then it follows by consequence, that it will be after the judgment of the Great Day, and the immortalization of the saints at the coming of Christ.

To be continued.

For the Crisis.

Signs of the End of the World.

By B. P. Hildreth.

No. 1.

The voice of God is heard in various ways speaking to man, poor, fallen man; sometimes speaking face to face, as he talked with Moses, Ex. 33: 11; sometimes by dreams, as He did to Solomon, 1 Kings 3: 5–15; sometimes by angels, as he did to Abraham, Joshua, Paul, John and others; and sometimes by "holy men who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." And one of the latter class has informed us that "The Lord will do nothing, but He revealeth his secret to His servants the prophets," Amos 3: 7, which is proof, that He has revealed by His prophets all that is necessary for us to know. But as some of their predictions are obscure, "He has foretold and mercifully appointed certain signs to precede certain predicted events, as sure precursors of their speedy fulfilment. Sometimes those signs were given as forerunners of blessing, as in the case of Gideon's fleece, Judges 6: 37–40, and the retrocession of the shadow, ten degrees, in the case of Hezekiah's sickness. In many other instances, the Lord has graciously appointed signs for His people to be governed by such as the Sabbath; affirming, "It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day He rested, and was refreshed, Ex. 31: 17.

The first mention of signs in the Bible, we find in Gen. 1: 14, "And God said, let there be lights in the firmament of heaven, to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days and years." Before He had completed the work of Creation, we here see that He appointed the great luminaries of heaven, to be merciful harbingers of future good to His chosen people; and with these, at the beginning, the great Jehovah stood and pointed to the End—and by the given, but uncommon motions and appearances of these planets, we may know both our latitude and longitude, and steer accordingly. Now let poor, feeble man beware of despising or neglecting these merciful admonitions of a Holy God; but heed this warning, for it is both our privilege and duty to search for truth as "for hidden treasures;" and though we would not be wise above that which is written, we would unceasingly labor to come up to what is written. Paul says, "Whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope," Rom. 15: 4. So that the Old Testament may not be disregarded; and on the principle of "the things which are revealed," belonging to us, we claim the whole field of Scripture, through the merits of that victim whose blood alone put the seal to the new Covenant. It is seldom in the arrangement of Providence, that a kingdom or city falls by judgments of God, without some marked premonitions of its overthrow. "Coming events cast their shadows before." The liberation of God's people from bondage, was a striking type of the deliverance of the saints, at the end of the world; and as He multiplied His signs in Egypt, of what would surely and eventually did overtake them; so He has multiplied His signs of the final destruction of the wicked, at "the restitution of all things."

The first signs to Egypt were given in mercy, and could be imitated by the magicians. The Lord said to Moses, "If they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign, Ex. 4: 8. Moses and Aaron stood before Pharaoh twelve times to plead for the liberation of their people; the first time with only a verbal message from God, "Let my people go, that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness," Ex. 5: 1. The king, however, would not hearken, but only increased their burden, and riveted their chains; which made them cry, for hard bondage. The second time, the leprous hand and the serpent-rod were miraculously presented, still in mercy, to the haughty king; and neither did these wonders have any effect on their burdened hearts till His signs were multiplied in the ten following sore judgments upon the land of Egypt, viz., blood, frogs, lice, flies murrain, boil, locusts, hail, darkness and death of their first-born; which latter plague brought them to their senses; as God had said, "they will believe the voice of the latter sign."

These great signs and wonders that were wrought in Egypt are often referred to by Moses in the course of their journeyings through the wilderness. "And the Lord shewed signs and wonders, great and sore upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and all his household before your eyes," Deut. 6: 22. "Thou shalt well remember the great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs and wonders and the mighty hand, and the outstretched arm, whereby the Lord thy God brought thee out, ch. 7: 18. Thus were the signs greatly multiplied even in terrors on the house of Pharaoh, and all Egypt; that they might know what the Lord required of them, which, without obedience, would speedily end in their certain destruction; and which, in a very few days actually overtook them in the Red Sea. Thus we see these infidel Egyptians, though favored with the predictions of Moses and Aaron, rejecting "the counsel of God against themselves;" and all the signs and mighty wonders and terrors, which were seen in Egypt; and which sometimes brought them to relent; yet as soon as the plague was removed, "he sinned yet more and hardened his heart, he and his servants," Ex. 9: 34, which sealed their destruction. Thus he hardened his neck, and in the Red Sea he was "destroyed without remedy."

The prophets themselves were signs to the people to whom they were sent. "Behold I, and the children whom the Lord hath given me, are for signs and wonders, in Israel, from the Lord of Hosts, which dwelleth in Mount Zion, Isa. 8: 18. Isaiah walked barefoot three years for a sign to Egypt and Ethiopia, to show them that they would walk naked and barefoot, prisoners and captives to the king of Assyria, ch. 20: 4, 5. Ezekiel was a sign to Israel in his besieging Jerusalem, ch. 9: 1–3, and in his eating and drinking with quaking and trembling. Jonah was a sign unto the Ninevites, and prophesied of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, by suffering, rather than words. The curses of God were prophetically denounced against disobedient children, for a sign and a wonder; "and on their seed forever," Deut. 28: 46, which is not removed to this day. God gave Eli a sign, that "all the increase" of his house should die "in the flower of their age;" "Because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not;" And that sign was, "Hophni and Phineas shall die, both of them in one day," 1 Sam. 2d and 3d chs; which was remarkably fulfiled, in a short time. Christ Himself is given for a sign to the house of Judah, in his miraculous conception and birth of a virgin, Isa. 7: 14. He was a sign to be "spoken against." "For as Jonah was a sign to the Ninevites, so shall the Son of man be, to this generation." The hardness, unbelief, and murderous rage of the Jews, against the messengers of God, who faithfully reproved them; and above all, their rejection of the Messiah and His followers, (after all the demonstrations which they saw to prove His divinity.) sealed their doom. "He came to His own, and His own received Him not." It was their great curse, that they knew not "the time of their visitation." How deeply was He affected, and how tenderly did He lament, over the calamities which He saw coming on His nation, when "He beheld the city, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known even thou, at least, in this thy day the things which belong to thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes," Luke 19: 41. But when He saw their hypocrisy and corruption, the solemn denunciation was uttered against them: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell? Wherefore, behold I send unto you prophets and wise men and scribes; and some of them ye shall kill and crucify, and some of them ye shall scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city. That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, the son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar; verily I say unto you, all these things shall come upon this generation. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate; for I say unto you ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord," Matt. 23: 33–39.

To be Continued.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. S. H. Waldron.

Portland, Feb. 24, 1856.

Bro. Merriam:—I deem it a duty incumbent on me to try (God being my helper) to improve what little time and opportunity I may have to the glory of God and good of precious souls bound with me to the Judgment seat of Christ. I find the Scripture to be a revelation of Jesus Christ (the great preacher of righteousness) of things past, present and future. The last writings of the beloved John in the Isle of Patmos bears this inscription; yet many call it a secret revelation. To my mind that is a contradiction in terms. "Secret things belong to God; but things revealed belong to us and our children." One of these secret things we find in 2d Cor. 12th ch., where a certain man was caught up into paradise and heard unspeakable words which it was not lawful for man to utter. Another in Rev. 10th ch., where John was forbidden to write the things or voices which the seven thunders uttered. These seem like parallel Scriptures to me, and more profitable to remain as they are until the mystery of God shall be finished, as He hath declared to His servants, the prophets. Then we shall know all about it. Now we see through a glass darkly; we know in part, and prophesy in part.

Definite time long has been and still is with me an important subject of inquiry; and who dares blame us for "searching what (time,) or what manner of time, the spirit of Christ which was in them (the prophets) did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow (at His second coming.) Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which things the angels desire to look into," 1st Pet. 1: 11, 12. The preacher says, "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven," Eccl. 3: 1. Now then has God purposed the second coming of Christ, the end of the world, and the resurrection of the saints, at one and the same time? "And He shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began," Acts 3: 20, 21 "I charge thee therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead at His appearing and His Kingdom," 2 Tim. 4: 1. "And at that time shall Michael stand up, and thy people shall be delivered every one that shall be found written in the book," Dan. 12: 1.

This is when Paul will be rewarded with His crown of righteousness with all those that love His appearing. This is when good old Job also will see God in the flesh; "and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Now if there be a second, there must of necessity be a first coming, which I shall not undertake to prove; for Herod acknowledged Him as Christ—the devils believed and trembled, and they once asked Him if He had come to torment them before the time. His second coming is well substantiated in a few words from His own mouth: "I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, (not at death,) that where I am ye may be also," John; 14: 23. According to His own word we are in duty bound to look for Him again. Now is the time, if ever, that we are in danger of turning unto fables, and giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils as many are doing. What are the spiritual mediums but seducing spirits? Query. Why not call them down, if they go up when they die, as they pretend? O, let us be careful, dear Brn. and Srs., to shun the very appearance of evil, lest we likewise fall from our steadfastness; for without the spirit of Christ it is not in man to direct his steps. The world is full of evil spirits and false doctrines, at this time, and our constant prayer should be, Lord, give me thy Spirit which leads into all truth.

Some say there is no resurrection of the body, but such do not believe the Scriptures; "for if the dead rise not, then is Christ not risen."

Others say that the resurrection took place at His crucifixion, when the graves were opened and many bodies of the saints which slept arose. I think this is not the time Jesus spoke of, when all that are in the graves shall hear His voice and shall come forth.

Others say the resurrection is now going on. The spiritualists have attempted to bring up Bro. Miller, but I think if they could succeed he could tell them more truth than they would be willing to believe. Nothing, however, short of the power of God—the voice of the Archangel, and the trump of God, will ever raise him from his sweet repose in Jesus.

I take the position, that we can all learn something more definite from God's prophetic numbers. Let me quote some passages on the point as they occur to my mind. The preacher says, "A wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment," Eccl. 8: 5. "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased," Dan. 12: 4. "The wise shall understand," Dan. 12: 10. "Know therefore and understand," (69 weeks of the vision at least,) Dan. 9: 25. "God giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding; and he revealeth deep and secret things," Dan. 2: 21, 22. "Yea the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times, and the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow observe the time of their coming, but my people know not the judgment of the Lord," Jer. 8: 7. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. Because thou hast rejected knowledge I will also reject thee," Hos. 4: 6. Daniel "found out by books that 70 years would be accomplished in the desolations of Jerusalem," Dan. 9: 2. "Jerusalem was destroyed because she knew not the time of her visitation," Luke 19: 44. "If therefore thou shalt not watch I will come upon thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what time I will come upon thee," Rev. 3: 3. "The time (or 483 yrs.) is fulfilled," Mark 1 15. "Because he (God) hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world," &c., Acts 17: 31. "Unto two thousand three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed," (the earth and God's people,) Dan. 8: 14. After Gabriel made Daniel understand the thing or vision, he says, "the time appointed was long," Dan. 10: 1. A secret remains a secret until it is made known, revealed or appointed. "ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth, but how is it that ye do not discern this time?" Luke 12: 56. Now may God in mercy help us to search the Scriptures, and never cease to pray for the illumination of that Spirit by which they were dictated, carefully comparing Scripture with Scripture, or parallel passages of the Old and New Testaments. Let the most unlearned Christian study them in this manner, without any other commentary or exposition than what the different parts of the Bible furnish for each other, and it will appear incredible to every one who has not tried it, what progress may be made in that knowledge which maketh wise unto salvation.

Hold on to the truth, dear Brn. and Srs., and sell it not for a mess of pottage. Our warfare is almost accomplished, let us therefore have hearing ears and understanding hearts, that we may discern this time to favor Zion, having on the entire uniform of soldiers of the cross. That when the battle is o'er, we may be found wanting in no one thing, is the prayer of your unworthy Brother waiting for God's purpose to be accomplished at the end of the days,

SILAS H. WALDRON.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. E. Burnham.

MY BRETHREN IN CHRIST: I have something of importance to say to you. Will you hear me this once? While I was walking my room to-day, engaged in solemn prayer to God, the following things were suddenly impressed upon my mind with uncommon vividness. The Crisis is the only independent Religious Periodical I know of in the land—it is just what the flock of God, who are now waiting for the coming of Christ, need—it therefore must not go in arrears as to finance. The subscription list is continually increasing, and will more and more increase. But the Brn. have been to some extra expense in getting type and fixtures to start on the new plan at Boston; this, at length, the paper will pay for; but at the present time it embarrasses it a little. Not quite half of the old debt is yet paid—it must be paid. Just as soon as these extras are paid up, the paper will keep above board, if the subscribers continue to pay up promptly. Now I have a plan—an easy plan—to adopt, by which this matter can be fixed. It is this. Let the friends in all parts of the land raise a collection, on the occasion of their coming together to worship, on the Sabbath, and send the same to Bro. Merriam. It will take but a few cents each to do this, and we are all right again! Come, Brn. for Jesus' sake, for us, poor preachers' sake, and for the sake of the bleating sheep and lambs of the great Shepherd. Let me not appeal in vain! Do not pass this thing over; do it now—to-day—next Sabbath! What is money good for, if not to glorify God with? And how can we better glorify Him than in sending out His truth in the bosom and on the wings of this little flying messenger? Come, come, WORK NOW, I beseech you.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

☞ This proposition of Bro. Burnham's seems to have come just in time.—ED.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. M. Achorn.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1, 1856.

BRO. MERRIAM:—It is with some reluctance that I take up my pen; but duty to you and love to the name of my ever to be adored Lord, prompts me to write. I feel that the religion of Christ is worth possessing. Praise the name of the Lord that He ever taught me to trust in Him for salvation. Praise His blessed name for that hope that is big with immortality. The time is not far distant when the family of the redeemed will be gathered to part no more. Here we have to be separated from those we love. Death-divided friends will there meet to part no more. We have been disappointed in not meeting our blessed Lord ere this; but the promise is, that at the end the vision shall speak and not lie. I never felt more like waiting, than at the present. I see nothing in the world worthy our affections. Thank the Lord, there are yet a few who are determined to hold on their way. The promise is to those that hold out to the end.

If ever I felt that Christ and His cross were my delight, it is at the present time. Glory to the name of the Lord for His love that He is pleased to bestow on His children. Let us, my Brn. and Srs., seek to be very humble. Let us daily strive to overcome the world by the blood of the Lamb and the word of our testimony, that Jesus may own us before His Father and the Holy angels.

From your Sister in Christ,

MARY J. ACHORN.

BRO. MERRIAM: I take the liberty to send to the Crisis the following selected articles:—

A WISE SAYING.—"They are the best Christians who are more careful to reform themselves, than to censure others."

HEARING THE GOSPEL.—"Beware of the critical hearing of sermons preached by good men. It is an awful thing to be balancing the merits of the preacher, rather than the demerits of yourself. Consider every opportunity of hearing the truths, as a messenger sent you from Heaven, for all the sermons that you hear, you are soon to give account for."

BENEFITS OF ADVERSITY.—A smooth sea never made a skillful mariner. Neither does uninterupted prosperity and success qualify for usefulness or happiness. The storm of adversity, like the storm of the ocean, arouses the faculties, excites the invention. prudence, skill and fortitude of the voyager. The martyrs of ancient times, in tracing their minds to outward calamity, acquired a loftiness of purpose—a moral heroism, worth a life of softness and security.

HELP EACH OTHER.—We all need assistance from others; from the cradle to the Kingdom we are dependent creatures; he who stands up and boldly declares I am sufficient of myself, I ask not the help and sympathy of others—is a being we care not to be acquainted with; we are certain he stands more in need of assistance of his neighbor, than one thousand who make less pretensions to their own strength. As we all need help from others, so can we all—the poorest and humblest—assist our fellow creatures. A word, or a tear, is more effectual, at times, than the best amount of money. Ask him who has had a sad heart, or he who is confined to a bed of languishment. Feel, then, your dependence upon others, and be ever ready, by deed or word, to render that assistance which you may need at some future time."

THE BIBLE.—We have never seen a more truthful remark upon the Book of all books, than the following:

"'The Bible,' says one, 'is dangerous;' but dangerous for whom? It is dangerous for infidelity which it confounds—dangerous for sin which it curses—dangerous for Satan whom it dethrones—dangerous to false religion which it unmasks—dangerous to every Church which dares to conceal it from the people, whose criminal impostures or fatal illusions it brings to light."

Obituaries.

Died in Weare, N. H., March 9, of consumption, Sister Sarah B. Lord, wife of Brother Bradford Lord, aged 44.

Sister Lord embraced the Advent faith in '43, and, amid all the changes incident to this life, she continued steadfast in the faith till death, and quietly fell asleep in Jesus with the hope of coming forth at the first resurrection, robed in immortality to die no more.

By this stroke of death, the family circle is broken, and a companion, with two children and other friends, mourn the loss of their deceased friend. May this affliction be sanctified to those mourning friends, and they look to Jesus, who is "the resurrection and the life," for support and comfort in their time of need.

The funeral discourse was preached by Elder Smith, from 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.

Also, March 19th, Sister Lovina E., wife of Brother James Morrel, and daughter of George and Nancy Stoning, aged 22.

In the fall of '54, the deceased attended the Camp meeting in Exeter, N. H., where she experienced religion and was baptized. She confidently looked for the second coming of Christ, yet time lingered, and she fell a victim to that destroyer, consumption. Death triumphed over her, but his triumph will be short, for we expect ere long, the Lord will come, and with the trump of God raise the sleeping saints to life eternal. The religion of Jesus was the joy and consolation of Sister Morrel during her long illness of sixteen months, affording happiness even in her dying moments.

Though her companion will feel sad and lonely, may the assurance of meeting her again in a "better land" lighten his sorrow, and lead him to be faithful in the cause of God, that he may share with her the glories of a blest immortality beyond the grave. The subject of the discourse, delivered on the funeral occasion, by Elder B. Locke, was 1 Cor. 15: 21.

Will the Advent Herald please copy.

H. M. L.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.—THE VOLCANO AT HILO.—The Honolulu Friend shows the terrific progress of the lava flood, which threatens with destruction the beautiful town and bay of Hilo; but what seems most singular to an energetic people like ourselves, is the apathy of the inhabitants, who are looking on bewildered, but taking no means to divert the fiery element from its course. The sides and surface of the stream of lava, exposed to the air, soon cool to a crust, below which the advancing mass keeps forcing a passage. It is represented as being easily controlled and turned into new channels. Sometimes the hard sides are tapped, and streams let out, which flow almost at right angles with the general current.

The Friend says:

"Every day darkens the prospects of Hilo. The stream comes in great force some two miles a week. Three or four miles will bring it through the woods. It follows water channels, dries up aqueous matter, and forms fiery cascades of terrible sublimity. It heads straight down upon us, and nothing but the hand of Omnipotence can save our town and bay. Our expulsion seems every day more and more a solemn reality. Molten fires are gleaming, trees are falling, the jungle is consuming, rivers are boiling and ascending in steam clouds."

A PROPHECY.—In 1831, the eccentric Lorenzo Dow made a prophecy that in 1856 the greatest flood since the time of Noah would prevail all over the world. From the vast quantity of snow now on the ground and ice in the rivers, it would only require a couple of days' continuous warm rain from the South West to produce pretty much of a flood in some of the United States. Lorenzo had probably never heard of the flood of Deucalion and Ogyges.—Boston Courier.

On Friday last, the 21st inst., about 9 o'clock, A. M., a very perceptible shock of an earthquake was felt in the counties of Nelson, Amherst, and the south part of Albemarle, in Virginia.

FOREIGN ITEM.—The blood-steeped field of Inkermann, is one large violet bed, where early in the year the flowrets spring up in extraordinary profusion.

POPULATION OF ROME.—A census has just been taken, by which it appeared that the number of its inhabitants was 177,461, of whom 5,081 were priests, or about one in thirty-five of its entire population!

From the monthly summary of wrecks, published by the English Shipping Gazette, it appears that during the month of February the number of wrecks was 174. In the month of January there were 265; making a total during the present year of 439.

FOREIGN NEWS.

One week Later from Europe.

Arrival of Steamship Canada.

HALIFAX, March 28.—The royal mail steamship Canada, from Liverpool about 1 P. M., Saturday, 15th inst., arrived here at 7.30 this evening.

Mr. Buchanan dined with the Lord Mayor of London, and made a conciliatory speech, which has had a good effect.

No excitement exists respecting American affairs.

THE PEACE CONFERENCES.—The eighth sitting of the Paris Conference was held on Wednesday, the 12th, but the results are not known. All accounts from Paris agree on the almost certainty of peace, and the accounts from Germany and Prussia speak in the same tone.

It was generally rumored that a treaty of peace would be signed at Paris on Friday, or Saturday the 15th. All the differences have not, however, been adjusted. Several important disputes respecting Danubian Principalities and Asiatic frontiers are left as undecided as when the Congress first met.

It is said the ratifications of territory and adjustment of other unarranged differences, are to be referred to a commission on the spot. The topographical details at hand are very incomplete, and the projected frontier of Chotym to Lake Jusick is neither marked by stream nor mountain chain. France, it is said, will appoint as her Commissioner, General L'Etang. Austria, England and Russia are on the point of naming theirs. Sardinia will not be represented in the Commission.

Despatches from Berlin and Vienna state that, for reasons of European interest, Prussia has been invited to send representatives to the Conference; that she accepts the invitation, and that Baron Manteuffel, as Plenipotentiary, would leave Berlin on the 14th for Paris, will act as second Plenipotentiary.

The admission of Prussia is said to be specially based upon the ground that the discussion respecting the treaty of 1841, by which the Dardanelles were closed to ships-of-war, is to begin forthwith

A despatch from Berlin of the 12th inst., says Count Orloff has made known at St. Petersburg, that a definite understanding has been come to on the fifth point, and that, thanks to the instructions brought by M. de Schoeualoff, peace is assured. Some special deliberations which are to take place between Russia and Prussia have been reserved.

PARIS, Friday. The Congress held its ninth sitting to-day. The Moniteur publishes the following:—"The Peace Congress having invited Prussia as the signer of the treaty of the 13th of July, 1841, to send plenipotentiaries to Paris, the King of Prussia has appointed Baron Monteuffel and Count de Hatzfieldt"

On the 28th, the British blew up the White Buildings in Sebastopol.

THE BALTIC.—Despatches from Hamburg of March 11, state that the British flying squadron is pushing toward the Gulf of Finland.

ITALY.—The Inspector General of Prisons in the Duchy of Parma, was assassinated in the streets.

ASIA.—Ismael Pasha was preparing to take command of the Turkish army at Erzeroum.

Omer Pasha was at Trebizond, on his way to Constantinople.

Selim Pasha is to be court-martialed for the fall of Kars.

RUSSIA.—Preparations are being made at Moscow for the coronation of the Emperor, which will take place after the conclusion of peace.

Book Notice.

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer, or History of The Reign of Christ on Earth By D. T. Taylor, revised and Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings—second edition, 1855.

We have been at no little trouble to obtain a copy of this valuable work. We find it all it purports to be, "A history of the doctrine of the personal and pre-millenial reign of Christ on Earth." It states the doctrine with great clearness, a doctrine, which in our day is so greatly misunderstood, and misrepresented. We give the author's definition:

ANTI-MILLENARIANS, or Anti-M., all those who hold that the Apocalyptic millenium is in the future, or those who locate it in the past, though not denying the future personal reign of Christ on earth.

POST-MILLENIALISTS, or Post-M., all those who hold that the Apocalyptic millenium is in the future, and who postpone the personal advent of the Redeemer, and literal resurrection of the holy dead till its close, thus denying the personal millenial reign.

The object of this book is to prove that this doctrine of a pre-millenial advent and personal reign of Christ on earth, was the doctrine of the Apostles, and earliest apostolic Fathers, and the cherished doctrine of the Church of Christ in all ages—the doctrine that comforted the hearts of the early Christians in pagan prisons, strengthened them for the torture, and filled the hearts of every martyr wtih triumphant joy.

Chapter first is devoted to a definition of terms—the great question, when is the millenium to occur? the principles of interpretation.

Chapter second, to the testimony of Universal Tradition. Hebrew writers on the first Resurrection.

Chapter third, the faith of the early Church, from Barnabas to Origen, A. D 71, to A. D. 250. The writers quoted to show the faith of the primitive church, are Barnabas, A. D. 71, Clement, A. D 96; Herimas and Ignatius, A. D. 100; Polycarp, A. D. 108; Papias, A. D. 116, Justin Martyr, A. D. 150; Irenatous, A. D. 178—who taught that the promise of Canan to Abraham, for an everlasting possession, of which circumcision was the pledge, has never been fulfilled, and will not be until the Second Advent—he quotes the old Scriptures at great length to sustain his teachings. The author gives the theme in the very order laid down by Irenatous—Isa. xxvi, 19; Ez. xxxvii; 12–14 and 38, 25, 26; Jer. xxiii: 7–8; Isa. xxx; 25, 26, and 38 14; Luke xii; 37–40; Rev. xx: 6; Isa. vi: 12; Dan. vii; 27; Jer, xxxi: 10–15; Isa. xxxi: 9, and xxxii: 1, lxxix: 11–14; and xiv: 18–28. Let the reader consult each of these pages.

In addition to the above, we have the churches of Lyons and Vienna, A. D. 199. Hyppolytus, A. D. 220. Miliio, A. D. 177. Tertullian, A. D. 200. Montanists, A. D. 150. Clement, A. D. 192. Cyprian, A. D. 120. Nepus and Coracian, A. D. 250.

One thing is fully sustained by this work, that the doctrine of a pre-millenial and personal reign of Christ on earth, was as clearly the doctrine of the Apostolic and early churches, as that they practised immersion for baptism. The former, then, is as characteristically the ancient doctrine of Baptists, as the latter—and should be so to-day. Another fact will be evident to any one who will consult this book, that it was owing to the teachings and influence of the Catholic Fathers—Church of Rome—that this doctrine has been brought into so great disrepute. So that the Orthodoxy of the Church in the first ages became to so great an extent, the heterdoxy of the present. That very doctrine that the martyrs clasped to their bosoms in the flames, is now sneered at as an evident token of fanaticism. It has come to be regarded as proof of incipient insanity.

The author traces the history of the doctrine, century by century, down to the present time. Evincing a familiarity with history and authorship that is very rarely met with.

He adduces Confession of Faith presented by the Baptists of England to Charles II. in 1660, signed by forty-one Elders, and brethren, and approved by more than 20,000 others—which they said they were ready to seal with their blood. We will give this Confession next week.

It fills us with a sense of shame and sorrow to hear Baptists of this day reject and even revile the faith of our fathers—to see the influence of the man of sin over the faith of even Baptists!!

We might add that this doctrine was firmly held by Luther, and all the fathers of the Reformation, and that they, as did the early christians, looked for an immediate appearing of Christ. The author satisfactorily accounts for this for the past time—the chronology they followed.

In chapter ten, we find a list of authors in this century advocating these views, and it is very large, embracing the most distinguished modern authors, commentators and philologists, and a majority of the missionaries in foreign lands. And this list is rapidly increasing, which is an evident sign of the end, for it is predicted that about that time many shall run to and fro, i. e., give their attention to the understanding of these things, (Michaelis) and knowledge (of the words of prophecy) shall be increased. Dan. xii: 4.

We refer those who would see a more extended review of this book and this subject to the pages of the Southern Baptist Review, for January and February.

Believing that we would be doing a great favor to many Bible Students who would like to examine this subject, we have ordered one hundred copies of the book, to be sent by mail, to any one who will send us one dollar in paper and twenty cents in postage stamps. It is a work of four hundred and six 8mo. pages.

APPOINTMENTS.

The Lord willing, Bro. J. Couch will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., on Sunday, April 6, at Portland, Me., Sunday, April 13.

Elder M. Grant appoints to preach in New Bedford, the first Sunday in April, and at Fairhaven, Mass. the second.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren at Union Hall, Tiverton, R. I., on Thursday, at 1 o'clock, P. M., April 10, and baptize at the close of the meeting. M. GRANT.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Portland Me., on Sunday April 20.

A. ROSS.

Providence permitting, I will preach at North Adams, Sunday, April 13th, and evenings of the following week if the Lord will. I should be glad to meet the brethren from Hawley, Savoy, Cheshire, and other places, as I propose to spend a few weeks in that region, and labor as the Lord may direct.

J HEMENWAY.

The Lord willing, Br. Boutell appoints to preach in Providence, R. I., the first and second Sundays in April.

With the help and permission of our Lord and Master, I will meet the Church of Christ in

New Britain, Sunday, April 6.
Cheshire, April 9.
Bristol, Sunday, April 13.

A. M. HIGGINS

Providence permitting, I will preach at Worcester, Mass. Sunday, April 6.

J. HEMENWAY.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Lawrence, Mass. Sunday, April 6.
New Bedford, Mass. Sunday, April 13.

If the brethren further East wish my labors among them, they may address me by letter. Direct West Meriden, Ct.

C. GOODRICH.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the Church at
Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, April 13.
Portsmouth, N. H., Sundays April 20 and 27. S. S. BREWER.

NOTICE OF THE NEW ENGLAND MISSION TENT.—Those wishing for Tent-Meetings in Illinois, Iowa, or Wisconsin, this Spring, will please write to myself or Br. W. Pratt, at this place. P. B MORGAN.

Moline, Ill. Feb. 28, 1856.

CONFERENCE.—If time continue, a Conference will be held in East Brattleboro', Vt., to commence the second day of May and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be at the Hall of the Melrose Seminary, which has been rented for a permanent place to hold meetings. We are desirous of commencing our meetings by holding a Conferance, so that the way may be opened for Preachers that have the truth.

We invite all our Brethren and Sisters who love the coming of the Lord, and other truths connected with that event.

I am requested to ask Brn. E. Burnham, S. Mathewson and H. Pratt to attend the meeting, and as many more of God's ministers as the Lord may send.

We wish the above named Brn. to inform us through the Crisis whether they will come.

D. W. MILLER.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postage 17 cents.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition, 75.

Dobney on Future Punishment, 75 cts.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.
" " 2 series, 75 cts.

Signs of the Times, 75 cts.
The End, 75 cts.
Lectures on Romanism, $1.
The Tent and the Altar, 75 cts.

Church Debts, 50 cts.

Pauline Theology,	15 cts.	single,	$10	per 100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "	"
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 "	"
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50	"
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 "	"
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Outline of the Coast of Man,	3 "	"	1,50	"

The Destiny of the Wicked, 3 cts.

Book of Seven Seals, 3 cts.

Seven Seals, 3 cts.

The Laodicean Church or the Judgment Age, 3 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE OF
FUTURE PUNISHMENT.
BY H. H. DOBNEY,
Baptist Minister, of England.
Fourth Edition.
WITH AN APPENDIX ON
THE STATE OF THE DEAD,
BY JOHN MILTON,
Author of "Paradise Lost."

1 VOL. 12 MO., 310 PAGES. PRICE 75 CENTS.

This is one of the most important works ever issued upon this solemn subject. Clear, forcible, and sometimes eloquent in his language, the author surveys the whole field, and presents his arguments and examines objections with the facility of "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." The style is calm and Christian, a rare excellence in a controversial work. The Universalist, the skeptic, and the infidel, will find here that while the truths they hold are admitted in all their force, yet the reasonableness of revelation and the retribution therein revealed cannot be denied. And the believer in the doctrine of the Eternal agony of the multitudes of the Lost, will find that objections to that opinion exist in the word of God, no less serious than those which arise from the calm consideration of the subject in the light of human reason.

Let all obtain and read this work with care, and we shall await with confidence the verdict of the candid and unprejudiced.

The volume is an elegant 12mo., and contains besides the views of the poet Milton, who, with Luther, Tindale, Bishop Law and Archbishop Whately, defends the doctrine of unconsciousness in death.

It will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of the price, 75 cents.

For sale at the Crisis office, Boston; P. Richardson, 177 8th Avenue, New York; George T. Adams, 167 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. TAYLOR."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J.M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. George Waugh's Post Office address is Stoughton, Mass.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Union Mills, Indiana.

Br Aaron B. Andrews, P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co. Illinois.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Br. George L. Teoples P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co., Illinois.

Joel S. Richards' P. O. address is Lincolnville, Maine.

Br. J. S. Richards P. O. address is Lincolnville, Waldo Co., Maine.

Sr. S C Shirley, your remittance could not have been received, as your name was not on our books. We will send you the paper.

Cash Receipts.

J S Richards, A W Taylor, S Cooper, H V Rogues, W H Lloyd, J Morrison, N Furber, D Rice, L R Barber, S S Stetson, M M Schuflar, S Shaw, K S Moore, E M Hickox, L Hart, L Hill, S Gay, J Clay, E Potter, J G Putnam, J R Delano, E Knob, P Marshall, D W Miller, J Squire, $1 each.

W Simms $6, W Gifford $2, W Draper $1,50, C Danford 75 cts.

G E Baldwin, C Page, J M Marston, M Waterhouse, J Blaisdell, M J Allen, 50 cts. each.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public.

For the Crisis.

O Come to Jesus.

By S. S. Brewer.

Tune—Araby's Daughter.

The sun of probation is now fast declining,
The shades of the evening are gathering around,
The last beams of grace now in mercy is shining,
O, haste then, dear sinner, the trump soon will sound.
O come to the waters of Life's cleansing fountain,
In accents of mercy the spirit cries, "come;"
O come, though your sins were as high as a mountain,
The Savior stands pleading, "O come, sinner, come."

O come, sinner, come ere the Spirit shall leave you,
The Savior shall rise up and shut to the door;
Come, let go the world that allures and deceives you,
O come, ere the day of probation is o'er.
O come—soon your cries will prove unavailing,
The Spirit will cease then, to strive with thee more;
Too late when men's hearts are with terror them failing,
And Jesus shall plead for poor sinners no more.

O come, while the Savior now stands for thee pleading,
O come, while the bride to thee cries, "sinner, come;"
O haste, while the Spirit is yet interceding,
In mercy, I pray thee, O do, sinner, come.
O list, sinner, list to this last solemn warning,
Soon the last invitation will die on thine ear.
You'll soon be enshrouded in night without morning,
In the presence of God you must shortly appear.

Lawrence, Mass.

The Pilgim's path.

We have had a tedious journey,
And tiresome 'tis true;
But see how many dangers
The Lord has brought us through.

Chorus.

We'll wait, we'll wait for the victory,
We'll wait, we'll wait for the year of jubilee.

Long since we might have fainted,
On this enchanted ground;
But now and then a cluster
Of precious grapes we've found.
We'll wait, &c.

Soon is our Jesus coming
To take His children home,
And then we'll shout Hosannah,
Around our Father's throne.
We'll wait, &c.

For the Crisis.

Reply to Bro. J. Thomas.

By Dr. A. Decker.

Dear Brother:—I do not make the years end prior to the darkening of in 1780, as you seem to understand me; and yet I do believe that the ing of the sun, was designed by avior to, and does mark the termination of those prophetic days, as I shall soon explain. It is certain, that if the 1260 years had entirely expired before the sun was darkened, the 1335 years must have ended before the 19th day of May 1855; and this opinion I once held for some time, as many of the brethren know. But I have since, upon a more mature investigation of the subject, changed my mind, for the following reasons:

First, I find that in several instances in the Bible, where an event is spoken of as taking place after a definite period; that it took place on the last day or year of such period. The first instance of this kind that I shall notice, is found in John 20: 26, "And after eight days, again his disciples were within, and Thomas was with them; then came Jesus, &c.," now the meetings of the Apostles, in both instances, were on Sunday,—the first day of the week; and therefore their second meeting, when Thomas was with them, was in the eight day, instead of after it, as we generally use this phrase.

Benson, in his commentary on this passage, says:—"After eight days, i. e. eight days after His resurrection, viz., the next Sunday after, His disciples were within." Jesus rose on Sunday, and this was the next Sunday after, and probably in the morning. This is a case just in point, and shows how, and in what sense such phrases are to be understood, since it could not be possible that John could have been ignorant of the fact, that the second meeting of the Apostles was on the eighth day instead of the next day after it had entirely expired. It is evident from this example, that they used this phrase, "after eight days," &c., as we do, eight days after.

Again: Jeremiah prophesied, that when or after 70 years were accomplished, (see ch. 25: 12, and 29: 10), the king of Babylon should be punished, &c., and yet Josephus states in Ant. B. 11, ch. 1, sec. 1., that the first year of Cyrus—which was after Babylon was overthrown—was in the 70th year of the captivity; and this is in accordance with all other Chronologies that I know of. This is very significant, since it shows how Josephus, a Hebrew scholar, understood such phrases.

Therefore, the punishment of the king of Babylon, and the decree of Cyrus, which liberated the Jews from their captivity, must have been some time during the last year of the seventy before it had expired. In Num. 13: 25, it reads thus—"And they returned from searching the land after forty days." Now by the first verse of the 14th ch., it is evident they returned in the fortieth day sometime before evening. The phrase, after forty days, here, is unequivocally used in the same sense that after eight days is, in John 20: 26, and is synonymous with forty days after. That this is correct, is further proved from the fact, that the forty days in which they searched the land, correspond to, and were to be fulfilled upon the same principle as the forty years that they were to "wander in the wilderness"—see vs. 33-35. "And they crossed over Jordan unto the land of Canaan, in the fortieth year," (see Deut. ch. 1). And if the forty years are to be dated from the time that God told them they should wander in the wilderness forty years, then they crossed over Jordan unto the land of Canaan, some six months before the forty years ended. But if the forty years began at their exit from Egypt, then it fell short of the 40 years, five days; for they came out of Egypt on the 15th of the first month; and they crossed over Jordan on the 10th.

Again, 2 Chron. 18: 2, "And after certain years, he (Jehoshaphat) went down to Ahab to Samaria." In the margin it reads, "at the end of years." In 1 Kings 22: 2, the same account is given thus; "And it came to pass in the third year," &c. Now, whether the marginal reading or the text as it stands, of 2 Chron. 18: 2, is the mere correct translation, it is proved by 1 Kings 22: 2, that it was neither after nor at the end of, the third year, in the sense of "the self-same day." A parallel passage and marginal reading, is found in Dan. 11: 13; and we may learn from these passages, that the phrases after and at the end of, are quite synonymous. And therefore, the most that we can understand from them, is, that they limit the event to the last day or year of the period to which it belongs. Dan. 9: 26, "And after three-score and two weeks," &c. This might have been translated, evidently, with the same propriety, at the end, &c., for there can be no doubt, I think, that Christ was crucified immediately at the end of this period, and possibly before it had entirely expired. Indeed, the same original phrase which is translated after, &c., may, and is with equal propriety, translated at the end of, and is unequivocally to be understood in the same sense, in every instance where it is connected with prophetic periods. Every one knows, that is at all acquainted with the original languages, that the same word or preposition, gives the translator this latitude. We might follow this out to almost any length, to prove that where an event is spoken of as taking place after or at the end of a definite period, it almost invariably takes place in the last day or year of such period. But I think, dear Brother, that this will be sufficient to satisfy you on this point. The word translated "immediately," in the Greek is Eutheos, which, according to Liddell and Scotts' Greek and English Lexicon, means immediately, straightway, at once, suddenly, and which shows that the darkening of the Sun, could neither fall short, or be protracted beyond the last day or year of the 1260. And thus I think it must be evident to all, that the most that we can understand from the darkening of the Sun is, that it points out the last year of that period, by being darkened at any time within the limits of the last year, and therefore the 1260 years tribulation reaches to 1781. That the tribulation was to be just 1260 years long, I have unequivocally proved in my articles on Revelation chs. 12, 13 and 17. And it is only on this ground, that the language of our Savior, in regard to the darkening of the Sun can be accounted for, to my mind.

Second, the union of the civil and ecclesiastical power, which established the letter of Leo and the council of Chalcedon, as the law of the empire, at which time the 1260 years must have begun, could not, I think, be dated earlier than 521. The basis on which this union was effected, was the four articles dictated by the Pope of Rome. The first article, it is true, was complied with in 519; but the second, third and fourth were not ratified till 521. The mere signing of the articles by the bishop of Constantinople, did not meet the conditions of the second article, which required "that the like declaration (i. e. like the Emperor's in the first article), should be made and signed by ALL THE BISHOPS IN THE EAST," in the presence of all the people, &c. Now, as the second article was not ratified until 521, neither could the third and fourth have been, and therefore, no union, or ecclesiastical law of the empire could have been established prior to that date; and we should be no less inconsistent, to my mind, to say that peace was established in Europe over a year ago upon the "basis of the four points," when only one or two of them were agreed upon, than we should be to say that the union of the Church and State was effected in 519. It must be evident to all, that there can be no peace established in Europe, until ALL the points or articles are ratified by all the parties concerned. One link broken, and the whole chain is equally severed; therefore, until all the articles dictated by Hormisdas, were signed and complied with by the parties concerned or named in those articles, there could be no union, or law established.

And furthermore, if free toleration had been established, and the protestant denomination had been raised from their trodden-down condition, to equal citizenship before 1781, then the edict of Francis Joseph 2d, in that year, was entirely superfluous. But it must be evident to all, that this edict to establish free toleration, would not have been issued, unless there had been a clear necessity for so doing. And therefore, all that was embraced in or accomplished by this edict, had not been accomplished before. We therefore believe that the 1260 years must run to 1781, and that the darkening of the Sun in 1780, is in harmony with this position, upon the principle which I think I have before fully established.

Third, I think there can be nothing more evident, than that the 1335 days reach to the "end of these wonders," viz., the standing up of "Michael," and the resurrection The great question of interest to Daniel was, how long? and we cannot doubt but that the angel gave him a correct answer to his inquiry. And, lest he might doubt that the 1335 days reached to the resurrection, he is commanded to go his way, "till the end be, for thou shall rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." This, no doubt, was quite sufficient to satisfy Daniel, and ought to all others. I think that the 1335 days reach to the end of the wonders; for this was the last period mentioned by the angel, and consequently the one to which he must have referred. Whatever may be the nature of the blessing promised at the end of these days, it is quite certain that it cannot be realized until after the resurrection of Daniel; for he had a special promise that he should "stand" in his "lot" of this promed blessing. Mark the words, "blesseth is he that waiteth," &c. "Thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." Most unequivocally Daniel had a promise to share in this blessing. This agrees with 1 Thess. 4: 15, "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent (go before) them that are asleep."

Again, this blessing is clearly shown in Luke 21: 28, "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Says Paul in Rom. 8: 23, "And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, WAITING for the adoption, to wit, the REDEMPTION of our body."

The above, I think, is sufficient to prove that the blessing that the Church is to wait for, at the end of the 1335 days, is the blessing of redemption, in which Daniel has the promise of participating. Now as Daniel has not yet stood in his "lot," and as "these wonders" have not taken place, it must be evident that the 1335 days have not expired, and therefore the 1260 years must include all of 1780. Now this is the way, dear Brother, that I harmonize the darkening of the Sun with the ending of the 1335 days this year in connection with the 2300, and I leave it with you, and all the rest of the dear children, to judge whether I am right. So I understand, and consequently I am looking for the coming of the blessed Lord this year with unwavering faith.

"Amen. So come, Lord Jesus." May the good Lord guide us into all truth.

Yours in the love of Jesus, waiting for the blessing.

The Love of Jesus.

By J. E. Ainsworth.

This is a theme that interests every lover of God. "God so loved the world, that He gave His ONLY begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." O, what a Savior we have! so lovely—so benevolent—so good—what compassion! so willing to die for us. While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. O that I had the ability to write out what is in my heart. But, thanks be to God, the time is at hand when the whole story will be told, when on Zion's heights the pilgrims shall stand, and shout their Alleluias to the Lamb. O, who can fathom the unbounded love of Jesus?

A pilgrim praying, thy kingdom come.

N. B. By the kind providence of God, the little company of believers have secured their former place of worship in Brimfield, where they will meet every Sabbath. We hope God's watchmen will not forget the place.

Brimfield, March. 23d, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. E. White.

Carroll, N. H., Feb. 4, 1856.

Bro. Merriam: I could not well do without the Crisis, deprived as I am of the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith. It is a source of great comfort to me, to hear from my Brn. and Srs. through the medium of the paper. From it I derive strength and encouragement, in some of my lonely hours; (for many such I see,) and I often think if I could only see one who loved to talk about the near coming of the Lord, it would be a source of great comfort to me; but that privilege I do not often enjoy. I often feel almost discouraged, and as though I should sink; but the Lord has kept me thus far from denying the faith, and joining in the follies of these last days, for which I feel truly thankful. Shall we give up the ship now, after so long and tedious a voyage? By no means; if it sink, we will go down with it. I hope we are not seeking the applause of the world, but treasures that will endure when all things earthly shall fail us. If we can but win Christ, let us count all things as loss and dross, for the excellency there is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Although a stranger to me, yet I feel as though you had been made nigh by the blood of Christ, and I should be glad to see you and hail you happy on your way, with many others that I never expect to see in the present life, but I hope we shall all meet in the promised land. May God bless you with a double portion of His grace, and aid you in sending light and instruction to His waiting children; and may our Father in Heaven make each one of us understand our duty in regard to putting the means into your hands to continue the Crisis as long as we shall need it, which, I trust, will not be long. I do wish some of the watchmen would come this way, and give us meat in due season; but I know not that it would do any good; the world lies in wickedness, and soon must meet its doom.

Hoping to meet the little flock where the silent language of the pen will not be known,

Your Sister in Christ,

Eliza White.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. R. Collins.

Fitzwilliam, N. H., March 1856.

Bro. Merriam:—The Crisis is truly a welcome visitor, and it is with a thankful heart that I read those precious communications from our dear Brethren and Sisters. Although I feel that my ability for communicating my sentiments by writing are very small, yet it is a privilege for which I am grateful, that we can through the medium of the pen convey our thoughts to our distant Brethren and Sisters.

I am almost entirely alone in this place respecting our belief. And it is very seldom that I hear Advent preaching. I often think if it were not for the Holy Bible and the Crisis, I should sink into gloom and despair. Praise God for the light that I have lately beheld in studying the Sacred Scriptures. I thank God that the truth has been made plain to me. The resurrection is full of glory and interest. To that time I look forward with a precious hope of soon beholding many near and dear friends that now are sleeping in the silent grave. And I believe the moment is fast hastening, when this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal immortality, 1 Cor. 15: 53. Immortality is an object to be sought for. As we read in Romans 2: 7, "To them, who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life." O how bright and glorious clear and beautiful, the Gospel truth, which shines forth as radiant as the unclouded sun! But how it pains my heart when I look around and see so many rushing on to destruction amid the blaze of Gospel light. But so it is.

Ps. 92: 7, "When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed for ever." Ps. 7: 9, "O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end. But establish the just; for the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins."

Yours, hoping for immortality at the coming of Christ,

Roxanna Collins.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. C. Tuttle.

Freedom, Portage Co., Ohio, Feb. 1, 1846.

Br. Merriam:—I esteem it a great privilege that the children of God enjoy, in being permitted to speak to each other through the medium of the Crisis. Although very unworthy, I feel like standing as a witness for Jesus wherever I am.

About two years since I embraced the Advent doctrine. Curiosity prompted me to hear and read for myself; and I rejoice that I did. Yes, I feel like rejoicing to-day, that I ever heard an Advent sermon. Since that time the Bible has been a new book to me; I can discover a harmony that I never could before, praise the Lord. I hope no longer to be blinded by the traditions of men; but to stand in the liberty of the Gospel. Let others ridicule our faith, and point the finger of scorn at us. I regard it not. If God be for us, who can be against us? We are still here in a world of sin and sorrow, exposed to all the trials and temptations of life; but I am by no means discouraged, or shaken in my faith; for we have abundant evidence to prove that the coming of Jesus is near, even at the door. It is very plain that the world will not be ready for the coming of the Son of man: for they will not believe his word. We dwell among those who are not afraid to speak evil of those things which they understand not; and the way of truth also is evil in their estimation; but the Lord will deliver His people from temptation and trial. Truly, this is a life of trial, but may the Lord grant us grace sufficient to leave all and follow Him through evil as well as good report. May we lay up our treasure in a better world than this, knowing that the glories of that Kingdom will repay us for all we suffer here. O for more of the pure love of God in the soul. It is the prayer of my heart that His children may love one another as He has commanded us; that we may dwell in love; for God is love. We must watch over ourselves, and keep ourselves in the love of God; and in patient waiting for Christ; for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh.

Caroline Tuttle.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. E. Teeple.

Roxbury, Ct., March 25, 1856.

Dear Brn. and Srs.: By the love of Christ I am constrained to write. I am still looking for Jesus, and am bound for the city of the living God. I have not cast away my confidence; for it hath great recompence of reward; neither do I intend to; for now the just shall live by faith, and all that endure the trial, will be ready to meet the King at His appearing and Kingdom. If ever there was a time when we needed patience it is now. Says one and another, why don't you give it up? but my soul responds again and again, I cannot; He whom I love will come, and that right soon.

O hail happy day,
That speaks our trials ended;
The Lord has come to take us home,
O hail happy day.

I feel I can truly say as did the Psalmist, "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth out of them all." And like Paul, I choose rather to suffer with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin. Yes, my Brn. and Srs., I classed myself with Adventists from choice; and bless God, I can say, to-day, I do not regret it; neither do I look back into Egypt—the land from whence I came—but upward and upward, with an eye steadily on the prize, do I move, expecting soon to reach the promised land. When I think of the past, I am encouraged in relation to the future. The peace of mind and joy in the Holy Ghost which I have enjoyed most of the time for 11 years, I trust never will be forgotten by me. The King will surely come; but O, when? is the language of the true child of God.

I often think of you, Br. Merriam, and that it is my privilege to lend a helping hand, to write now and then. We all know it is a trying time, and many are to be purified, made white and tried; and who among the many will stand the trial? Oh for grace; thank the good Lord He has promised it, and in Him is still my trust.

There are but few in this place who are trying to live; but I do think there will yet be some ready to meet Christ at His coming; and you, Brn. and Srs., who have many privileges, remember us in Roxbury, and when the watchmen come into this section, we hope they will remember us. We have usually no one to break to us the bread of Life; but there is one thing to comfort the believer, the Lord knoweth and loveth them that are His, and will never leave nor forsake them unless they forsake Him. Blessed promise, how it cheers my heart when forsaken by friends, and those who were once with us in the faith of the Gospel.

Let the world despise and leave me,
They have left my Savior too;
Human looks and hearts deceive me—
Thou art faithful—Thou art true.

I am glad there is one to whom we can go at all times, and under all circumstances, and if we ask for bread we shall not receive a stone; O praise the Lord forever; He is the same, He changeth not. I exhort you to steadfastness and sobriety; and may the God of peace be with you and preserve you blameless unto His coming and Kingdom. I remain,

Your Sister in love, in trial, in affliction, in persecution. Amen and amen.

Susan E. Teeple.

For the Crisis.

Albany, N. Y., March 27, 1856.

Bro. Merriam: Please give Bro. Rowarth's letter a place in the Crisis, for I feel that such letters ought not to be lost. I have received several such, and they are truly cheering to the weary pilgrim.

Dr. A. Decker.

New York, March, 24th, 1856.

Dear Bro. Decker: By the unanimous vote of our friends here yesterday, I was requested to write to you to send on as soon as possible 50 copies of your Pamphlet on The 2300 Days. Our friends here are anxious to read the whole argument. They are strong on the time, and are looking for the days to end this spring; and for my part, I cannot see how it is possible for them to be extended beyond the present year. The evidence, to my mind, is as clear as a sunbeam. I hope and pray it may be so.

We have very blessed meetings here, and our Brn. are coming into the unity of the truth, and are looking for speedy redemption. Truly they are a band of loving Brn., and are always ready to receive light on the time question; for that is the theme they delight in. Where should we have been if the time had not been preached? Why, in the sectarian churches; it was this that brought us out, and made us a distinct people, despised by the world and the fashionable churches; but we are willing to become fools for Christ's sake. We have counted the cost, and are willing to sacrifice all for Christ. We had a most blessed time yesterday—a heavenly influence pervaded our whole meeting. Truly, the Lord was in our midst, and I think every one felt that it was good to be there. It truly was a foretaste of the joys that await us, and the friends felt reluctant to part. It will be but a short time before the whole redeemed family will meet around our Father's board, and Jesus, our elder Brother, will come forth and serve us.

Dear Bro., be faithful a little longer; and the prize will be yours. Give our love to all the friends of Jesus.

Yours, looking for immortality at the appearing of Jesus,

Elder Wm. Roworth.

"Let us take the cross in our hands, and Christ's name upon our lips, and the seal of the Spirit on our forehead, and walk before all men in the straight road that leads to everlasting life, and we shall soon be disembarrassed of all worldly company.—Caroline Fry.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 34.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

Signs of the End of the World.

BY B. P. HILDRETH.

No. 2.

The predictions uttered against Jerusalem we have given in the previous number; the signs which are given in Matt. 24th, Mark 13th, and Luke 21st, are sufficient to strike terror to the stoutest heart. Well did the Savior say, "Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" And when the disciples were conversing about the magnificence of the temple, He said, "There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And as He sat upon the Mount of Olives, His disciples came unto Him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" "Ye shall hear of wars, and rumors of wars, see that ye be not troubled, for all these things must come to pass; but the end is not yet." "But take heed to yourselves, for they shall deliver you up to councils," Luke adds, "and into prisons, and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten, and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them." "And the gospel must first be published among all nations." "And when ye see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountain, and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries, enter thereinto. For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days; for there shall be great distress upon the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

"Settle it therefore in your hearts not to meditate before what ye shall answer; for I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist. And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death. And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake. But there shall not an hair of your head perish. In your patience, possess ye your souls," Luke 21st ch.

All these things did actually occur before, and at the siege of Jerusalem. They did "hear of wars and commotions," in all the revolted provinces of the Roman empire, especially in Judea; and wherever there were any considerable number of Jews together, there war raged, like "a war of extermination." Peter and John were brought before a council and imprisoned; Paul was brought before Gallio, Felix, Festus, king Agrippa, and Nero; he was imprisoned at Jerusalem, and brought before a council; Paul and Silas were beaten; Stephen was stoned; James, the brother of John, was slain with a sword; Paul was beheaded; Peter was crucified; James, the brother of Jude, was stoned to death by order of Ananias, the high priest. "The Gospel was preached to every creature under heaven," Col. 1: 23, even in the days of the Apostles. The followers of Christ saw "Jerusalem compassed with armies," and fled; and many of the Jews fell "by the edge of the sword;" others were "led away captive," and sold for slaves, to all nations; and Jerusalem has been "trodden down of the Gentiles," from that day down to the present.

Josephus gives us the facts of suffering women. He says, "The houses were full of women and children who perished by famine;" and were otherwise slaughtered; so that the woes against mothers were sufficiently accomplished in the siege of Jerusalem. In those "days of vengeance," many prophecies written by Moses, Deut. 28th, and other Prophets, and the Savior Himself, were, or began to be, terribly fulfilled; and as Jerusalem's desolation, (like that of Egypt,) was to be a most remarkable type of the destruction of the world, there are many things relating to the latter event recorded, which cannot be ascertained by any historian to have been ful filled in the former; and the predictions of both are so blended together, that it is difficult to sort them, and decide fully which belongs to this, and which to that.

Josephus gives us many signs and prodigies, which preceded the final taking of the city. He records the fact, that "a star hung over the city," in the form of a sword; "and the comet continued a whole year." Also, "That the people being assembled to celebrate the feast of unleavened bread, at the ninth hour of the night, there shone so great a light about the altar and the temple, that it seemed to be bright day; and this light continued for half an hour; and at the same feast, a cow, led by the priest to sacrifice, brought forth a lamb, in the middle of the temple." He likewise relates, that "the eastern gate of the temple, which was of solid brass, and very heavy, which was scarcely shut by twenty men, and was fastened by strong bars and bolts, was seen to open of its own accord." Also, that "before the setting of the sun, there were seen all over the country, chariots and armies fighting in the clouds, and besieging cities." Also, that "as the priests were going into the inner temple by night, as usual, to attend their service, they heard first a motion, and noise; and then a voice, as of a multitude, saying, 'Let us depart hence.'" What he relates greatest of all was, that "an ordinary country fellow, (four years before the war began, when the city was in peace and plenty,) came to the feast of tabernacles, and ran crying up and down the street, day and night, 'a voice from the east, a voice from the west, a voice from the four winds; a voice against Jerusalem, and the temple, * * a voice against all the people.' The magistrates endeavored by stripes and torture, to restrain him; but he still cried with a mournful voice, 'woe, woe to Jerusalem.' This was continued for seven years and four months together; and especially at the great festivals; and he neither grew hoarse, nor was tired; but went about the walls and cried with a loud voice, 'woe, woe to the city, and the people, and the temple;' and at last he added, 'woe also to myself;' and it happened that a stone from some sling, or engine, immediately struck him dead."

These were truly "fearful sights, and great signs from heaven;" and not only are they related by Josephus, a Jew, but Tacitus, a Roman historian, tells the same story; although in another style of language; and these signs are enough to astonish the world. Their crimes, as well as well as calamities, were greater than those of other nations, inasmuch as they had the light of God's word; "and they crucified the Lord of glory;" which has rightly been esteemed the capital sin of the nation. Says Josephus, "Our city, of all those subject to the Romans, was advanced to the highest felicity; and was thrust down to the lowest misery; for if the misfortunes of all, from the beginning of the world, were compared with those of the Jews; they would appear much inferior. No other city ever suffered such things; as no other generation, from the beginning of the world, was ever more fruitful of wickedness." Of the former siege it was said, "For under the whole heaven hath not been done, as hath been done upon Jerusalem." Thus perished more than a million of souls; who despised the prophecies, rejected their King, and all the signs which He had given them; till the untold vengeance of an angry God was poured upon them to the uttermost.

We have presented some of the signs which were given, to precede the dreadful fate of Jerusalem; and which were literally fulfilled on that wicked generation; and hope to be directed by the Holy Spirit in giving some of the signs of the latter days, and last days; which immediately precede and signalize the end of the world. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth," 1 Tim. 1: 1–3. This, I conceive to be the great apostasy of the Church; and that it was brought about by false teachers; "There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies;" and by the deception and hypocrisy of these liars, that "man of sin," was placed and supported in the temple of God. "Many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you," 2 Pet. 2: 1–3.

It is known that the Romanists forbid their clergy to marry, and that their fasts are multiplied under pretence of sanctity, till they have long since been an unmeaning ceremony. Their subtilty is deep and malignant; and art is resorted to, that their covetous designs may be gratified, to sponge money out of their neighbors "with feigned words," pretending extraordinary piety. "Spots are they and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceiving, while they feast with you." Chuckling in their avaricious success, flattering their victim to his ruin; "they despise government," and "speak evil of dignities;" and, says Peter, "shall utterly perish in their own corruption."

Such was the character of these "filthy dreamers" when they began to be developed. Says John, "My little children, it is the last time; and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time." In giving the signs of this antichristian apostasy, called "the abomination that maketh desolate," I do not apprehend that the Savior presented them generally as preceding it, but as attending it. His first sign is, "Many shall come in my name saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many." Expositors suppose this to have preceded the fall of Jerusalem; but though according to Josephus there were some who taught and prophesied falsely, I do not think their success came up to the propehcy "and shall deceive many." There were likewise some in the second, third and fourth centuries; but neither did their success fill the prophecy. But when "the vicar of Christ" sat in the so-called "chair of St, Peter," then there appeared "a fulness" of the prophecy. Many sat in that chair, claiming to be "vicegerents of God," and to have power implicit over thrones and empires; and to be dispensers of crowns and kingdoms; and truly indeed did they "deceive many."

"Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there shall be famines and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places." A part of these were doubtless fulfilled in the siege of Jerusalem; famines, but none in Judea preceded the siege, but the one foretold by Agalus, which occurred in Claudius's reign. No other earthquake is recorded (by any historian) to have happened in Judea, that I can learn, till after Jerusalem was destroyed; neither do we read of any pestilence, though there might have been, as a great number starved; and pestilence is an attendant on famine. But as Rome was a universal empire, there could be no kingdom to rise against another, except the revolted provinces of Rome; but after Rome was dismembered and during the dark ages the prophecy was fully completed in all its parts. "All these are the beginning of sorrows" Those were attendant evils, but not superlative.

"Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake, and then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved. This will be fulfilled by maintaining the faith, either to the end of the world, or of life.

"And this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." The Gospel was preached by the Apostles to all the world," Col. 1: 23; but the particular phrase, "Gospel of the Kingdom," appears to be more literally fulfilled by preaching the immediate setting up of the Kingdom, which is now, doubtless, being fulfilled. Many of the above passages may have been primarily fulfilled when Jerusalem was overthrown; but some of them I think could not have been, according to the full import of the prophecy.

But when the antichristian apostacy was fully developed, then they were "delivered up to be afflicted," tortured and slain in every horrid manner, that envy could invent, or malignity execute. They were hated and betrayed; and many of them deceived, and some offended; and because iniquity abounded in the Church, fear of suffering caused many to neglect duty; and thus they became indifferent to the great and precious truths of the Gospel; and the vehemency of their love, by these means, greatly abated. Some deserted the faith, others opposed it; and others still, corrupted it. "They forsook the covenant"

"When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, Whoso readeth let him understand." This passage has generally been applied to the Roman armies, besieging Jerusalem. But let us enquire, what "the abomination of desolation" is. We know that images were an abomination to the Jews: but they were more tenacious of the letter than of the spirit of those Scriptures which disallowed them. But why the Roman armies, any more than any other armies? It may be answered, because their eagle standards, (idols,) floated on the battlements of the temple. But Josephus says nothing of their being on the temple; for that was fired, as soon as possible, after the Romans entered the city; but he speaks of their being on the wall, over the eastern gate. Were not the crimes of those infidel Jews, "the overspreading of abominations?" and was it not the same Holy One, who confirmed "the covenant with many for one week, who would make it (viz.) the city desolate, "even until the consummation?" Dan. 9: 27. And if so, why should it be called "the Roman armies?" It may be answered, because they did desolate "the holy place." I am at a loss to know how the capital city of a perjured, persecuting, murderous, blasphemous race of men, can be called, "the holy place;" for after it had been so horribly profaned, it could not but have been an object of utter loathing and destestation, in the eyes of Him who had so often purged it. I am therefore constrained to conclude that "the holy place," was the Church; into which false professors were admitted, and false teachers suffered to promulgate heresies, doctrines contrary to the pure Gospel; who crept into the Church to captivate the unwary, and turn the grace of God into lasciviousness;" which they accomplished during the first five centuries after this prophecy was delivered. The Roman army did desolate Jerusalem; their crimes brought on Titus as the desolator; but he was the servant of God, in the case of Jerusalem's destruction, in the same sense that Nebuchadnezzar was in the former siege.

"For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world, to this time; no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake, those days shall be shortened." Were the calamities of the elect greater in the siege of Jerusalem, than at any time before, or after that event? And were the days shortened then, on their account? I cannot think so; for not one Christian, perished there. The war lasted about seven years; and I never learned from any historian wherein they were shortened; neither is there any revelation that they were. But the calamities of the Church, under antichrist, are profusely described by almost every historian, (and need not be repeated here,) to have been greater than ever fell to the lot of any association of men since the world was created; and of long continuance; and doubtless were "shortened." But false Christs have sat in the temple of God, till their term is almost expired; and we see that almost all the 24th ch. of Matt. that is, from the fourth to the 27th verse, inclusive, is a prophetic record of events which have been in process of fulfilment in the Church ever since the days of the Apostles; into which is woven a description of the calamities of the Jewish nation. But false Christs will continue until the end, and only perish at that time. And as the dead carcass of the Jewish Church became a prey to the Roman eagles, so will the dead carcass of the mother of harlots, and all her progeny, be cast out as an unclean thing; and "there will the eagles, (destroyers) be gathered together." The tribulation being so much greater under the papacy, than that of the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and of lasting continuance; and so extensive over all nations; and also it being the people of God that endure it, which was not the case in the siege of Jerusalem; these things seem to decide the question that this greatest of all tribulation came on the Church; for we read, Dan. 12: 1, when Michael shall stand up, "there shall be a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation;" and all must see that this falls on the wicked, in "the battle of the great day of God Almighty." And there cannot be two times of trouble on the wicked, both in the superlative. I am therefore forced to believe that one of them falls on the Church of God. As the abominations of the Jews brought on the desolation of their Church, and continue till their consummation; so the abominations of the Papists will desolate the Church, till Babylon shall sink like a mill-stone in the mighty deep.

To be continued.

For the Crisis.

Letter from C. H. F.

NEW BOSTON, March 8th, 1856.

To the dear brethren and sisters scattered up and down this wilderness world, like pilgrims in a strange land: May great peace rest upon you while passing through this world of trial, knowing that if we endure to the end, there is a crown of life in reserve for all that love the appearing of Jesus; yea, a crown of unfading glory; ready to be given at His coming and Kingdom.

Then let us endure all our trials, knowing that God does not willingly afflict, only by fatherly chastisement, that we may be made fit subjects for his everlasting kingdom, and live forever in a world where trials and tears will never be known.—What! are we (if children of God,) candidates for a state of existence where no grief can come, where no sorrow will ever call forth a sigh from our peaceful bosom, where no tear will ever dim the radiant eye? Truly, we can have but faint conceptions of the joys that are in reserve for those who love God.

In view of these things, what good, what obedient, what dutiful children ought we to be, who are looking for the consummation of this blessed hope! How ought we to love God, and Jesus whom He hath sent into the world to redeem it from the curse, and us from our sins! How ought we to love one another, and strife to comfort, exhort, encourage each other; and by all means strive to lead men in the way that leads to those realms of glory. May God help us so to do.

We are truly living in perilous times; we need to be on our watch constantly.—Our thoughts, our actions, our lives are before the world; all these demand our most vigilant attention and care. And last, but not least, our words—how many idle, how many foolish, how many vain words fall from the lips of those even that profess to be looking for the coming of Jesus!!! Do we believe, do we realise, that for every IDLE word we must give an account thereof in the day of judgment?—Ah! God is not to be mocked. These things will, if not repented of, and forsaken, come up in the great day when every secret thing shall be revealed, and every hidden thing be made manifest.—May God help us, that in these things we may judge ourselves, that we may be able to stand in the day of final account.

Oh, I long to meet with those I have associated with here, and all the children of God from every clime. Yes, I long to mingle in that innumerable company that shall have come up out of great tribulation; whose robes have been washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb, and join with an immortal tongue in singing the songs of the redeemed.

From one who, though most unworthy, yet through the merits of Jesus hopes for eternal life.

C. H. F.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. A. R. Bassett.

WILLIAMSBURG, March, 2, 1856.

BRO. MERRIAM:—I wish you to send me the Crisis; I feel lonely and desolate without it. We are here in this place all alone, and do not have the privilege of going to any Advent meeting. The people of this town are so devoted to pride and fashion, that they would, perhaps, feel themselves degraded to have God's poor appear at their house of worship. I feel like crying out in earnest,

"O how I long to see the day,
When the redeemed shall come
To Zion, clad in white array,
Their blissful, happy home."

How astonishing is the difference between the religion of this world, and the religion of Jesus Christ! Truly, "they have heaped up treasures for the last days" Their idols of silver and of gold will soon be thrown to the moles and to the bats.

Where are the watchmen? Are they sent to other nations and to other people who know not the news of the kingdom? If so, God speed the right. This town has been a place which God's people have visited, and in which they have sounded the alarm, loud and long; but alas! how soon iniquity gains ground and overcomes the good, unless the heart is often poured out in fervent prayer to God.

Father Hastings, (long since fallen asleep) has been faithful here; his son, also, and others have labored for the conversion of sinners in this place. Where and when shall I see them all again? Not until Jesus comes to gather us all to himself in His eternal home.

There is a place in Haydenville which is open to any one who feels it a duty to come. It is about two miles from this place. The room will [illegible] two hundred perhaps, and [illegible] funds raised to defray the expenses. We are all anxious to have some one come this way and speak the word of truth and soberness. We have not heard any Advent preaching since Brs. Pratt and Grant lectured in Northampton, some year and a half ago. If some one will come and preach to us, will they publish the same in the Crisis, some two or three weeks previous to the time, or write to us here?

A. R. Bassett.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, APRIL 9, 1856.

☞ The article on Millenarianism on our fourth page, should have been credited to President Lord, of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

Communications.

Communications—fervent, warm-hearted, thrilling, soul-stirring letters and communications—written, every word in the fear of God, with an eye single to His glory, illuminated with truth, and glowing with love—pass them along for the Crisis.

Thank God, there has been so little tendency to controversial writing, and coming into collision, one with another; but there is great danger, now that peace seems about to be proclaimed, of contention relative to minor points, which it is difficult to settle perfectly, and which would not involve our spiritual welfare particularly, if we could come to a more thorough understanding of them. All Scripture truth is, indeed, profitable, but each department should be in its proper sphere, and undue prominence should be given to none. The great object of truth is, to sanctify the Church, and make her meet to receive an inheritance in the Kingdom of God. I have been gratified that the correspondents of the Crisis do give more attention to the practical application of the great and blessed doctrines of the Word, and to exhorting one another to a more perfect preparation for the great event for which we look, and long, and fervently pray.

For the Crisis.

Is it Right.

By A. J.

There are somethings right, and there are some things wrong. Now, if those professing to be God's children, before deciding any case, would ask the question, is it right? methinks there would be less evil speaking among the Brethren.

When Brethren meet and converse, and differ on points of minor importance, they sometimes imbibe hard feeling towards each other. Some denounce others for not endorsing all they teach. Time, is a theme that absorbs the mind of one; the state of the dead another; the gift of healing another; and so on to the end of the chapter. Now, is it right to censure and denounce a Brother, because he does not belief time? Is it right to call our Brethren foolish virgins, if they do not endorse all the past movements as being of God? There are some, I regret to say it, that have marked certain ones, and when referring to their conversation, exclaim: that is the way the foolish virgins talk; is it right to judge one another when Jesus plainly says, "Judge not?" There is too much of an effort to pluck up what is supposed to be tares. Brethren, is this right, when Jesus says, "let both grow together till the harvest?"

I have seen some that appear to have little else to do but to attend to others, and find fault with their preaching, their exhortations, their private conversation, and pecuniary affairs. Do such think of the caution given by the Apostle: "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." Oh, I would to God that we all might learn to love as Jesus taught; if we would, those that preach the Gospel would be more efficient laborers, and those that hear, be better prepared to honor God; if those who are looking, or professing to look for Jesus, loved each other more fervently, there would be fewer false reports circulated, and not so many sad hearts among preaching Brethren. Oh, how much has been done to destroy the reputation, and even the life of those called to preach the Gospel! How many have joined in the cry of "down with him."—Down with him responds the zealot who is governed by the impulse of the moment. Why, responds a more equally balanced mind, what hath he done? O, Brother such an one says "he has done wrong, and will certainly go over the dam."—But, says the more candid, "have you been acquainted with the accused?" Oh, yes, well acquainted." "Well, did you ever see any thing which you disapproved of?" "Not before." "Did you think the course he is pursuing right, in the onset?" "O, yes, and I was ready to assist him; for I always esteemed him highly in the Lord." "Well, then, why have you become disaffected toward him." Is his accuser a friend to him, and one that wishes him well; or, does he appear thus, hoping to gain a place in your affections and crush the accused? Is it right to leave a tried friend, and cleave to one you have proved treacherous and boasting—high-minded and man-pleasing? Why desert him in the hour of trial? Do you wish the Lord thus to deal with you? If not, remember that "with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." O thou infatuated soul, think what thou art doing.—Wilt thou destroy thy Brother for whom Christ died? Hark! in the distance, hear the thunders mutter! behold, the clouds in terror rise! "Come to judgment, come." He cries. Imagine thyself for a moment standing before the Judge. Hark! while the question, in peals louder than ten thousand thunders break upons thy astonished soul—hast thou condemned the guiltless? Hast thou, like Judas, betrayed innocent blood? Oh, think—wrong has borne rule six thousand years; but right comes at last. God's precious truth and jewels have long been trampled under foot—their sufferings are now at an end, the whited foe has fallen—the tyrant death is slain.—"O hail, happy day!" God speed the right, bring everlasting life and liberty.

Yours, praying to be a participator in that kingdom that knows no sorrows.

For the Crisis.

Letter from E. M. H.

Whitestown, N. Y., March, 28, '56.

Br. Merriam:—I hail with joy the appearance of the World's Crisis, such as it proves to be, and offer my mite to further the principles Adventists contend for.

The nominal Church have deluded themselves with the belief and hope that the Lord is never coming personally, or that the event is far off; and treat with contempt believers in the doctrine and principles inculcated in the Gospel, for the reason that Adventists take the Bible instead of creeds for their text-book, and adhere to its principles.

We hope, and it is expected, that those who are looking for the Lord's immediate coming, are now awake and active in the work of saving men. Many that have been asleep are now waking to a sense of the subject, and of their duty. And as there is enough for all to do who love the Lord's appearing, and dare to preach Bible truth, as they understand it, they will now work on in the blessed cause.

Bible Christians believe in God's promises, and have anticipations of their eternal home, such as the contemplation of the subject is well calculated to inspire. With what joy and delight they look forward to the resurrection morn. Then we shall be associated with patriarchs, Apostles, beloved parents, brothers and sisters, and, above all with our Redeemer.

As it was with the Apostles and other eminent saints, so it is now. Bible Christians look for, and rejoice in hope of their reward at the resurrection.

From one expecting immortality soon,

E. M. H.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. M Grant.

New Bedford, April 7th, 1856.

Bro. Merriam: I am pleasantly situated this beautiful spring morning, at the house of Brother Vinal, in the "city of palaces." The good Lord blessed us yesterday with joy and peace in the Holy Spirit. The saints are litting up their heads, and rejoicing because their redemption is drawing near.

We had a full house, and a free atmosphere, so that a hearty response was not felt to be a disturbance, as it is in some of the popular churches of these last days.—

Oh, how I love to see the tears of joy coursing the cheeks of Jesus' disciples, and hear their willing, burning testimony for that long absent Friend, who is so soon to return, and give eternal life to all that love his appearing. I cannot see how it is possible for one to be a Christian, and not desire to see Jesus.

But I think I am within bounds when I say that probably nine tenths of those who call themselves Christians have no love for the appearing of Christ.

They seem to have no interest to learn whether the Savior may be expected in our day, or ten thousand years hence. Their chief desire seems to be, to lay up treasures here; be honored among men, and do as little possible for the Lord, and be accepted, and all they can for dear little self.

How truly Paul's language, in 2 Tim. 3: 1—5, is now fulfilling: "This know, also, that in the last day, perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves."

We are in the midst of such a state of things.

The end of all things is at hand—I see no chance for a doubt.

O Lord, help us to be ready.

M. Grant.

For the Crisis.

The Second Advent of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

By P. Tandy.

No. 2.

Dear Brsand Srs:—while I continue to write upon the Second Advent of our Lord, I earnestly desire "an unction from the Holy One," that I may be guided into the Truth. I do not write unto you, brethren, because ye do not know the Truth, but because ye do know it, and that no lie is of the Truth. "If we abide in the Truth, this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life." "And now, little children, abide in Him! that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." "If ye know that he (Christ) is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him;" (and no others.) Hear John, the Revelator, testify again; "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he (Jesus) shall appear, we shall be like Him;—for we shall see him as he is." And then the inspired Teacher adds, that "every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure," (Who can say, I am pure?) In another place we hear the Revelator saying; "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which have pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him! Even so, Amen." And again, he says; "And behold, when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind; and the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places; and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman and every freeman hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the rocks and mountains, fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" Sure enough, who will be able to stand? We answer, none but those whose "life is hid with Christ in God." Here is perfect safety; and it can be found nowhere else.

We turn along a little further, and we hear the Revelator testifying that he "saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew but himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood; and his name is called the Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the wine press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords." Jesus, after his passion, met his disciples at Jerusalem, and spake comforting words to them; and while they were beholding him, "he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Now hear what the angel of the Lord said unto John, on the Isle of Patmos:—These sayings are faithful and true; and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done. Behold, I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book."

Now listen to the testimony of our Lord himself upon this subject: "The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and he shall reward every man according to his works. Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom." This, doubtless, has particular reference to His transfiguration. Jesus informs us that, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days (spoken of by Daniel, the prophet,) shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For, as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage until the day that Noah entered the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be"! "Watch, therefore," says Jesus, "for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing." But He saith of the evil servant, who says in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming," &c, "The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Jesus says again "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations," &c. Jesus, at another time, taught his disciples that "the Son of Man must suffer many things; and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests and scribes, and be killed; and after three days rise again." Jesus rebukes Peter for his being hasty, and inconsiderate; then he says to his disciples, "whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." "For," says the Saviour, "whosoever, therefore, shall shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels."

Then, Jesus in another place, after speaking of the abomination of desolation, and the false Christs and false prophets that should arise, showing signs and wonders, (to deceive) or seduce, if it were possible, even the elect; then says he to his disciples, "Take heed; behold I have foretold you all things. But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light; and the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And, then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds, with great power and glory! And then shall He send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds from the uttermost part of the earth, to the uttermost part of the heaven." After speaking of the signs of the times, and the nearness of the end, Jesus adds, "Take heed; watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, (so that we all have enough to do, and God will hold us accountable!) and commanded the porter to watch; watch ye, therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all,—watch!" Again, we hear the Divine Teacher saying to his disciples, "Let your loins be girded about, (with truth,) and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord when he shall return from the wedding; that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching; verily, I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. Be ye therefore ready, also; for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not. Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall shall find so doing. But, and if that servant, (or any one,) say in his heart, my lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the man-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers"!

Listen again, to the Savior's instructions; He says, "as the lightning that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of Man be in his day. But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation. And as it was in the days of Noah, so shall also the days of the Son of Man be. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all! Likewise also, as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all!! Even, thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed!!!"

He that hath ears to hear, let him hear what the Lord saith to his disciples:—"Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And, then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds, with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh"! We hear him, who is to wise too be mistaken, also saying, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me; in my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you to myself; that where I am, there ye may be also! I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you; if ye love me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father."

Immediately succeeding the battle of the great day of God Almighty, the lion of the tribe of Judah declares, saying: "Behold I come as a thief! blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments"! The angel of the Lord said unto John, "These sayings are faithful and true; and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done. Beheld I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book. The time is at hand! He that is unjust let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man, according as his work shall be."

I will close this communication by making use of the following Bible testimony: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." (Now mark,) "I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. The spirit and bride say come; and let him that heareth say come; and let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will let him come, and take of the water of life freely. He which testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly; amen; even so, come Lord Jesus"! The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with all the truly faithful forever! amen!!

Yours in brotherly love, and in the faith of the Gospel.

Places in the Bible where the above doctrine is taught: 1 John 2: 28, 29; 1 John, 3: 2; Rev. 1: 7; Rev. 6: 12;—17; Rev. 19: 11—16; Acts 1: 9—11; Mat. 16: 27, 28; Mat. 24: 30, 31, 37, 38, 39, 46, 50, 51; Mat. 25: 31; Mark, 8: 38; Mark 13: 22—27, 34—37; Luke, 12; 35—46; Luke, 17: 24—30; Luke, 21: 25—28; John, 14: 1—3, 18, 28; Rev. 16: 15; Rev. 22: 7, 12, 20, 21.

N. B. We desire Brother E. Burnham, or some other faithful minister of the Gospel of the kingdom, to come to Goshen soon, and break to us the the bread of life! Sinners, (both in the churches and out,) are in a truly perilling condition!! What we do must be done quickly!!! If any one can be had to come here, and give a course of lectures, please to inform us through the Crisis.

For the Brethren. P. Tandy.

For the Crisis.

"The Key of Truth."

This is the title of a small, pithy tract which I am getting up for gratuitous circulation in the Far West, whither I am soon going, to sound the Gospel trump.—It is devoted to the question of immortality and reward at Christ's coming, setting forth the importance of the Saviors return. It will be small as my means are restricted. The Brethren of New Bedford sent me the needful to help on this enterprise. If others would weigh the motion of Brother Shepherd seconded by our Editor, it would tell to their own interest in the day of reckoning. Those who cannot give, except of their overplus, had better inquire if they have the interest of the cause at heart.

W. Sheldon.

P. S. I have been for some time blind, with inflamed eyes, and shut out of the Gospel field three successive Sabbaths.—But I can now see to read and write a little at a time.

N. B. Not being yet fully settled what part of the West to make a stand in, friends may reach me for a short time, by directing to "Hastings, Minnesota" I wish to hear immediately from every believer in Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, as this will be my field of labor. I am fully resolved to weigh my whole heart for God and truth, till the Master comes. I expect to reach Hastings before the first of May.—You will then hear from me again.

W. Sheldon.

April 5th, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. N. Bennett.

Bristol, April 1, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—As it has been some time since I addressed the lonely pilgrims that seem steadily moving toward Mt. Zion, I thought to speak a word, once more, through the Crisis, to try to cheer them on the lonely way. For says the poet,

"The groaning earth is too dark and drear,
For the saints' eternal home."

But I thank God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that we can look forward to the establishment of a glorious home in the Kingdom of God, when all those that sleep in the dust, shall awake and arise. We shall be changed and caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and ever dwell with Him, where a permanent rest can be found, in a city whose builder and maker is God.

O, let us try to be more faithful than heretofore; and if we have more trials than before, or temptations stronger, let us count it all joy for Jesus' sake, knowing they will work out for us a far more exceeding weight of glory; and as Jesus hath gone before, He knoweth to succor those who are tempted and tried. Let us also remember the glorious promise given to Abraham: The inheritance of the earth when it is restored. Having the hope that is like an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, made sure by the promise and steadfast by the oath, which God sware by himself, (for He could sware by none greater,) that what He promised should be performed. Thank God, that we have two flukes to our anchor, which will hold us firmly until our noble barque shall ride gaily into the celestial sea of glory. Even so let it be. Amen.

Your Bro. waiting for the immortality at the coming of Jesus, N. Bennett.

"Bibles and Rifles!"

Bro. Merriam:—The following, which I clip from a Portland daily paper, is such a true portrait of the characters of these times, (when men "have a form of godliness," at least,) that I send it to you for publication, if you think best. "Blessed are the peace makers," &c.

Thy brother, looking for the Prince of Peace. R. R. York.

Yarmouth, Me., March 28, 1856.

Bibles and Rifles!—Kansas Excitement in New Haven.—A large meeting was held in the North Church, New Haven, on

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 34.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞Over all business matters, write Business.

☞Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

Signs of the End of the World.

By B. P. Hildreth.

No. 2.

The predictions uttered against Jerusalem we have given in the previous number; the signs which are given in Matt. 24th, Mark 13th, and Luke 21st, are sufficient to strike terror to the stoutest heart. Well did the Savior say, "Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" And when the disciples were conversing about the magnificence of the temple, He said, "There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And as He sat upon the Mount of Olives, His disciples came unto Him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" "Ye shall hear of wars, and rumors of wars, see that ye be not troubled, for all these things must come to pass; but the end is not yet." "But take heed to yourselves, for they shall deliver you up to councils," Luke adds, "and into prisons, and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten, and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them." "And the gospel must first be published among all nations." "And when ye see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountain, and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries, enter thereinto. For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days; for there shall be great distress upon the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

"Settle it therefore in your hearts not to meditate before what ye shall answer; for I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist. And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death. And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake. But there shall not an hair of your head perish. In your patience, possess ye your souls," Luke 21st ch.

All these things did actually occur before, and at the siege of Jerusalem. They did "hear of wars and commotions," in all the revolted provinces of the Roman empire, especially in Judea; and wherever there were any considerable number of Jews together, there war raged, like "a war of extermination." Peter and John were brought before a council and imprisoned; Paul was brought before Gallio, Felix, Festus, king Agrippa, and Nero; he was imprisoned at Jerusalem, and brought before a council; Paul and Silas were beaten; Stephen was stoned; James, the brother of John, was slain with a sword; Paul was beheaded; Peter was crucified; James, the brother of Jude, was stoned to death by order of Ananias, the high priest. "The Gospel was preached to every creature under heaven," Col. 1: 23, even in the days of the Apostles. The followers of Christ saw "Jerusalem compassed with armies," and fled; and many of the Jews fell "by the edge of the sword;" others were "led away captive," and sold for slaves, to all nations; and Jerusalem has been "trodden down of the Gentiles," from that day down to the present.

Josephus gives us the facts of suffering women. He says, "The houses were full of women and children who perished by famine;" and were otherwise slaughtered; so that the woes against mothers were sufficiently accomplished in the siege of Jerusalem. In those "days of vengeance," many prophecies written by Moses, Deut. 28th, and other Prophets, and the Savior Himself, were, or began to be, terribly fulfilled; and as Jerusalem's desolation, (like that of Egypt,) was to be a most remarkable type of the destruction of the world, there are many things relating to the latter event recorded, which cannot be ascertained by any historian to have been ful filled in the former; and the predictions of both are so blended together, that it is difficult to sort them, and decide fully which belongs to this, and which to that.

Josephus gives us many signs and prodigies, which preceded the final taking of the city. He records the fact, that "a star hung over the city," in the form of a sword; "and the comet continued a whole year." Also, "That the people being assembled to celebrate the feast of unleavened bread, at the ninth hour of the night, there shone so great a light about the altar and the temple, that it seemed to be bright day; and this light continued for half an hour; and at the same feast, a cow, led by the priest to sacrifice, brought forth a lamb, in the middle of the temple." He likewise relates, that "the eastern gate of the temple, which was of solid brass, and very heavy, which was scarcely shut by twenty men, and was fastened by strong bars and bolts, was seen to open of its own accord." Also, that "before the setting of the sun, there were seen all over the country, chariots and armies fighting in the clouds, and besieging cities." Also, that "as the priests were going into the inner temple by night, as usual, to attend their service, they heard first a motion, and noise; and then a voice, as of a multitude, saying, 'Let us depart hence.'" What he relates greatest of all was, that "an ordinary country fellow, (four years before the war began, when the city was in peace and plenty,) came to the feast of tabernacles, and ran crying up and down the street, day and night, 'a voice from the east, a voice from the west, a voice from the four winds; a voice against Jerusalem, and the temple, * * a voice against all the people.' The magistrates endeavored by stripes and torture, to restrain him; but he still cried with a mournful voice, 'woe, woe to Jerusalem.' This was continued for seven years and four months together; and especially at the great festivals; and he neither grew hoarse, nor was tired; but went about the walls and cried with a loud voice, 'woe, woe to the city, and the people, and the temple;' and at last he added, 'woe also to myself;' and it happened that a stone from some sling, or engine, immediately struck him dead."

These were truly "fearful sights, and great signs from heaven;" and not only are they related by Josephus, a Jew, but Tacitus, a Roman historian, tells the same story; although in another style of language; and these signs are enough to astonish the world. Their crimes, as well as well as calamities, were greater than those of other nations, inasmuch as they had the light of God's word; "and they crucified the Lord of glory;" which has rightly been esteemed the capital sin of the nation. Says Josephus, "Our city, of all those subject to the Romans, was advanced to the highest felicity; and was thrust down to the lowest misery; for if the misfortunes of all, from the beginning of the world, were compared with those of the Jews; they would appear much inferior. No other city ever suffered such things; as no other generation, from the beginning of the world, was ever more fruitful of wickedness." Of the former siege it was said, "For under the whole heaven hath not been done, as hath been done upon Jerusalem." Thus perished more than a million of souls; who despised the prophecies, rejected their King, and all the signs which He had given them; till the untold vengeance of an angry God was poured upon them to the uttermost.

We have presented some of the signs which were given, to precede the dreadful fate of Jerusalem; and which were literally fulfilled on that wicked generation; and hope to be directed by the Holy Spirit in giving some of the signs of the latter days, and last days; which immediately precede and signalize the end of the world. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth," 1 Tim. 1: 1–3. This, I conceive to be the great apostasy of the Church; and that it was brought about by false teachers; "There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies;" and by the deception and hypocrisy of these liars, that "man of sin," was placed and supported in the temple of God. "Many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you," 2 Pet. 2: 1–3.

It is known that the Romanists forbid their clergy to marry, and that their fasts are multiplied under pretence of sanctity, till they have long since been an unmeaning ceremony. Their subtilty is deep and malignant; and art is resorted to, that their covetous designs may be gratified, to sponge money out of their neighbors "with feigned words," pretending extraordinary piety. "Spots are they and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceiving, while they feast with you." Chuckling in their avaricious success, flattering their victim to his ruin; "they despise government," and "speak evil of dignities;" and, says Peter, "shall utterly perish in their own corruption."

Such was the character of these "filthy dreamers" when they began to be developed. Says John, "My little children, it is the last time; and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time." In giving the signs of this antichristian apostasy, called "the abomination that maketh desolate," I do not apprehend that the Savior presented them generally as preceding it, but as attending it. His first sign is, "Many shall come in my name saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many." Expositors suppose this to have preceded the fall of Jerusalem; but though according to Josephus there were some who taught and prophesied falsely, I do not think their success came up to the propehcy "and shall deceive many." There were likewise some in the second, third and fourth centuries; but neither did their success fill the prophecy. But when "the vicar of Christ" sat in the so-called "chair of St, Peter," then there appeared "a fulness" of the prophecy. Many sat in that chair, claiming to be "vicegerents of God," and to have power implicit over thrones and empires; and to be dispensers of crowns and kingdoms; and truly indeed did they "deceive many."

"Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there shall be famines and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places." A part of these were doubtless fulfilled in the siege of Jerusalem; famines, but none in Judea preceded the siege, but the one foretold by Agabus, which occurred in Claudius's reign. No other earthquake is recorded (by any historian) to have happened in Judea, that I can learn, till after Jerusalem was destroyed; neither do we read of any pestilence, though there might have been, as a great number starved; and pestilence is an attendant on famine. But as Rome was a universal empire, there could be no kingdom to rise against another, except the revolted provinces of Rome; but after Rome was dismembered and during the dark ages the prophecy was fully completed in all its parts. "All these are the beginning of sorrows" Those were attendant evils, but not superlative.

"Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake, and then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved. This will be fulfilled by maintaining the faith, either to the end of the world, or of life.

"And this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." The Gospel was preached by the Apostles to all the world," Col. 1: 23; but the particular phrase, "Gospel of the Kingdom," appears to be more literally fulfilled by preaching the immediate setting up of the Kingdom, which is now, doubtless, being fulfilled. Many of the above passages may have been primarily fulfilled when Jerusalem was overthrown; but some of them I think could not have been, according to the full import of the prophecy.

But when the antichristian apostacy was fully developed, then they were "delivered up to be afflicted," tortured and slain in every horrid manner, that envy could invent, or malignity execute. They were hated and betrayed; and many of them deceived, and some offended; and because iniquity abounded in the Church, fear of suffering caused many to neglect duty; and thus they became indifferent to the great and precious truths of the Gospel; and the vehemency of their love, by these means, greatly abated. Some deserted the faith, others opposed it; and others still, corrupted it. "They forsook the covenant"

"When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, Whoso readeth let him understand." This passage has generally been applied to the Roman armies, besieging Jerusalem. But let us enquire, what "the abomination of desolation" is. We know that images were an abomination to the Jews: but they were more tenacious of the letter than of the spirit of those Scriptures which disallowed them. But why the Roman armies, any more than any other armies? It may be answered, because their eagle standards, (idols,) floated on the battlements of the temple. But Josephus says nothing of their being on the temple; for that was fired, as soon as possible, after the Romans entered the city; but he speaks of their being on the wall, over the eastern gate. Were not the crimes of those infidel Jews, "the overspreading of abominations?" and was it not the same Holy One, who confirmed "the covenant with many for one week, who would make it (viz.) the city desolate, "even until the consummation?" Dan. 9: 27. And if so, why should it be called "the Roman armies?" It may be answered, because they did desolate "the holy place." I am at a loss to know how the capital city of a perjured, persecuting, murderous, blasphemous race of men, can be called, "the holy place;" for after it had been so horribly profaned, it could not but have been an object of utter loathing and destestation, in the eyes of Him who had so often purged it. I am therefore constrained to conclude that "the holy place," was the Church; into which false professors were admitted, and false teachers suffered to promulgate heresies, doctrines contrary to the pure Gospel; who crept into the Church to captivate the unwary, and turn the grace of God into lasciviousness;" which they accomplished during the first five centuries after this prophecy was delivered. The Roman army did desolate Jerusalem; their crimes brought on Titus as the desolator; but he was the servant of God, in the case of Jerusalem's destruction, in the same sense that Nebuchadnezzar was in the former siege.

"For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world, to this time; no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake, those days shall be shortened." Were the calamities of the elect greater in the siege of Jerusalem, than at any time before, or after that event? And were the days shortened then, on their account? I cannot think so; for not one Christian, perished there. The war lasted about seven years; and I never learned from any historian wherein they were shortened; neither is there any revelation that they were. But the calamities of the Church, under antichrist, are profusely described by almost every historian, (and need not be repeated here,) to have been greater than ever fell to the lot of any association of men since the world was created; and of long continuance; and doubtless were "shortened." But false Christs have sat in the temple of God, till their term is almost expired; and we see that almost all the 24th ch. of Matt. that is, from the fourth to the 27th verse, inclusive, is a prophetic record of events which have been in process of fulfilment in the Church ever since the days of the Apostles; into which is woven a description of the calamities of the Jewish nation. But false Christs will continue until the end, and only perish at that time. And as the dead carcass of the Jewish Church became a prey to the Roman eagles, so will the dead carcass of the mother of harlots, and all her progeny, be cast out as an unclean thing; and "there will the eagles, (destroyers) be gathered together." The tribulation being so much greater under the papacy, than that of the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and of lasting continuance; and so extensive over all nations; and also it being the people of God that endure it, which was not the case in the siege of Jerusalem; these things seem to decide the question that this greatest of all tribulation came on the Church; for we read, Dan. 12: 1, when Michael shall stand up, "there shall be a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation;" and all must see that this falls on the wicked, in "the battle of the great day of God Almighty." And there cannot be two times of trouble on the wicked, both in the superlative. I am therefore forced to believe that one of them falls on the Church of God. As the abominations of the Jews brought on the desolation of their Church, and continue till their consummation; so the abominations of the Papists will desolate the Church, till Babylon shall sink like a mill-stone in the mighty deep.

To be continued.

For the Crisis.

Letter from C. H. F.

New Boston, March 8th, 1856.

To the dear brethren and sisters scattered up and down this wilderness world, like pilgrims in a strange land: May great peace rest upon you while passing through this world of trial, knowing that if we endure to the end, there is a crown of life in reserve for all that love the appearing of Jesus; yea, a crown of unfading glory, ready to be given at His coming and Kingdom.

Then let us endure all our trials, knowing that God does not willingly afflict, only by fatherly chastisement, that we may be made fit subjects for his everlasting kingdom, and live forever in a world where trials and tears will never be known.—What! are we (if children of God,) candidates for a state of existence where no grief can come, where no sorrow will ever call forth a sigh from our peaceful bosom, where no tear will ever dim the radiant eye? Truly, we can have but faint conceptions of the joys that are in reserve for those who love God.

In view of these things, what good, what obedient, what dutiful children ought we to be, who are looking for the consummation of this blessed hope! How ought we to love God, and Jesus whom He hath sent into the world to redeem it from the curse, and us from our sins! How ought we to love one another, and strife to comfort, exhort, encourage each other; and by all means strive to lead men in the way that leads to those realms of glory. May God help us so to do.

We are truly living in perilous times; we need to be on our watch constantly.—Our thoughts, our actions, our lives are before the world; all these demand our most vigilant attention and care. And last, but not least, our words—how many idle, how many foolish, how many vain words fall from the lips of those even that profess to be looking for the coming of Jesus!!! Do we believe, do we realize, that for every IDLE word we must give an account thereof in the day of judgment?—Ah! God is not to be mocked. These things will, if not repented of, and forsaken, come up in the great day when every secret thing shall be revealed, and every hidden thing be made manifest.—May God help us, that in these things we may judge ourselves, that we may be able to stand in the day of final account.

Oh, I long to meet with those I have associated with here, and all the children of God from every clime. Yes, I long to mingle in that innumerable company that shall have come up out of great tribulation; whose robes have been washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb, and join with an immortal tongue in singing the songs of the redeemed.

From one who, though most unworthy, yet through the merits of Jesus hopes for eternal life.

C. H. F.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. A. R. Bassett.

Williamsburg, March, 2, 1856.

Bro. Merriam:—I wish you to send me the Crisis; I feel lonely and desolate without it. We are here in this place all alone, and do not have the privilege of going to any Advent meeting. The people of this town are so devoted to pride and fashion, that they would, perhaps, feel themselves degraded to have God's poor appear at their house of worship. I feel like crying out in earnest,

"O how I long to see the day,
When the redeemed shall come
To Zion, clad in white array,
Their blissful, happy home."

How astonishing is the difference between the religion of this world, and the religion of Jesus Christ! Truly, "they have heaped up treasures for the last days" Their idols of silver and of gold will soon be thrown to the moles and to the bats.

Where are the watchmen? Are they sent to other nations and to other people who know not the news of the kingdom? If so, God speed the right. This town has been a place which God's people have visited, and in which they have sounded the alarm, loud and long; but alas! how soon iniquity gains ground and overcomes the good, unless the heart is often poured out in fervent prayer to God.

Father Hastings, (long since fallen asleep) has been faithful here; his son, also, and others have labored for the conversion of sinners in this place. Where and when shall I see them all again? Not until Jesus comes to gather us all to himself in His eternal home.

There is a place in Haydenville which is open to any one who feels it a duty to come. It is about two miles from this place. The room will accommodate some two hundred perhaps, and there have been funds raised to defray the expenses. We are all anxious to have some one come this way and speak the word of truth and soberness. We have not heard any Advent preaching since Brs. Pratt and Grant lectured in Northampton, some year and a half ago. If some one will come and preach to us, will they publish the same in the Crisis, some two or three weeks previous to the time, or write to us here?

A. R. Bassett.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, APRIL 9, 1856.

☞ The article on Millenarianism on our fourth page, should have been credited to President Lord, of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

Communications.

Communications—fervent, warm-hearted, thrilling, soul-stirring letters and communications—written, every word in the fear of God, with an eye single to His glory, illuminated with truth, and glowing with love—pass them along for the Crisis.

Thank God, there has been so little tendency to controversial writing, and coming into collision, one with another; but there is great danger, now that peace seems about to be proclaimed, of contention relative to minor points, which it is difficult to settle perfectly, and which would not involve our spiritual welfare particularly, if we could come to a more thorough understanding of them. All Scripture truth is, indeed, profitable, but each department should be in its proper sphere, and undue prominence should be given to none. The great object of truth is, to sanctify the Church, and make her meet to receive an inheritance in the Kingdom of God. I have been gratified that the correspondents of the Crisis do give more attention to the practical application of the great and blessed doctrines of the Word, and to exhorting one another to a more perfect preparation for the great event for which we look, and long, and fervently pray.

For the Crisis.

Is it Right.

By A. J.

There are somethings right, and there are some things wrong. Now, if those professing to be God's children, before deciding any case, would ask the question, is it right? methinks there would be less evil speaking among the Brethren.

When Brethren meet and converse, and differ on points of minor importance, they sometimes imbibe hard feeling towards each other. Some denounce others for not endorsing all they teach. Time, is a theme that absorbs the mind of one; the state of the dead another; the gift of healing another; and so on to the end of the chapter. Now, is it right to censure and denounce a Brother, because he does not belief time? Is it right to call our Brethren foolish virgins, if they do not endorse all the past movements as being of God? There are some, I regret to say it, that have marked certain ones, and when referring to their conversation, exclaim: that is the way the foolish virgins talk; is it right to judge one another when Jesus plainly says, "Judge not?" There is too much of an effort to pluck up what is supposed to be tares. Brethren, is this right, when Jesus says, "let both grow together till the harvest?"

I have seen some that appear to have little else to do but to attend to others, and find fault with their preaching, their exhortations, their private conversation, and pecuniary affairs. Do such think of the caution given by the Apostle: "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." Oh, I would to God that we all might learn to love as Jesus taught; if we would, those that preach the Gospel would be more efficient laborers, and those that hear, be better prepared to honor God; if those who are looking, or professing to look for Jesus, loved each other more fervently, there would be fewer false reports circulated, and not so many sad hearts among preaching Brethren. Oh, how much has been done to destroy the reputation, and even the life of those called to preach the Gospel! How many have joined in the cry of "down with him."—Down with him responds the zealot who is governed by the impulse of the moment. Why, responds a more equally balanced mind, what hath he done? O, Brother such an one says "he has done wrong, and will certainly go over the dam."—But, says the more candid, "have you been acquainted with the accused?" Oh, yes, well acquainted." "Well, did you ever see any thing which you disapproved of?" "Not before." "Did you think the course he is pursuing right, in the onset?" "O, yes, and I was ready to assist him; for I always esteemed him highly in the Lord." "Well; then, why have you become disaffected toward him." Is his accuser a friend to him, and one that wishes him well; or, does he appear thus, hoping to gain a place in yonr affections and crush the accused? Is it right to leave a tried friend, and cleave to one you have proved treacherous and boasting—high-minded and man-pleasing? Why desert him in the hour of trial? Do you wish the Lord thus to deal with you? If not, remember that "with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." O thou infatuated soul, think what thou art doing.—Wilt thou destroy thy Brother for whom Christ died? Hark! in the distance, hear the thunders mutter! behold, the clouds in terror rise! "Come to judgment, come." He cries. Imagine thyself for a moment standing before the Judge. Hark! while the question, in peals louder than ten thousand thunders break upons thy astonished soul—hast thou condemned the guiltless? Hast thou, like Judas, betrayed innocent blood? Oh, think—wrong has borne rule six thousand years; but right comes at last. God's precious truth and jewels have long been trampled under foot—their sufferings are now at an end, the whited foe has fallen—the tyrant death is slain.—"O hail, happy day!" God speed the right, bring everlasting life and liberty.

Yours, praying to be a participator in that kingdom that knows no sorrows.

For the Crisis.

Letter from E. M. H.

Whitestown, N. Y., March, 28, '56.

Br. Merriam:—I hail with joy the appearance of the World's Crisis, such as it proves to be, and offer my mite to further the principles Adventists contend for.

The nominal Church have deluded themselves with the belief and hope that the Lord is never coming personally, or that the event is far off; and treat with contempt believers in the doctrine and principles inculcated in the Gospel, for the reason that Adventists take the Bible instead of creeds for their text-book, and adhere to its principles.

We hope, and it is expected, that those who are looking for the Lord's immediate coming, are now awake and active in the work of saving men. Many that have been asleep are now waking to a sense of the subject, and of their duty. And as there is enough for all to do who love the Lord's appearing, and dare to preach Bible truth, as they understand it, they will now work on in the blessed cause.

Bible Christians believe in God's promises, and have anticipations of their eternal home, such as the contemplation of the subject is well calculated to inspire. With what joy and delight they look forward to the resurrection morn. Then we shall be associated with patriarchs, Apostles, beloved parents, brothers and sisters, and, above all with our Redeemer.

As it was with the Apostles and other eminent saints, so it is now. Bible Christians look for, and rejoice in hope of their reward at the resurrection.

From one expecting immortality soon,

E. M. H.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. M Grant.

New Bedford, April 7th, 1856.

Bro. Merriam: I am pleasantly situated this beautiful spring morning, at the house of Brother Vinal, in the "city of palaces." The good Lord blessed us yesterday with joy and peace in the Holy Spirit. The saints are lifting up their heads, and rejoicing because their redemption is drawing near.

We had a full house, and a free atmosphere, so that a hearty response was not felt to be a disturbance, as it is in some of the popular churches of these last days.—

Oh, how I love to see the tears of joy coursing the cheeks of Jesus' disciples, and hear their willing, burning testimony for that long absent Friend, who is so soon to return, and give eternal life to all that love his appearing. I cannot see how it is possible for one to be a Christian, and not desire to see Jesus.

But I think I am within bounds when I say that probably nine tenths of those who call themselves Christians have no love for the appearing of Christ.

They seem to have no interest to learn whether the Savior may be expected in our day, or ten thousand years hence. Their chief desire seems to be, to lay up treasures here; be honored among men, and do as little possible for the Lord, and be accepted, and all they can for dear little self.

How truly Paul's language, in 2 Tim. 3: 1—5, is now fulfilling: "This know, also, that in the last day, perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves."

We are in the midst of such a state of things.

The end of all things is at hand—I see no chance for a doubt.

O Lord, help us to be ready.

M. Grant.

For the Crisis.

The Second Advent of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

By P. Tandy.

No. 2.

Dear Brs and Srs:—while I continue to write upon the Second Advent of our Lord, I earnestly desire "an unction from the Holy One," that I may be guided into the Truth. I do not write unto you, brethren, because ye do not know the Truth, but because ye do know it, and that no lie is of the Truth. "If we abide in the Truth, this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life." "And now, little children, abide in Him! that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." "If ye know that he (Christ) is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him;" (and no others.) Hear John, the Revelator, testify again; "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he (Jesus) shall appear, we shall be like Him;—for we shall see him as he is." And then the inspired Teacher adds, that "every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure," (Who can say, I am pure?) In another place we hear the Revelator saying; "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which have pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him! Even so, Amen." And again, he says; "And behold, when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind; and the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places; and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman and every freeman hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the rocks and mountains, fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" Sure enough, who will be able to stand? We answer, none but those whose "life is hid with Christ in God." Here is perfect safety; and it can be found nowhere else.

We turn along a little further, and we hear the Revelator testifying that he "saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew but himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood; and his name is called the Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the wine press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords." Jesus, after his passion, met his disciples at Jerusalem, and spake comforting words to them; and while they were beholding him, "he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Now hear what the angel of the Lord said unto John, on the Isle of Patmos:—These sayings are faithful and true; and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done. Behold, I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book."

Now listen to the testimony of our Lord himself upon this subject: "The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and he shall reward every man according to his works. Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom." This, doubtless, has particular reference to His transfiguration. Jesus informs us that, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days (spoken of by Daniel, the prophet,) shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For, as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage until the day that Noah entered the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be"! "Watch, therefore," says Jesus, "for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing." But He saith of the evil servant, who says in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming," &c; "The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Jesus says again "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations," &c. Jesus, at another time, taught his disciples that "the Son of Man must suffer many things; and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests and scribes, and be killed; and after three days rise again." Jesus rebukes Peter for his being hasty, and inconsiderate; then he says to his disciples, "whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." "For," says the Saviour, "whosoever, therefore, shall shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels."

Then, Jesus in another place, after speaking of the abomination of desolation, and the false Christs and false prophets that should arise, showing signs and wonders, (to deceive) or seduce, if it were possible, even the elect; then says he to his disciples, "Take heed; behold I have foretold you all things. But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light; and the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And, then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds, with great power and glory! And then shall He send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds from the uttermost part of the earth, to the uttermost part of the heaven." After speaking of the signs of the times, and the nearness of the end, Jesus adds, "Take heed; watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, (so that we all have enough to do, and God will hold us accountable!) and commanded the porter to watch; watch ye, therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all,—watch!" Again, we hear the Divine Teacher saying to his disciples, "Let your loins be girded about, (with truth,) and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord when he shall return from the wedding; that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching; verily, I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. Be ye therefore ready, also; for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not. Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall shall find so doing. But, and if that servant, (or any one,) say in his heart, my lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the man-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers"!

Listen again, to the Savior's instructions; He says, "as the lightning that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of Man be in his day. But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation. And as it was in the days of Noah, so shall also the days of the Son of Man be. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all! Likewise also, as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all!! Even, thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed!!!"

He that hath ears to hear, let him hear what the Lord saith to his disciples:—"Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And, then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds, with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh"! We hear him, who is to wise too be mistaken, also saying, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me; in my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you to myself; that where I am, there ye may be also! I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you; if ye love me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father."

Immediately succeeding the battle of the great day of God Almighty, the lion of the tribe of Judah declares, saying: "Behold I come as a thief! blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments"! The angel of the Lord said unto John, "These sayings are faithful and true; and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done. Beheld I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book. The time is at hand! He that is unjust let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man, according as his work shall be."

I will close this communication by making use of the following Bible testimony: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." (Now mark,) "I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. The spirit and bride say come; and let him that heareth say come; and let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will let him come, and take of the water of life freely. He which testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly; amen; even so, come Lord Jesus"! The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with all the truly faithful forever! amen!!

Yours in brotherly love, and in the faith of the Gospel.

Places in the Bible where the above doctrine is taught: 1 John 2: 28, 29; 1 John, 3: 2; Rev. 1: 7; Rev. 6: 12;—17; Rev. 19: 11—16; Acts 1: 9—11; Mat. 16: 27, 28; Mat. 24: 30, 31, 37, 38, 39, 46, 50, 51; Mat. 25: 31; Mark, 8: 38; Mark 13: 22—27, 34—37; Luke, 12; 35—46; Luke, 17: 24—30; Luke, 21: 25—28; John, 14: 1—3, 18, 28; Rev. 16: 15; Rev. 22: 7, 12, 20, 21.

N. B. We desire Brother E. Burnham, or some other faithful minister of the Gospel of the kingdom, to come to Goshen soon, and break to us the the bread of life! Sinners, (both in the churches and out,) are in a truly perishing condition!! What we do must be done quickly!!! If any one can be had to come here, and give a course of lectures, please to inform us through the Crisis.

For the Brethren. P. Tandy.

For the Crisis.

"The Key of Truth."

This is the title of a small, pithy tract which I am getting up for gratuitous circulation in the Far West, whither I am soon going, to sound the Goopel trump.—It is devoted to the question of immortality and reward at Christ's coming, setting forth the importance of the Saviors return. It will be small as my means are restricted. The Brethren of New Bedford sent me the needful to help on this enterprise. If others would weigh the motion of Brother Shepherd seconded by our Editor, it would tell to their own interest in the day of reckoning. Those who cannot give, except of their overplus, had better inquire if they have the interest of the cause at heart.

W. Sheldon.

P. S. I have been for some time blind, with inflamed eyes, and shut out of the Gospel field three successive Sabbaths.—But I can now see to read and write a little at a time.

N. B. Not being yet fully settled what part of the West to make a stand in, friends may reach me for a short time, by directing to "Hastings, Minnesota" I wish to hear immediately from every believer in Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, as this will be my field of labor. I am fully resolved to weigh my whole heaft for God and truth, till the Master comes. I expect to reach Hastings before the first of May.—You will then hear from me again.

W. Sheldon.

April 5th, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. N. Bennett.

Bristol, April 1, 1856.

Br. Merriam:—As it has been some time since I addressed the lonely pilgrims that seem steadily moving toward Mt. Zion, I thought to speak a word, once more, through the Crisis, to try to cheer them on the lonely way. For says the poet,

"The groaning earth is too dark and drear,
For the saints' eternal home."

But I thank God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that we can look forward to the establishment of a glorious home in the Kingdom of God, when all those that sleep in the dust, shall awake and arise. We shall be changed and caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and ever dwell with Him, where a permanent rest can be found, in a city whose builder and maker is God.

O, let us try to be more faithful than heretofore; and if we havemore trials than before, or temptations stronger, let us count it all joy for Jesus' sake, knowing they will work out for us a far more exceeding weight of glory; and as Jesus hath gone before, He knoweth to succor those who are tempted and tried. Let us also remember the glorious promise given to Abraham: The inheritance of the earth when it is restored. Having the hope that is like an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, made sure by the promise and steadfast by the oath, which God sware by himself, (for He could sware by none greater,) that what He promised should be performed. Thank God, that we have two flukes to our anchor, which will hold us firmly until our noble barque shall ride gaily into the celestial sea of glory. Even so let it be. Amen.

Your Bro. waiting for the immortality at the coming of Jesus, N. Bennett.

"Bibles and Rifles!"

Bro. Merriam:—The following, which I clip from a Portland daily paper, is such a true portrait of the characters of these times, (when men "have a form of godliness," at least,) that I send it to you for publication, if you think best. "Blessed are the peace makers," &c.

Thy brother, looking for the Prince of Peace. R. R. York.

Yarmouth, Me., March 28, 1856.

Bibles and Rifles!—Kansas Excitement in New Haven.—A large meeting was held in the North Church, New Haven, on the evening of the 20th, to raise the money for fifty Sharpe's rifles, for the equipment of a company of one hundred men, with their wives and families, who are going out to found a free city in Kansas. Speeches were made by the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and others, and afterwards the subscriptions commenced, as reported in the New York Times.

"Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, then rose and said that he did not hope that Sharpe's rifles would be put to the fullest use of which they are capable; but self-defence, especially in the cause of freedom, is a sacred duty. He deprecated the necessities of the time which demanded such precaution on the part of the settlers in Kansas; but he believed in meeting manfully the present exigencies, as they might be. He said he desired to head the list for the procuring of a number of weapons of defence for the party setting out, and that therefore Mr. Lines might put down on the paper, 'B. Silliman, one Sharpe's rifle.'

(The price of a rifle was $25.

Mr. Russell and Rev. Mr. Dutton rose both at once. Mr. Russell speaks first: 'Put me down for one."

Rev. Mr. Dutton (pastor of the church)—One of the deacons of this church, Mr. Harvey Hall, is going out with the company, and I, as his pastor, desire to present him a Bible and a Sharpe's rifle. (Great applause.

E. P. Pie—I will give one.

Stephen D. Pardee—I will give one for myself, and also one for my wife!

Mr. Beecher—I like to see that; it is a stroke right and left! (Great laughter.)

Charles Ives—Put me down for three.

Thomas R. Trowbridge—Put me down for four! (Continued laughter.

Dr. J. I. Howe—I will subscribe for one.

A gentleman here stated that Miss Mary Dutton would give one.

Mr. Stephen G. Hubbard—One.

Mr. Beecher here stated that if twenty-five could be raised on the spot he would pledge twenty-five more from Plymouth Church—fifty being a sufficient number for the whole supply. (Clapping of hands all over the house.)

Prof. Silliman now left Mr. Beecher to speak for the bid, and sat down to enjoy the occasion.

Mr. Killman—I give one.

Mr. Beecher—Killam—That's a significant name in connection with a Sharpe's rifle. (Laughter.)

Prof. W. A. Norton—One for me!

Mr. Vining—Another for me!

Mr. Moses Taylor—I will pledge one of Sharpe's rifles from the Junior Class in Yale College. (Great applause.)

Prof Silliman (rising in his seat and sweeping the galleries with his eye) there are four classes in Yale College! (Immense sensation.)

Henry Trowbridge—One!

John G. North—One!

Mr. Beecher—I think Kansas will now know that there is a North! (Great applause.)

William Kingsley—One for me!

Lucius L. Olmstead—One.

Mr. Dunlap—I will give one for the Senior Class in Yale College!

It was now ascertained that instead of twenty-five, twenty-seven rifles had been subscribed, the cost of which, together with the amount received at the door for admission-fees, made the collection for Kansas in the North Church, one thousand dollars!

The meeting then adjourned.

TRUST IN GOD.—"Never was there a man of deep piety," says Cecil, "who has not been brought into extremities—who has not been put into the fire—who has not been taught to say, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

Obituary.

BRO. MERRIAM:—By request, I write a notice of the death of Bro. Wm. Holland, who was suddenly killed at a scythe shop on Thursday, the 20th inst. While going down to the wheel or drum pit, to cut away some ice; his feet slipped and he went between a drum—which was in rapid motion,—and the wall, through a space of ten inches in width. It was so instantaneously done that he had no time to speak; nor was he heard to make any noise. Quick as thought, he was hurried out of life into death. When found, (which was but a few moments, as two men were waiting his return,) he was quite dead; having several frightful wounds on the head; and one under the left eye. One shoulder and arm were badly broken.

Our Bro has lived in Winsted for some years past until last fall, when he moved to Torington to work in the scythe shop. Br. H. was converted in the vicinity of Winsted under the labors of Brn. Mathewson and Grant some five or six years ago, and has lived a consistent Christian life ever since Our Bro. was cut down in the vigor of life and health, being but 27 years old; he leaves a large circle of friends by whom he was esteemed as an associate and friend. And the Church is reminded that death, the foe of man, is thinning out our ranks.

The writer was called to preach the funeral sermon at the house, and by the help of the Lord I endeavored to present the truth. Preached from 1 Thess. 14: 13. In discoursing from this text, I endeavored to prove that the death that was pronounced upon man was a return to dust, or else Christ must suffer eternal torment, if that was the penalty of the law. I endeavored to prove from the Bible that Death does not honor God, but is an enemy to God and man. Also, that if Christ does not come, the saints would receive no reward. The house was crowded full, and many listened in tearful silence.

Our Bro. leaves a wife who sorrows not as others who have no hope; yet the blow is sudden and heavy; but I found her as ever, putting her trust in God. His promises are all she has to support her. He leaves two or more Brothers to mourn who have no hope. May God help them to seek Christ now while life remains.

"The righteous are taken away from the evil to come."

Farewell, Brother, fare thee well,
A little while you are called to sleep;
Then take thy rest and slumber on,
Soon you'll see the morning dawn.

GEO. A. BARKER.

EXCITEMENT IN BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Considerable excitement has been occasioned in religious circles in Brooklyn, N. Y., in consequence of well grounded fears that the Holy Trinity Church, said to be a magnificent structure, second only in architectural grandeur in this country, would fall into the hands of the Romanists. Mr. Bartow, the proprietor, having become embarrassed, was compelled to suffer the foreclosure of a mortgage for $30,000, and the edifice was offered for sale. Archbishop Hughes of New York sent a man to examine it, and the Catholics resolved to purchase it. The Brooklyn Star says:

"The idea of having a Protestant Church, with a full congregation, pass over to these people, was horrible. It aroused the members of other denominations and the property owners of that neighborhood. They could not have their property ruined, a fact which is evident if we look at the localities of other Romanist Churches. One gentleman who had purchased a lot on the Heights, and intended to build there, said if the Romanists came into possession of the Church, he should put up a tenement house."

In view of the matter, a public meeting was held on Monday evening last at the Church, to devise ways and means to save that beautiful structure from the auctioneer's hammer, and, worse than all, from the Romanists. Eloquent speeches were made by several clergymen, and the result was, that the $30,000 necessary to redeem the mortgage was subscribed on the spot, and the Church was saved to its occupants

---

MELANCHOLY AFFAIR.—At West Newton yesterday, at about one P. M., Augustus Fuller, harness maker, an unmarried man of about thirty-five years, after eating his dinner as usual, ascended to his chamber, and shot himself through the heart with a double-barrelled pistol, killing himself almost instantly. The pistol when found had one barrel still undischarged. It is thought that he was in a state of insanity at the time of the commission of the deed.

BURNING OF A NEGRO.—We learn that the negro who murdered Mr. Capeheart, was burnt to death yesterday, at Mount Meigs. He acknowledged himself guilty.—Montgomery (Ala.) Jour, April 3d.

ITALY.—In Piedmont, the Protestants have suffered much persecution. Sixteen Bible-readers have been arrested by the authority of the government. The Tuscan laws, which are boasted of as tolerating all religious opinions, are quick to pinch and crush when any sentiment adverse to Romish doctrines is expressed. It is understood that Cardinal Corsi, the Archbishop of Pisa, is the great mover of this prosecution.

A letter from a peasant seventy years of age, in noticing a religious meeting, says:

"I will not attempt to describe what I experienced, for I would not be able to give the slightest idea of it. Nevertheless, I will say that the universal earnest excitement was such, that I could scarcely believe it was not a dream. The meeting lasted three days; and I noticed none depart before its conclusion Men forgot time and home. People had come from a distance of even 10 (60 English) miles."

FRANCE.—Many struggles will yet be undergone before religious liberty shall be firmly established in France. A young man converted while in Germany, through the instrumentality of ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America, went in December to Alsatia, and invited his neighbors to come and hear what the Lord had done for his soul. The schoolmaster and also the minister of the place entered a complaint against him, and after a trial he was condemned to six days imprisonment, and forbidden to hold another meeting in the town.

SWEDEN.—In regard to the great religious awakening, a writer from Stockholm, says:

"Never before in the history of the country has there been such a day of the Redeemer's power—such a season of excitement about matters of vital religion among all classes of the people."

ARABIA.—From time immemorial a flourishing trade in slaves has prevailed betwixt the chief places on the Arabian and African shores. Massowah, a town of between 3000 and 4000 population, is the chief point of export. Sometimes as many as a thousand slaves are to be found here together, ready for shipment in vessels of some twenty-five tons for Jeddah, on the opposite coast; about a fourth part of them are believed to die of sickness, or perish by their own hands on the way. They consist chiefly of Gallas, who are smart, clever, and faithful. Men at the age of twenty-five fetch from thirty to forty dollars, a good-looking girl for the harem fetching about double this.

Next to these are the Abyssinians, for the most part Christians after a sort, entrapped into slavery by the Mohammedans who inhabit the borders of Abyssinia between the mountains and the sea; they are sold by auction, the auctioneer receiving a dollar per head, the Government raising besides a tax of about as much more. There used to be about two thousand slaves sold annually at Massowah, of whom one-half were Christians.

Some months since the Sultan, formerly the great protector of the slave trade, issued orders to the Turkish authorities at Jeddah and Mecca for its suppression; the order was sent by the Pasha of Jeddah to the Kahumukun of Mecca, who having referred the matter to the Cadi, it was proclaimed as imperial, and to be implicitly obeyed. The Ulemahs and inhabitants on this proceeded to the Court of Justice to demand on what authority the abolition of slavery had been ordered. On the firman of the sultan being quoted, it was denounced by them as opposed to the Koran, and the Cadi being attacked, escaped with his life, and with difficulty found refuge in the sanctuary. The Kahmukun having come to his refuge, the order was read a second time, but treated with such scorn that violence immediately ensued, and numbers were wounded on both sides. The troops having fired at the Muezzin, and shot the priest as he went up to prayer, a battle followed betwixt them and the townspeople, in which about a hundred of the latter fell, when a general rising all around immediately ensued. The troops were compelled to retreat and were beleagued in the fort. Abd-el-Montallb, a malcontent at Taif, once in high authority, at this time arrived at Mecca, and almost immediately after Reschid Pasha reached from Constantinople with instructions from the Porte to seize him and send him to the capital. Sheriff Nazir was appointed to act in his stead until the nomination of his successor, Mohammed-bin Awn.

A similar amount of excitement, and from the same cause, had arisen in Jeddah, and both places are now in a state of siege. Meanwhile the people told the authorities that as the laws relating to slavery were founded on the Koran, they must remain unaltered; and that as the sultan, who had been always hitherto the most strenuous defender and vigorous promoter of slavery in these parts, must, doubtless, on the present occasion have been moved by his Allies, the French and English, the flags of these nations must be pulled down and their representatives expelled. The Pasha of Jeddah, taking the consul under his protection, proposed referring the question to the Porte, when the multitude declared that unless their wishes were complied with instantly, they would take the matter into their own hands.

THE MAMMOTH STEAM BATTERY.—The New York correspondent of the National Intelligencer has the following in regard to Stevens's Steam Battery:

"The great iron steam battery, building for the Government by Mr. Stevens of Hoboken, I believe, is nearly at a stand still for want of funds; the amount appropriated, and which it was understood was to finish her, being nearly or quite exhausted. Great secresy is observed as regards her, and no one is allowed admission. From an intelligent party who had charge of a portion of the work upon her, I learn she is upwards of four hundred feet long, and is to be built entirely of iron and perfectly ball proof, even to the immense and powerful missiles of the most modern invention. Estimates, I understand, have been forwarded to Washington that it will require $900,000 more to finish her; and if all I hear about her is correct, even that large sum will fall short of the actual amount that will yet be wanted. She has two propellers and three engines to work each propeller. Now as each shaft has thus three engines to work it, they must all move with the most uniform and mathematical precision to work at all; for, of course, one cannot make the smallest fraction of a revolution more or less than the other two without deranging the action of the propeller. There are to be on board other engines besides the above six, among them two small ones as 'blowers,' to keep up a high state of ignition of the stone coal."

SNOW IN THE MOUNTAINS.—There is a tolerable prospect that in the mountains of Virginia there will remain snow enough to afford good sleighing during the entire summer. A correspondent of the Hardy Whig, writing from Pendleton county, says the snow in the Alleghany mountains, at this time, averages about 3 1-2 feet in depth; and the writer is informed that it is drifted in some places to the depth of from 100 to 150 feet—so that the topmast branches of the tallest trees barely project above the surface.

NICARAGUA.—The latest from Nicaragua is of a very exciting character. Costa Rica has at length formally declared war against General Walker and his government. The fillibustering chief had promptly accepted the situation, and knowing that in war rapidity of movement is often of more consequence than numbers, has placed himself at the head of a small force of men, and marched at once into the enemy's territory. This is a crisis in Walker's fate, and we shall be quite prepared to hear of his total discomfiture. Costa Rica, unlike most of the Central American States, has a numerous and well disciplined army, organized and to a great extent officered by German residents. Besides, it becomes more than likely now that if our own government refuse, some of the other great powers will actively intervene.

SEVIERVILLE IN RUINS!—We learn, as our paper is going to press, the startling intelligence that the town of Sevierville was almost entirely destroyed by fire on Tuesday last. The fire, we understand, originated in the residence of Mr. Duggan, Sheriff of the county, and only ceased its work with the destruction of the jail, court house, store houses—in short, the whole town, except three or four buildings. There was but one person in jail—a man committed last week—and he was burned to death—every effort to rescue him having proved unavailing.—Knoxville (Tenn.) Register, 27th.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES IN OREGON.—A letter from a reliable source to the editor of the National Intelligencer, alludes, as follows, to the commencement of the Indian difficulties in Oregon Territory:

"In October last, twenty-five Indians, of whom eighteen were women and children, were met by Major Lupton and his party of volunteers, and all were barbarously murdered. These were friendly Indians going to the military reservation for protection. In December last, two similar massacres by volunteers were committed on the north and south side of Rogue River, near Butte Creek, about fourteen miles from Fort Lane. Such conduct causes all the difficulties which General Wool has to contend with."

RAVAGES OF THE TYPHUS FEVER IN THE FRENCH HOSPITALS.—The Constantinople correspondent of the London Times, under date of March 3d, says that about ten thousand patients are in the various French Hospitals in the vicinity of that city, of whom one-fifth have typhus fever, of which a number of the chief medical officers have died. The number of deaths daily in these hospitals is thought to be quite large.

DESTRUCTION OF THE EAST CAMBRIDGE WATCH HOUSE.—A PRISONER BURNT TO DEATH.—At one o'clock this morning, a wooden building at East Cambridge, used for the confinement of those arrested in that place for crime during the night, was discovered to be on fire and was totally destroyed. The fire, it is supposed, commenced in the cell of an Irishman, who had been arrested for drunkenness several hours before, and when discovered had attained such headway, that all attempts to save the unfortunate man were vain, though his cries for help were heard for some time. When the body was recovered, it was nothing but a black crisp.

Last Thursday night at Reamstown, Penn., a man went to a farm house, and told the farmer if he did not give him fifty dollars he would burn the barn down. The farmer's son was going to shoot him, but the farmer prevented him so doing. In a few minutes, however, the barn was in a blaze, but the farmer and his son were too frightened to go out, for fear the man would murder them, and therefore three valuable horses, two hundred sheep, and thirty head of fat cattle were destroyed. On investigation, the body of a man was discovered in the ruins, with a dirk knife in his belt. It is supposed that there were three or four men, and while one went for the money, the others set the barn on fire, and while in the act of setting the barn on fire, one of them received a violent kick from a cross old horse, and therefore he could not get away, and was burnt to death. The wicked are punished some time or other.

THE MONSTER GUN.—The boring of this huge gun, which is now being constructed at the Mersey Steel and Iron Company's forge, Liverpool, is all but completed. When finished the barrel will be 15 feet long; it will be 27 inches in diameter at the muzzle, or 84 3-4 inches in circumference; and 44 inches in diameter at the breech, or 138 1-4 inches in circumference. The bore will be 13 feet 6 inches long, and 13 inches in diameter. When completed, it is estimated that it will have cost the company £3000 in material and labor alone The gun is expected to be ready in about six weeks, and, with the trunnions complete, will weigh something over 24 tons. When finished it will be drawn through Liverpool by twenty or thirty of the Company's fine horses, and will ultimately be taken to Waterloo to be tested. The charge will be over 100 lbs. gunpowder, with one of the shots of 302 lbs.

FOREIGN NEWS.

One week Later from Europe.

Arrival of Steamship Atlantic.

NEW YORK, April 2. The Collins steamship Atlantic has arrived at this port, bringing Liverpool dates to the 19th of March.

PEACE CONFERENCE.—Peace is considered as virtually concluded, and the arrival of the Prussian Plenipotentiary was alone awaited to sign the Protocol

The Peace Conference has been awaiting the arrival of Baron Manteuffel, who has now arrived in Paris. The Plenipotentiaries have held no meeting since last advices, and matters remain precisely as they were. Peace is now considered a certainty, and it is expected that the Protocol will be signed in a few days. Secresy to the proceedings is still observed.

FRANCE.—A son is born to the Emperor and Empress of France.

The birth of an heir to the Buonaparte line, is the cause of much outward signs of rejoicing in France, and even in England.

TYPHUS FEVER IN RUSSIA.—A telegraphic despatch received in England, from Vienna, under date of March 11, says:

The reason why it is firmly believed here that peace will be concluded is, because the true state of things in Russia is perfectly well known. We are aware that the typhus fever has committed great ravages at Nicolaieff, but we are somewhat disinclined to believe that things are so bad as is represented in the following letter, which has been received by the Oesterreichische Zeitung:

A reliable letter from Erzeroum tells of Russian preparations, expresses fears, describes the monstrous corruption of Turkish officials, speaks of an expected British army, and of some little activity. Of "the rascally pacha" who mainly caused the surrender of Kars, this characteristic notice:

"All branches of the administration are in a state of complete disorganization. I may add that corruption is not one of the least of the curses with which the government is afflicted.

"Selim Pacha has bought a female slave forty thousand piastres. He passes the greater part of his time in her society. Another portion of his time is spent at the bath, and in the indulgence of gross vices. He has thus rendered himself totally incapable of conducting affairs here, and is thoroughly detested.

ODESSA, Feb. 29.—A terrible complaint—the typhus—prevails in our city, and it is particularly violent among the troops.—Above 20,000 are now in the hospitals, and thousands have died. Despite the greatest exertions, it is extremely difficult to find accommodation for so many patients. Hospitals have been established in the very midst of that part of the city which is inhabited by the better classes, and thousands of patients occupy them, but physicians and proper nurses are wanting. In one week 12 military physicians and four medical men in private practice died. Among them were two Americans, who were about to return home. The typhus has committed terrible ravages in the whole of Southern Russia, and particularly in those places which are near the theatre of war. Bakshiserai, Simpheropol, Kherson, and Nicolaieff are almost empty. It is estimated that this pestilence has already carried off 100,000 men. It is gradually spreading over Bessarabia There are 15 vessels off Kinburn, but they attempt nothing. The day before yesterday the news that an armistice had been concluded reached us, and we are more than ever persuaded that peace will be concluded.

In the interior of Asia Minor and Armenia this winter has been one of unusual severity. In the vicinity of Koniah, a caravan of eighty persons was buried by a snow slide. Fifty of them were rescued alive by those who hastened to their assistance—the remainder were beyond recovery.

It is stated that although Pope Pius IX. has consented to act as godfather to Napoleon IV., he yet declines journeying to Paris for the purpose, but will despatch a cardinal in his place. Cardinal Alfieri is named as the Pope's substitute to baptize his infantile Majesty of St. Cloud.

The grand aqueduct at Sebastopol, about eight miles in length, width six feet, and mean depth seven feet and a half, has been destroyed by the French.

EGYPT—ITS COMMERCE AND PEOPLE.—Monday, April 7. This ancient and celebrated land, a narrow belt of fertile alluvial soil, created by the passage of the river Nile through the midst of arid sands, is now, as it was in the days of Joseph and his brethren, a granary for no inconsiderable portion of the world. We notice that often many of the weekly reports of the imports of breadstuffs into Great Britain, show a quantity from Egypt as large or nearly as large as that received from the United States. Under any tolerable form of government, Egypt would be a prosperous nation, teeming with population, and abounding in wealth; but for ages it has groaned under the most tyrannical oppression which has ever cursed the world.

APPOINTMENTS.

Eld. Edwin Burnham will preach in the Free Chapel on the corner of Lowell and Causeway Streets, Boston, on Sunday, April 13th.

The Lord willing, I will lecture at Groton Junction, on Wednesday eve. April 16th, and probably continue through the week.
J. WESTON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Lawrence, Mass., on Sunday, April 20.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

Br. John Couch will preach at
Lawrence, Mass., on Sunday, April 27.
F. FLANDERS.

Eld. D. T. Taylor will preach in
Keene, N. H., April 15.
Claremont, N. H., Thursday eve, April 17.
Waterloo, Vt., Sunday, April 20.
Champlain, N. Y., Sunday April 27.
Friends will address me at Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y., till May 20.
D. T. TAYLOR.

Eld. J. Turner will preach in
Salem, Mass., Sundays, April 20 and 27.
Br. Partridge, May 4 and 11.
T. HARDY.

The Lord willing, Bro. J. Couch will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., on Sunday, April 6, at Portland, Me., Sunday, April 13.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren at Union Hall, Tiverton, R. I., on Thursday, at 1 o'clock, P. M., April 10, and baptize at the close of the meeting. M. GRANT.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Portland Me., on Sunday April 20.
A ROSS.

Providence permitting, I will preach at North Adams, Sunday, April 13th, and evenings of the following week if the Lord will. I should be glad to meet the brethren from Hawley, Savoy, Cheshire, and other places, as I propose to spend a few weeks in that region, and labor as the Lord may direct.
J HEMENWAY.

The Lord willing, Br. Boutell appoints to preach in Providence, R. I., the first and second Sundays in April.

With the help and permission of our Lord and Master, I will meet the Church of Christ in Bristol, Sunday, April 13.
A. M. HIGGINS

If the Lord will, I will preach at
New Bedford, Mass. Sunday, April 13.
If the brethren further East wish my labors among them, they may address me by letter. Direct West Meriden, Ct.
C. GOODRICH.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the Church at
Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, April 13.
Portsmouth, N. H., Sundays April 20 and 27.
S. S. BREWER.

NOTICE OF THE NEW ENGLAND MISSION TENT.—Those wishing for Tent-Meetings in Illinois, Iowa, or Wisconsin, this Spring, will please write to myself or Br. W. Pratt, at this place.
P. B MORGAN.
Moline, Ill. Feb. 28, 1856.

CONFERENCE.—If time continue, a Conference will be held in East Brattleboro', Vt., to commence the second day of May and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be at the Hall of the Melrose Seminary, which has been rented for a permanent place to hold meetings. We are desirous of commencing our meetings by holding a Conferance, so that the way may be opened for Preachers that have the truth.

We invite all our Brethren and Sisters who love the coming of the Lord, and other truths connected with that event.

I am requested to ask Brn. E. Burnham, S. Mathewson and H. Pratt to attend the meeting, and as many more of God's ministers as the Lord may send.

We wish the above named Brn. to inform us through the Crisis whether they will come.
D. W. MILLER.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postage 17 cents.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts; per dozen, 50 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition, 75.

Dobney on Future Punishment, 75 cts.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.
" " 2 series, 75 cts.
Signs of the Times, 75 cts.
The End, 75 cts.
Lectures on Romanism, $1.
The Tent and the Altar, 75 cts.
Church Debts, 50 cts.

Pauline Theology,	15 cts. single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 " "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 " "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 " "	3 " "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 " "	1 " "
Scripture Tract,	3 " "	1,50 "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 " "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 " "	3 " "
The Last Days,	5 " "	3 " "
Voice of Warning,	5 " "	3 " "
New Heavens and Earth,	5 " "	3 " "
Outline of the Coast of Man,	3 " "	1,50 "

The Destiny of the Wicked, 3 cts.

Book of Seven Seals, 3 cts.

Seven Seals, 3 cts.

The Laodicean Church or the Judgment Age, 3 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE OF

FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

BY H. H. DOBNEY,

Baptist Minister, of England.

Fourth Edition.

WITH AN APPENDIX ON

THE STATE OF THE DEAD,

BY JOHN MILTON,

Author of "Paradise Lost."

1 VOL. 12 MO., 310 PAGES. PRICE 75 CENTS.

This is one of the most important works ever issued upon this solemn subject. Clear, forcible, and sometimes eloquent in his language, the author surveys the whole field, and presents his arguments and examines objections with the facility of "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." The style is calm and Christian, a rare excellence in a controversial work. The Universalist, the skeptic, and the infidel, will find here that while the truths they hold are admitted in all their force, yet the reasonableness of revelation and the retribution therein revealed cannot be denied. And the believer in the doctrine of the Eternal agony of the multitudes of the Lost, will find that objections to that opinion exist in the word of God, no less serious than those which arise from the calm consideration of the subject in the light of human reason.

Let all obtain and read this work with care, and we shall await with confidence the verdict of the candid and unprejudiced.

The volume is an elegant 12mo., and contains besides the views of the poet Milton, who, with Luther, Tindale, Bishop Law and Archbishop Whately, defends the doctrine of unconsciousness in death.

It will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of the price, 75 cents.

For sale at the Crisis office, Boston; P. Richardson, 177 8th Avenue, New York; George T. Adams, 167 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. TAYLOR."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J.M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P. O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Union Mills, Indiana.

Br Aaron B. Andrews, P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co. Illinois.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Br. George L. Teeples P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co., Illinois.

Joel S Richards' P. O. address is Centre Lincolnville, Maine.

Br. J. S. Richards P. O. address is Centre Lincolnville, Waldo Co., Maine.

Br. J. T. Ongley's P. O. address is Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y.

Br. Wm. Jackson's P. O. address is Berlin, Washington Co., Vt.

Br. W. S. Campbell's P. O. address is Dubuque, Iowa; family P. O. is New Britain, Ct.

Br. D. B. Salter, your remittance has not been received.

Cash Receipts.

J Langley, S Dolloff, D Hurd, J Danforth, C Lathrope, G W Barnes, A Moses, D Miner, J P Lougee, C Burt, L Allen, B Williams, Wm Blackman, A E Martin, E French, R L Toyier, H F Houlton, M E Davis, $1 each.

M L Clark $8, B Saulpaugh $3, R F. Woodford $2, H J Hammond 94 cts., M Phetteplace $2, John Stockwell 70 cts.

E Ritson, M Cross, Jona Pinkins, H A Lord, C H Colby, 50 cts each.

For the poor—H A Lord, 50 cts., C H Colby, 50 cts.

Old debt of the Crisis—Levi Mussey $2, A Smith $1, J Damon $1. Whole amount, $58.04.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present the advertisement to the public.

the evening of the 20th, to raise the money for fifty Sharpe's rifles, for the equipment of a company of one hundred men, with their wives and families, who are going out to found a free city in Kansas. Speeches were made by the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and others, and afterwards the subscriptions commenced, as reported in the New York Times.

"Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, then rose and said that he did not hope that Sharpe's rifles would be put to the fullest use of which they are capable; but self-defence, especially in the cause of freedom, is a sacred duty. He deprecated the necessities of the time which demanded such precaution on the part of the settlers in Kansas; but he believed in meeting manfully the present exigencies, as they might be. He said he desired to head the list for the procuring of a number of weapons of defence for the party setting out, and that therefore Mr. Lines might put down on the paper, 'B. Silliman, one Sharpe's rifle.'

(The price of a rifle was $25.

Mr. Russell and Rev. Mr. Dutton rose both at once. Mr. Russell speaks first: 'Put me down for one."

Rev. Mr. Dutton (pastor of the church)—One of the deacons of this church, Mr. Harvey Hall, is going out with the company, and I, as his pastor, desire to present him a Bible and a Sharpe's rifle. (Great applause.

E. P. Pie—I will give one.

Stephen D. Pardee—I will give one for myself, and also one for my wife!

Mr. Beecher—I like to see that; it is a stroke right and left! (Great laughter.)

Charles Ives—Put me down for three.

Thomas R. Trowbridge—Put me down for four! (Continued laughter.

Dr. J. I. Howe—I will subscribe for one.

A gentleman here stated that Miss Mary Dutton would give one.

Mr. Stephen G. Hubbard—One.

Mr. Beecher here stated that if twenty-five could be raised on the spot he would pledge twenty-five more from Plymouth Church—fifty being a sufficient number for the whole supply. (Clapping of hands all over the house.)

Prof. Silliman now left Mr. Beecher to speak for the bid, and sat down to enjoy the ocasion.

Mr. Killman—I give one.

Mr. Beecher—Killam—That's a significant name in connection with a Sharpe's rifle. (Laughter.)

Prof. W. A. Norton—One for me!

Mr. Vining—Another for me!

Mr. Moses Taylor—I will pledge one of Sharpe's rifles from the Junior Class in Yale College. (Great applause.)

Prof. Silliman (rising in his seat and sweeping the galleries with his eye) there are four classes in Yale College! (Immense sensation.)

Henry Trowbridge—One!

John G. North—One!

Mr. Beecher—I think Kansas will now know that there is a North! (Great applause.)

William Kingsley—One for me!

Lucius L. Olmstead—One.

Mr. Dunlap—I will give one for the Senior Class in Yale College!

It was now ascertained that instead of twenty-five, twenty-seven rifles had been subscribed, the cost of which, together with the amount received at the door for admission-fees, made the collection for Kansas in the North Church, one thousand dollars!

The meeting then adjourned.

TRUST IN GOD.—"Never was there a man of deep piety," says Cecil, "who has not been brought into extremities—who has not been put into the fire—who has not been taught to say, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

Obituary.

BRO. MERRIAM:—By request, I write a notice of the death of Bro. Wm. Holland, who was suddenly killed at a scythe shop on Thursday, the 20th inst. While going down to the wheel or drum pit, to cut away some ice; his feet slipped and he went between a drum —which was in rapid motion,—and the wall, through a space of ten inches in width. It was so instantaneously done that he had no time to speak; nor was he heard to make any noise. Quick as thought, he was hurried out of life into death. When found, (which was but a few moments, as two men were waiting his return,) he was quite dead; having several frightful wounds on the head; and one under the left eye. One shoulder and arm were badly broken.

Our Bro. has lived in Winsted for some years past until last fall, when he moved to Torington to work in the scythe shop. Br. H. was converted in the vicinity of Winsted under the labors of Brn. Mathewson and Grant some five or six years ago, and has lived a consistent Christian life ever since Our Bro. was cut down in the vigor of life and health, being but 27 years old; he leaves a large circle of friends by whom he was esteemed as an associate and friend. And the Church is reminded that death, the foe of man, is thinning out our ranks.

The writer was called to preach the funeral sermon at the house, and by the help of the Lord I endeavored to present the truth. Preached from 1 Thess. 14: 13. In discoursing from this text, I endeavored to prove that the death that was pronounced upon man was a return to dust, or else Christ must suffer eternal torment, if that was the penalty of the law. I endeavored to prove from the Bible that Death does not honor God, but is an enemy to God and man. Also, that if Christ does not come, the saints would receive no reward. The house was crowded full, and many listened in tearful silence.

Our Bro. leaves a wife who sorrows not as others who have no hope; yet the blow is sudden and heavy; but I found her as ever, putting her trust in God. His promises are all she has to support her. He leaves two or more Brothers to mourn who have no hope. May God help them to seek Christ now while life remains.

"The righteous are taken away from the evil to come."

Farewell, Brother, fare thee well,
A little while you are called to sleep;
Then take thy rest and slumber on,
Soon you'll see the morning dawn.

GEO. A. BARKER.

EXCITEMENT IN BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Considerable excitement has been occasioned in religious circles in Brooklyn, N. Y., in consequence of well grounded fears that the Holy Trinity Church, said to be a magnificent structure, second only in architectural grandeur in this country, would fall into the hands of the Romanists. Mr. Bartow, the proprietor, having become embarrassed, was compelled to suffer the foreclosure of a mortgage for $30,000, and the edifice was offered for sale. Archbishop Hughes of New York sent a man to examine it, and the Catholics resolved to purchase it. The Brooklyn Star says:

"The idea of having a Protestant Church, with a full congregation, pass over to these people, was horrible. It aroused the members of other denominations and the property owners of that neighborhood. They could not have their property ruined, a fact which is evident if we look at the localities of other Romanist Churches. One gentleman who had purchased a lot on the Heights, and intended to build there, said if the Romanists came into possession of the Church, he should put up a tenement house."

In view of the matter, a public meeting was held on Monday evening last at the Church, to devise ways and means to save that beautiful structure from the auctioneer's hammer, and, worse than all, from the Romanists. Eloquent speeches were made by several clergymen, and the result was, that the $30,000 necessary to redeem the mortgage was subscribed on the spot, and the Church was saved to its occupants

MELANCHOLY AFFAIR.—At West Newton yesterday, at about one P. M., Augustus Fuller, harness maker, an unmarried man of about thirty-five years, after eating his dinner as usual, ascended to his chamber, and shot himself through the heart with a double-barrelled pistol, killing himself almost instantly. The pistol when found had one barrel still undischarged. It is thought that he was in a state of insanity at the time of the commission of the deed.

BURNING OF A NEGRO.—We learn that the negro who murdered Mr. Capeheart, was burnt to death yesterday, at Mount Meigs. He acknowledged himself guilty.—Montgomery (Ala.) Jour, April 3d.

ITALY.—In Piedmont, the Protestants have suffered much persecution. Sixteen Bible-readers have been arrested by the authority of the government. The Tuscan laws, which are boasted of as tolerating all religious opinions, are quick to pinch and crush when any sentiment adverse to Romish doctrines is expressed. It is understood that Cardinal Corsi, the Archbishop of Pisa, is the great mover of this prosecution.

A letter from a peasant seventy years of age, in noticing a religious meeting, says:

"I will not attempt to describe what I experienced, for I would not be able to give the slightest idea of it. Nevertheless, I will say that the universal earnest excitement was such, that I could scarcely believe it was not a dream. The meeting lasted three days; and I noticed none depart before its conclusion. Men forgot time and home. People had come from a distance of even 10 (60 English) miles."

FRANCE.—Many struggles will yet be undergone before religious liberty shall be firmly established in France. A young man converted while in Germany, through the instrumentality of ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America, went in December to Alsatia, and invited his neighbors to come and hear what the Lord had done for his soul. The schoolmaster and also the minister of the place entered a complaint against him, and after a trial he was condemned to six days imprisonment, and forbidden to hold another meeting in the town.

SWEDEN.—In regard to the great religious awakening, a writer from Stockholm, says:

"Never before in the history of the country has there been such a day of the Redeemer's power—such a season of excitement about matters of vital religion among all classes of the people."

ARABIA.—From time immemorial a flourishing trade in slaves has prevailed betwixt the chief places on the Arabian and African shores. Massowah, a town of between 3000 and 4000 population, is the chief point of export. Sometimes as many as a thousand slaves are to be found here together, ready for shipment in vessels of some twenty-five tons for Jeddah, on the opposite coast; about a fourth part of them are believed to die of sickness, or perish by their own hands on the way. They consist chiefly of Gallas, who are smart, clever, and faithful. Men at the age of twenty-five fetch from thirty to forty dollars, a good-looking girl for the harem fetching about double this.

Next to these are the Abyssinians, for the most part Christians after a sort, entrapped into slavery by the Mohammedans who inhabit the borders of Abyssinia between the mountains and the sea; they are sold by auction, the auctioneer receiving a dollar per head, the Government raising besides a tax of about as much more. There used to be about two thousand slaves sold annually at Massowah, of whom one-half were Christians.

Some months since the Sultan, formerly the great protector of the slave trade, issued orders to the Turkish authorities at Jeddah and Mecca for its suppression; the order was sent by the Pasha of Jeddah to the Kahumukun of Mecca, who having referred the matter to the Cadi, it was proclaimed as imperial, and to be implicitly obeyed. The Ulemahs and inhabitants on this proceeded to the Court of Justice to demand on what authority the abolition of slavery had been ordered. On the firman of the sultan being quoted, it was denounced by them as opposed to the Koran, and the Cadi being attacked, escaped with his life, and with difficulty found refuge in the sanctuary. The Kahmukun having come to his refuge, the order was read a second time, but treated with such scorn that violence immediately ensued, and numbers were wounded on both sides. The troops having fired at the Muezzin, and shot the priest as he went up to prayer, a battle followed betwixt them and the townspeople, in which about a hundred of the latter fell, when a general rising all around immediately ensued. The troops were compelled to retreat and were beleagued in the fort. Abd-el-Montallb, a malcontent at Taif, once in high authority, at this time arrived at Mecca, and almost immediately after Reschid Pasha reached from Constantinople with instructions from the Porte to seize him and send him to the capital. Sheriff Nazir was appointed to act in his stead until the nomination of his successor, Mohammed-bin Awn.

A similar amount of excitement, and from the same cause, had arisen in Jeddah, and both places are now in a state of siege. Meanwhile the people told the authorities that as the laws relating to slavery were founded on the Koran, they must remain unaltered; and that as the sultan, who had been always hitherto the most strenuous defender and vigorous promoter of slavery in these parts, must, doubtless, on the present occasion have been moved by his Allies, the French and English, the flags of these nations must be pulled down and their representatives expelled. The Pasha of Jeddah, taking the consul under his protection, proposed referring the question to the Porte, when the multitude declared that unless their wishes were complied with instantly, they would take the matter into their own hands.

THE MAMMOTH STEAM BATTERY.—The New York correspondent of the National Intelligencer has the following in regard to Stevens's Steam Battery:

"The great iron steam battery, building for the Government by Mr. Stevens of Hoboken, I believe, is nearly at a stand still for want of funds; the amount appropriated, and which it was understood was to finish her, being nearly or quite exhausted. Great secresy is observed as regards her, and no one is allowed admission. From an intelligent party who had charge of a portion of the work upon her, I learn she is upwards of four hundred feet long, and is to be built entirely of iron and perfectly ball proof, even to the immense and powerful missiles of the most modern invention. Estimates, I understand, have been forwarded to Washington that it will require $900,000 more to finish her; and if all I hear about her is correct, even that large sum will fall short of the actual amount that will yet be wanted. She has two propellers and three engines to work each propeller. Now as each shaft has thus three engines to work it, they must all move with the most uniform and mathematical precision to work at all; for, of course, one cannot make the smallest fraction of a revolution more or less than the other two without deranging the action of the propeller. There are to be on board other engines besides the above six, among them two small ones as 'blowers,' to keep up a high state of ignition of the stone coal."

SNOW IN THE MOUNTAINS.—There is a tolerable prospect that in the mountains of Virginia there will remain snow enough to afford good sleighing during the entire summer. A correspondent of the Hardy Whig, writing from Pendleton county, says the snow in the Alleghany mountains, at this time, averages about 3 1-2 feet in depth; and the writer is informed that it is drifted in some places to the depth of from 100 to 150 feet—so that the topmast branches of the tallest trees barely project above the surface.

NICARAGUA.—The latest from Nicaragua is of a very exciting character. Costa Rica has at length formally declared war against General Walker and his government. The fillibustering chief had promptly accepted the situation, and knowing that in war rapidity of movement is often of more consequence than numbers, has placed himself at the head of a small force of men, and marched at once into the enemy's territory. This is a crisis in Walker's fate, and we shall be quite prepared to hear of his total discomfiture. Costa Rica, unlike most of the Central American States, has a numerous and well disciplined army, organized and to a great extent officered by German residents. Besides, it becomes more than likely now that if our own government refuse, some of the other great powers will actively intervene.

SEVIERVILLE IN RUINS!—We learn, as our paper is going to press, the startling intelligence that the town of Sevierville was almost entirely destroyed by fire on Tuesday last. The fire, we understand, originated in the residence of Mr. Duggan, Sheriff of the county, and only ceased its work with the destruction of the jail, court house, store houses—in short, the whole town, except three or four buildings. There was but one person in jail—a man committed last week—and he was burned to death—every effort to rescue him having proved unavailing.—Knoxville (Tenn.) Register, 27th.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES IN OREGON.—A letter from a reliable source to the editor of the National Intelligencer, alludes, as follows, to the commencement of the Indian difficulties in Oregon Territory:

"In October last, twenty-five Indians, of whom eighteen were women and children, were met by Major Lupton and his party of volunteers, and all were barbarously murdered. These were friendly Indians going to the military reservation for protection. In December last, two similar massacres by volunteers were committed on the north and south side of Rogue River, near Butte Creek, about fourteen miles from Fort Lane. Such conduct causes all the difficulties which General Wool has to contend with."

RAVAGES OF THE TYPHUS FEVER IN THE FRENCH HOSPITALS.—The Constantinople correspondent of the London Times, under date of March 3d, says that about ten thousand patients are in the various French Hospitals in the vicinity of that city, of whom one-fifth have typhus fever, of which a number of the chief medical officers have died. The number of deaths daily in these hospitals is thought to be quite large.

DESTRUCTION OF THE EAST CAMBRIDGE WATCH HOUSE.—A PRISONER BURNT TO DEATH.—At one o'clock this morning, a wooden building at East Cambridge, used for the confinement of those arrested in that place for crime during the night, was discovered to be on fire and was totally destroyed. The fire, it is supposed, commenced in the cell of an Irishman, who had been arrested for drunkenness several hours before, and when discovered had attained such headway, that all attempts to save the unfortunate man were vain, though his cries for help were heard for some time. When the body was recovered, it was nothing but a black crisp.

Last Thursday night at Reamstown, Penn., a man went to a farm house, and told the farmer if he did not give him fifty dollars he would burn the barn down. The farmer's son was going to shoot him, but the farmer prevented him so doing. In a few minutes, however, the barn was in a blaze, but the farmer and his son were too frightened to go out, for fear the man would murder them, and therefore three valuable horses, two hundred sheep, and thirty head of fat cattle were destroyed. On investigation, the body of a man was discovered in the ruins, with a dirk knife in his belt. It is supposed that there were three or four men, and while one went for the money, the others set the barn on fire, and while in the act of setting the barn on fire, one of them received a violent kick from a cross old horse, and therefore he could not get away, and was burnt to death. The wicked are punished some time or other.

THE MONSTER GUN.—The boring of this huge gun, which is now being constructed at the Mersey Steel and Iron Company's forge, Liverpool, is all but completed. When finished the barrel will be 15 feet long; it will be 27 inches in diameter at the muzzle, or 84 3-4 inches in circumference; and 44 inches in diameter at the breech, or 138 1-4 inches in circumference. The bore will be 13 feet 6 inches long, and 13 inches in diameter. When completed, it is estimated that it will have cost the company £3000 in material and labor alone. The gun is expected to be ready in about six weeks, and, with the trunnions complete, will weigh something over 24 tons. When finished it will be drawn through Liverpool by twenty or thirty of the Company's fine horses, and will ultimately be taken to Waterloo to be tested. The charge will be over 100 lbs. gunpowder, with one of the shots of 302 lbs.

FOREIGN NEWS.

One week Later from Europe.

Arrival of Steamship Atlantic.

NEW YORK, April 2. The Collins steamship Atlantic has arrived at this port, bringing Liverpool dates to the 19th of March.

PEACE CONFERENCE.—Peace is considered as virtually concluded, and the arrival of the Prussian Plenipotentiary was alone awaited to sign the Protocol

The Peace Conference has been awaiting the arrival of Baron Manteuffel, who has now arrived in Paris. The Plenipotentiaries have held no meeting since last advices, and matters remain precisely as they were. Peace is now considered a certainty, and it is expected that the Protocol will be signed in a few days. Secresy to the proceedings is still observed.

FRANCE.—A son is born to the Emperor and Empress of France.

The birth of an heir to the Buonaparte line, is the cause of much outward signs of rejoicing in France, and even in England.

TYPHUS FEVER IN RUSSIA.—A telegraphic despatch received in England, from Vienna, under date of March 11, says:

The reason why it is firmly believed here that peace will be concluded is, because the true state of things in Russia is perfectly well known. We are aware that the typhus fever has committed great ravages at Nicolaieff, but we are somewhat disinclined to believe that things are so bad as is represented in the following letter, which has been received by the Oesterreichische Zeitung:

A reliable letter from Erzeroum tells of Russian preparations, expresses fears, describes the monstrous corruption of Turkish officials, speaks of an expected British army, and of some little activity. Of "the rascally pacha" who mainly caused the surrender of Kars, this characteristic notice:

"All branches of the administration are in a state of complete disorganization. I may add that corruption is not one of the least of the curses with which the government is afflicted.

"Selim Pacha has bought a female slave forty thousand piastres. He passes the greater part of his time in her society. Another portion of his time is spent at the bath, and in the indulgence of gross vices. He has thus rendered himself totally incapable of conducting affairs here, and is thoroughly detested.

ODESSA, Feb. 29.—A terrible complaint —the typhus—prevails in our city, and it is particularly violent among the troops.—Above 20,000 are now in the hospitals, and thousands have died. Despite the greatest exertions, it is extremely difficult to find accommodation for so many patients. Hospitals have been established in the very midst of that part of the city which is inhabited by the better classes, and thousands of patients occupy them, but physicians and proper nurses are wanting. In one week 12 military physicians and four medical men in private practice died. Among them were two Americans, who were about to return home. The typhus has committed terrible ravages in the whole of Southern Russia, and particularly in those places which are near the theatre of war. Bakshiserai, Simpheropol, Kherson, and Nicolaieff are almost empty. It is estimated that this pestilence has already carried off 100,000 men. It is gradually spreading over Bessarabia There are 15 vessels off Kinburn, but they attempt nothing. The day before yesterday the news that an armistice had been concluded reached us, and we are more than ever persuaded that peace will be concluded.

In the interior of Asia Minor and Armenia this winter has been one of unusual severity. In the vicinity of Koniah, a caravan of eighty persons was buried by a snow slide. Fifty of them were rescued alive by those who hastened to their assistance—the remainder were beyond recovery.

It is stated that although Pope Pius IX. has consented to act as godfather to Napoleon IV., he yet declines journeying to Paris for the purpose, but will despatch a cardinal in his place. Cardinal Alfieri is named as the Pope's substitute to baptize his infantile Majesty of St. Cloud.

The grand aqueduct at Sebastopol, about eight miles in length, width six feet, and mean depth seven feet and a half, has been destroyed by the French.

EGYPT—ITS COMMERCE AND PEOPLE.—Monday, April 7. This ancient and celebrated land, a narrow belt of fertile alluvial soil, created by the passage of the river Nile through the midst of arid sands, is now, as it was in the days of Joseph and his brethren, a granary for no inconsiderable portion of the world. We notice that often many of the weekly reports of the imports of breadstuffs into Great Britain, show a quantity from Egypt as large or nearly as large as that received from the United States. Under any tolerable form of government, Egypt would be a prosperous nation, teeming with population, and abounding in wealth; but for ages it has groaned under the most tyrannical oppression which has ever cursed the world.

APPOINTMENTS.

Eld. Edwin Burnham will preach in the Free Chapel on the corner of Lowell and Causeway Streets, Boston, on Sunday, April 13th.

The Lord willing, I will lecture at Groton Junction, on Wednesday eve. April 16th, and probably continue through the week.
J. WESTON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Lawrence, Mass., on Sunday, April 20.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

Br. John Couch will preach at
Lawrence, Mass., on Sunday, April 27.
F. FLANDERS.

Eld. D. T. Taylor will preach in
Keene, N. H., April 15.
Claremont, N. H., Thursday eve, April 17.
Waterloo, Vt., Sunday, April 20.
Champlain, N. Y., Sunday April 27.
Friends will address me at Rouse's Point, Clinton Co., N. Y., till May 20.
D. T. TAYLOR.

Eld. J. Turner will preach in
Salem, Mass., Sundays, April 20 and 27.
Br. Partridge, May 4 and 11.
T. HARDY.

The Lord willing, Bro. J. Couch will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., on Sunday, April 6, at Portland, Me., Sunday, April 13.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren at Union Hall, Tiverton, R. I., on Thursday, at 1 o'clock, P. M., April 10, and baptize at the close of the meeting. M. GRANT.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Portland Me., on Sunday April 20.
A ROSS.

Providence permitting, I will preach at North Adams, Sunday, April 13th, and evenings of the following week if the Lord will. I should be glad to meet the brethren from Hawley, Savoy, Cheshire, and other places, as I propose to spend a few weeks in that region, and labor as the Lord may direct.
J HEMENWAY.

The Lord willing, Br. Boutell appoints to preach in Providence, R. I., the first and second Sundays in April.

With the help and permission of our Lord and Master, I will meet the Church of Christ in Bristol, Sunday, April 13.
A. M. HIGGINS

If the Lord will, I will preach at
New Bedford, Mass. Sunday, April 13.
If the brethren further East wish my labors among them, they may address me by letter. Direct West Meriden, Ct.
C. GOODRICH.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the Church at
Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, April 13.
Portsmouth, N. H., Sundays April 20 and 27.
S. S. BREWER.

NOTICE OF THE NEW ENGLAND MISSION TENT.—Those wishing for Tent-Meetings in Illinois, Iowa, or Wisconsin, this Spring, will please write to myself or Br. W. Pratt, at this place.
P. B MORGAN.
Moline, Ill. Feb. 28, 1856.

CONFERENCE.—If time continue, a Conference will be held in East Brattleboro', Vt., to commence the second day of May and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be at the Hall of the Melrose Seminary, which has been rented for a permanent place to hold meetings. We are desirous of commencing our meetings by holding a Conferance, so that the way may be opened for Preachers that have the truth.

We invite all our Brethren and Sisters who love the coming of the Lord, and other truths connected with that event.

I am requested to ask Brn. E. Burnham, S. Mathewson and H. Pratt to attend the meeting, and as many more of God's ministers as the Lord may send.

We wish the above named Brn. to inform us through the Crisis whether they will come.
D. W. MILLER.

Notices.

BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

We call attention to the following valuable works:—

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor. Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postage 17 cents.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts; per dozen, 50 cts.

Bible vs. Tradition, 75.

Dobney on Future Punishment, 75 cts.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.
" " 2 series, 75 cts.
Signs of the Times, 75 cts.
The End, 75 cts.
Lectures on Romanism, $1.
The Tent and the Altar, 75 cts.

Church Debts, 50 cts.

Pauline Theology,	15 cts.	single,	$10	per 100
The Old Paths,	18 "	"	12 "	"
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 "	"	1 "	"
Scripture Tract,	3 "	"	1,50	"
The Church not in Darkness,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Three Worlds,	5 "	"	3 "	"
The Last Days,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Voice of Warning,	5 "	"	3 "	"
New Heavens and Earth,	5 "	"	3 "	"
Outline of the Coast of Man,	3 "	"	1,50	"

The Destiny of the Wicked, 3 cts.

Book of Seven Seals, 3 cts.

Seven Seals, 3 cts.

The Laodicean Church or the Judgment Age, 3 cts.

The following from the pen of Eld. Z. Campbell:

The Christian's Only Hope. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

Age of Gospel Light. Price 10 cts.

Materialism Scriptural—or, The Doctrine of N. D. George exploded. Price 5 cts. single, 40 cts. per dozen.

THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE OF

FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

BY H. H. DOBNEY,

Baptist Minister, of England.

Fourth Edition.

WITH AN APPENDIX ON

THE STATE OF THE DEAD,

BY JOHN MILTON,

Author of "Paradise Lost."

1 VOL. 12 MO., 310 PAGES. PRICE 75 CENTS.

This is one of the most important works ever issued upon this solemn subject. Clear, forcible, and sometimes eloquent in his language, the author surveys the whole field, and presents his arguments and examines objections with the facility of "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." The style is calm and Christian, a rare excellence in a controversial work. The Universalist, the skeptic, and the infidel, will find here that while the truths they hold are admitted in all their force, yet the reasonableness of revelation and the retribution therein revealed cannot be denied. And the believer in the doctrine of the Eternal agony of the multitudes of the Lost, will find that objections to that opinion exist in the word of God, no less serious than those which arise from the calm consideration of the subject in the light of human reason.

Let all obtain and read this work with care, and we shall await with confidence the verdict of the candid and unprejudiced.

The volume is an elegant 12mo., and contains besides the views of the poet Milton, who, with Luther, Tindale, Bishop Law and Archbishop Whately, defends the doctrine of unconsciousness in death.

It will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of the price, 75 cents.

For sale at the Crisis office, Boston; P. Richardson, 177 8th Avenue, New York; George T. Adams, 167 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called "Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."
"D. T. TAYLOR."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J.M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Br. S. G. Mathewson's P. O address is Bakersville, Conn.

Br. F. H. Berick's Post Office address is Union Mills, Indiana.

Br. Aaron B. Andrews, P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co. Illinois.

Br. Miles Grant's P. O. address is Boston, Mass. His Telegraphic address is 167 Hanover st., Boston.

Br. George L. Teeples P. O. address is Vermillionville, Laselle Co., Illinois.

Joel S. Richards' P. O. address is Centre Lincolnville, Maine.

Br. J. S. Richards P. O. address is Centre Lincolnville, Waldo Co., Maine.

Br. J. T. Ongley's P. O. address is Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y.

Br. Wm. Jackson's P. O. address is Berlin, Washington Co., Vt.

Br. W. S. Campbell's P. O. address is Dubuqe, Iowa; family P. O. is New Britain, Ct.

Br. D. B. Salter, your remittance has not been received.

Cash Receipts.

J Langley, S Dolloff, D Hurd, J Danforth, C Lathrope, G W Barnes, A Moses, D Miner, J P Lougee, C Burt, L Allen, B Williams, Wm Blackman, A E Martin, E French, R L Toyier, H F Houlton, M E Davis, $1 each.

M L Clark $8, B Saulpaugh $3, R F. Woodford $2, H J Hammond 94 cts., M Phetteplace $2, John Stockwell 70 cts.

E Ritson, M Cross, Jona Pinkins, H A Lord, C H Colby, 50 cts each.

For the poor—H A Lord, 50 cts., C H Colby, 50 cts.

Old debt of the Crisis—Levi Mussey $2, A Smith $1, J Damon $1. Whole amount, $58.04.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits. It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present his advertisement to the public.

For the Crisis.

Earth's Closing Scene.

By Vesta N. Cudworth.

Round time's circle, e'en with speed increasing,
Man hurries, in the bivouac of life;
In each revolve we see foreshadowing
Events that speak the end of mortal strife.

Storm and sunshine blend in fitful motion,
Rumor, to-day, of Amity and Peace,
But e'er the ear drinks in the hopeful potion,
All is reversed, and rainbow phantoms cease.

Each day's swift round brings things unheard before
Among the million circles of the past;
And while we try the mystery to explore,
We find still something new within the grasp.

In life's great drama all the nation's share,
And each in turn posses the bloody field;
As quickly all compelled to disappear,
For other actors still to be revealed.

Each for his God is madly rushing on,
Some for the sands that shine with golden ore,
And some for lands as eagerly do groan,
While pleasure's votaries every bliss explore.

Ah, who would sleep in this portentous hour!
The judgment hastening with lightning speed;
The tares in bundles binding for the fire,
And Earth to be renewed for Abraham's seed!

Charlemont, Mass.

For the Crisis.

The Seal of the Living God—The 144,000—The Everlasting Gospel—Fall of Babylon, and Third Angel's Message.—Rev. 7th and 14th Chapters.

By I. T. Sweet.

If the first two of these messages, (or messengers) commenced in the last generation, it follows that Babylon must fall here; and hence her fall could not be a moral fall. The third angel must also follow her fall, with the cry, "Come out of her my peogle."

By comparing different passages of Rev. referring to this subject, we find, that where the third angel is, there must also be the Image to the Beast. When we find the Image to the Beast, we shall find the saints in tribulation; for the Image speaks and causes all that refuse to worship it to be killed, Rev. 13: 15. The Image commands all to worship it on penalty of death, The third angel says: "if any man worship the Beast, or his Image, he shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, and shall be tormented in the presence of the Holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb. Here is the patience and faith of the saints; here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus," ch. 14: 10–12. As the third angel says, "here are they," it certainly shows them to be where he is, and where he is, is the patience of the saints. If they keep the faith of Jesus, they will not conform to the Beast or his Image; if they refuse this, they lose their heads," ch. 20; 4.

Now, Brn. and Srs. in Christ, what shall we look for? If all these Scriptures are to be fulfilled here, let us look for their fulfillment before we look for the Lord; for the Scripture cannot be broken. But let us first examine the subject, before we come to this conclusion. We inquire first, where does the book of Revelation locate that class of which it is said, they "keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus?" Let us turn to ch. 6: 9, and read: "And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held." Here we find the class of whom the third angel speaks; and where they are, he is; for he keeps company with them, and they with him, ch. 14: 12, Now, we ask, has the sixth seal been opened in the past? Yes; 100 years since. Was the fifth seal opened before the sixth? All admit this fact. Then the third angel commenced his mission long before the present generation. But again; turn to ch. 12: 17, "And the dragon went to make war with the remnant of the woman's seed;" and who are they? They are those "which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." "Here are they that keep," &c., says the third angel; consequently he is there where they are; otherwise he could not say "Here are they." They were where he commenced his mission. I wish to keep this before your minds. And, think you, did they suffer any tribulation while the dragon made war on them, or while they were slain for the word of God, as seen under the fifth seal?

But again; ch. 13: 7–10, "And it was given unto him (leopard beast,) to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, tongues, and nations. And all that dwell upon the earth, shall worship him." Will the saints of God that keep the faith? No; "All whose names are not written in the Book of Life, of the Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world. If any man have an ear let him hear. He that leadeth into captivity, shall go into captivity; he that killeth with the sword, must be killed with the sword. HERE, is the patience and faith of the saints." Where is this patience and faith? Ans. In the 42 months, while the leopard beast is making war, and overcoming the saints. Where did the third angel say was the patience and faith of the saints? He said, "here are they," while he showed the consequences of worshipping the beast, or his image, or receiving his mark in their foreheads, or in their hands. They that listened to his warning voice, refused to worship the beast or image, they had the patience to suffer the tribulation which would naturally follow for not worshipping the image to the beast. They kept the faith of Jesus, and the commandments of God: and consequently could not keep the command of the image to the beast to worship it.

But does John say they were literally killed that kept God's word, and witnessed for Jesus? He does. Ch. 20: 4, "And I saw thrones and they that sat upon them and judgment was given unto them; and I saw the souls of them that were BEHEADED for the witness of Jesus and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads or in their hands."

What do we learn then by these Scriptures? We learn that the image and beast, the third angel, and those that kept the faith of Jesus, and the word of God, were in the days of the great tribulation, and not in the last generation. So there is no other burden put on us, but to hold fast whereunto we have attained.

Now, we inquire, whom does this third angel symbolize? Ans. That class of God's servants spoken of in Dan. 11: 32–34. They did understand and instruct the people in reference to the corruptions of the apostate Church, after she had fallen away; and they called upon them to come out and separate from her communion, as we read in Jones' Church History, pp. 339, 340.

As the third angel is the last of the three messengers mentioned in ch. 14, the other two messages must be previous to his; and as we have demonstrated his message to be in the days of tribulation, we must look for the fall of Babylon previous to that time; and the preaching of the everlasting Gospel, previous to both, that is, its commencement. As the fall of Babylon is before the tribulation, it can be none other than a moral fall: which occurred as early as the 6th century. This fall was predicted by Paul, 2 Thess. 2: 3, after which fall, the woman or Church was supported by the governments of earth, while the remnant of her seed, viz. those which kept the commandments of God, had war made against them by the dragon and leopard beast; and for the very reason that this class of God's people that knew their God would tell the truth in reference to the old mother of harlots, and call out their brethren from that fallen Babylonish Church.

But we are not under necessity to take it for granted, that the fall of Babylon is a moral fall. It is proved from the fact, that the woman was seen by John supported by the seven-headed beast, representing governments, when the angel "cried, mightily with a strong voice, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become, (present tense,) the habitation of devils," &c., which was the truth in reference to that scarlet and purple-arrayed harlot, while she reigned over the kings of the earth. She was yet to have one more husband in the future, and she is represented as boasting in her heart, that she was no widow, and should see no sorrow, while the third angel was saying, "come out of her my people," ch. 18: 4–7.

Now it is a fact that all Protestants will admit, the Catholic Church was represented by this woman, called Babylon the great. It is also freely admitted, that she was a fallen Church from the time of her union with the governments represented by the seven heads; and hence it could be said of her, all through her history of 1290 years, she IS, she HAS fallen. She has forsaken her holy covenant—the falling away has come, the man of sin is revealed, Dan. 11: 32–34, 2 Thess. 2: 3. But to talk of her fall in the 19th century, and calling out God's people from her, at this late day, when it is very doubtful, if there be any of them there, is, to my mind, inconsistent.

Obj. It is said she was not Babylon until after her moral fall, and hence she must have a downfall after she becomes Babylon the great. This would follow if the verb were in the future tense—she shall; but it is used in the present and past tense, she is, she has fallen. She that sits on the scarlet beast decked in pearls, gold, and precious stones, is now a fallen Church. She is the subject that has fallen. Says Paul, "Abraham was (past tense) called out into a place that he should afterward receive for an inheritance." Had he said, Abraham shall be called out, then his call would be after his name was changed to Abraham: but we see the man now called Abraham, was called out when his name was Abram, Gen. 12: 1; and notwithstanding this, Paul designates him by the name given to him after his call. Even so God calls this symbolic woman by her appropriate name, while referring to her past and present fallen state.

But we leave this part of our subject, praying God to set home the truth to the hearts of those that love it. In my next I shall consider the everlasting Gospel in connection with the seal of the living God, and 144,000 of chs. 7th and 14th.

Providence, R. I.

For the Crisis.

"Peace and Safety."

By M. Grant.

In 1 Thess. 5: 3 we read, "When they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them."

For several months my attention has been directed to this passage of Scripture, as one intimately connected with the close of the Gospel dispensation.

That we may understand it more clearly, let us look at the subject under consideration.

Begin with ch. 4, v. 16, and the matter is plain. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds; to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words. But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."

The first point, we will notice in the above Scripture, is the fact that "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven." This is an event that has not taken place since the Savior ascended from the mount of Olives, more than eighteen hundred years ago. For proof of the last proposition, read Luke, 24: 50, 51, "And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands and blessed them. And it came to pass while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven."

Bethany is on the southeastern side of mount Olives. From this place, the one born in Bethlehem, who healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, and life to the dead; after crucifixion, death and resurrection, ascended up into heaven. For the same individual, we are to wait. See 1 Thess. 1: 10, "And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."

This is plain. How long must we wait? Some say till death; others till the destruction of Jerusalem, which took place in A. D. 70; but what does the Bible say? See Acts 3: 20, 21, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."

It is very evident that the destruction of Jerusalem, was not the restitution of all things, neither do we have the restitution of all things when a man dies. Such positions are too absurd, to deserve further notice.

Let us look at one more passage on this point. Acts, 1: 9–11, "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, ye men of Gallilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven."

We think there cannot be room for a doubt that the literal and personal coming of our Savior is referred to, in Thess, 4: 16–18 and 5: 1–4, already quoted.

As no such event is in the past, it follows on the authority of the Bible, that it must of necessity be in the future. Says Paul, "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." Does he mean to say that it will so come on the Lord's children? Hear him. "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."

But of the other class he says, "When they shall say peace and safety, then SUDDEN destruction cometh upon them."

Now it is evident, that the great truth which Paul would bring to bear on our minds, is the personal coming of the Lord, and the fact, that there would be a cry of "peace and safety," just before the SUDDEN destruction; or in other words, that SUDDEN destruction will follow the cry of "peace and safety."

We read in Paul's second letter to the Thessalonians, ch. 2: 8, where he is speaking of the wicked one, that the Lord shall destroy him, with the brightness of his coming. This shows that the destruction does not come, till the Lord comes; then it follows, as the SUDDEN destruction follows the cry of peace and safety, that the Lord comes immediately after the cry to which we have referred.

The second point we would notice, is the cry of "peace and safety," that is to immediately precede the destruction.

This saying must come, before the Lord appears in the clouds of heaven, but it must be very near the event.

Some have supposed this applied to the preaching of universal salvation; but this has been preached many years, consequently SUDDEN destruction has not followed.

Others have believed the cry of peace and safety has been fulfilled in the preaching of the temporal millenium, or conversion of the world. This may be true in part, but this has been urged upon the people for about 150 years; then it would seem that SUDDEN destruction did not follow.

One fact, however, is worthy of notice. Some able advocates of the world's conversion before the coming of the Lord, have taught in harmony with the prophets, that there would be a great gathering of armies and much bloody fighting, just before the commencement of the reign of Christ on earth. But contrary to the prophets, they have taught that the reign was spiritual, in the hearts of the people. We find no proof in the Bible of any reign of Christ on earth but a literal one, after he descends from heaven according to Paul's declaration.

It is well known to the world, for it has been heard by many with trembling; that those who have been looking for the immediate coming of Christ, have preached that the gathering and fighting of the nations for the last three years, were among the last signs that indicate the return of our Savior to this planet.

Many have given up the idea that the world was to be converted, and have feared that the Lord was truly coming.

But now there is a change coming over the minds of the people. Why? Because of the cry of "peace and safety" that is echoing on every side. People do not cry peace and safety, unless there has been war and danger.

It is said in the latest intelligence from Europe, that peace is almost certain.

It is now thought by those opposed to the coming of the Lord, that every sign and argument has failed, which has been adduced to prove the end of all things is at hand.

But it seems certain, that if we are right in our expectations of the Second Advent of our Savior, we have come to the point of time where we should earnestly look for the cry of "peace and safety," otherwise it would seem to be out of place. Every sign and prophetical period conspire to prove that we are very near the day of the Lord, but the cry of peace and safety, now comes from a wicked world, and lukewarm Church, to show more clearly that SUDDEN destruction, not sudden conversion, is ready to burst upon the bold scoffer, who says, "where is the promise of His coming?"

Boston, April 4, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from C. T. S.

Lubec, Me., March, 28, 1856.

Bro. Merriam:—Since I last wrote you, I rejoice to say that I have felt the pardoning love of the Saviour in my heart. How supremely merciful, in the exercise of His pardoning love, is the Lord Jesus Christ! How strange that a feeble worm like myself, whom God could with one single breath, hurl into nonentity, should dare to raise the puny arm of rebellion against the Almighty.

I have seen my Saviour nailed to the cross—I have heard His dying groans—I have seen His blood shed for me, that I might be saved—but I turned my back upon the cross, refused His proffered mercy and trampled His precious blood beneath my feet. But while I was yet on the highway to ruin and certain desruction, He graciously threw His arms of mercy around me, and recalled me to Him. Oh! if this should ever meet the eye of any of my young friends, to them would I say "seek ye the Lord whilehe may be found." "Behold now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." It may be your last call; life is uncertain and no one can tell what may transpire on the morrow.

You can look at the past and review the scenes you have passed through in seeking enjoyment; but to-morrow is curtained, and hid from us by the dark veil of futurity through which none but the eye of God can penetrate. And when that curtain shall rise, who knows but your fate may be sealed forever?

Have you not felt, and do you not now feel, that like Agrippa of old you could say "almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian?" If so, be quite persuaded, and delay not, for it may be with you as it was with king Agrippa—who was never to our knowledge quite persuaded to be a Christain.—Decide and say—

I will a faithful pilgrim be,
Resolved henceforth to follow thee,
Thou Lamb of God, who now art gone,
Up to thy everlasting throne.
I will to thee my all resign
Thine only—Jesus be thou mine!

Millenarianism.

That the facts and events concerning the kingdom of God, as above drawn out, are described, from the beginning to the end of Scripture, in various relations and many distinct forms of plain and literal speech without a figure, as facts and events, and nothing else, in distinction from all signs, tokens, myths, and equally from all other and different facts and events; and these several facts and events God calls upon all men to observe, as actual and historical exponents of his counsels and purposes in moral government; that these historical descriptions are, in all respects and to all intents, as direct and literal as the proclamation of a chief magistrate or the enactment of a legislature, or the decrees of a judiciary, or the recitals of secular history, or familiar conversational discourse, or, indeed, as is possible to the parts of speech, and are equally not to be interpreted in any speculative, or spiritual, or allegorical double sense, but strictly as they are written.

That to interpret these literal facts and events so remarkably set forth in Scripture, as if they were not real, but mere conceptional images, or representations of events in an imaginary spiritual world, or as if they were intended to denote facts and events of a wholly different character, having no natural likeness but a notional correspondence to these literal facts themselves; or that to interpret these figures and symbols by which God more forcibly impresses the literal facts of his government, as if such were not their design, or as if their design were merely to dramatise such philosophical ideas, or such imaginary and suppositious facts; or as if their relations to any existing or ordained facts and events in our own actual world, were wholly incomprehensible, neither fit materials of faith or subjects of study, or inscentives to duty, or warnings against rebellion and sin, or encouragements to prayer; or not to be understood, if prophetical, till after their occurrence, when it would be too late to understand them for any practical effect, is altogether gratuitous and unreasonable, dishonorable, to God, and destructive to the souls of men:—just as any such interpretation of any other book, or statutes, or proclamation, or decrees, or testimony, or discourse, would tend to the confusion of all natural knowledge, the subversion of all government and law, the disorganization of society, and the destruction of the world.

IX. That more particularly in relation to the churches and ministers of Christ, those rationalistic and spiritualizing principles and methods of interpretation which would practically nullify the doctrine of the Millenarians, though they could not effect its Spiritual reality, would, if consistently carried out, and applied to other doctrines of the Bible, as professed by orthodox Christians in general, and embodied in their standards and formulas of faith from the beginning, in like manner, nullify these received doctrines, reduce the whole of Scripture to a myth; the churches and their subsidiary institutions to mere academies and schools of philosophy; the preachers to masters of dialectics, disputers of science, visionary reformers, theatrical declaimers or political agitators; and the people in general to ignorance, indifference, frivolity, infidelity, licentiousness and anarchy. That this tendency is already remarkable, to a considerable extent throughout the Christian world, in connection with such rationalistic and spiritualizing principles and methods: that without a revival of the millenarian faith, and of the primitive doctrines in general, by a return to the simple verities of Scripture, this testimony will become effect more extensively, and consummate the predicted apostasy of the last days;—and that such results are inevitable, because the governing principles of interpretation of any age, or people, or any institution of learning or religion, must, by a natural law, at length govern their methods of ethical and theological reasoning, and the creeds and articles of belief in which their ethics and theology are embodied, and consequently, their whole practical life; of which all the countries of the eastern world, the seats of primitive Christianity, where the battle of judgment will soon be raging; and in modern times, Germany, France, Switzerland, —the lands of Luther, Calvin and Zwingle, —and other states the birth-places of the Protestant reformation,—have become unquestionable historical proofs. And lastly, that the most appalling evidence of this growing tendency and effect is the prevailing apathy and unconcern of the churches and ministers of Christ, in respect to his second coming and personal reign upon the earth; and the cold reserve, or feverish jealousy, or sneering contemptuousness, or proud disdain, or pevish fretfulness, or sideway thrusts, or flat hostility of most or many persons, both within and without the visible church of Christ, and on the part of the secular and religious press in general, to which these honest and faithful men are now subjected who testify, in their sincerity, to this and other related facts and verities of the word of God.

God teaches nothing in his word that does not represent facts as taking place from the beginning to the end of the economy herein revealed and declared to mankind. All is real. Whatever has come to pass has come topass actually as he said it; and whatever he says will come to pass, will, in like manner be actually and literally fulfilled. Concerning his great and glorious kingdom he leaves nothing to the judgments, opinions, or fancies of men; but requires them to believe what he has written, and to behave accordingly. Else the Scripture is an uncertain guide, an instrument which any individual, or school or party may convert to their respective or short-sighted or selfish ends, to the greater confusion and irregularity of this fallen world. What has been is our natural help to the understanding of what will be; for God's system of government is one and uniform, and analogy, according to the Divine word and providence, is the guide of life. If we leave this method of reasoning and interpretation for speculation and hypothesis; if, instead of inquiring how God has governed the world, in order to understand what he says of his future government of it, we resort to mere conjecture, however subtle and ingenious; if, instead of interpreting the prophetic by the historic Scriptures, and resolving them in to a common narrative of God's actual pealings with mankind, we inquire how God may be supposed to govern; or how, in our poor judgment, he would best govern; or what way of government would be most agreeable to the views of this or that party or school of theology or philosophy; or most in accordance with the learned critics and commentators who have exercised their ingenuity upon the subject; or most likely to subserve the supposed interests of particular learned bodies, or benevolent societies, or political projectors, or social reformers, or excited philanthrophists, or of secular civilization in general, the consequence must be an utter bewilderment and confusion of society, to the practical defeating of all the beneficent ends of the Revelations. Such bewilderment and confusion, I am compelled to believe, have already taken place, to a great extent, in the professedly Christian world; so that no subjects of human inquiry are now so much embarrassed, perplexed, uncertain, and distasteful to the generality, or so harassing and distressing to serious but untaught and undisciplined minds, as the subjects of the prophetic Scriptures. The faithful study of these highly important portions of the word of God, in opposition to the precepts of Christ, and in relinquishment of the blessing promised to such faithful study, is almost universally abandoned; and studies merely literary, critical, philosophical, speculative, which turn away the minds of men from the things that are to come, have usurped its place. The appalling, practical consequence has already, to a great extent, ensued, that Christian men, and ministers of the Gospel, instead of testifying the things of the kingdom of God to their dying fellow men, or doing what they ought to do, and could do, in causing the Gospel of the kingdom to be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, for the speedy ingathering of God's elect, are leaving this their specific and appropriate work, and are wasting much of their energies in merely secular pursuits, or upon delusive schemes of educating, reforming and reorganizing society with a view to its supposed development into a perfect state;—a result impossible but by the conversion of individual persons to Christ, through the Gospel;—a result, moreover, not contemplated by God during this age of discrimination and election, but only in that higher age, when he shall make all things new, 'and gather together all things in Christ.'

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 35.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,
PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF
JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

Signs of the End of the World.

By B. P. HILDRETH.

No. 3.

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken." Has the sun been darkened according to the above prediction? I think it has. History records the fact, that the sun was darkened on the 19th of May, 1780, and that the moon, (although nearly at her full), did not give her light on the following night; and not only history, but living witnesses are even now able and ready to testify to the fact. The stars, (meteors) did fall like a shower, on the 13th of November, 1833, as thousands can now testify; so that I see nothing wanting to the fulfilment of the above prediction, except it be, the shaking of the powers of Heaven, which, if it were not performed by the moving of the stars from their places, then we must perhaps look to the future for it to be answered.

Paul, after describing the display of terror on Mount Sinai, says, Heb. 12: 26, 27; "Whose voice then shook the earth; but now He hath promised, saying, "yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things which are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain." This will, doubtless be accomplished when "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise;" when "the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." All movable things will then be removed; and a "Kingdom that cannot be moved," will remain for the Messiah and all His holy ones.

"There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of Heaven shall be shaken," Luke 21: 25, 26. In 1816, there were seen nine opaque spots on the sun's disk, during the greatest part of the summer; so that vegetation suffered severely from cold. There was scarcely a day that could be called hot during the whole season. The moon has more than once been seen at the full, like "a globe of blood." Comets changing their places in the visible heavens, beside those falling to earth, have been frequent within the last fifty years. "The "distress of nations," may be seen by all who will take the trouble to consult the ordinary journals of the day. They are on the eve of a universal war; and distress and perplexity are likely to be perpetuated till the Lord shall come. Statesmen, politicians and merchants can discern a crisis ahead; and the disasters by sea, and the tornadoes, earthquakes, and inundations of rivers by land are appalling to the heart; and the loss of friends and property, both by sea and land, and fear of losing, and all other evidences of a near approximation toward the judgment, are sufficient to make "men's hearts fail them" with fear; that the powers of Heaven are soon to be shaken. "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; your sons and your daughters shall prophesy; your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions; and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord," Joel 2: 28–30. In Acts 2nd ch., Peter expresses these things, and says they were to happen "in the last days," that the outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost was in fulfilment of this prophecy; and we have seen in our own land very many great and glorious revivals of religion; and they have more or less been progressing since the days of Luther; and we regard them as sure signs that the mystical body of Christ is coming up to the "measure of the stature of His fullness."

In 1825, I think,—there was seen the likeness of a bright and luminous rainbow, in the northwest, or near the sun's track, after sunset; and as we know that a rainbow is produced by the refractions of the sun on drops of water, and on the opposite side of the heavens to the sun, it could not be a natural rainbow; but all the colors, I think, were distinctly seen, and a considerable part of the form; but not a perfect semicircle.

In the summer of 1827, a portion of the Aurorea Borealis was seen to rise in the W. N. W., covering at first the space of ten degrees, at the bottom, and continue to shoot up like a glade of light, in the form of a pyramid, till it reached the zenith; and then stream towards the East like a comet, and taper off into the form of a sword; pointing to, and apparently nearly touching the eastern horizon; very nearly spanning the visible heavens. It continued for hours very bright, till about midnight it began to wane away; and in it appeared an innumerable multitude of wheels rolling over and over, in a dense smoke till it disappeared. I have ever regarded this as a sign of the end of the world; according to Acts 2: 19, "I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath, blood and fire, and vapor of smoke." But it now seems to present more interest, (as it was in the form of a sword,) for the sword of Jehovah is about to be unsheathed in the same direction; and how long have the instruments of death been mounted on wheels, and rolling in smoke there, carrying desolation, ruin and death to thousands and tens of thousands of the human family.

In 1837, the northern lights assumed nearly a blood red color, and apparently extended over considerable more than half the globe; it was so bright that the snow was tinged with its reflections. In, or about 1838, (I write from memory, having no records,) the northern lights assumed an uncommon appearance. About eleven o'clock they seemed to part and become like fires, about as large as a common fireplace; and looked as though they were actually burning, apparently over half the globe; which vividly brought to mind the declaration of Peter, "The heavens being on fire, shall be dissolved." This answers the prediction, blood, and fire, and vapors of smoke; and as I have never seen any account of these signs in print; (though doubtless thousands witnessed them, or some of them,) I thought I would mention them as demonstrations of the truth of prophecy, and also as those very signs that God has graciously given us, to shew us our immediate approximation to the final End. We have seen "scoffers walking after their own lusts, and (literally) saying, "Where is the promise of His coming?" and when we shew them those promises, their answer is, "O they are figurative." But the Saviour says, "when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." Did the redemption of the Jews draw nigh, when their Capitol was "compassed with armies?" And no one will dare to say, that the followers of Christ met their redemption at that time. But they explain all away; "they have eyes, but they see not; ears have they, but they hear not," and the mass is willingly ignorant, of the most startling predictions of the prophets. Tell them of these signs, their answer invariably is, "these things have always been." They are constantly affirming that Jesus said, "This generation shall not pass away, till all these things be fulfilled." But that generation did not see the sun darkened; nor the moon in blood; nor the falling stars; at least no historian gives us any account of these signs; though they tell us of many others that are not predicted by prophets, or by the Savior, and as no one received his redemption at that time, neither saw those signs, we must conclude that those signs were to be seen by some future generation, and that generation who should see them, would rejoice in the near view of their redemption, and would not wholly pass off the stage of life, till the Son of man should come in clouds of glory. Peter said, (relative to the coming of the thief,) "Lord speakest thou this parable to us? or even to all?" There were a few things that He told his disciples privately, but not generally; and the twelve Apostles were the recipients of His word, to be by them communicated to His Church in all ages; and His answer to that question was, "Blessed is that servant whom His Lord, when He cometh, shall find so doing;" (that is, watching.) The prophets, when speaking of a future event, often speak of it as this night, this time, this generation, this day, as though it were the then present time. Thus Moses, speaking in the name of God, when notifying the Israelites that they must take their passover lamb on the tenth day of the first month, and shut it up till the fortieth, and kill it in the evening, says: "For I will pass through the land of Egypt this night," meaning the night of the 14th, of which he had been speaking; and at that time it was fulfilled, Ex. 12: 12. So the tribulation spoken of by the Savior, Matt. 24: 21, was to be such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time. Here this time evidently means the time of those calamities; and not that present moment when He was speaking. So also, the answer to the penitent thief, "this day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." The petition was, "Lord, remember me, when thou comest into thy Kingdom! and the answer evidently refers to the day that He should enter His Kingdom. So, this generation refers to a future time, when all His signs should be seen; and never was there a time that I read of, when they were all seen, as they are and have been within the memory of some who are now the living witnesses of all these signs of the coming of Christ and the end of the world.

We have seen such as are spoken of as "mockers, selfish, boasters, proud, disobedient, blasphemers, unthankful, unholy; truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, who were without natural affection, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." We have seen the smiter smiting his fellow; we have seen both wise and foolish virgins arise and trim their lamps, and go forth to meet the Bridegroom. We have heard the midnight cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him." We are now waiting, during the tarrying of the Bridegroom, and hope to watch, and pray, and patiently wait the arrival of that triumphant day when we shall be gathered into the fold of the "great Shepherd and Bishop of our souls."

The foregoing signs were given us in mercy, by a spirit and record of inspiration, and we are fully convinced that they are forerunners of the end of the world. But direct inspiration is not always necessary to show us signals and presages of coming destruction; and it is seldom that cities or nations are laid in ruins, without some prognostic of such an event; nor is it difficult to discern when they are tending towards the period of dissolution. The decay of vital godliness, the disregard of inspired truth, the laxity of religious and virtuous principles, and the upspringing of licentiousness and contempt of holy things, are sure symptoms of sickness in the body politic; and may be as clearly discerned as any token in the natural body. And can we not discover the signals of distress under which our own nation groans? Is there not venality and corruption, avarice and profusion, pride and presumption, seen in all ranks and classes among us? The great want of benevolence, the ardent and unparalleled love of money; luxury and profaneness, gambling and dissoluteness in upper classes; and the debasing sins of drunkenness, vulgarity and debauchery in lower life; the daring insolence of thieves, robbers and murderers in defiance of both the law and its penalty! All these have long been precursors of a consumptive state of body.

Thus the body is diseased; "the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint." And now we may expect a collapse; for the damning sin of necromancy, enchantment, and withcraft, is rife all over the land; like so many spots of putrefaction on a natural body. And can the whole fraternity of medical talent save this poor distressed country? O my Father, it was the great curse of the Jews that "they knew not the time, of their visitation." And will this indeed be our case? "O that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!" But O the degeneracy, depravity, stupidity, bribery, blasphemy, persecution, perjury, malice and unbelief, that abound in the land, prove that "Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Thus the disease is taking a malignant form, and we do deplore the state of our country; the factions, divisions, and riotous violations of law and justice, now seem to convulse the body like spasms cramping the natural body, which is often a prelude to the speedy extinction of life.

These are truly "fearful sights, and great signs," though not from heaven. And all who can see them, must tremble at the natural consequences of them. Neither can I discover a better state of things in any other nation or country under Heaven. "They are all gone out of the way," and turn which way we will, the same signs stare us in the face; and we see the same heartlessness (with a few blessed exceptions) in the Churches. But "when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, and they shall not escape." They walk in darkness and know not whither they go; and what can we now expect, but that God will fulfil His words to His prophet. "I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men; because they have sinned against the Lord. * * Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath; for the whole land shall be devoured by the fire of His jealousy; for He shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land," Zeph. 1: 17, 18. O ye watchmen, ye see the sword coming, and now is your time to blow the trumpet, and warn the people, that their blood be not required at your hands. Children of the living God, make one more deep search into your hearts, and see that ye be in the faith; that ye love holiness for its own "intrinsic excellence." "Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward, 2 John 8. And may the God of all grace who hath called us unto His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect; and finally and speedily "present you faultless, before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy," for Jesus' sake, Amen.

For the Crisis.

The Seal of the Living God—The 144,000—The Everlasting Gospel—Fall of Babylon, and Third Angel's Message. Rev. 7th and 14th Chapters.

By I. T. SWEET.

No. 2.

The fall of Babylon and third angel's message follow the preaching of the everlasting gospel. Having shewn in my last the third angel's message to be in the days of the Great Tribulation, and the fall of Babylon to be the falling away of the Catholic Church, when she apostatized from or forsook the holy covenant, Dan. 11: 31–33; 2 Thess. 2: 3, we are led to the conclusion that the everlasting Gospel must have been preached by the angel flying in the midst of heaven some time previous to the 6th century; as it was about that time the fall of the Catholic Church was completed, although she had been falling some time previous to that. Let me repeat here, it is admitted by the Protestant Church that the Woman arrayed in scarlet, drunken with the blood of the saints, having "on her forehead a name written, Babylon the Great," is the Catholic Church. It is also admitted by all, that the Catholic Church was fallen when she became united with the Roman Government; and hence, when it is said Babylon has fallen, it is virtually saying the Church has fallen, has fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, &c. And hence we see a good reason why the people of God should be called out of her, that has become the hold of every foul spirit, and cage of every unclean and hateful bird. Had they remained in her, they would have partaken of her sins, and they would have worshipped the Beast, and his Image, and saved their lives. But they that did know their God, instructed the weak as the angel informed Daniel they would; "they that understand among the people shall instruct many, yet, they shall fall by flame, by sword, and captivity, even to the time of the end," viz., end of 1290 years; in which the mother of harlots shall satiate herself with the blood of the saints. And then what? O, then God's saints will be called to come out of her, says some good, but erring Bro.

I reply, if they have remained in her through her bloody reign of 1290 or 1260 years, it is out of place to bid them come out of her now, when she has lost her power to slay them. This would look as though they had never had the courage to raise the cry, while she was in power; but when her power is gone, or the dominion of the horn taken away, then they are to come out of her. Why? Because she has fallen from her exalted position; she has lost her power to slay the people of God; and she has become the habitation of devils, and hold of every foul spirit, &c. In the name of truth, I ask, what was she before her falling from this high position of reigning over the kings of the earth? Even admitting she has not the power to-day that she once had, yet the loss of this power cannot be her fall referred to in chs. 14 and 18, for it is evident that she becomes a habitation of devils, in consequence of her fall; whereas, she had previously been the habitation of God through the Spirit, but now the man of sin is revealed sitting in the temple of God, Eph. 2: 22. But I fear I shall dwell too long on this point. Enough has been said, no doubt, to satisfy every candid mind whose aim is truth, simple truth, in preference to man-made theories, that have no foundation in the word of God.

We now come to the subject of the everlasting Gospel, in connection with the Seal of the living God, and the number of those that were sealed. As the preaching of the everlasting Gospel is before the fall of Babylon, we conclude it is none other than the Gospel that Paul and the other Apostles preached; than which, says Paul, if an angel from heaven preach any other, let him be accursed, Gal. 1: 8. It is the Gospel of the everlasting covenant, Heb. 13: 20. The blood of the everlasting covenant, is "the blood of the New Testament which was shed for the remission of sins," Matt. 26: 28. The New Testament, or Covenant, is the everlasting Testament; for it supercedes the old one, which was done away in Christ. The old covenant was broken, but continued in force until Christ died, 2 Cor. 3: 13, 14. By referring to Heb. 8: 6; 13: 9; 15: 17; Col. 2: 14, it will be seen that the old covenant being done away, the new one is now in force. Through the death of our Lord Jesus by the shedding of his blood, the atonement is made for all them that believe; therefore, to preach the everlasting Gospel now, is to preach the glad tidings or good news of salvation by grace, through faith in the blood of the new and everlasting covenant, or testament.

But the angel says, "Fear God and give glory to Him; for the hour of his judgment is come;" and this is taken to prove that this message commenced in the last generation; because, it is said, this could not be true in any other generation.

Here is the whole strength of this argument for the fall of Babylon and third angel's message in the 19th century. I pledge myself to meet this objection before I close; but we wish now to pursue the subject of the everlasting Gospel and Seal of the living God. The everlasting Gospel is the Gospel that the Apostles preached, or it is another. If it is another, then, says Paul, let him that preaches it, be accursed.

Well, you say, we admit, it began to be preached in the Apostles' days; or even in the days of Abraham.

Let us now refer to the Seal of the living God, ch. 7: 2; "And I saw an angel ascending from the East, having the seal of the living God; and he cried to the four angels to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, hurt not the earth, nor the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads, and I heard the number of them that were sealed; and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel."

The book of Revelation is a prophecy of events to transpire in the Gospel dispensation. Proof—ch. 4: 1. Now one thing is certain; this angel ascending from the East, having the seal of the living God, must have commenced his mission before the servants of God were sealed. Yes, you say, that is freely admitted. Well, now we shall shew from the sure testimony, that his work did not commence in the 19th century, as some have affirmed; but the sealing of God's servants is an operation effected by the reception of the truth, in the love of it, viz., believing the everlasting Gospel. When we have shewn when and where this work commenced, we have found the time and place of the ascension of this class of messengers; for this agent represents a class of messengers as we learn by his own words; he uses the plural pronouns, "we" and "our," "till we have sealed the servants of our God, in their foreheads." Now, Brother Paul, we wish to know if any of God's servants were sealed in your days. O yes, "now he which establisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us is God; who hath also sealed us; and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts," 2 Cor. 1: 21, 22. Again; "That we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted"—first fruit in Christ. "In whom ye also trusted." When? "After that ye heard the word of truth, the Gospel of your salvation; in whom, also, after that ye believed, ye were SEALED with that Holy Spirit of Promise," Eph. 1: 12, 13. Again: "And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are SEALED, unto the day of redemption," Eph. 4: 30.

But some one may say, this does not seal the saints of God in their foreheads; for it has been contended that this agent is a literal angel, that comes at the day of wrath, and seals the servants of God in their foreheads, after the events spoken of in ch. 6: 14–17, when the kings of the earth and the great and the rich men, call for the mountains and rocks, to fall on them; "for the great day of his wrath has come." Well, let us turn to the 9th ch. of Rev. We find here that under the sounding of the fifth trumpet and under the first woe, there comes out of the bottomless pit

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

JONAS MERRIAM, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1856. VOLUME 3, NUMBER 35.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF

JESUS CHRIST.

J. D. C. WHEELER, Printer, - - 167 Hanover St.

Terms of Subscription to be Paid IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months, - - - -	$1,00
For a single copy 3 months, - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, -	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, -	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15,00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22,00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. JONAS MERRIAM, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

H. V. DAVIS,
J. COUCH,
M. GRANT,
GEO. T. ADAMS, } Publishing Committee.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.

☞ Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

☞ Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

☞ Over all business matters, write Business.

☞ Always let the business portion of your letter stand by itself. If necessary, it can be written on a separate slip of paper and enclosed in the same envelope.

For the Crisis.

Signs of the End of the World.

BY B. P. HILDRETH.

No. 3.

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken." Has the sun been darkened according to the above prediction? I think it has. History records the fact, that the sun was darkened on the 19th of May, 1780, and that the moon, (although nearly at her full), did not give her light on the following night; and not only history, but living witnesses are even now able and ready to testify to the fact. The stars, (meteors) did fall like a shower, on the 13th of November, 1833, as thousands can now testify; so that I see nothing wanting to the fulfilment of the above prediction, except it be, the shaking of the powers of Heaven, which, if it were not performed by the moving of the stars from their places, then we must perhaps look to the future for it to be answered.

Paul, after describing the display of terror on Mount Sinai, says, Heb. 12: 26, 27; "Whose voice then shook the earth; but now He hath promised, saying, "yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things which are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain." This will, doubtless be accomplished when "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise;" when "the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." All movable things will then be removed; and a "Kingdom that cannot be moved," will remain for the Messiah and all His holy ones.

"There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of Heaven shall be shaken," Luke 21: 25, 26. In 1816, there were seen nine opaque spots on the sun's disk, during the greatest part of the summer; so that vegetation suffered severely from cold. There was scarcely a day that could be called hot during the whole season. The moon has more than once been seen at the full, like "a globe of blood." Comets changing their places in the visible heavens, beside those falling to earth, have been frequent within the last fifty years. "The "distress of nations," may be seen by all who will take the trouble to consult the ordinary journals of the day. They are on the eve of a universal war; and distress and perplexity are likely to be perpetuated till the Lord shall come. Statesmen, politicians and merchants can discern a crisis ahead; and the disasters by sea, and the tornadoes, earthquakes, and inundations of rivers by land are appalling to the heart; and the loss of friends and property, both by sea and land, and fear of losing, and all other evidences of a near approximation toward the judgment, are sufficient to make "men's hearts fail them" with fear; that the powers of Heaven are soon to be shaken. "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; your sons and your daughters shall prophesy; your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions; and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord," Joel 2: 28–30. In Acts 2nd ch., Peter expresses these things, and says they were to happen "in the last days," that the outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost was in fulfilment of this prophecy; and we have seen in our own land very many great and glorious revivals of religion; and they have more or less been progressing since the days of Luther; and we regard them as sure signs that the mystical body of Christ is coming up to the "measure of the stature of His fullness."

In 1825, I think,—there was seen the likeness of a bright and luminous rainbow, in the northwest, or near the sun's track, after sunset; and as we know that a rainbow is produced by the refractions of the sun on drops of water, and on the opposite side of the heavens to the sun, it could not be a natural rainbow; but all the colors, I think, were distinctly seen, and a considerable part of the form; but not a perfect semicircle.

In the summer of 1827, a portion of the Aurorea Borealis was seen to rise in the W. N. W., covering at first the space of ten degrees, at the bottom, and continue to shoot up like a glade of light, in the form of a pyramid, till it reached the zenith; and then stream towards the East like a comet, and taper off into the form of a sword; pointing to, and apparently nearly touching the eastern horizon; very nearly spanning the visible heavens. It continued for hours very bright, till about midnight it began to wane away; and in it appeared an innumerable multitude of wheels rolling over and over, in a dense smoke till it disappeared. I have ever regarded this as a sign of the end of the world; according to Acts 2: 19, "I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath, blood and fire, and vapor of smoke." But it now seems to present more interest, (as it was in the form of a sword,) for the sword of Jehovah is about to be unsheathed in the same direction; and how long have the instruments of death been mounted on wheels, and rolling in smoke there, carrying desolation, ruin and death to thousands and tens of thousands of the human family.

In 1837, the northern lights assumed nearly a blood red color, and apparently extended over considerable more than half the globe; it was so bright that the snow was tinged with its reflections. In, or about 1838, (I write from memory, having no records,) the northern lights assumed an uncommon appearance. About eleven o'clock they seemed to part and become like fires, about as large as a common fireplace; and looked as though they were actually burning, apparently over half the globe; which vividly brought to mind the declaration of Peter, "The heavens being on fire, shall be dissolved." This answers the prediction, blood, and fire, and vapors of smoke; and as I have never seen any account of these signs in print; (though doubtless thousands witnessed them, or some of them,) I thought I would mention them as demonstrations of the truth of prophecy, and also as those very signs that God has graciously given us, to shew us our immediate approximation to the final End. We have seen "scoffers walking after their own lusts, and (literally) saying, "Where is the promise of His coming?" and when we shew them those promises, their answer is, "O they are figurative." But the Saviour says, "when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." Did the redemption of the Jews draw nigh, when their Capitol was "compassed with armies?" And no one will dare to say, that the followers of Christ met their redemption at that time. But they explain all away; "they have eyes, but they see not; ears have they, but they hear not," and the mass is willingly ignorant, of the most startling predictions of the prophets. Tell them of these signs, their answer invariably is, "these things have always been." They are constantly affirming that Jesus said, "This generation shall not pass away, till all these things be fulfilled." But that generation did not see the sun darkened; nor the moon in blood; nor the falling stars; at least no historian gives us any account of these signs; though they tell us of many others that are not predicted by prophets, or by the Savior, and as no one received his redemption at that time, neither saw those signs, we must conclude that those signs were to be seen by some future generation, and that generation who should see them, would rejoice in the near view of their redemption, and would not wholly pass off the stage of life, till the Son of man should come in clouds of glory. Peter said, (relative to the coming of the thief,) "Lord speakest thou this parable to us? or even to all?" There were a few things that He told his disciples privately, but not generally; and the twelve Apostles were the recipients of His word, to be by them communicated to His Church in all ages; and His answer to that question was, "Blessed is that servant whom His Lord, when He cometh, shall find so doing;" (that is, watching.) The prophets, when speaking of a future event, often speak of it as this night, this time, this generation, this day, as though it were the then present time. Thus Moses, speaking in the name of God, when notifying the Israelites that they must take their passover lamb on the tenth day of the first month, and shut it up till the fortieth, and kill it in the evening, says: "For I will pass through the land of Egypt this night," meaning the night of the 14th, of which he had been speaking; and at that time it was fulfilled, Ex. 12: 12. So the tribulation spoken of by the Savior, Matt. 24: 21, was to be such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time. Here this time evidently means the time of those calamities; and not that present moment when He was speaking. So also, the answer to the penitent thief, "this day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." The petition was, "Lord, remember me, when thou comest into thy Kingdom! and the answer evidently refers to the day that He should enter His Kingdom. So, this generation refers to a future time, when all His signs should be seen; and never was there a time that I read of, when they were all seen, as they are and have been within the memory of some who are now the living witnesses of all these signs of the coming of Christ and the end of the world.

We have seen such as are spoken of as "mockers, selfish, boasters, proud, disobedient, blasphemers, unthankful, unholy; truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, who were without natural affection, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." We have seen the smiter smiting his fellow; we have seen both wise and foolish virgins arise and trim their lamps, and go forth to meet the Bridegroom. We have heard the midnight cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him." We are now waiting, during the tarrying of the Bridegroom, and hope to watch, and pray, and patiently wait the arrival of that triumphant day when we shall be gathered into the fold of the "great Shepherd and Bishop of our souls."

The foregoing signs were given us in mercy, by a spirit and record of inspiration, and we are fully convinced that they are forerunners of the end of the world. But direct inspiration is not always necessary to show us signals and presages of coming destruction; and it is seldom that cities or nations are laid in ruins, without some prognostic of such an event; nor is it difficult to discern when they are tending towards the period of dissolution. The decay of vital godliness, the disregard of inspired truth, the laxity of religious and virtuous principles, and the upspringing of licentiousness and contempt of holy things, are sure symptoms of sickness in the body politic; and may be as clearly discerned as any token in the natural body. And can we not discover the signals of distress under which our own nation groans? Is there not venality and corruption, avarice and profusion, pride and presumption, seen in all ranks and classes among us? The great want of benevolence, the ardent and unparalleled love of money; luxury and profaneness, gambling and dissoluteness in upper classes; and the debasing sins of drunkenness, vulgarity and debauchery in lower life; the daring insolence of thieves, robbers and murderers in defiance of both the law and its penalty! All these have long been precursors of a consumptive state of body.

Thus the body is diseased; "the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint." And now we may expect a collapse; for the damning sin of necromancy, enchantment, and witchcraft, is rife all over the land; like so many spots of putrefaction on a natural body. And can the whole fraternity of medical talent save this poor distressed country? O my Father, it was the great curse of the Jews that "they knew not the time, of their visitation." And will this indeed be our case? "O that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!" But O the degeneracy, depravity, stupidity, bribery, blasphemy, persecution, perjury, malice and unbelief, that abound in the land, prove that "Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Thus the disease is taking a malignant form, and we do deplore the state of our country; the factions, divisions, and riotous violations of law and justice, now seem to convulse the body like spasms cramping the natural body, which is often a prelude to the speedy extinction of life.

These are truly "fearful sights, and great signs," though not from heaven. And all who can see them, must tremble at the natural consequences of them. Neither can I discover a better state of things in any other nation or country under Heaven. "They are all gone out of the way," and turn which way we will, the same signs stare us in the face; and we see the same heartlessness (with a few blessed exceptions) in the Churches. But "when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, and they shall not escape." They walk in darkness and know not whither they go; and what can we now expect, but that God will fulfil His words to His prophet. "I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men; because they have sinned against the Lord. * * Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath; for the whole land shall be devoured by the fire of His jealousy; for He shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land," Zeph. 1: 17, 18. O ye watchmen, ye see the sword coming, and now is your time to blow the trumpet, and warn the people, that their blood be not required at your hands. Children of the living God, make one more deep search into your hearts, and see that ye be in the faith; that ye love holiness for its own "intrinsic excellence." "Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward, 2 John 8. And may the God of all grace who hath called us unto His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect; and finally and speedily "present you faultless, before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy," for Jesus' sake, Amen.

For the Crisis.

The Seal of the Living God—The 144,000—The Everlasting Gospel—Fall of Babylon, and Third Angel's Message. Rev. 7th and 14th Chapters.

BY I. T. SWEET.

No. 2.

The fall of Babylon and third angel's message follow the preaching of the everlasting gospel. Having shewn in my last the third angel's message to be in the days of the Great Tribulation, and the fall of Babylon to be the falling away of the Catholic Church, when she apostatized from or forsook the holy covenant, Dan. 11: 31–33; 2 Thess. 2: 3, we are led to the conclusion that the everlasting Gospel must have been preached by the angel flying in the midst of heaven some time previous to the 6th century; as it was about that time the fall of the Catholic Church was completed, although she had been falling some time previous to that. Let me repeat here, it is admitted by the Protestant Church that the Woman arrayed in scarlet, drunken with the blood of the saints, having "on her forehead a name written, Babylon the Great," is the Catholic Church. It is also admitted by all, that the Catholic Church was fallen when she became united with the Roman Government; and hence, when it is said Babylon has fallen, it is virtually saying the Church has fallen, has fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, &c. And hence we see a good reason why the people of God should be called out of her, that has become the hold of every foul spirit, and cage of every unclean and hateful bird. Had they remained in her, they would have partaken of her sins, and they would have worshipped the Beast, and his Image, and saved their lives. But they that did know their God, instructed the weak as the angel informed Daniel they would; "they that understand among the people shall instruct many, yet, they shall fall by flame, by sword, and captivity, even to the time of the end," viz., end of 1290 years; in which the mother of harlots shall satiate herself with the blood of the saints. And then what? O, then God's saints will be called to come out of her, says some good, but erring Bro.

